If even in bourgeois countries, as in England, for instance, a contest within the Liberal party leads with the utmost rapidity to the formation of two governments, how much more certainly would this occur in our case, since we have no democracy, but the dictatorship of a class, and this is a country whose population consists mainly of peasants.

Are you self-conscious about the impression you make on people?

PERSONAL appearance has a lot to do with the way you feel. Clothes count, of course. But still there is one thing so many people overlook—something that at once brands them as either fastidious or careless—the teeth.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel—a difficult problem finally solved.

A large tube of Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents; at your druggist's.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., Saint Louis, U. S. A.

LOW PAY PUTS WIS. TEACHERS IN HOBO CLASS

Vainly Hike in Search Of Better Conditions

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Low pay causes high turnover of teachers in Wisconsin schools, according to figures in the February labor market bulletin of the Wisconsin industrial commission. One-third of the teachers in the larger high schools and half the teachers in the smaller high schools during the year 1921-22 had not served in their school before that term.

The average monthly pay of these high school teachers, including both sexes, is $165.50. The average monthly pay of all school teachers including the graded schools is $132.

The following table shows the average monthly salary of teachers in city and county public school systems as compiled by the commission. Twenty-five school systems and eight county systems were covered in the survey:

Average Monthly Pay	Male	Female	Both
City high schools	$209	$153	$169
City graded schools	177	126	129
Other city schools	191	126	147
County high schools	204	141	158
County graded schools	152	110	114
Other graded schools	104	97	98

The salaries of women teachers average very low, particularly in the county schools. Women teachers outnumber the men more than 6 to 1. Only 425 out of the 3,088 teachers in the communities investigated were men. The low level of salaries stands in sharp relief against the statement of the commission that "with increasing qualification standards, teachers' salaries have in recent years increased to a greater extent than the cost of living." What must they have been before?

The extent to which the high school teachers of the state are constantly shifting in hope of better pay and conditions is shown by figures of the Wisconsin department of public instruction. These show that in high schools with less than ten teachers only 3 per cent of the teachers had been with their school as long as seven years while over 89 per cent had been with their schools less than three years. In high schools with more than ten teachers on their staffs over 70 per cent of the teachers had been on the payrolls less than three years.

This is not peculiar to Wisconsin. It shows a condition that prevails all over the country and is a fair indication of the attention paid to educating the masses.

THE PARTY AT WORK

How Soon Will Your Branch Appear In This List?

By C. E. RUTHENBERG
Executive Secretary, Workers Party

INCREASING interest because of increasing understanding of the importance of the Farmer-Labor Campaign is being manifested by the branches of the party. This is shown in the number of branches which are sending in their quota of the Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund.

These branches have reported since the last published statement:

Hartford Ukrainian Branch	$ 5.00
Williamsburg English Branch	10.00
Bentleyville South Slavic Branch	14.00
New Haven Finnish Branch	1.00
Zeigler South Slavic Branch (every member contributed $1.00)	11.00
Clarksburg Finnish Branch	6.00
Hingham Finnish Branch	10.00
Washington Finnish Branch	12.60
Chisholm Finnish Branch	20.36
Monson Finnish Branch	10.00
Braddock English Branch	6.00
Hanna Finnish Branch	24.00
Seattle Finnish Branch	17.00
Mariana South Slavic Branch	15.00
Dillonvale Italian Branch	10.00
New Rochelle Finnish Branch	5.00
Detroit Bulgarian Branch	10.00

If these branches and the branches which have been previously listed can give the Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund the help they have, why not all other party branches?

The success of this fund depends upon every party branch responding. We can not carry thru the campaign which must be made without at least $15,000. That means that the quota of not a single branch can be omitted from the total.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

THE BAD AND THE GOOD SCHOOL.

By FRANZ.

"Here, you lazy animal, come here. I'll soon teach you your manners!"

Anxiously, the pupils in the 4th grade class cowed over their desks. Today the teacher was again out of temper. Six boys had already gotten their beatings, and now the instructor turned upon little Peter, who was always made the "goat" when the teacher had a grouch. This revolted Jackie Thorne; he raised his hands and exclaimed:

"Teacher!"

Teacher was just then in the act of pulling Peter by the ears from his desk. "Bend over, you lazy cuss!" he roared at the frightened little figure before him.

Jackie broke in: "Teacher, you have forgotten to give us the lesson for tomorrow."

The Rod Rules.

Astonished at this "undeard of" audacity, he let fall the upraised stick. "What! Have I asked you at all, you young ruffian? Come here, my son; come here. I'll teach you to hold your tongue until you are called!" He grasped Jackie violently by the collar and pulled him in front of his desk. The teacher placed himself before the boy and looking menacingly in his face, he said: "Repeat it again! Have I forgotten to assign the home work? Do you know this better than I, Mr. Smarty?" The whole class waited tensely for developments. No one dared to make the least noise. Little Peter took advantage of this opportunity to sneak back to his desk where he hid behind Sam Baldwin's broad shoulders.

Jackie looked the angry teacher straight in the eye, and repeated: "No, sir, you have not given us the lesson for tomorrow."

"What! Do you mean to say that I am lying, you young rascal!"

And poor Jackie got his beating because he had dared to tell the truth to the teacher. All knew he was in the right, but none dared open their mouth for fear of the teacher.

Jackie took his beating without a word and returned to his seat. He was glad that he had told the teacher the truth for once, and that Peter had escaped his beating. But this was not to end just so. The instructor turned menacingly upon the class: "Does anyone else claim that I have not assigned the home work?"

No one answered. They were too sure of what would happen if they so much as dared to open their mouth.

Beginning of a Bolshevist.

"Well, you see, you little liar. You just simply did not listen when I gave out the work. As punishment, Thorne, you shall write the whole lesson twice. And see to it that it is clearly written, otherwise there'll be somebody who will not go home after school tomorrow."

Luckily for the class the bell rang just then. The boys left the classroom in a great flurry of banging desks and rustling books.

Outside, the snow lay white upon the ground and smiled at the clear winter sun. How quickly the painful school hours were forgotten! Snow ball fights began. The children laughed gaily as they fought each other in the snow! Jackie, however, did not remain long. The fun had been spoiled for him that day. It wasn't the thrashing, but the injustice of it all hurt him. He picked up his books and left for home without a word. Let the teacher beat him, he thought, but that would not prevent him from telling the truth. Why was school so bad? Nowhere could he appeal for justice. He remembered having read of a school where the children were never beaten, where the teacher was the children's friend, and they said "comrade" to each other. That was in The Young Comrade, in an article about a children's home in Russia. The children had their own little town, with gardens and parks.

He Pops The Question.

Oh, no. Everything was practical and true. The pupils were not forced to remember long speeches and recitations, which could just as well be read in a book when one wanted them. Instead of that, the children made their own toys and their own clothes and furniture and learned thereby. The teachers showed them how and helped them in every way. They had their own shops. When they studied physics or chemistry, they built their own apparatus. A steam engine constructed by the class was much better than a page description of it without having ever seen one. That is the sort of school he would like to go to. No beatings and everything easy to learn! The children also arranged their own celebrations, gave their own plays and took part in them themselves.

Towards evening, Jackie Thorne went to the house of his friend, Peter. His chum's father had already heard the story of the beating, and he praised Jackie for his brave conduct. Jackie could finally ask his question: "Why are the schools so bad in our country and so good in Russia?"

Bolshevism In A Nutshell.

"The real reason is this," said Peter's father. "In Russia the workers and peasants rule the country. They elect the government, which must do everything that is good for those who work. The rich have no say at all in that government. In our country it is just the opposite. Here the rich rule, and the workers must serve and obey. To make a good, obedient servant one must not know too much, and he must early become accustomed to do what he is told, even when he knows that it is wrong. You have been punished today because you have stood up for the truth; the others were afraid, and preferred to keep silent. The teacher is trying to break your will early so that you may become better servants of the rich when you grow up. In Russia, the workers want to be men with strong wills who shall be free and brave. They need this strong will to be able to defeat their oppressors. Always be courageous, Jackie, and do not cow before any man. And be a good fighter for the cause of the working class."

BIG LOCOMOTIVE CONCERN HELP TAKE WAGE CUT

Company Makes Many Millions Profits

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

Report that employes of the American Locomotive Co. have accepted a wage cut of from 8 per cent to 10 per cent comes right on the heels of the annual report of the company for 1923 announcing the largest profits in its history. This bears out the prediction of The Federated Press on Jan. 10 and shows that the railroad industry is running true to form. Workers in the metal trades especially associated with the manufacture and repair of railroad equipment are faced with a conspiracy to reduce their wages and American Locomotive represents the first breach in their ranks.

Accommodating Employes.

Employes of the Brooks plant of the company at Dunkirk, N. Y., according to the report, accepted the reduction to give the company a better chance to obtain orders. As a result of the agreement orders for 25 engines for the Union Pacific and 24 for the Louisville & Nashville will be assigned to the Brooks plant.

This shows how the threat of curtailed orders and unemployment has been used by the railroad industry to coerce workers into starting the downward course of wages in the metal industries. Railroads in the east have laid off tens of thousands of shopmen. They have curtailed their purchases of equipment to such an extent that the locomotive companies have been forced to reduce their forces to about one-third of normal.

Held Wages Responsible.

They have openly held the wages of machinists, boilermakers, etc., responsible for this situation. As quoted from the Wall Street Journal by The Federated Press in January: "Hesitation in railroad buying of cars and locomotives appears attributable chiefly to the price factor. Equipment men cannot see lower prices for their product in the immediate future. They point out that wages constitute the principal cost factor in the equipment industry and the possibility of any saving being accomplished on this account is considered extremely remote."

The annual report of American Locomotive shows that this charge of high wages as responsible for the reduction in operations is absolutely false. By cutting exorbitant profits the company could have secured three times the saving actually made thru the 10 per cent reduction of wages without reducing the return to common stockholders below 10 per cent.

American Locomotive in 1923 produced $90,000,000 worth of product at a wage cost of not more than $30,000,000. It has in its treasury over $36,000,000 in undivided profits and reserves enough to pay a full year's wages at last year's rates.

Naturalization by Mail Given Aliens Under a New Law

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Many aliens seeking to be naturalized need no longer go in person to the naturalization court. Under the new plan the alien whose declaration of intention is two years old and not more than seven years old, and who has lived five years in the United States and one year in the state, may write to his county clerk or the clerk of the United States court nearby and secure by mail application form No. 2214. This form with his declaration attached he may mail to the chief naturalization examiner, whose name appears on the application form.

If there are mistakes in the document it will be mailed back for correction; if there are no mistakes in it the chief examiner will notify the applicant to appear with his witnesses for oral examination, to verify the facts given in the form. The alien will then be directed to the office of the clerk of the court to file his petition. This process saves one day's time taken from breadwinning and one-third of the legal expense.

New Amalgamated Local.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 7.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America have organized a local here to be known as No. 266, with 100 members at its inception. The local is conducting a big membership campaign and will endeavor to establish a 44-hour week in the men's clothing trade in this city. San Francisco is the 266th city for the Amalgamated to enter.

Jewish Socialists Have "Forward"; The Lithuanian the "Naujienos"; Work for the Bosses Is Exposed

By VICTOR A. ZOKAITIS.

The Socialist Party has, since the expulsion of the left wing, degenerated more and more into an open organ of the employers, fighting the workers in every industrial dispute. The malicious, dirty, slanderous lies of the Jewish Daily Forward are now equalled by the strike-breaking activities of the Lithuanian daily, "Naujienos," which is published in Chicago. This yellow sheet is the organ of the Lithuanian Socialist Federation.

"Naujienos" has carried on a consistent fight against the class-conscious workers in every industrial dispute. During the present International Ladies' Garment Workers' strike in Chicago, they have again come out on the side of the bosses. On March 29, 31, and April 1, they published the following advertisement:

> "WANTED: Experienced operators on power machines to sew dresses; steady work, good pay. An excellent opportunity to learn a trade and receive a good wage.
> "Graceline Dress Co.,
> "302 S. Market St., 4th fl."

A Real "Socialist" Ally.

Mr. Heller, the head of the Graceline Dress Company is also the president of one of the bosses' associations. He has as his right-hand man, the notorious, labor-hating, union-smashing Dudley Taylor. During the strike Mr. Heller has done his best to have every picket arrested that passed his plant.

He has on numerous times pointed out various pickets to the uniformed police and caused their arrest. He has been the biggest factor in supplying strike-breakers to members of his association. Not only has he supplied the strike-breakers, but he has also furnished sluggers and "dicks" to the various bosses in the strike zone. He has been a frequent visitor at Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's court. All these facts can be verified at the headquarters of the International Ladies' Garment Workers in Chicago.

Thruout the strike "Naujienos" has published news items which were nothing more than translations of the Chicago "Tribune" and the Hearst papers. It has tried to hide its true self and motives by a barrage on the expelled militants and the active trade-unionists in the Chicago Federation of Labor, who have demanded and urged the support of the entire Chicago labor movement towards winning this strike.

But it has now dropped its mask and has come out openly in support of the garment manufacturers and today it is lined up with the most vicious anti-union elements. And, yet, "Naujienos" has the audacity to call itself a working class institution!

Not First Offense.

This is not the first time that "Naujienos" has supported the bosses in their drives to smash the unions and lower the standard of living of the workers in America.

On August 30, 1919, the following ad appeared:

> "Wanted: Laborers to do work outside of city to take place of the strikers. Good wages, steady work, free board, room and fare. Open all day and Sundays, 630 N. Sagamon St."

During the winter of the same year, while the Cincinnati garment workers were on strike, they published ads for strike-breakers.

In 1921, when some ladies' garment workers were on strike in Chicago, they printed a scab ad. During the summer of the same year, they printed an ad looking for strike-breaking machinists to work in the Belt Company.

Amalgamated's Condemnation.

In 1922, they carried an ad for strike-breakers for a firm on Wabash Ave. One of the members of the Socialist federation, Kaniauskas, answered the ad and started to work in the shop. The Amalgamated Local No. 269, heard of this and brought him before the trial board. His action was condemned and members were warned not to answer the ads in "Naujienos."

During the same year, a strike of the surface and elevated lines took place. They carried the ads of the elevated company urging readers to use the scab-manned lines.

In 1923, an ad appeared calling for operators, finishers and pressers for an open-shop located at Wood and 62nd streets.

Expert Strike-Breakers.

Not only have they carried the ads for other scab concerns, but they also have had two strikes of their own employes and have used scabs to break the strikes.

February, 1921, they had a strike of the entire plant. The workers demanded recognition of their unions and a more humane handling by the business and editorial staffs.

During the month of August of the same year, they had a second strike on their hands of the workers. This time the workers demanded that "Naujienos" stop their anti-union agitation and efforts to break the unions in the shop. In both instances scabs were used to break the strike, but the strikers won their demands due to their solidarity.

Members of Open-Shoppers.

In the open-shop directory for the year 1922, the name of this firm appears on page 6, 23, 29 and 35. The Typothetae of which they are members is the open-shoppers' organization in the printing trades. It has as its head many men who were active in the Citizen's Committee, better known to the building trades workers as the Landis Award Committee.

"Naujienos" was forced to withdraw from this open-shop aggregation when the workers in the shop and their sympathizers forced them out. In spite of this, they are still carrying on the agitation for the open-shop and representing the most vicious bosses thru their newspaper.

Achieving "Socialism."

The Lithuanian federation has but a mere handful of members, yet it is able to publish a daily newspaper, because its heads have evolved a new method to attain the "co-operative commonwealth." They organize a number of companies, sell shares, and then the companies go bankrupt in some mysterious manner. The Universal Chemical Co., incorporated in Delaware, for a "$1,000,000" with its main office in Chicago, the Kujol-Bingol Company and a number of others are examples of how they are achieving their "goal."

Not only have they created companies for their own use but they also have carried the advertising of Harrington, Appel and other individuals who are now either fugitives from the law or who are on trial for defrauding the workers with their Ponzi schemes.

One of their latest schemes was the attempt to get the Lithuanian workers to turn over their hard-earned money so they could exploit some mysterious so-called concession in China. Full-page ads were carried telling of vast deposits of gold, platinum, silver, lead, oil, etc., etc. But thanks to the Communist press, the workers were warned in time and it proved a dud.

In Law-Suit With Stockholders.

"Naujienos" at present has six cases in the law courts with its shareholders. It has instituted a loan association at present and undoubtedly this will go the same way as the other companies which have been organized by them. This is the kind of socialism that its being peddled out daily to the Lithuanian workers.

These are the tactics of the socialists in America. They are not only the allies of the capitalist class, but they are also competing with the capitalist class in their attempt to amass wealth.

Australian Labor Hoists Red Emblem In Lenin's Honor

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 7.—All sections of the labor movement thruout Australia passed motions of condolence at the death of Lenin. At the union halls the red flag was at half mast.

The Labor Council of New South Wales carried the following motion: "We knew of his strenuous fight against the entire force of capitalism thruout the world, notwithstanding the opprobrium and calumny launched against him since 1917. He vigorously maintained the working class state, which in itself is a beacon light to all the workers of the world."

The Australian Workers' Union, the largest industrial union in Australia, while in annual conference at Brisbane declared: "This convention herewith places on record its profound regret at the death of Nicolai Lenin, president of the people's commissars, and its high appreciation of the genius, self-sacrifice, and unremitting labors of this true comrade of the workers in the cause of the working class movement."

The Melbourne Trades and Labor Council declares: "This council places on record its appreciation of his great work and self-sacrifice on behalf of the people of Russia, in obtaining for them their emancipation from czardom and oppression and winning for them the right of working out their own destinies in accordance with their own desires."

Similar motions were carried by the trades and labor councils at Brisbane, Adelaide, Perth and Hobart, and by unions and labor councils thruout New Zealand.

Labor Mayor In Superior, Wis.

SUPERIOR, Wis., April 7.—The bitterest campaign known in northern Wisconsin ended in victory for Mayor Fred A. Baxter, indorsed by the Trades Assembly and practically all union locals and progressive clubs. Baxter was elected by a majority of 1601 over his real estate opponent. There were 11,833 votes cast, making a new record.

NO CHEER FOR FRENCH PATRIOTS IN SAINT JOAN

French Sold French Maid to English

By LUDWELL DENNY.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 7.—An unintentional farce interlude was played on the Empire theatre stage here when a group of French women who missed the point of the play, tried to use Bernard Shaw's satire "Saint Joan" for propaganda purposes. After the third act of the play, which ridicules the French for burning a heretic and canonizing her after she can cause no more trouble, Mme. Carle Polifeme of Le Lyceum society of French women in America, appeared before the footlights. Officers of the society set the stage with large silk French and American flags and turned loose the patriotic jazz. When Mme. Polifeme had said her piece, Winifred Lenihan, the Joan of the play, was hauled on the stage. To the white-gloved applause of Le Lyceum ladies, who bought half the orchestra seats to secure permission for the our-glorious-ally stuff, a little girl dressed as a French peasant handed Miss Lenihan a bunch of flowers tied up in the French tricolor. When the child recited a memorized French speech, Le Lyceum in the orchestra seats became almost hysterical with unhyphenated patriotic fervor—for France.

Lyceumites Play Asinine Role.

Then the regular audience, most of whom had been taking a turn in the corridors, filed back to their seats, and the curtain went up on the Rouen trial scene. The Catholic priests of the Inquisition condemn Joan for heresy and arrange for the British soldiers to burn her, while the French mob gloat over the torture of their erstwhile heroine and savior. The epilogue depicted the return of the now sainted Joan to her inquisitors who have become her worshippers, but who threaten to resign as worshippers unless Joan stays in her far away safe heaven where she belongs. The purpose of the epilogue is to spell out the moral of the play for the more stupid members of the audience who miss the point of the preceding acts. But even this was over the heads of the flag-waving Lyseumites.

While the French ladies, petite and otherwise, were cavorting between the acts of C. B. S., the European mails brought to New York the copy of a letter by Shaw which might have been written to Le Lyceum. Shaw writes to the Paris journal Comoedia, in which a bitter controversy regarding the play is raging:

Shaw's Criticism.

"The real woman in Joan is still as unpopular in her own country," he reminds the French, "as she was when the Burgundians sold her to the English and the latter delivered her to the French church and the Inquisition to be burned." Shaw says it is useless to reply to French criticism, because the critic's only answer is, I fought at Verdun. Shaw continues:

"I have educated London, I have educated New York, Berlin and Paris. It lags too far behind and I am too far ahead."

Russian Co-Operatives Make Big Progress During Past Year

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, April 7—Tho the operative plan of the "Centrosoyuz" (All-Russian Central Union of Co-operative Societies) for the export of raw materials during the last working year provided for 1,480,000 pound sterling's worth of flax, hemp, tow, codilla, raw hides, furs, bristle, horse hair, feather, and other exports, the actual figures exceeded the plan, amounting to over 1,672,500 pounds. Moreover, the Siberian branch of the "Centrosoyuz", during the specified period, exported to the East and thru the Karsk expedition (Northern route) various fur and raw hide material to an amount of some 441,000 pounds, thus making the grand total of raw materials exported by the "Centrosoyuz" in the course of the last working year reach a sum of over 2,113,500 pounds.

Northwest Storm Signals

First-hand news of the whirlwind that is wrecking the homes of capitalist politicians in the northwest was brought to Washington last week by Governor Preus of Minnesota, the pet of the steel trust, who still holds office because he has not yet had to stand for re-election.

The observations of Governor Preus have been made from a crack in the door of the cyclone-cellar in which he and his henchmen have been living for the past few months and are reasonably accurate.

He shattered one of the fondest hopes that the old party heelers have been entertaining i. e. that LaFollette would be too ill to take the field for a campaign. Governor Preus, looking somewhat battered and with a hunted look in his eye, allowed that so long as one breath of life remained in the LaFollette body he could carry eight northwest states without using it for speech.

Governor Preus is no academic observer of northwest politics; he knows the temper of the workers and farmers and he feels that something drastic must be done, but he is silent as to remedies. It is a new situation and politicians of the Preus type are at their wits end. The preparations for the June 17 convention are being made under his nose and he is painfully cognizant of the fact that the professional politicians in and out of the labor and farmer movement are underestimating the significance of the mass political uprising in the northwest.

Preus made one feeble squawk about the German element in the northwest situation, but it was only a halfhearted attempt to explain something he did not understand and the complete bankruptcy of the capitalist parties in his territory is shown by the fact that he failed to resurrect the menace of Communism—hitherto the first count in the indictment of the workers and farmers when they have shown a disposition to revolt.

Such testimony from leaders of the capitalist parties relative to the strength of the farmer-labor movement brings into bolder relief the cowardly tactics of the official leaders of the labor movement.

With the steel trust governor of a great state like Minnesota conceding his own and seven other states to LaFollette as the leader by force of circumstances of mass political discontent the refusal of labor officialdom to recognize facts and break with the capitalist parties becomes treason of a particularly offensive kind.

It is the inexorable trend of events all showing that a great and fundamental change is taking place in the attitude of the exploited workers and farmers of America towards their exploiters that proves conclusively the contention of the Workers Party of America that the difference between Cleveland and St. Paul, June 17 and July 4, is a class difference—June 17 will be a convention of the rank and file of workers' and farmers' organizations demanding action; July 4 will be a convention of bureaucrats and middle-class elements interested in hampering the rise of a mass working-class party that they know they cannot lead.

The German Workers Pay

The social-democrats of the world must swell with pride when they read the following demands made upon the German government by the industrial and financial lords as the price for which they will agree to give it further support in meeting the allied demands:

> 1. The political power of the trade unions must be entirely destroyed.
> 2. The government must cease to negotiate directly with the trade unions.
> 3. The eight-hour day law must be repealed.
> 4. A single front of trade unions in industrial decisions must be prohibited.
> 5. Obligatory governmental arbitration in labor disputes over wages must be restricted.
> 6. The return of all economic machinery, beginning with the state railroads, to private hands must be undertaken.
> 7. As the necessity of reparations payments will compel transformations of German production, the internal markets must be prevented from falling into the hands of foreign competitors by the creation of new and the raising of existing customs duties.

This proposal to enslave the whole German workingclass, and which the government will accept because it is the creature of those who make these demands, is the heritage the social-democrats have bequeathed to the German workers.

It is the logical outcome of the murder of the revolutionary aspirations of the German workers in 1918, the slaughter of Liebknecht and Luxembourg and the policy of kindly toleration growing into aid and comfort for the German capitalists—the reverse of the policy adopted towards the workers.

It is a fitting epitaph for the traitors of the social-democracy who joined with the capitalists of the world in denouncing the revolutionary tactics of the Communist International and it is an epitaph because the social-democratic party is dead and no longer a factor in the German nation.

It played its treasonable role long enough to allow the German capitalists to set up their dictatorship, while all the time denouncing the dictatorship of the workingclass. German prisons and concentration camps are now filled with the best of the German workers and the Von Seeckt dictatorship commits such horrible brutalities upon them that Prussian nobles are moved to protest. When they are released—those who do not die of wounds and starvation—they will go back into industry at the mercy of the German money lords who, as their first condition, specify that the unions must be destroyed.

It is a cruel joke that in the old days the power of the social-democrats was based upon the unions and the unions blindly followed them into the treacherous swamp of parliamentarism and reformism.

Kurt Sorge, speaking for the Association of German Industry, says, after detailing the demands of the capitalists:

> German industry is willing to make sacrifices for the welfare of the reich, but only on the basis of these conditions. Only when the rubbish is swept away from internal politics can German industry turn its attention to foreign problems.

Yes, it is a noble heritage left the German workingclass. The elementary privileges of organization, political activity and working conditions are classed as rubbish by the big-bellied plutocrat who capitalizes their misery.

The issue is clear at last. It is the workingclass of Germany, headed by the Communist Party, against German capitalism with no organization of social-democrat traitors left to mouth with Sorge, Thyssen and Stinnes the "sacrifices" the industrial lords are making. It is a terrible price that the German workers have paid for clarity of vision but it is the price that every other workingclass will pay which does not learn in time that the doctrine of class-collaboration means death to the workers.

Who Are the Sane?

There will never be enough good dwellings for the workers at the price they can afford to pay as long as the wage system lasts. Capitalism will no more give the workers pleasant and sanitary dwellings than it will give them plenty of food and clothing.

To do this would remove the "incentive" furnished by the desire to keep soul and body together. That this sacred tenet of capitalism—the alleged need for war on others of his class—reduces the worker to the status of a dog fighting for a bone is of no importance to the capitalist class.

That class never felt so secure in the possession of its loot as when there were two workers for every job. It long ago eliminated competition in the basic industries and from its struggle in doing so it learnt the lesson that competition for the necessities of life makes worker fight worker.

It learned the lesson a little too well for its own good, however, and the cunning machinery that threw the workers onto the streets now works for the destruction of its owners. Capitalism has destroyed competition in its own ranks and it has also smothered the last spark of hope in the breasts of millions of workers. It has taught them the tragic futility of struggle with their own kind and they are demanding, in ever increasing numbers, the possession of the machines and the wonderful plentitude of the things they have made.

Hungry workers at the factory gates are no longer a measure of the security of the wage-system; they are now a menace to it and they even dare to raise their voices against the power of government that protects the wealthy against the starving, but the industrial machinery works on and only horrible war can bring a scarcity.

War, too, is a new danger for capitalism. It hesitates to arm the millions that hate it and give them new grievances in the shape of the torn and bleeding bodies of their loved ones.

The defenders of capitalism, in the face of world-wide failure, are panic-stricken. The plan of salvation proposed one day is discarded the next; they all talk at once and say nothing; a thousand well-advertised panaceas are tried and found wanting; the newspapers try to allay the alarm but succeed only in proving that there is reason for alarm; one capitalist statesman after another tries to stem the tide of popular discontent, struts for a few moments and then flees from the madhouse atmosphere of capitalist parliaments.

Capitalism is no longer able to control the mental processes of the masses and in the absence of dumb acquiescence is helpless and afraid.

In this chamber of horrors but one organized force in the world faces the future with confidence—and a program. The Communist International is the only sane organization in the whole welter of confusion because it has faith in the driving power of the masses, it knows that only the workingclass possess the key that will unlock the gate of the future and that organized for struggle against the scattered remnants of capitalism the workingclass will win under Communist leadership not only everything that capitalism has deprived it of but still greater victories as the result of an unfettered science and industry that is the basis of Communist economy and culture.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

MacDonald Following the Old Traditions

By J. T. MURPHY

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Today we publish another article by J. T. Murphy, the British Communist and trade unionist, telling of the conditions confronting the working class in the British Isles. This article will be followed by another tomorrow.

* * * *

A FEW weeks ago, I ventured to write, "The traditional policy of Britain is taking its own inevitable course whether under the garb of pacifism or war. She must combine against the dominant power in Europe, whoever it may be." France dominates the situation and MacDonald perforce must aim to bring her to heel. Within a single week three important steps have been taken in this direction. The reduction of the reparations tax from 26 per cent to 5 per cent has been confirmed. A further letter has been exchanged with Poincare. The air estimates have been increased.

The first item can be counted one up for Germany and British trade. It met with slight opposition. Lloyd George divided himself from the Liberals against it, indicating by the way that the united household of liberalism is not so happy as it might be. But his opposition was only a question as to the value of this concession to Germany as a bargaining weapon. The rest was the opposition of Toryism to what might be deemed the abolition of a little tariff reform.

MacDonald Aping Wilson.

But the letter to Poincare gets us on to another plane. This is MacDonald's first big effort to step into the arena of European politics as the re-incarnation of Wilson. Wilson fell before Clemenceau and Lloyd George thru making concessions in order to preserve a dream. Not only were his concessions accepted but his schemes were seized by others as the means to outwit him and the forces he represented. His League of Nations scheme was taken out of his grasp and made the instrument of the Allied Supreme Council which left Wilson out in the cold. From that day forward there has been a constant struggle within the League for the domination of its policy. MacDonald's emphasis on the League is as much a part of the rivalry between France and Britain as it was when Lloyd George sounded a similar note. MacDonald wants Germany in the League because it is perfectly clear that any rehabilitation of Germany is going to give Britain a fairly good grip upon the actions of Germany. His plea for international control of occupied areas is directed towards limiting the military power of France. His concession which alters the British government's attitude to the relation of debts and reparations from that as defined in the Balfour letter, is no concession in policy but only an indication of change of circumstance which he aims to use in a dual direction. First to get as much as possible out of reparations and second, to draw America into joint action with Britain with a view to modifying the debt relationhips.

A Dangerous Step.

He is treading on exceedingly dangerous ground. It is one thing to outmanage a Wilson in a European combination at a time when the economic penetration of Europe by American finance was relatively weak. It is another thing to outmaneuver American financiers when they have got their talons into Europe and Britain too. The great plea for American intervention has always been, so far as MacDonald is concerned, on the grounds of world democracy and democratic idealism. But great powers do not move in response to idealism without there is a very material basis for their actions. And America will only participate in the European competition for something other than the dreams of MacDonald or Wilson. America has up to now kept herself free from every attempt on the part of Britain to play her off against France.

The forces behind MacDonald, I do not mean the working class forces in this case, but the imperialist forces realize these facts and the so-called replacements in cruisers have now to be reinforced with increases in air craft and forces. The figures of the new estimates show an increase of 2½ millions. 1923-4 estimates totalled £12,011,000; the 1924-5 estimates total £14,511,000. There is a decrease in the cost of the air forces and auxiliary services in Iraq and Palestine of over £1,300,000, which affects the gross but not the net figures of air votes. The effective increase of £2,808,000 on the net air estimates is attributed to:

> "The progressive expansion of the air forces for home defense recently decided upon; to the increased requirements of Navy and Army co-operation and to the replenishment of stocks of technical equipment and other material."

Eight new regular squadrons will be completely formed during 1924-5 which will bring the number allotted for that purpose to 18 by April, 1925.

Provision is also made for the initial equipment of six more squadrons which under present arrangements will be formed in 1925-6.

By vote A the establishment of the air force is increased by 2,000 to a total of 35,000. It is reckoned that in a few years it will be 40,000.

No Change of Imperialist Policy.

The reduction of cost of forces for Mesopotamia must on no account be taken as a change of policy, whilst the home defense building of air craft forces is obviously directed against France. There is no other formidable air force to be reckoned with so far as Britain is concerned. There is not the slightest doubt that Poincare can read the air estimates as clearly as he has read MacDonald's letters. The one he will reckon with materially; the other he has answered with one of his Sunday speeches which concedes nothing. When all the phrases of MacDonald's statements have been cut away there is nothing left but the bold fact that he is following the old traditions of British policy more effectively than the Conservatives and the Liberals. His cruiser policy has roused Mussolini to action. His aircraft policy has met with the approval of every imperialist organ in the country while his Wilsonian phrases have tickled the palates of social democracy and liberalism as nothing else has done since Wilson announced his fourteen points. "Back to Wilsonism" is the slogan under which the new armament race is to be conducted.

There appears to be no depths to which the Second International leaders will not sink to serve their masters. Having repudiated their own international, not only severing their connection with it as leaders, but also severing themselves from its declarations and insisting upon a nationalistic policy governed by the "interests of the Empire, they are doing their level best in every department of activity to prove themselves better imperialists than the advocates of imperialism.

The reduction in the Iraq estimates is explained by Winston Churchill, whose policy they are pursuing. Attacked in the Westminster by-election he retorts:

> "If the policy I adopted in Mesopotamia is wrong why is the present government carrying it out? When for the first time I had any responsibility for Mesopotamia, at the beginning of 1921 the expense was nearly £40,000,000 per year. I immediately formed a native state and set up a home rule government under an Arab king. I withdrew practically the whole army and reduced the expense within a year to less than seven millions and prescribed a policy which would reduce it to about three millions. This policy has been pursued ever since by three separate ministers—Mr. Bonar Law, Mr. Baldwin and Mr. MacDonald."

The reason of British connection with Mesopotamia is well known. It forms one of the chain of countries on the all red route of empire from Cape Town to Calcutta which MacDonald is as keen on preserving as is Mr. Winston Churchill. The only difference, of course, is in the tune which the respective conquerers render to the listening world. One sings the song of education for the native with good dividends for British Industrialists, and work for the workers, and the other sings the song of Imperial expansion. The difference lies in the degree of hypocrisy only.

"By Their Deeds, Etc."

Forgetting the songs for the moment and getting back to their deeds we have now got the key to the increase of the air forces, the reductions in the estimates for Mesopotamia, the maneuvers with America, the sparring with Poincare. But what of the annoyance of Mussolini? It needs more than the cruiser replacement program to annoy him to the extent of joining with Spain in a navy campaign, and offering terms to France for a Latin combination in the Mediterranean Sea, and to proceed with a big navy program. This will be found in a further part of the "continuity policy" of MacDonald.

Before the war of 1914 and the development of the German navy scare Britain's strongest fleet was stationed in the Mediterranean as the great highway of the Empire. Now that there is not the same necessity to keep the strongest part of the fleet in the North Sea, and Gibralter is not the fortress it was in the years gone by, attention is being given to the concentration of the strongest forces in the Mediterranean. It is proposed by the Admiralty that eight of the most powerful battleships, to which the two new ones now being built may be added, are to concentrate in the Mediterranean. In addition the lighter forces are to be reinforced and the aircraft carrier Eagle, the largest ship of her type afloat, is under orders to proceed to the same station at Malta. At present no submarines are attached to the fleet in these waters but a flotilla is reported to be ear-marked for the job. Some time will elapse before the whole of this plan can be carried out because of the smallness of dock facilities. But it is to be carried out, we are told.

Mussolini Jealous and Hostile.

It is this concentration which is annoying Mussolini, along with the dissatisfaction over the delay in the sharing of the spoils of war in Africa. According to the settlement of the victors, Italy has to have a slice of territory in Africa known as Jubuland, a part of Kenya now under the control of Britain. This reward does not appear to be coming to Italy quickly enough and so he regards the Mediterranean concentration as representative of a spirit of antagonism directed against Italy which justifies him in standing no nonsense. So he is going ahead with the armament policy.

Much as he would like to get the French to line up with him on this matter and to make a general Mediterranean combination, and much as the French foreign office would like to do so, the conflict between the dominant economic forces in each country are so much in opposition to each other that the proposal won't work. The Comites des Forges may be a competitor of the British industrialists, but it is getting too much out of her monopoly of the raw material, supplying the steel industry of Italy and the large market for her manufactured goods thruout Italy that there is not much likelihood of the combination being brought about.

Nevertheless the further we penetrate thru the "atmosphere favorable to peace" which MacDonald has been talking so much about the more the realities of warlike preparations and maneuvering for positions becomes discernable. Each of them are talking of the Versailles Treaty. All of them are pursuing their own National and Imperial aims.

Disaster Ahead.

The forces which underly the predatory aims are inexorable. They will not give way to MacDonald's rhapsodies, whilst in action he simply follows the old traditions. Imperialism has got him in its grip and all his colleagues with him. We are moving towards catastrophe and the Scotch ghost of Wilson leads the way with palm branches at the helm of the battleships, with puritan sermons and peaceful psalms to dull the christian conscience and the policy of Imperial Continuity as his chart. He says it is the path to socialism. It may be. But not in the sense in which he means it.

Freedom of Franchise In Practice

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE

CHICAGO and its environs are typically American and altho it is the habit of the capitalist press to ridicule the Latin-American for their lack of trainng in the use of the franchise when there is gun-play on election day, the Chicago press has been devoid of editorial comment on the manner in which the Cicero election was conducted—kidnaping, slugging, shooting and murder with victory going to the faction that mobilised the largest number of gunmen.

A great myth has been built up around the ballot in America. To listen to the eulogies delivered by inspired publicists one would be led to believe that when election day rolls around the populace rises to the stature of an intellectual giant and goes to the polls, each one a ruler in his own right, equipped with a keen knowledge and armed with a deep conviction concerning the weighty problems his ballot will aid in solving(?)

The Middle Class Electorate.

Campaigns we have witnessed and participated in do not bear out this rosy view and it is our opinion formed after several years of rather close observation of the great American public that the middle classes, of which the electorate now is mostly composed, is the most stupid and therefore the most easily fooled aggregation that ever were deluded into believing that they rule a nation. The proof of this theory is easily brought forward and as conclusive evidence of the truth of our statements we submit a composite photograph of the city, county, state and national officials who are now and have been in power for the last fifty years.

If further proof is wanted we submit as additional evidence the issues upon which elections have been fought for the same period of time and challenge any doubter to do two things, name one issue vitally affecting the relations of the working class to the capitalist class and point out one case where even relatively harmless mandates of the electorate have been carried out.

So far removed from the struggles of the working masses have been the issues in American election campaigns that in not one national election has a majority of the masses ever been aroused sufficiently to register a vote on one side or the other.

Debauching the Masses.

The election campaigns of American capitalism have debauched the electorate until cynicism is its outstanding characteristic.

The soil prepared in this manner is a fertile one for the growth of a widespread corruption affecting all classes in American society; a corruption of which the Teapot Dome and Daugherty scandal is symptomatic of a diseased social condition just as a boil is symptomatic of the need of a body cleansing.

The Cicero election campaign was a fight between two rival groups for the control of the illicit revenues from all forms of vice and therefore was a small replica of national campaigns waged by the two capitalist parties in which the issue has usually been the determining of which set of capitalist tools shall receive the revenues the real rulers allow their agents to collect. The violence in Cicero, in its open character, may differentiate it in degree from the methods pursued in election campaigns all over the nation, but to those who adhere ardently to the tenets of democracy as preached by the apologists of American capitalism, we say that there has never been an honest election in America and that there never will be while the capitalism system stands.

In every campaign where the class issue is apparent the ruling class resorts to violence after all attempts to befog the issue have failed and as larger and larger masses are aroused by the intensification of the struggle in the United States, the capitalists and their agents will become more and more brazen in their contempt for the democratic processes upon which they urge the workers and farmers to rely.

Reason for Hostility.

Not the least important reason for the hostility of the old capitalist parties and their tools in the labor organizations to the rising farmer-labor movement is their instinctive feeling that the class character of it will swing into action several millions of workers and farmers hitherto uninterested in political affairs and make much easier a thoro discussion of vital issues. Election campaigns will then become monster educational enterprises and will be fought out on issues that will force capitalist politicians to line up openly with their masters.

The capitalist press will of course, continue to laugh at the benighted citizens of Central and South American republics, but the correct position or the American working class to take is that with the rise of a mass movement of workers and farmers its political education is just beginning and that up to date it has with almost negligible exceptions always been used by one wing or the other of the bi-partisan political machine of American capitalism; it is for tactical reasons alone that the capitalist refrains from ridicule of the American electorate.

There is always indignation in our best circles because of such unfortunate occurrences as those at Cicero, yet they are a typically American phenomenon arising from the fact that the American masses are just learning that the right of franchise without a mass party of their own and a program expressing the needs of the workers and farmers is something as worthless as an honest ballot in an election run by capitalism's gangsters. The indignation aroused among the moral bourgeosie by open election corruption will be as nothing however, to their rage at the fight against capitalism as well as corruption that will be waged by the workers and farmers now massing their forces for the most effective utilisation of the election machinery of American government.

Bill to Repeal Esch-Cummins Law Fought by Roads

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Hale Holden, chairman, executive committee, Association of Railway Executives, protested to the senate interstate commerce committee, at a special hearing, against the Howell-Barkley bill which provides for the repeal of the labor sections of the Esch-Cummins law.

Daniel Willard, of the Baltimore & Ohio, seconded Holden's opinion that the Esch-Cummins law and the railroad labor board deserved to remain in full operation. Holden denounced the new bill as a scheme to enforce the closed shop and to disfranchise hundreds of thousands of railroad employes who "do not desire" to be represented by the regular labor organizations. Southern Pacific Company unions filed telegrams of protest, too.

Holden said the shopmen's strike of 1922 showed that the public was pleased with the railroad labor board's actions. It would be fatal to business stability if, when the next downward move in wages arrived, the law should encourage resistance to a wage cut.

Senator Couzens tried in vain to get Holden's estimate of the date of that coming reduction in wage scales.

Class War Prisoner In San Quentin Likes "Daily Worker"

The following letter from a victim of the capitalist class who is behind the gray walls of St. Quentin for his loyalty to labor is only one of many received from prisoners of the class war, praising the DAILY WORKER for its revolutionary character and its excellence. The letter was addressed to the Business Manager, Comrade Loeb:

To the Daily Worker: In reply to your letter of March 22 I wish to say that I am receiving THE DAILY WORKER regularly and wish to thank the comrade who so thoughtfully donated me a subscription.

The DAILY WORKER is the best paper that I have seen since the Butte Bulletin went out of existence. I know that it fulfills a long felt need in the field of labor journalism. If I was on the outside I would certainly do all in my power to make it a success. I hope that financial obstacles will be overcome and that the workers will give it the support it deserves. The staff of editors is of such high calibre that I am sure they will be able to make the paper succeed if anybody could.

There is just one suggestion I have to make and that is that I hope the paper will continue to put news ahead of propaganda because in the past many papers have fallen down because they failed to do that.

Again wishing you all kinds of success in the new venture I remain, yours for solidarity of the working class, W. I. FRUIT, No. 35715.

Union Heads Take Up Garment Strike Here

BIG CHICAGO STRUGGLE TO GET SUPPORT

"Committee of 15" Plans Another Meeting Today

Chicago's six weeks' garment strike will be thoroly considered by the Executive Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, now meeting in New York City.

Every angle of the long struggle will be considered and plans proposed for carrying it on to victory.

Perlstein Goes to New York.

Meyer Perlstein, vice-president, plans leaving immediately for New York City, to appear before the executive board.

Morris Sigman, international president who spent considerable time in the city last week, will also present whatever first-hand information he has.

The General Executive Board is expected to put the entire power of the whole union behind the strike and accept the help offered by other unions.

Keep the Strike Going.

"We will lay plans to keep the strike going as long as is necessary," Perlstein said to the DAILY WORKER. "As long as the employers persist in their unreasonable and arbitrary attitude of not dealing with the strikers, we will keep the strike going full blast."

It was announced at yesterday's strike meeting that "Bob" Minor will speak to the strikers today, followed by Jim Cannon in the near future.

Today the "Committee of 15" meets with Meyer Perlstein. It is understood that they will extend the offer of financial assistance to the garment strikers.

On the injunction cases alone there have been sixty tried for breaking the injunction, fifty-nine receiving fines and sentences. The fines range from 25 to 200 dollars, the average being over 100 dollars apiece. Wednesday between forty and fifty more cases are coming before Judge Sullivan, and it is expected he will have little mercy on the strikers. Over $30,000 has already been put out by the union on injunction cases alone.

Cloakmakers Win Strike.

WATERBURY, Conn., April 8.—By striking for two weeks against seven cloak manufacturers here, local 43, International Ladies' Garment Workers, has unionized Waterbury 100% and won a 44-hour week in the cloak industry. The old hours were 50 a week. Intimidation failed to break the strike. Organizer Jacob Grossman, arrested on a frameup, has been released by City Judge Hayes. Local 43 is now setting out to organize the local dress and underwear shops.

Detroit Working Women Pledge Aid To Garment Strike

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Apr. 8.—Pledges of aid and sympathy to the striking dressmakers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers have been forwarded to the DAILY WORKER for transmission to the strikers by the Detroit Federation of Working Women's organizations.

The Detroit working women urge the strikers "not to give up the fight until complete victory is won."

The resolution is signed by Organizer Anna Krakaitis, Secretary Anna Zabulak and Treasurer Anna Lauer.

They Need the Money.

ANGORA, April 8.—The Turkish national assembly has abolished prohibition of the manufacture of liquor on the ground that it is impossible to enforce the law, and also because of the necessity of balancing the budget.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

Daugherty Halted Effort to Save Federal Prisons From Grip of National Dope Ring

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Was there any depth to which the Daugherty gang in the Harding-Coolidge administration did not descend, in the cheating of justice and the shielding of crime?

Senators, congressmen and other listeners wondered, when the story of the blocking by Daugherty and Prison Superintendent Votaw of the investigation of dope peddling in Atlanta penitentiary was told to the Brookhart committee by former Warden Dyche and Detective William J. Burns.

Squelching the Dope Probe.

The horror of this drug traffic among the convicts—a branch of the nationwide activities of the narcotic ring, which takes millions in profits each year from these human wrecks in the slums of American towns and in jails and hospitals—struck home to the committee as perhaps no other feature of the slimy record of "normalcy" in government.

Dyche found the prisons, when sent there by Daugherty as warden, to be filled with drug addicts, to whom dope was sold by prison guards. These guards were agents of druggists, who were in turn agents of men higher up in the drug smuggling ring. He made repeated appeals to Votaw, who was a brother-in-law of President Harding, to stop the drug peddling.

Finally Votaw caused Burns to start an investigation. When this investigation was well under way, Dyche was summoned by Daugherty to Washington, and there he spent an hour with Daugherty and Votaw in aimless discussion—by Daugherty and Votaw—of the danger and harm in publicity thru this probe by Burns' men.

Dyche Forced to Resign.

Daugherty was cold toward the suggestion that the investigation be pushed and crime stopped within the walls of the federal prison. Burns' men were withdrawn. Burns, placed on the stand by Senator Wheeler, admitted that his men had begun to run down the connection between the prison guards and the wealthy heads of the dope ring, when they were called off. He said the evidence they had gathered resulted in the indictment of several guards, but the trial resulted in hung juries.

"If you had continued that investigation, would you in all probability have traced the dope traffic to the very heads of the conspiracy that covers this country, the narcotic ring?" Wheeler asked.

"I am sure we would have run it down to that source and located the men at the top," replied Burns. "Votaw stopped it; I did not protest."

Dyche was called to Washington a month later. Finally he was given the hint that he should resign. He did resign, and Daugherty asked Prohibition Director Haynes to give him a job. The assistant warden remains in the prison, and Dyche and Burns agree that the drug addicts are still buying dope.

More Crooked Stuff.

Much less serious in the scale of offenses, as measured by Daugherty standards, was the agreement of E. H. Mortimer, intimate associate of former Director Forbes of the veterans' bureau and member of the gang, to secure a commutation of sentence for Charles Vincenti of Baltimore, then in Atlanta prison, for $50,000. A photostatic copy of the offer of Vincenti, and the signed acceptance of Mortimer, was offered in evidence by Wheeler. Mortimer's former wife identified his signature on this document. Vincenti did not get the commutation.

Find Missing U. S. Paymaster.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., April 8.—Lieutenant Ervine Brown, U. S. Navy paymaster who disappeared at Mobile, Ala., March 10, with $120,000 in government funds was found lying in a roadway here late last night in a deranged condition.

POLISH WORKERS FORCE REVERSAL OF WAR PACTS

Warsaw Regime Deserts Roumania, France

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, April 6.—The Soviet government has won another diplomatic victory in getting Poland to agree to withdraw support from Roumania in the event of hostilities with Russia.

The Polish government is resolutely opposed to any further assistance to Roumania despite French pressure; it is desirous of resuming trade relations with Russia at the earliest possible moment and in well-informed political circles here it is said that there is visible lately much distrust of France growing out of the bad economic situation into which the military expenditures made under French direction have plunged the Poles. The working-class parties are urging the government to accede to the Soviet government's request for a joint commission to re-draw the Galician frontier and it is believed that the government will yield to this demand.

Recent developments here indicate that Roumania has been isolated except for French support and in her controversy with Soviet Russia over Bessarabia she will get little or no support. It is not believed that even France will aid Roumania in her territorial demands to the extent of waging war.

The breakdown in Germany has forced Poland to look towards Russia for economic relief but it is the pressure of the Polish working-class whose discontent was expressed in mass strikes a few months ago that is responsible for the new attitude of the Polish government. Polish imperialism under French guidance has proved a failure and the distrust of Soviet Russia is being replaced by distrust of French militarism.

Attempt To Push Muscle Shoals For Ford Gets Little Set Back

Senator Harrison, democrat, Mississippi, in an effort to rush thru the proposed Ford lease, attempted to pledge the committee to complete its hearing April 23, but he was voted down.

MacDONALD IS HOLDING ON TO PREMIERSHIP

Head of Labor Government Refuses To Resign

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 8.—Undismayed by last night's defeat Premier MacDonald today reiterated his determination to carry on until the government is beaten on "a substantial issue, a matter of principle or a direct vote of confidence."

The labor cabinet met to attempt to devise a method to handle the eviction bill in another form. It was on this measure that the government met defeat by nine votes. Parliamentary order prohibits reintroduction of a defeated bill in the same session.

The British press generally upholds MacDonald in not resigning. The premier spent the morning about his foreign office duties. He showed the strain of last night's harrowing experience when he sat with folded arms, and deathly white face, in a maelstrom of jibes from the tory opposition, refusing to resign.

Some Liberals In Opposition.

A few Liberals voted against the government and some for it, while more than forty abstained from voting. Among the latter were all the leaders including David Lloyd George and Herbert H. Asquith.

Mr. MacDonald and his cabinet maintain that the house deliberately sabotaged the bill, which was designed to safeguard poor tenants against the oppression of grasping landlords and they will probably try to draft the measure in a new form which will meet the approval of both sides of the house.

The original bill was introduced by John Wheatley, minister of health, who is the sole representative of the extremist socialist "black gang from the Clyde" in the cabinet, and it was backed solidly by the radicals in the Labor party.

California C. P. P. A. Endorses Brace of Capitalist Knaves

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8—The California conference for progressive political action has indorsed Hiram Johnson on the republican ticket and McAdoo on the democratic ticket, and will take no part in a third party movement unless "reactionaries" are nominated by the old parties. This action is concurred in by the railroad brotherhoods and the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative league.

Meanwhile a third party conference had been called by the Farmer-Labor party and the Nonpartisan league, to make plans for a ticket in this state. The California State Federation of Labor meeting denounced this action as premature.

Hiram Johnson is the senator who urged Daugherty to make Wm. J. Burns chief of the federal secret service.

SAID TO KNOW OF MER ROUGE KILLING; GONE

Buzy Disappears From Prison Farm

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ATLANTA, Ga., April 8.—Leaders of one faction in the recent Ku Klux Klan warfare today began private investigations of the escape from the federal prison honor farm here of Dr. E. C. Buzy, who claimed to know "the true story of the Mer Rouge mob murders."

Dr. Buzy, serving a sentence for using the mails to defraud escaped from the honor farm two weeks ago.

Federal officials said he had been a trusty at the Atlanta prison before being put on the farm and had been regarded by guards and convicts as "peculiar."

Henry J. Norton, leader of one klan faction who investigated Buzy's conflicting accounts of the Mer Rouge horror said the escape might have some connection with klan affairs and he would probe reports that Buzy had been "spirited away" for "ulterior purposes."

Buzy in his several "confessions" to Norton and others insisted that Watt Daniel had been killed by masked men at Mer Rouge but that he was the leader of one of the two "whipping parties" which waylaid the two men, Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards.

DUPONTS GET BIG PROFIT ON OLD HICKORY POWDER PLANT "FLU" VICTIMS DURING WAR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 8.—A gruesome charge that undertakers employed by the Old Hickory Powder Company near Nashville, Tenn., contracted to bury its war "flu" victims for $75, actually "farmed out" the burials for $11 and pocketed the $64 difference was made before the Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee today by George W. Storck, a Department of Justice accountant.

Storck said the burials were made in Potter's Field and the government paid the Hickory Company's charges.

Storck made his charge in testimony concerning the Department of Justice's activities in recovering money held to be due the government from the old Hickory company.

The committee today spent most of its time examining Brice Armstrong, Chicago dry agent, who continued the story of his alleged difficulties in obtaining prosecutions of prohibition law violators in Chicago, and alleged interference with prosecutions by Department of Justice officials.

After Armstrong was excused, George W. Storck, a certified accountant in the department of justice, was called to the stand. Storck told of his investigation of the Old Hickory Powder Company, near Nashville, Tenn. He was assigned to the case in August, 1923, by John W. H. Crim, assistant attorney general, who wrote him, saying that from the data he had "the government can recover millions," he said.

"Did the DuPonts know your leads so they could block your every move?"

"Yes."

At a conference in the office of the Assistant Attorney General Holland, Storck said he estimated the amount that could be recovered from the Old Hickory Company at $5,000,000 and others present at from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000. He said the DuPonts admitted holding $1,500,000 of the government's money but refused to turn it over until they were given "a clean bill of health."

"Has suit ever been brought?"

"No."

Took DuPont's Word.

At a conference of department officials in January, 1924, Storck said, the estimates of the recoverable money in the case were from $5,000,000 to $20,000,000. Assistant Attorney General Holland was present at this conference, and it was said there that the DuPonts had $1,500,000 of admitted government money on deposit which they refused to pay back unless they obtained "a clean bill of health."

Storck read from his notes that the "son-in-law of the DuPonts" had been named "contracting officer" at the Old Hickory plant, and that by his direction only "ten out of each 100" invoices were checked. If there was any difference between the government check and the company figures, he said, "the DuPont check was always taken."

Daugherty In This, Too.

Storck identified the DuPont son-in-law as "Capt. Foulke." He charged there had been "account padding" in cotton purchase and cotton freight rates.

"The Louisville & Nashville admitted an overcharge of $29,000," Storck said. "They charged it to profit and loss and wrote an employe it could be adjusted."

"Influenza cases" at the Old Hickory plant were particularly bad, the witness said, and he charged that the DuPont company contracted with a Nashville undertaking firm to dispose of bodies at $75 each, many of which were buried in a potter's field at a cost of $11.

Storck was questioned about "the Green case," a $30,000,000 mail fraud case in Boston. It was a "stock selling syetem," Storck said, and in his investigation "Mr. Green" told him that he could not proceed, as "Harry M. Daugherty was his attorney."

"And there never has been a prosecution?" asked Senator Wheeler.

"Not by the federal government," said Storck, adding that there had been a state prosecution.

N. Y. LABOR WARS ON JOHNSON BILL DESPITE GOMPERS

Workers Party Active For Foreign-Born

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 8.—Labor here is sharply divided on the immigration issue and feeling is running high. Following the joint campaign of President Samuel Gompers, American Federation of Labor, and Commander John R. Quinn, American Legion, in favor of the Johnson bill restricting immigration and discriminating against southern and eastern Europeans, Hugh Frayne, local A. F. of L. representative, is speaking here for the Johnson bill.

Secretary Baroff, International Ladies' Garment Workers, has replied to Gompers' written appeal to all A. F. of L. affiliated unions, challenging Gompers' stand. After listing the defects of the bill Baroff's letter states, "Our international union cannot accept the penalizing of any race or nation as the principle for either regulation or restriction of immigration."

The Italian branches of New York, Workers Party, and most of the foreign-born organizations are holding protest meetings against the Johnson bill. The bill is aimed especially at radicals. A recent meeting of 150 representatives of labor groups of nine nationalities went on record against the proposed legislation which provides for police supervision and fingerprinting of immigrants and deportation of persons whose views do not suit the Gary and Burns rulers.

Railmen Get Pay Increase Preserving Present Union Rules

An agreement has been reached between representatives of over 100,000 railroad trainmen and railroad officials, whereby the trainmen, employed on 74 different railroads receive wage increases averaging six per cent. It was announced by Assistant Vice-President M. D. Callahan at the Transportation Building that the union relinquished none of its basic rules, the men to receive overtime pay as usual after eight hours work.

The wage settlement was based on the increase granted by the New York Central railroad lines last January. Negotiations had been going on for two weeks, L. E. Shepard, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, leading the union negotiators. If the agreement had not been reached the matter was slated to come before the railroad labor board at Washington.

"PROTECTION" FOR BREWERY FOR $5,000

Thousand Violations Are Forgotten, Says Witness

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Further details of alleged "protection" afforded a Chicago rum ring by federal and state officials were related by Brice Armstrong, Chicago dry agent, before the Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee today.

Armstrong said that W. O. Potter, United States district attorney at East St. Louis, nolle prossed a case of prohibition violation against the Western Brewery Company at Belleville, Ill. Later, he said that he learned that $5,000 had been paid by the company to some government department "in lieu" of prosecution.

Doesn't Need Evidence.

After seizing a truck load of beer from the brewery, Armstrong said he recommended prosecution and injunction proceedings.

"I went to see Mr. Potter to give some additional evidence," he said. "Potter said 'I don't need any more evidence because I have orders from the Department of Justice to nolle prosse this case.'"

"Was it nolle prossed?"

"Yes."

The witness said that he was told by the secretary of the Western Brewery Co., of the payment of the $5,000 to the government. He was asked by chairman Brookhart to furnish the name of the secretary of the company later so that a subpoena could be issued for him.

"Garden City" Escapes.

Describing what he called "the Garden City Brewery case," Armstrong said seven carloads of beer were seized from the Garden City company. Later, he said an injunction against the Brewery was modified to permit the brewery to continue operation.

Armstrong said his divisional chief, a Mr. Kemp objected to him securing evidence at certain saloons.

"This was done to prevent their saloonkeeper friends from getting in trouble," he said.

Eight Out of 1,500.

The witness said he had reported from 1,000 to 1,500 violations of the prohibition law in Chicago in three years but had been called to testify but eight times in criminal proceedings.

"Can you explain how you thought these cases were fixed?" Wheeler asked.

"The Illinois beverage case is a good illustration. On December 28, 1922, I took a truck load of beer from Frankie Lake, Butch Cook and some others. I asked for criminal prosecution, and on March 22, 1923 I was instructed to go back and get some samples."

Daily Graft Collections.

Armstrong said that "graft collections are going on every day in Chicago." Asked for an instance of it, he said:

"I know that W. W. Flowers gave a Negro politician on the south side named McGowan $1,500 to have an indictment against him quashed. Flowers was convicted and he squealed. That's what started Clabaugh's investigation."

Wheeler asked Paul Howland, Harry Daugherty's attorney, to furnish the Clabaugh report to the committee. Howland agreed to do so.

Aided the Bootleggers.

Outlining the "graft system," Armstrong said that politicians brought pressure to bear on Department of Justice officials and arranged in advance to have bootleggers let off with light fines.

"To what extent is this graft going on?"

"Tens of thousands of dollars are changing hands every week in Chicago."

"If the Department of Justice got busy couldn't they clean up that situation?"

"They could."

Phone Trust Plans $7,500,000 Raid on New York Public

(By The Federated Press)

ALBANY, N. Y., April 8.—Investigation of the New York Telephone Co., charged with being a monopoly and part of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., a nation-wide trust is provided in a resolution that has passed the New York state senate and is now before the lower house.

Chairman Downing of the finance committee attacked the public service commission for alleged conniving with the trust in fixing exorbitant rates. The company has made application for a $7,500,000 annual increase in rates. It is further charged that the company forces consumers to pay for installation of the dial system, tho it saves the company thousands of dollars. Meanwhile the trust is disguising profits by building up what it calls a depreciation reserve.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

FARMER-LABOR PARTY ORGANIZED IN WEST VIRGINIA

State Federation Splits Over New Move

By TOM TIPPETT.

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 8.—Organized labor and the farmers in West Virginia will have their independent political party in the November elections. They have their ticket nominated and plan an intensive campaign for their own West Virginia Farmer-Labor Party. It is not affiliated with any national organization. The independent step is taken here after 16 years of the "reward your friends and punish your enemies" policy.

Split in Federation.

Unfortunately organized labor will not go as a unit into the new political venture. There is a serious split in the executive of the West Virginia State Federation of Labor. The secretary of the federation of labor has been ousted from office by its executive board. This action was taken while resolutions were being considered that demanded the resignation of the president of the federation and of three members of the federation who are against independent political action. The American Federation of Labor has a representative here to negotiate peace and a special convention of the federation is under way.

There was unanimity in official circles, regarding independent political action for the federation, so long as it remained on paper but when the nomination convention was called and it began to take on real life the fight began.

Movement Began in 1920.

The present move for independent political action in the state federation began in 1920 at a special convention. Its chief advocate and supporter there was H. L. Franklin, but the proposition was voted down. The next year (1921) Franklin was elected by the federation convention to be secretary-treasurer. He was re-elected the following year and the next having had five opponents in each contest.

In 1923 the federation called a special convention to consider the political outlook after the reactionary West Virginia legislature had adjourned. Resolutions from over 35,000 organized workers were introduced calling for independent action on the political field. The proposition carried unanimously. The resolution declared that complete failure was the result of their 16 years of lobbying for labor measures with the old parties. "The West Virginia Farmer-Labor Party be and is hereby endorsed and the incoming executive board be and hereby is instructed to give their full and undivided support on the political field to the Farmer-Labor Party," the special convention ordered.

Anti-Labor Partyite Loses.

The presiding officers of that convention are the same persons that have now split on the proposition. The convention provided for the calling of a Farmer-Labor party convention in March, 1924. It was this meeting at Clarksburg March 15 that precipitated the fight. The president of the federation, W. T. Harris, attempted to steer the convention away from an independent ticket. His resolution called for continuation of the Farmer-Labor party, but opposed a ticket in the field. He was defeated by 78 to 4.

Harris bolted the convention. A platform was drawn up and a state ticket named with Dr. A. S. Bosworth of Elkins for governor.

Resolutions hostile to Harris and three members of his executive board came in from subordinate bodies of the federation asking their resignation for not carrying out convention instructions.

Finnish Communists Poll 46,000 Votes In Spite of White Terror

DULUTH, Minn., April 8.—In a Stockholm cable to the "Tyomies", Finnish daily, here, it is stated that, despite the fact that the Communist Party in Finland has not been able to enter the elections officially and in spite of the fact that in the latest attempts to destroy the Communist Party, the authorities have suppressed the Communist press, forbidden Communist gatherings and conventions and imprisoned hundreds of the Party's most active leaders, editors and speakers, partial reports from the polls already give the Communists 46,000 votes.

The white government has also been forced to release 52 of the imprisoned members of the Socialist-Labor Party (Communist), against whom charges of sedition were made during the recent raids. Many of these prisoners are members of the parliament.

PARENTS' UNION COMING OUT OF SCHOOL STRIKE

Permanent Results Are Sought by Y. W. L.

By NAT KAPLAN.

Director of Y. W. L. Children's work.

The strike of the children in the Cregier school against the brutalities of Miss Mary E. Tobin, the principal, has now been in progress for two days. The first day of the strike started with an attempt by the Young Workers League and the Parents Committee to guide the young pickets in their endeavor to win the support of the children who were going to school and scabbing on them.

Thus about 7:30 a. m. a small band of the pickets met on an empty lot in the vicinity of the school and distributed banners and orders for picket duty to their fellow strikers. A butcher owning a shop adjoining the lot determined to end this youthful uprising and sent in a riot call for the police patrols. The scene which followed this incident can easily be imagined.

Fat Bulls Chase Kids.

Big fat policemen chasing little tots over streets and empty lots, and shouting "Hey, gwan back to school, before I knock your little block off." Young strikers sticking out their tongues and shouting back to the policemen, "C'mon, try and catch us, you big stiff."

Finally, however, the bulky policemen were successful in dispersing the young strikers. Their banners bearing such slogans as: "Down with Miss Tobin" and "Down with Corporal Punishment in the Public Schools" were trampled under foot and torn by the policemen.

As a result of the first onslought Mr. Bernard Weil and Mrs. Ray Speiser, both members of the Parents committee, were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct. Two of the most active child strikers were also arrested. The cases of both Mr. Weil and Mrs. Speiser will come up for a hearing before the Municipal court on Wednesday while the two youngsters have already been railroaded to the Juvenile Detention Home.

The exact figures on the amount of children on strike cannot be determined at this time. The capitalist press in the city is running big scare headlines in red ink, claiming that 600 children are on strike. It is pointed out by the Y. W. L. members of the Committee that most of the capitalist press reports were written in the home of Mrs. Weil away from the scene of battle and so are very inaccurate. During the course of Monday morning's picket duty only about 25 child strikers showed up. The youngsters claim, however, that after the first battle was over and the second division came to the school (the shift system is in vogue in this school) the ranks of the striking youngsters were swelled to the tune of 300.

Y. W. L. In Charge of Meeting.

At 4 p. m. a mass meeting of the child strikers was held at 1103 South Loomis St. The Junior Section of the Young Workers League took charge of the program and explained the strike to the young participants. A membership appeal was then made for the Junior section, as a result of which 40 of the children signified their willingness to become members of the organization. There were present about 75 children at this meeting, 25 of which were Cregier school pupils. While the children's mass meeting was in session a vote was taken by the members of the Parents committee on the advisability of continuing the strike. The majority of the committee voted in favor of continuing the strike. Yesterday there was no picketing in front of the school, according to the decision of the committee. The children were told to stay home for the day.

Parents' Organization Coming.

The committe will hold another session tonight in which the entire matter will be again reviewed. The arrest of Mr. Weil and Mrs. Speiser will be discussed, and the Young Workers League representatives will bring in a preamble and constitution for the formation of a definite dues paying parents' organization. Mr. and Mrs. Weil are especially optimistic on the possibilities of a parents' organization. It is pointed out that this group is practically the pioneer in the attempt to launch definite working class parents councils which will be able to review the life of the child in the school and make decisions for the betterment of school conditions. This, if nothing else, should make McAndrews, superintendent of the Chicago schools, rest uneasy in his official chair.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The Senate's investigation of alleged land frauds along the Rio Grande continued today with Rush D. Simmons, chief postal inspector, scheduled to resume the stand for cross examination on a postal investigation of the land activities of R. B. Creager, republican national committeeman from Texas.

Simmons will be kept on the stand but a short time, Senator Heflin, Alabama, chief prosecutor said. Heflin explained that the postoffice committee, which is conducting the probe, wants to examine postal inspectors Donaldson, and Williamson, who were assigned to the Creager case, so they may resume postal investigations which were interrupted in order that they might be quizzed by the committee.

A Strike Without A Scab:-- Ashleigh Writes of London Bus and Tramway Tie-Up

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, March 26 (By Mail).—The strike of the tramway men and omnibus men has now been in full swing for three days. Solidarity is complete. Not a street-car is on the roads of London. Not an omnibus, except a few so-called "pirate" vehicles, belonging to little private companies, which pay above the union rates, and which are running by permission of the strikers.

The only means of locomotion, for the great masses of the London population, are the subways and the suburban railway lines. These are utterly inadequate to cope with the problem of London's traffic. You can see hundreds of thousands of workers walking their four, five or six miles to work, in the morning.

The principal streets, leading from the great residential suburbs of London, are choked with a moving mass of people.

And now, today, comes the news that the subway men have decided to strike, in sympathy, at midnight on Friday next!

Sympathetic Labor Action.

Today, or tomorrow, the London District Committee of the Electrical Trade Union meets to consider sympathetic action, "quite apart from the question of the introduction of blackleg labor." This is because the Electrical Workers have already announced their decision to shut off power the minute there is an attempt to run street-cars with blackleg labor. So far, there has been no such attempt. The strike is absolutely 100 per cent effective. Not a single scab has yet been seen!

The strike is a remarkable one, when we consider that the omnibus drivers are striking merely in support of the street car men. The street car men's demand is quite simple: they want an increase of eight shillings per week, for all grades of work. There are no graded and complicated demands. Their slogan is "Eight shillings or nothing!"

There are 17,000 of the street car men. Their present wages are—for motormen and conductors—58 shillings, as a commencing rate, rising, with service, to a maximum of 67 shillings.

Splendid Solidarity.

The 21,000 omnibus men struck because the low wages of the street car men are being used by the omnibus company as an argument for the reduction of omnibus men's wages. There is no definite attack at present, on omnibus men's wages, but it might come at any time. So that the omnibus men's strike is a remarkable manifestation, coming, as it does, so soon after the depressed state of British labor, when it was difficult enough to get the workers into fighting form even for definite demands.

It is also a splendid example of the necessity for the newer unionism. The omnibus men and the street car men are in the same union—the Transport and General Workers' Union. They have one union and one general staff conducting the fight. Also, let it not be forgotten, this is the same union which has just recently concluded an offensive action in behalf of the longshoremen, in a nation-wide strike, which ended in the securing of higher wages. The Transport workers are going ahead with flags flying and trumpets calling—and, incidentally, they are showing what industrial unionism really can accomplish!

Striking Against Government.

The negotiations with the employers have broken down. The tramway authorities replied to the men's demand for an all-round increase of eight shillings with an offer of a five-shilling raise for certain grades only. This, the men immediately refused, thru their representatives, and, on the evening of March 25th, the negotiations ended. The government is to set up a court of inquiry, similar to that which functioned in the dock strike. In this strike, by the way, the employer is the London County Council, as far as the street car men are concerned. The London tramways are "publicly owned." The omnibus system is owned by private capital: the London General Omnibus Co.

And so—and so, under a Labor Government (save the mark!) thousands of men are engaged in a bitter struggle for a living wage. And the government, of course, immediately commandeers the transport system, in the name of the workers of Britain, and settles the dispute in the men's favor. Does it? It does not! It is not that kind of a labor government. What it does do, is to appoint a court of inquiry which, in a week or two will give a decision, probably a compromise one, which the government will beg the workers to accept.

Mac's Gold Braids.

But there is one thing for which we may thank heaven. There has as yet been no strike in the gold braid industry. So Mr. MacDonald, Mr. Webb, Lord Olivier, the "Labor" secretary of India—which is now trying to send Indian workingmen to prison for organizing a working class political party—can be sure of being able to renew their beautiful black velvet, gold-braided knee breeches, when the "Labor" ministers kneel to kiss the king's hand. It is a pity it is only his hand. One can think of even more picturesque means by which they may express their loyalty.

Klan Defeated.

DALLAS, Tex., April 8.—With the re-election of the Dallas school board April 1, the Ku Klux Klan which had put up a full opposition ticket, without their label, suffered a serious defeat. The klan controls all the county offices.

French Government Pimping in Islands Of New Hebrides

(By The Federated Press)

VILA, New Hebrides, April 8.—Another protest has been made by missionaries in the New Hebrides against the traffic in women countenanced by the French government authorities in the islands.

It is alleged that the French enlist labor for the plantations by using single women as decoys. These women are taken to the plantations and "married" to a man to defeat the island regulations, and are then allotted to the men at the will of their employers or are given to the laborers without further protection.

The New Hebrides islands are jointly controlled by the British and French governments, but owing to the proximity of the islands to New Caledonia, French law and customs predominate. The missionaries are appealing to bring the island under the control of the Australian federal government.

Communist Christening Here.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The first Communist christening in this country will take place when the son of Jim and Fanny Manus, two young Communists of the Greek Branch here, will be dedicated to the service of Communism. A similar ceremony took place a few months ago in Moscow, when the child of a young couple was dedicated by some of the great leaders of Russia, to the cause of Communism.

Form Laundry Trust.

NEW ORLEANS La., April 8.—Nine laundries representing an investment of $3,000,000 have formed a trust in the guise of an operating company known as The Laundry & Dry Cleaning Service Inc. Housewives of New Orleans will pay the price or bend over the washtubs themselves as all standard laundries have cast their lot with the new organization.

Violence Reigns As Monarchists Win.

MUNICH, April 8.—Returns from half the precincts of the Bavarian elections show that the Monarchists have been able to forcibly capture the election by their Fascisti violence. The socialists polled only half their usual strength and the Communists lost many votes because they were forcibly kept from the polls.

Women Pan Reaction.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., April 8.—Recent action by the Los Angeles Parent-Teachers' Association condemning radical and progressive activities of the youth and passing a resolution opposing reduction of the reserve officers' training corps in the public schools has been roundly scored by the Women's Shelley club.

Hughes Arrives.

NEW YORK, April 8.—Waving his arms and shouting for a "league of English speaking nations to save civilization" from the so-called yellow peril, W. M. Hughes, renegade Labor premier of Australia during the war, has arrived in New York.

SOCIALISTS JOIN CATHOLICS IN BELGIAN COUP

Coalition Endangered By "Democrats"

By A. HABARU.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BRUSSELS, April 8.—Because of the contemplated united front of the Belgian Socialists and the Flemish Catholics it is the general opinion here that the third Theunis cabinet will soon fall.

In outlining his policies the prime minister of the new cabinet declared in favor of more unity between the Allies in order to come to a favorable solution of the reparations problem. He favored adjournment of all questions which would be able to divide the Catholic-Liberal coalition.

New Alignment.

The new government, tho it cannot escape the influence of French imperialism, has declared for a close Anglo-Belgian collaboration. Hymans, the new minister of foreign affairs, has written to Ramsay MacDonald in the most friendly spirit. The first step of the new cabinet is significant in view of the participation of the former government in the French occupation of the Ruhr.

Altho the Belgo-French economic agreement has been rejected by Parliament, and is now abandoned by the new government, French influence remains considerable in this country. French banking interests are developing daily in Belgian affairs. The newly discovered rich coal fields of the Flemish Kempen are already partly under French capitalist control. The Belgian Government is tied to France by large former loans and by a secret military agreement, so it is certain that any Belgian cabinet cannot openly adopt a policy which would be in opposition to the French.

Belgian state finances are closely dependent on payment of the reparations. But as the occupation of the Ruhr was not very productive, the tendency of the new cabinet is to bring about an "honorable" end to the occupation and to provoke a general settlement of the reparations.

Socialist-Catholic Combine Probable.

The bourgeoisie is divided and it was very difficult to form a new coalition. The opposition of the Socialist Party remains complete, and the Flemish Catholics do not agree that the language question in the army should be adjourned. Therefore these two are now preparing the way for taking power after the general elections next year. Vandervelde is expected to realize his ambition of a minority "democratic" government, with the help of his Catholic friends. Perhaps this conservative coalition, which is in close touch with the MacDonald Labor government of Great Britain, will open the eyes of the workers of these two countries to the conservative character of the social democrats.

Canadian Postal Workers' Strike Set for Monday

OTTAWA, Can., April 8.—A strike that threatens to tie up the Canadian postal service is scheduled for April 14, unless salaries of letter carriers, railway mail clerks, postal clerks, postal porters and transfer agents are revised upward. The trouble was caused by announcement that the wartime bonus, paid in addition to salaries for a number of years, would be again reduced.

The revised salary schedule asked for by the letter carriers, railway mail clerks, etc., provides for a minimum of $1,260 and a maximum in the neighborhood of $1,980. The present salaries with bonus range from $780 to $1,560.

GARMENT BOSSES GETTING AID TO HIRE SLUGGERS

Strike Leader Hits At Big Employers

"Garment bosses of Chicago could never afford unaided the price they must pay for sluggers and lawyers in this strike," is the statement of Morris Bealis, manager of the Chicago Joint Board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers.

"Profits, not principle," continued Bealis, "is what the bosses care most about. I know what these dress manufacturers capitalize for and that they cannot pay the toll alone for the special service they are having during the strike. If the union had only the garment bosses to fight, the strike would have been over in two weeks.'

Open-Shoppers Lackey.

That the dress manufacturers are being materially assisted by the Employers' Association, representing the organized big business of Chicago, is evident in their employment of Dudley Taylor as prosecuting attorney in Judge Denis Sullivan's "equity" court. Dudley Taylor is the same man of infamy who has prosecuted the building trades unions. He has been attorney for the so-called "Citizens' Committee," which is really an organization of the big open shop contractors enforcing the notorious Landis award. Dudley Taylor has a long record of service against labor under the Employers' Association.

Bealis reiterated the point made in the last Chicago Federation meeting by President John Fitzpatrick that the big business interests do not want organized labor within the "Loop" district of this city. The needle trades, according to Bealis, are the only ones organized in the "Loop" with any effectiveness. It is natural, then, that the other business men should support the dress manufacturers in their effort to eradicate the International Ladies' Garment Workers from their shops.

Bosses Well Organized.

Unquestionably the Employers Association, the Illinois Manufacturers Association, and the Chicago Commerce Association are intertwined. Firms and individuals belong usually to all of these organizations.

John M. Glenn, the spokesman of the Illinois Manufacturers, has already stated to The DAILY WORKER that the relations between his outfit and the employers group were "very friendly." He confessed that many of the big garment bosses belong to his association and it is well known that these same men belong to the Employers' Association. As we have published before, the secretary of the Dress Manufacturers' holds office jointly with the Employers' Association.

Commission to Fight Labor.

Further, the Chicago Crime Commission was organized by the Chicago Commerce Association to fight labor unions in this city. From a report they sent to all contractors in the city, we find that they "effected the appropriation of $100,000 for the payment of capable, experienced attorneys as special prosecutors in these cases." Who made the appropriation is not explained, but it is sure that Dudley Taylor must have secured a good part of that sum for his special services.

This same report of the Crime Commission brags that they "brought about the appropriation by the city council for 1,000 police officers." Maybe some of these superfluous officers are marking time down on Market and Jackson streets during the present garment workers' strike.

The Crime Commission boasts of their system of "more than 200,000 records of crime and criminals for the protection of your business and your home." Business comes before the home.

Using Vigilante Service.

This vigilante force of business men has not been content with the co-operation of the state's attorney's men, but loudly acclaims their own services to the "elected" authorities. Undoubtedly it is their strength which bolsters up the dress manufacturers of Chicago in this fight against the union.

The DAILY WORKER has estimated that the strike has cost the garment bosses more than $50,000 so far. That is a staggering figure for the few remaining bosses to pay! The smaller bosses quit and settled with their workers, rather than face the tremendous cost of continuing the strike. The employers still fighting are those who are enjoying the favor of organized big business in Chicago and Illinois.

A big parade of striking garment workers is promised the "Loop" district for the near-future, according to the statement of Meyer Perlstein, International vice-president of the Ladies' Garment Workers. All garment union members on strike will participate in the demonstration thru Chicago's business center.

Details of this mass performance have not yet been completed, but it is possible that other labor representatives may be asked to join the strikers' parade thru the city streets.

Perlstein leaves tonight for New York, where he will appear at the meetings of the General Executive Board of the International to outline the Chicago strike situation. He will explain that if the strike cannot be satisfactorily settled within the next few weeks, it will have to be carried on until the new season of work begins, that is in July.

The International has no intention of calling off the strike here until their demands are met, Perlstein declared. The officials consider the status of the union here is seriously imperilled by the united opposition which has confronted it. If it is found necessary to continue the struggle thru the slack season, the International may have to appeal for assistance from the local Federation of Labor. Otherwise the union will be able to manage alone.

HIRAM OUT OF RUNNING AFTER 2 TO 1 DEFEAT

Walloping in Michigan Means He's Thru

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., April 8.—Hiram Johnson got the drubbing of his political career in the Michigan primaries, according to the returns from two-thirds of the state's precincts which put him nearly 100,000 votes behind Silent Cal. It means—say political dopesters—that Johnson is finished as a presidential candidate as the result of this two to one defeat.

The vote in 1983 out of 2,894 precincts gives Coolidge 162,229 and Johnson 73,203 votes. Coolidge's plurality is 89,026.

Hiram's attempt to rattle the Teapot proved a fizzle with a disillusioned public which did not remember his having protested against the transfer of the California naval oil reserve to Doheny.

Dodged Newberry Issue.

The Californian's railing against political corruption was another dud because of the well known fact that he dodged the vote to oust Newberry for buying his senatorial election.

Faced with the Hobson's choice of voting for a sham progressive or a labelled reactionary many progressive republicans refused to vote for either while the Old Guard type of voter made his mark after Coolidge's name on the theory that it wasn't worth while making a change.

In Mooney Conspiracy.

Organized labor of Detroit which has endorsed the Farmer-Labor principle and was class conscious enough to remember Johnson as the silent partner to the conspiracy to hang Tom Mooney.

Political experts say the Michigan vote has shattered what was left of Johnson's prestige in the G. O. P.

New Against Postal Clerks.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Bills pending in Congress to increase the pay of postal employes were condemned by Postmaster-General New in suggestions sent to Chairman Edge of the joint subcommittee on post offices. Instead New would saddle the country with an increase in the postal rates amounting to $100,000,000 a year. New recommends a general increase in parcel post, advertising and second and third class mail rates with only a slight increase in salary for the postal clerks.

Socialists Still Minority in the Milwaukee Council

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 8—The socialist aldermanic strength will remain at eleven, and the socialists on the county board will be increased from six to eight as a result of last Tuesday's elections, in which Mayor Daniel W. Hoan was re-elected on the socialist ticket. The aldermanic council will be comprised of 14 non-partisans and the eleven socialists.

The victory of James L. McCormack, non-partisan, over Alderman John Koerner was a further rebuke to David S. Rose, so badly defeated in the mayoralty race by Hoan. Koerner was a supporter of Rose, and consequently has bitterly opposed measures sponsored by the socialists.

Rose Is Strike-Breaker.

David S. Rose, who failed to come back in the election, made his first entry into Milwaukee in 1886 with Darlington guards during the steel strike.

Five Polish workers were killed during the strike,—a fact of special interest considering that Rose has played for the support of the Poles during all his later political campaigns. Rose himself is a Pole, his name originally having been Rosinsky. And he has always championed the Parochial schools which Catholic Poles attend.

"Dave is a jolly old boy," said G. S. Shflar, a district organizer for the Workers Party yesterday. "Altho, himself well advanced in years, he loves to speak of the good old days when he was in power, and when as he puts it in his speeches 'there was something on the table.' The open town is one of his chief points. This indecency works up the socialists into the state of noble indignation. Of course, they are for decency and against the 'Red Light' district. Neither the socialist party nor its candidates for office has tried to make it clear to the workers that prostitution is a social evil and can not be eliminated as long as the capitalist system is in existence, and the working class girls are forced into the factories to work under the most degrading conditions.

Marxism Simplified.

"Had Karl Marx, the great founder of scientific socialism, lived in Milwaukee in our enlightened days he would not have to toil over the three volumes of Capital. Berger has it simplified in a nut-shell. Socialism is simply decency and honesty in public affairs versus the corruption. At least this is the only issue which is emphasized in the election campaign.

"Nothing was said by the candidates regarding the real burning issues confronting the workers. Questions of wages and hours of work are conspicuous by their absence while the question of taxes is given the most prominent place. The same applies to the housing conditions, unemployment, etc. It is a well known fact that the wages in this city are amongst the lowest in the country and that practically all the establishments in the city are working on the open shop basis, yet nothing to that effect was mentioned in the Golden Rule manifesto of the Socialist Party."

Government Won't Help.

OTTAWA, Can., April 8.—Some 30 of the British harvesters who were imported by the Canadian railways last summer on promise of employment and who have found employment scarce during the past winter, hiked to Ottawa from Toronto and called on the prime minister for help. Premier King, refused responsibility. He told the hikers the government did not guarantee employment.

BLOODY FASCISM, AIDED BY GUNS, TAKES ELECTION

Murders, Intimidation, Feature Fascist Victory

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, April 8.—After a hopeless struggle against the violence of the Fascisti in the elections, Italy today is nursing its wounds and also a determination that the minority rule of the bloody Mussolini must be overthrown.

An intense feeling against Fascism has swept thru the ranks of not only the Communists and Socialists, but democrats, monarchists, republicans, and clericals as well. All are bitter because of the bloodshed and violence by means of which Mussolini managed to keep his bloody fingers at the throat of Italy.

Newspapers are full of accounts of personal intimidation and violence indulged in by the black shirts. Unable to keep his place, Mussolini has spread a reign of terror which has had a tremendous reaction against him. Hundreds of people thruout the Po Valley, Piedmont, Venetia, and all sections of Italy report that they have been physically attacked by the Fascisti. All opposition newspapers were withdrawn from circulation, voters were forced to mark their ballots for the Fascisti, and opposition votes went uncounted.

In many sections candidates opposed to the Fascisti were made to withdraw from the election under threat of death. Stories of murders of those opposed to the Fascisti are undenied by Fascisti newspapers. In a village near Milan Socialists were told by the Fascisti that it more than five voted, there would be some killings after the elections.

Seventy thousand murdering black shirts went on election duty. They carried blackjacks and guns thru the towns and warned the citizens to vote for the Fascisti or they would be killed. The blackshirts went out with trucks and brought the voters to the polls, making them vote for the Fascisti at the point of the guns.

It is expected that the elections, by which Mussolini managed to retain by violence power that he had snatched in the same way, eventually will result in the overthrow of the tyrant. The poeple are nursing wounded feelings, and they are determined to find a class conscious leadership that will wrest them from the clutches of the blood eating blackshirt.

Russian Industrial Expert Finds U. S. Capitalism Sickly

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, April 8.—That the United States is going thru such a moment economically as to make her greatly need Russia at the present juncture, is the purport of a statement made to press correspondents by Mr. Nogin, Chairman of the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, just returned from America, where he had stayed for two months on business.

"I visited a great number of mills, ports and banks, and have come to the conclusion that America is still experiencing a crisis," Nogin said. "Thus, in New England, where the textile industry is the most developed, a number of mills work but three days in a week and the machines work only at 40 per cent of their full capacity. The same curtailment of production and sales may be noticed in the metal branch too. Both branches want orders badly. Further, American shippers are in the same plight, as I could notice, among other places, at Philadelphia and on the Mississippi, and they are therefore also interested in Russia."

In conclusion, Mr. Nogin stated that representatives of American and British manufacturers were coming to Russia this spring to study conditions of Russian textile industry.

Independence Party Beats Leonard Wood In Philippine Election

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MANILA, April 8.—The Nacionalista Consoledado party, demanding complete, unconditional and immediate independence for the Philippines, carried the elections. This party, a coalition of the Collectivista and Nacionalista parties, is bitterly opposed to the domination of the United States on the islands thru the dictatorship of Leonard Wood.

Manuel Quezon and Sergio Osmena were elected president and vice-president of the senate. Their party has succeeded in thwarting Wood in his recent attempts to railroad his autocratic measures thru the legislature.

The steamer President Jackson is bringing an independence mission of three men to this country to protest against the attempted subjection of that country by the financiers of the United States.

DEBATE STARTS IN CONGRESS ON IMMIGRATION

Expect Final Vote on Bill Saturday

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The House today setled down to a 12-hour debate on the proposed two per cent quota immigration bill.

From 11 a. m., until 11 p. m., debate on the measure was scheduled to occupy undivided attention of the law makers. The day's work will complete general debate, and thereafter discussion will be confined to five minutes per member on amendments.

Opponents of the bill today admitted there was very little hope of blocking its passage. Objection to it is centered on the proposal to make the census of 1890 the basis for the quota. This would cause a radical cut in the immigration from Southern and Eastern Europe, and a proportionate increase in that from Northern and Western Europe. Final vote on the bill is not expected before Saturday.

And Spy on Foreign Born.

Representative Vestal of Indiana, offering Secretary Davis' alien registration bill as an amendment to the immigration bill before it got to the floor of the house, confessed that its purpose is to spy on the aliens and deport those who protested at industrial abuses.

"According to the secretary of labor," said Vestal, "the immigration figures indicate that the workers who have been able to secure admission under our laws are not the kind the employer says he needs. But we do know this: That among those who have entered our country are immigrants whose mental, moral and physical makeup constitute a menace to the political, economic and social life of the republic; and to continue to permit immigration at the present rate, or to increase it, will mean the practical destruction of our whole industrial system."

He said he could see "no reasonable objection in compelling aliens to register once a year,," and be examined as to their activities, so that the department of labor might know "where such alien is located and whether or not he is attempting to assimilate American principles. . . . We know that individuals in this country are preaching the cause of Soviet Russia. We know that individuals on trial for plots to overthrow the government have not hesitated to preach the gospel of Communism rather than the stability and prosperity of American representative government."

Vestal discloses his industrial slant by proposing also that the bureau of immigration shall determine the kind of workers—skilled or unskilled—who shall be admitted at any given time. This will give the employers the "kind of men they want," when they want them.

Declaring that even without immigration, the population of the United States will be 200,000,000 in fifty years, Representative Johnson, Washington, chairman of the house immigration committee, today called for the passage of the new immigration bill "as much a conservation measure as any dealing with natural resources."

There are 600,000 Russians, 300,000 Italians and 70,000 Poles who have already applied for passports and are endeavoring to reach the United States he declared.

Austria Extends Full Recognition To Soviet Russia

Austria is the latest country to fall in line and grant de jure recognition to the Soviet government. Austria for some time has had trade relations with Soviet Russia, and had lately recognized the Russian government de facto. Now it is announced Austria has given Russia full de jure recognition, with the establishment of complete diplomatic as well as trade relations.

"Hell and Maria" Dawes Is Annoyed Over Many Delays

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, April 7.—Charles G. Dawes has declared his extreme annoyance at the Reparations Commission here over its delay in coming to terms. A determined struggle has been going on as to the amount of money Germany will be forced to pay.

The Reparations Commission of which Dawes is chairman, plans the establishment of a private bank for Germany. Altho the announced purpose is to stabilize German currency and balance Germany's budget, the plan is to have seven foreign countries represented on the board of directors.

Germany Relinquishes Finances.

Germany will be asked to relinquish authority to print bank notes to the new bank, and the notes are to be printed outside Germany. The Reichsbank and the credit bank are to be absorbed by the new bank, it is announced, and a special foreign supervisor is to handle the reparations account.

This bank, which is looked on as a handy way for France, and thru Dawes the American financiers who have been active in France, to more easily plunder helpless Germany.

Capitalists After Railroads.

The bank's gold reserve may be transferred from Germany to another country by a three-fourths vote of the board of directors. In order to balance Germany's budget, the Reparations Commission announces the issuance of a series of International loans, secured by the German railroads, which are valued at 25 million gold marks. Two billion gold marks are the figures set by the "experts"—at a good interest of course—for the amount of these loans.

In order to meet these added demands of the international plunderers now engaged in dividing Germany's carcass, it is announced that Germany will be required to raise railroad fares and freight rates. The railroads will have to be supervised by foreigners.

Details Leaking Out.

Details of the experts' reports are leaking out as they pass thru more, and more hands in translation, printing and proof reading.

French sources today handed out what purported to be an authoritative resume of the Dawes' committee's report. It conforms to the outline published yesterday, namely, that a gold bank of emission will be established, an international loan granted Germany, and control of the railroads assumed and adds hitherto unpublished details.

"Without interfering with military occupation of the Ruhr," the authoritative French version says, "the economic unity of Germany must be retored."

"The Ruhr customs and railways must be returned to Germany, but allied representatives will act as overseers in order to safeguard the security of the troops.

Germany Must Pay.

"Germany's reparations payments will amount to one billion gold marks the first year by means of a foreign loan of 800,000,000 plus 200,000,000 from a transport tax.

"Twelve hundred million will be paid the second and third years, 1,750,000,000 the fourth year, 2,460,000,000 the fifth and a rising ratio thereafter, according to Germany's national prosperity.

"The entire German railway system is to be conceded for fifty years to accompany with a capital of 26,000,000,000 gold marks, of which two billion marks in preferred stock will be given.

The French version also included a levy on German industries which profited by annihilation of the mark.

Russian Co-Op Bank Makes Great Strides During Past Year

One of the surest signs of industrial recovery in Russia is the fine record made during the past year by the All-Russian Cooperative Bank, a report of which has just been made public by the All American Cooperative Commission.

The number of paid-in shares in the Russian Bank increased during the year from 48,000 to 74,000. The bank, which has 15 branches and 15 agencies in the provinces, has on deposit at the end of the year more than 1,205,000 gold rubles. Its net profit for the year amounted to 7,900,000 gold rubles, of which 25 per cent will be added to the capital stock, 25 per cent to the fund for long-term loans, 6 per cent distributed in dividends, and 7 per cent set aside for cultural and educational purposes.

Due to the healthy financial development of the cooperative system in Russia, the credit operations of the bank were greatly increased during the year. From October to December alone they increased more than 75 per cent.

The management of the cooperative bank is now negotiating with the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions an agreement whereby the trade unions of the country will use the bank as the depository for their surplus funds. In this way, the Russian trade unions will benefit, as an increasing number of American trade unions now are doing, in the cooperative sharing of any profits made on the investment of their money.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Practically all provisions of the new tax bill to be reported within a day or two by the Senate Finance Committee were made known today.

The bill under final agreement in committee, provides:

A three per cent normal tax on incomes of less than $4,000.

A six per cent normal tax on incomes of more than $4,000.

Do You Earn This Much?

A maximum surtax of 25 per cent on incomes over $100,000.

A tax of 25 per cent on inheritances of more than $10,000,000.

A 10 per cent tax on all jewelry costing more than $25.

Slightly more exemptions on the taxes upon automobiles.

A flat corporation tax of 14 per cent instead of 12½ per cent.

A tax of 10 per cent on all admissions over 50 cents.

A tax of 10 per cent on radio parts and sets and mah-jong sets.

Taxes upon telegraph and telephone messages and tobacco will remain the same instead of being reduced as in the bill passed by the house provided.

Some Reductions Made.

The following taxes will be wiped out under the new senate bill:

Beverages, candy, corporation capital stock, capital loss provisions, straight levy on the theatres and circuses, knives, dirks and daggers, liveries, hunting, shooting and riding garments, yachts and motorboats sales, carpets, rugs, trunks and purses.

Chairman Smoot of the committee, now expects to complete the bill finally tonight. He announced he would not report it to the senate until it is printed and this may not be done before Wednesday.

Millinery Workers Beating Association In Open Shop City

LOS ANGELES, April 8.—Five hundred Los Angeles Millinery Workers are out on a strike to force the millinery manufacturers to recognize their union and give them a 44-hour working week.

As usual the Merchants and Manufacturers Association has taken the millinery bosses under their wing and are directing the manufacturing end of the strike. While more than 85 per cent of the workers in the industry are solidly organized and well led and are determined to win.

Bosses Not Chivalrous.

Several shops have already settled and have allowed all of the demands. A paradoxical situation, however, has developed. The bosses are willing to give a 44-hour week to the male workers, but not to female workers. The reason therefore, seems to be the fact that they need the skilled and organized male workers, but are taking advantage of the fact that the women workers are not organized as well as the men.

The Needle Industry in the West has been expanding. Many small manufacturers who were looking for an open shop utopia, have moved their shops to Los Angeles—the city that houses the staff headquarters of the God of the Open Shop. The Chamber of Commerce advertises Los Angeles as the "Only White Spot in America" and asks all business men to join the M&M and keep the spot white.

Out to Win.

It is an axiomatic fact, however, that where factories and shops concentrate, the Working Class concentrates and becomes conscious and the chances of the "Spot" always being "white" are very slim.

White Rule does prevail and will prevail as long as the workers are not conscious and misled, but the Millinery Workers of Los Angeles are out to do all they can to redden the White Spot.

Colors Will Riot at Big International Bazaar Next Week

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 8—Preparation for the Third Annual International Bazaar, for the relief of class war prisoners, to be held April 10-13 at Central Opera House, 67th Street and 3rd Avenue, entered an intensive stage this week. The Bazaar is now only ten days away.

The Bazaar promised to be a riot of color, frolic and fun. Entertaining programs are arranged for the evening, and good dance music will be on hand for the votaries of Terpsichore. Programs and special sales will feature the afternoons and evenings.

Most of the booths are taken and these will present an attractive scene in the gay decorations and load of good things: dresses, hats, ornamental objects, books, confections, etc. Nerma Berman, secretary of the National Defense Committee, reports a gratifying flow of contributed articles for the booths. She urges the comrades not to let up, however, in their efforts to obtain contributions as there is still great need of articles and, of course, the more things obtained and sold the wider can be the relief work.

N. Y. WORKERS PLEDGE AID TO FREE FILIPINOS

Parties of Wall Street Are Denounced

NEW YORK, April 8.—At one of the most enthusiastic meetings held in New York City, close to 600 workingmen and women pledged their solidarity with the Filipino people in their struggle for complete national independence and for freedom from the domination of the present American imperialist rule of Wall Street.

The republican and democratic parties were denounced scathingly for their devotion to the cause of imperialism and all the energies and resources of the Workers (Communist) Party of America were pledged to the Filipino masses to help them conclude their victorious fight against the capitalist exploiters, the common enemy of the workers of the world.

Antonio Viterbo, professor of the University of Manila, the first speaker, told the interested audience of the great progress made by the Filipinos in education and industry. Prof. Viterbo emphasized that considerable industrial progress achieved by the Filipino people and made a fervent plea for their national independence.

Scott Nearing followed Prof. Viterbo and told how the American imperialists got their first foothold in the Philippines and gradually extended their control and influence until they now have invested more than one-quarter of a billion dollars in the Islands.

American Imperialistic Investments.

Scott Nearing gave an enlightening as well as interesting talk on the growing "investments in patriotism" made by the American capitalists in the Philippines. "These investments in rubber, cocoanut oil, hemp, copra, sugar and tobacco are the investments in patriotism made by the American capitalists and are responsible for the present imperialist policy of the Washington government towards the Philippines. Washington is the last place on earth where the Filipinos will get their national freedom and liberty. It is only by establishing their economic freedom in the Philippines that the Filipinos will ever be able to get their freedom," said Scott Nearing.

Jay Lovestone told how the American capitalist class is employing its control of the United States government to enslave the Filipino people in the same way that it exploits and oppresses the workers and farmers at home. He told the story of the appointment of General Wood as Governor General and the policy pursued by Wood in his campaign to force the Filipino nation to hand over valuable concessions to the Standard Oil, Procter & Gamble and Firestone Rubber Co., interests which were among the big business groups that invested close to two billion dollars in the presidential primary campaign of General Wood in 1920.

Workers' and Farmers' Government.

It is in the interests of our own working class at least as much as in the interests of the Filipino masses that we must get into the fight for the national freedom of the Philippines. Today, the only organization of all peoples oppressed by the capitalist imperialist the world over is the Communist International of which the Workers Party is the American section. It is only a Workers' and Farmers' government of, by, and for the American working class that can guarantee political and economic freedom to the brave Filipino people that has resisted tyranny for four hundred years."

Vicente Bunman director of the Philippine Press Bureau and member of the official Filipino Independence Mission, followed with a thoro analysis and a complete annihilation of the various arguments usually put up against Philippine independence by the capitalist newspapers. Mr. Bunman drew tremendous applause when he told of how the Workers Party was thanked by the Philippine Confederation of Labor at its recent national congress and how the Filipino workers and farmers are responding to the call for international solidarity issued by the Workers Party of America.

Resolution Proposed.

At the close of the meeting Jay Lovestone proposed the following resolution which was adopted unanimously and with great enthusiasm by a rising vote of the hundreds of workers who filled the Webster Hall.

"We the workers of New York, in mass meeting assembled under the auspices of the Workers Party of America, Local Greater New York, unanimously pledge our solidarity with the Filipino people in their struggle for complete national freedom from the domination of Wall Street.

"The demand that Congress immediately recall General Wood and his military cabinet from the Philippines and pledge ourselves to do everything in our power to compel Congress to adopt this policy.

"We call upon all workers and farmers and all labor and farm organizations to line up solidly for a fight to the finish in union with their Filipino brethren in our common struggle against our common enemy—the imperialist capitalist class of exploiters.

"We condemn the high-handed imperialist campaigns and policies against the Filipino nation, supported by the capitalist democratic and republican parties.

"We call upon all workingmen and exploited farmers to rally to the struggle waged and led by the Communist International for the freedom of all oppressed peoples—Filipinos, Haitans, Koreans, Indians, and others—now held in subjection by the capitalist governments and ruling classes of the United States and all other imperialist controlled countries."

Zinoviev Reviews the Main Points of Difference

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Today we continue publication of the famous report by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, made to the session of the Executive of the Communist International held on Jan. 6. Zinoviev's report deals with the main points of difference in the Russian Communist Party, clearly crystallizing the discussion that has so far been published in the DAILY WORKER. In order that our readers may get a broader view of this discussion, we are publishing enlarged installments. This report is divided into seven sections. Today we publish the second section. It is as follows:

* * * *

II.

Party Apparatus and Workers' Bureaucracy.

NOW to the second point of the discussion, the question of the Party apparatus.

We must first differentiate between the state apparatus and the Party apparatus. As already mentioned above, the state apparatus is formally in our hands, but we have many years of endeavor before us before it is actually entirely ours. We have first to educate a whole generation of our own people in the practical work of running this apparatus. We have always been aware that the apparatus is very faulty in many respects, that it is bureaucratic, decayed. It is therefore evident that the state apparatus has to be improved.

Party Bureaucracy.

But what do we need for this purpose? We may have 15,000 competent proletarians in the Party, but that does not in the least render it possible for us to cure the state apparatus. Why not? Because mere resolutions, meetings, and words, do not suffice to rule the bureaucrats.

At the present time, comrades, you may observe a very interesting phenomenon at all discussion meetings. It is precisely the most emphatically bureaucratic elements working in the state apparatus who now pose as the greatest democrats, who delight in passing all sorts of resolutions, and accentuate the democratic role. And yet everything will remain the same as before. If we are really to obtain a firm grip over the bureaucrats in the state apparatus, the first premise is the existence of a strong Bolshevist state apparatus.

In other words: It is not sufficient to pass resolutions, we must besides posses a suitable instrument, must possess the possibility of setting our knee on the breast of the bureaucrats, you will gain nothing by resolutions. The bureaucrat himself will move hundreds of democratic resolutions, without altering conditions in the least. Hence the great significance of the Party apparatus for the maintenance of our power.

Decay of Social-Democracy.

When Lenin exposed our state apparatus by his inexorably trenchant characterization, he appealed simultaneously to the Party, and made definitely concrete proposals for the transformation of our Party apparatus, pointed out how we could really get at the bureaucrats.

We know very well what a workers' bureaucracy means. I myself have for instance, studied the fate of the German Social Democratic bureaucracy. At that time I tried to enlighten the Russian workers as to the reasons for the decay of German Social Democracy, and to show what had been the social roots of German Social Democratic opportunism. I adduced three main factors as causes of the decay of Social Democracy in Germany:

1. The existence of petty bourgeois elements following the Party when they thought this was to their advantage, but without conviction. At the elections the German Social Democrats competed energetically with the bourgeoisie for the favor of these elements, and abandoned the Marxist principles step by step;

2. The rapid growth and increasing influence of the workers' aristocracy, composed of the economical privileged starta of the working class, and

3. The rising of a workers' bureaucracy, the twin brother of the workers' aristocracy, and the increasing importance of this bureaucracy in the whole proletarian movement, and particularly in the policy of the Party.

Stratum of German Party.

I followed up Robert Michels by drawing up the following diagram of the structure of the stratification in German Social Democracy:

Chairman of the Party Committees.
Party Committees.
Party officials.
Participators in general meetings.
Party members.
Voters.

To this I observed:

"The base of the pyramid is formed by the four millions of Social Democratic voters. Then comes another stratum, also numerically powerful, formed by the Party members, counting about a million. Then come the participators in the general Party meetings, already much fewer in number. Above these stands a small ruling group of Party officials. And the apex of the pyramid is finally formed by the small staff of the most prominent Party officials, the committees and their chairmen."

The three main factors mentioned above are all counter-revolutionary in effect, and Anton Pannekoek was thus entirely in the right in his critical articles in which he threw much light on these aspects of Social Democracy. The workers' aristocracy is, and always has been, a reactionary caste. But none the less we had to admit, even at that time, that a comprehensive labor movement cannot possibly entirely dispense with a certain bureaucratic apparatus. To be sure: if we have only 1,000 members, then we can dispense with paid functionaries with ease. But it is impossible for extensive memberships to manage without a certain number of paid workers' bureaucrats. In the end it is a question of so organizing matters that we obtain a really good labor bureaucracy, one entirely in accord with the working masses.

Bolshevik Party.

The labor bureaucracy of our Party cannot by any means be designated as especially bad. The traditions of the Bolsheviki, who have fought for decades against the Mensheviki, and have thus formed a chosen elite of revolutionists, have enabled us to create a fairly competent Party apparatus. It is not excessively powerful in numbers, for 18,000 comrades serve the machinery of the apparatus over a gigantic territory, comprising a sixth of the surface of the globe.

Over one half of these 18,000 comrades are technical workers, whilst only 7,000 to 8,000 comrades are politically active. Quantitively, the number does not appear to us to be excessively high. And it must not be forgotten that our Party apparatus is not merely occupied with propaganda and agitation as is the case in other countries, but that its main efforts are directed towards the regulation of the state machinery. The Party apparatus has to concern itself with every question, whether it relate to the mobilization of an army, to the grant of debentures for a gold loan, or to some campaign to be undertaken out in the country.

We are of the opinion that our Party apparatus is the best part of the Party, that it forms the firm bony framework of the Party. When our "opposition" begins to criticise the apparatus, we declare such an attitude to be entirely un-Bolshevist. It is completely unpermissible to oppose these two ideas, and is equal to an attempt to oppose the bony framework of a human being to the human organism as such. Of course it goes without saying that the framework does not suffice in itself. Bones can do nothing without muscles.

Degeneracy Into Menshevism.

The Party apparatus represents the bony framework of the Party. We know very well that there are such things as diseases of the bone, even incurable ones. But this does not apply to our framework. It is solely the semi-Menshevist elements, unable to bear the Bolshevist fist, the Bolshevist centralism, the firm Bolshevist grasp which alone is capable of laying hand on the bureaucrats, who are continually groaning that the apparatus is an armored shell, perfectly unbearable. But only unbearable, we reply, to those whom we are obliged to hold on the lead.

A small minority of our Party has just started a great campaign against the Party apparatus. The comrades of the "opposition" are here lapsing into a semi-Menshevist manner of thought. But it is nevertheless a rather too primitive weapon, and a demagogic insinuation, to exclaim now: "Aha! Now you want to maintain that Trotzky and Radek are Mensheviki?"

People do not become either Bolsheviki or Mensheviki over night. This is a matter of gradual development. Often it requires months, sometimes it even takes years. All that we can assert is that the attitude adopted indicates a development in the direction of Menshevism. This view of the role of the old Bolshevist Party apparatus reminds us strongly of our old differences with the Mensheviki.

If Comrade Radek and the other comrades revise their standpoint, our present dispute will have become a mere episode within a few weeks; it will seem to us like a bad dream, speedily forgotten. But if the "opposition" perseveres in its error, or goes to the length of forming a fraction based on its wrong views, then this will be an obstinacy degenerating into Menshevism.

Previous Discussions.

I recall to your recollection the first conflict in the Social Democratic Party of Russia, at its II. Party Congress in London in 1903, leading to the first split of the party into Bolsheviki and Mensheviki. What was the cause of the schism at that time? It was carried thru at that time by Lenin along the line or the following differences of opinion. The point under discussion was No. 1 of the Party statutes, defining membership of the Party.

Two drafts formulating this paragraph were submitted, one drawn up by Lenin, the other by Martov*. The Lenin draft was as follows: "Everyone is taken to be a member of the Party who recognizes its program, and who supports it by material means, and by personal participation in the work of one of the organizations of the Party." Martov's draft, on the other hand, was worded as follows: "A member of the Party is he who recognizes its program, supports the Party materially, and gives the Party regular personal support under the control of the Party."

Martov, seconded by Paul Axelrod, thus demanded a looser and less definate form of organization. Lenin, who had at that time Plekhanov as comrade in arms, was on the other hand anxious for a really strict organization of disciplined revolutionists.

This at the beginning was the extent of the whole difference of opinion in both directions. At that time many comrades believed that the whole disagreement was merely a matter of choice of wording. But Lenin had already made a correct diagnosis of both tendencies on the basis of these differences, and wrote as follows:

Lenin's Analysis.

"The conflict has split our Party into two camps, into the camp of the Jacobins and that of the Girondists of the proletarian revolution."

This was indeed a penetrating diagnosis, and not only this, but at the same time an ingenious prognosis.

Now, comrades, compare our present differences of opinion with the "opposition" to the differences which arose 20 years ago. You will be compelled to come to the conclusion that these are very much greater today, in the year 1923, than they were in 1903. And yet they do not by any means imply the necessity of a split in the Party. I repeat: If the minority recognize their errors, and liquidate these within a few weeks, then the whole dispute will remain nothing but an episode. But if the attempt is made to gather together all the tendencies which have already shown themselves, and which will continue to make themselves felt; if these tendencies are tenaciously pursued until a fraction is formed, then a broad chasm will appear between the two trends of opinion, broader than the chasm which once divided us from the Mensheviki.

The minority, as is invariably the case, seeks to mask its position. It naturally does not say that it is opposed to the Bolshevist Party apparatus, but "only" that it is opposed to the bureaucracy in the apparatus, which has got into a rut, requires renewal, etc. It need not be emphasized that we are all opposed to our apparatus falling into a rut of bureaucracy. But what is the real truth about bureaucracy?

Opposed Bureaucracy.

We have been fighting it openly in the state apparatus for years! At the VIII. Soviet Congress, held in December, 1920, a special address was devoted to the struggle against the bureaucracy of our apparatus. Bureaucracy has thus been fought quite openly. At that time the Central Committee had chosen me to speak on this subject. In 1920 the Mensheviki were still a legal party.

Martov, who took part in this congress, scoffed at us: "Now you have had three years of your dictatorship, and you suddenly come along with a fight against bureaucracy!"

We replied to these gentlemen: "Laugh as much as you like, all the same bureaucracy will have to be fought against for years." Lenin, in the course of his speech, made the following observation:

"Anyone who believes that bureaucracy can disappear within a few months is a charlatan, for bureaucracy is deeply rooted in the structure of the country, and in the whole social history of Russia. There are many illiterates in our country, it was bureaucratically ruled for centuries under Czarism, the rule of absolution rendered bribery a general phenomenon, customary all over the country.

"Besides this, the country is poor, which again conduces to bureaucracy. At one time we were in such a position that we had to divide ten pairs of boots among three hundred persons. How could we manage this? Well, commands were given, then counter-commands, special commissions were appointed. All this naturally strengthened bureaucracy."

How to Destroy Bureaucracy.

The conclusion arrived at by Lenin was as follows: "In order to destroy bureaucracy, the first thing is to have an adequate supply of boots, that is, the country must not be so poor. Further, illiteracy must be abolished, and finally, bribery must disappear. In other words, the cultural level of the working class must be raised."

We put the question in the same manner at the present juncture. We are as little able today as then to open out rose-colored vistas, and can promise nothing. Perhaps Comrade Radek can promise us that if we give him the workers' democracy (interjection from Radek: No, I cannot promise it.)—well then, if not Radek, then perhaps Comrade Trotzky—he will abolish bureaucracy in Russia within half a year, or even a whole year. We for our part cannot promise any such thing. We state candidly that we require years, for the first prerequisite is the raising of the cultural level of the country, and the disappearance of illiteracy.

It is not at all the case that Radek and Trotzky hate bureaucracy, whilst we of the C. C. love it. This is not the question at all, comrades, the real point is the significance of the iron framework represented by the Bolshevist Party apparaus, our real fighting weapon against Menshevism. It is precisely this iron weapon which is so detested, for it causes much unpleasantness to certain elements.

Queer Landlord Was Good, Yet Rich; Had Very Fine Funeral

(By The Federated Press)

CLEVELAND, O., April 8—"Landlord Ben" Yetra, the ideal landlord, is dead, and his funeral was attended by such a crowd of steel workers and their friends that the street in front of his home was packed for two blocks. For the landlord who never fired a tenant out because he couldn't pay rent and who provided food for steel workers' families when the mills shut down was known and loved by the whole steel mill neighborhood.

Coming to this country as a poor immigrant from Hungary 32 years ago, Landlord Ben started working for the steel company at 98 cents a day, and saved up enough money to bring his wife and baby across the pond. Together he and his wife toiled until they had enough ahead to buy a little grocery store, and as their savings grew, they invested in houses to shelter some 50 of their fellow workers. Yetra was not only generous to his tenants, but to every worker who came to him for aid. When hard times came, he would trust his tenants and other workers for grocery bills and rent. Despite his generosity, Yetra prospered financially, besides dying rich in the affections of his fellow men.

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

A. F. of L. and American Legion Back Military Training.

The flag waving still goes on. Officials of the American Federation of Lobor, who put themselves forward as representatives of the American workers join in the cry for more murder machinery. Most prominent among these are Samuel Gompers, and George L. Berry, president of the international printing pressmen's union.

Despite the possibility of the Citizen's Military Training Camps being used as preparatory fields for scab and anti-labor forces, these A. F. of L. heads are particularly energetic in calling upon the American working youth to take part in this form of militarist preparation.

Each day the campaign for the enlistment of the youth in the Citizen's military training camps becomes broader and wider in its scope. Every nook and corner of the country is being reached with the boasting and gloating advertisements. Just what response will be had is doubtful at this time. From the reports we are able to get, very little enthusiasm is shown by the American youth for military training, especially in camps that have a distasteful reputation for stinking food and poor housing conditions.

It is certain that the set quota of young felows who are willing to be drilled as cannon-fodder without pay will not be filled and that simultaneously the campaign against the Communists and pacifists will develop enormous proportions when this fact dawns upon the thick skulls of the leaders of the militarist movement in this country.

The American Legion seems to be losing all its functions save that of scabbing and of preparing the American youth for new wars. The Legion acts as the unofficial publicity agent for the Citizen's Military Training Camps and is doing it's job well.

With aid from the mis-leaders of labor, the Citizen's Military Training Camps might be able to recruit some misguided young workers, but when these young fellows come up against the realities of the brutal training and miserable surroundings of the training camps, they will feel anything but kindly toward the labor lieutenants.

The "Nigger-Thief."

AND they failed to understand that it was not he who was on trial at the Charlestown courthouse a month later, but the whole slavery system.

Every moment of that trial was reported in the newspapers of the nation. Every reader in America knew of the wonderful strength and majesty of John Brown in the court-room. The North began thinking about slavery as it had never thought before. John Brown was so manifestly pure in his intentions; manifestly a crusader, and people were forced to try to understand why an old, gray-haired farmer should have taken up arms at the age of sixty, after a life spent in useful occupations.

His dignity, his piety, his reputation as a terrible fighter, and the Biblical sublimity of the picture of this white-bearded patriarch surrounded by his seven sons, all of them armed with rifles, all of them ready to die for the cause of abolition—these had their powerful effect on the imagination of the North. Hosts of new friends rose up in Brown's defense; legislatures passed resolutions asking for his pardon, Congressmen began speaking out, newspapers suddenly found themselves in danger of losing their subscribers if they spoke against John Brown; everywhere in the North men found themselves waking from a dream, and coming into the clear, white vision of John Brown. They saw slavery as if for the first time in all its horrors; they could not help taking sides. And the South became more and more inflamed with rage as the trial progressed, and those reverberations reached it from the North.

Established Order Defied.

John Brown was tried on three charges, murder, treason, and inciting the slaves to rebellion. The trial was quickly over; it was but a formality. The jury, of course, returned the verdict of guilty, and John Brown, lying on his cot in the court-room, said not a word, but turned quietly over on his side, when he heard it.

A few days later, Judge Parker pronounced the sentence of death, and this time John Brown rose from his cot, and drawing himself up to his full stature, with flashing eagle eyes, and calm, clear and distinct tones, he addressed the citizens of America. He said many things that they were soon to understand clearly on the battlefields of the Civil War.

"Had I taken up arms in behalf of the rich, the powerful, the intelligent, the so-called great, or in behalf of any of their friends, or any of their class, every man in this court would have deemed it an act worthy of reward rather than of punishment. But this Court acknowledges the validity of the law of God. I see a book kissed here which is the Bible, and which teaches me that all things that I would have men do unto me, so must I do unto them. I endeavored to act up to that instruction. I fought for the poor; and I say it was right, for they are as good as any of you; God is no respecter of persons.

Bravely Faces Death.

"I believe that to have interfered as I have done, as I have always freely admitted I have done, in behalf of His despised poor, I did no wrong, but right. Now, if it is deemed necessary that I should forfeit my life for the furtherance of the ends of justice, and mingle my blood further with the blood of my children, and with the blood of millions in this slave country whose rights are disregarded by wicked, cruel and unjust enactments, I say, let it be done."

Judge Parker fixed the date for hanging on December 2nd, 1859, a month away. It was a fatal mistake for the South, and John Brown's finest gift at the hands of the God he believed in.

COMMUNIST·CHILDREN'S·COLUMN

BILLY JARVIS DISCOVERS LOYALTY.

By B. W.

The heart that beat beneath the khaki jacket of little Billy Jarvis was the proudest and happiest in the whole of Murkville. As he went bravely among the homeward hurrying workers in the clear summer evening, he paid little heed to his aching back, his poor sore drooping eyes, and the other weariness in his joints. He clutched his precious paper tightly, and told himself that he had spent a glorious day.

Then, for the hundredth time, his active mind reviewed the wonderful events since school had closed the day before for the summer holidays. There had been a special parade of the whole boy scout troop that night. How eargerly he had listened to the speech of the strange gentleman whom the scoutmaster had introduced as Mr. Hearst, editor of the "Murkville Pioneer!" And what a great speech it was!

The Scouts Scab.

Mr. Hearst's speech was loyalty, which was the thing that kept the American Democracy together. He quoted the scout law: "A scout is loyal to his country, his officers, his parents, his employers, and those under him." He was there to offer the boys a chance to put that excellent law into practice.

There were, Mr. Hearst was sorry to say, creatures on the face of the earth, who were loyal neither to country, nor employer. One of these creatures had obtained employment at the Pioneer Press in that very town. He had been discovered [illegible]ing discontent among the w[illegible] and, of course he was sent a[illegible] business. But his wicke[illegible] had succeeded only too we[illegible] workers at the Press had [illegible] strike to get the vicious ag[illegible] into his job.

But a true American [illegible] Hearst was not so easily bea[illegible] Pioneer Press was determ[illegible] carry on without these m[illegible] men. And would all those boy [illegible] who were willing to turn out [illegible] work the next day please step to the front. What a rush there was! And one of the most eager was patrol-leader Billy Jarvis.

And the next morning without saying anything about it at home, Billy presented himself for duty. He soon found that work is not a pleasant thing. He ran errands, he carried great piles of paper and boxes of type. He counted and wrapped up cards and handbills as they came off the press. The managing director took him to collect paper and deliver work in his own private automobile. All the scouts were taken out to dinner in a gorgeous restaurant. They showed Billy how to set up type, and he did a whole paragraph for the "Pioneer," now reduced to one small sheet describing the help given by the Boy Scouts, and especially the youngest patrol-leader, Billy Jarvis, a loyal American citizen of thirteen. The first copy off the press was signed by the directors and the editor, and presented to Billy. It was this paper that he clutched so proudly as he hurried home.

He Scabs No More.

When he entered the mean little cottage in a dismal back street that served him as a town house, he saw that there was something wrong. His father more bitter and resentful than ever and his mother's eyes looked as if she had been crying.

Now his mother was kissing him impulsively, while his father was explaining in his slow, halting, earnest way that impressed Billy far more than the flowery words of Mr. Hearst. The workers at the Pioneer Press had been unorganized until one of the workers had got them into the union, so that they could be loyal to their class. The bosses had fired this man and the workers had gone out on strike against his dismissal. The firm was trying to carry on with the scabs —dirty traitors to their class! So other workers had come loyally to the help of the strikers. Along with all the other truck drivers, Mr. Jarvis had refused to deliver papers to the Press from the paper warehouse where he was employed. So he lost his job. "Now I'm afraid there will be no pocket money for you, Billy, and no camp this year unless this affair is settled soon," ended Jarvis gloomily.

As soon as his father had finished, Billy related all that had passed during the day and asked his father to clear up his bewilderment. He had tried to be loyal, and so had his father, yet they found themselves fighting against one another.

Then Mr. Jarvis answered, slowly, painfully seeking after words, but [illegible]rnestnes and bitterness [illegible]rience. Billy had [illegible] Press, there [illegible] work—ex[illegible]trikes!—[illegible] mobiles, [illegible]—"and [illegible] Billy"—[illegible] and were [illegible] was, all over [illegible] as a class who [illegible]es, and a class [illegible]bing and oppress-[illegible]

[illegible] he showed Billy the contradiction in the Scout Law. If a working class lad was loyal to his employers, he was disloyal to his parents, who were ground down by the masters. If he wanted to be loyal to his parents, he could not be loyal to the rich and the country, which was based on the robbery of the weak and helpless. Everyone had to choose one loyalty and stick to it and he asked Billy to choose the loyalty of the working class. So they talked for hours, and, at the end, they burned the Pioneer solemnly together.

Of course, reader, you know how the story ends. Billy persuaded his friends to stop being scabs. Right so far. He left the Boy Scout movement in disgust. Correct once more, dear reader. We congratulate you on your intelligence. What's that you say? He joined the Junior Section of the Young Workers League? Well, that's what we should like to write. But unfortunately, Billy had never heard of the Junior Section, altho there is a group in his town.

So get busy, comrades, with your propaganda. There's many a Billy Jarvis in every corner of the land willing and eager to come into our movement if only he can be told that it exists.

Poet Throws Barbed Wire Ditty Into Harry M. Daugherty

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., April 8. —The bouncing of Daugherty by President Coolidge has not gone unhymned. In a letter to the ex-attorney general, Maynard Shipley who has been editor, organizer and speaker in the radical and labor movements says:

"Allow me, as a citizen interested in your welfare and that of the nation, to repeat to you at this crisis, the words you yourself spoke at your interview with that great and good man, Eugene V. Debs. You there said: 'I hope you won't commercialize your notoriety.'

"This recalls some verses of mine which were published at the time of this interview, and which it seems pertinent to repeat here:"

DAUGHERTY AND DEBS

Said the ant to the oak tree,
That far above it towered,
"I've ordered you to visit me,
Because I'm so empowered."

Said the aunt to the oak tree,
That still and lofty stood,
"I trust your future conduct
Will prove your gratitude."

Said the aunt to the oak tree,
That grew in majesty,
"I hope you won't commercialize
Your notoriety."

Said the oak tree to the ant—
Not a word; the royal oak,
Lost in silent dreams and memories,
Did not know the insect spoke!

Daugherty has not vouchsafed any reply to Shipley's friendly letter.

Another Labor Bank.

BOSTON, April 8.—A charter has been granted to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for a bank and trust company in Boston. The capital is to be $500,000 and the surplus $100,000. The official title will be the B. of L. E. Bank and Trust Co. As in the case of the other B. of L. E. banks, stock will be sold only to members of the organization, with a controlling interest in the hands of the brotherhood itself. Many New England engineers have applied for stock in the new Boston Brotherhood bank.

Mail Robbers Busy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 8.—Two bandits held up a United States mail truck here and escaped with eight sacks of registered mail, said to contain $20,000 in cash and negotiable papers.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

English Horn and Irish Harp Get on Frankenstein's Nerves

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, brought his band to Chicago for a concert at Orchestra Hall on April 2. The concert opened with the London symphony of Vaughan Williams. The work is unique, picturing as it does the spirit of a great metropolis, with its gloom and suffering, with its roaring confusion of life, and its melancholy dusks and quiet. In the performance of it was a musical crime. One can forget a certain harshness of tone in the clarinets, oboes and English horn in praising the quality of the strings and brass, but one can not forgive the way in which an important phase of the original instrumentation was monkeyed with. In the prologue to the symphony occur, for instance, the chimes of Big Ben, which in the original are scored for great tubular bells. The Minneapolis orchestra played them on a harp and lost some of the finest music in the work thereby. It is just as sensible to play a piccolo cadenza on a trombone.

Not Enough Noise.

Another point in orchestration that was most annoying was the way in which the cymbals were played. After the barbarous custom of military bands, one cymbal was affixed to the bass drum, and all its tone was lost. Thus, what should have been a tremendous crash to round off a big climax in the first movement of the symphony sounded like a sauce-pan being dropped.

Two preludes, to the first and third acts of Lohengrin, followed. The first is a long ecstasy of religious feeling, the second is festive and brilliant, like the famous wedding scene it immediately precedes.

A work never heard in Chicago before was Roussel's "Feast of the Spider." It is music accompanying a ballet, and like so much ballet music, calls for the stage action to make it most effective. It does suggest vaguely the story, which tells how a butterfly is enticed into the spider's web, and killed.

A Dignified Conductor.

The concert closed with Liszt's symphonic poem "The Preludes." This is wondrously beautiful musical philosophy, based on a poem by Larmartine, the idea of which is that each great experience of life is only a prelude to the supreme experience of death.

Verbrugghen is a splendid conductor. It is interesting to compare him to the more familiar Stock. Where Stock is supremely reserved and calm, Verbrugghen is athletic and full of motion, but not, as so many flourishing directors, suggestive of an India rubber jumping-jack. His interpretation is in many respects different from that of the conductor of the Chicago orchestra, and, in some places, desirably so.

The Apollo Musical club, Harrison Wild, director, will present Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and "Rusurgam" by Henry K. Hadley, at Orchestra Hall on April 7 at 8:15.

Pauper Wages In Massachusetts.

Women's wages in Massachusetts manufacturing establishments during February averaged $17.23 a week, according to statistics compiled by the state department of labor. Hardly an amount to tempt a mother to leave home. But it does all right—tempts thousands who find employment in the cotton mills, the boot and shoe factories, the silk mills, and garment trades. And the reason is not hard to find for the report shows that thousands of fathers do not earn more than $25 a week, some of them as low as $21.56.

A study of Building Costs and Rental Returns, by William J. Moore, president of the American Bond and Mortgage Company. A Review.

Every organization which, in a one-sided way, has interested itself in Chicago's housing problem, has its own particular, and generally narrow remedy for the housing shortage and the high rents.

Thus, Carl D. Thompson, head of the Public Ownership League, says that "Large municipal apartment houses are the only solution". Mr. Vance of the Tenants League, which turns out to be a partnership between himself and another lawyer, charging two dollars a year for the tenants membership, and protecting the tenant for that year in court, says, "The only way to reduce Chicago's rents is to get legislation passed curbing the landlords and then go to law to see that the legislation is enforced."

Housing Shortage.

A somewhat rare solution is the housing problem, which is not only unusually frank and honest, but put forth by a man of authority, is contained in a recently issued "Study of Building Costs and Rental Returns," by William J. Moore, president of the American Bond and Mortgage Company of New York and Chicago. We have already briefly quoted this treatise to demonstrate that there is a housing shortage in America. After showing that because of high rents, real estate bonds are a safe and most profitable form of investment, and will continue to be for several years, Mr. Moore tells why he thinks rent will remain high, and what he thinks is the only road which will lead to a reduction of rents.

"The National Association of Real Estate Boards recently made a nationwide investigation as to over-production or under-production of housing facilities," the banker points out. "This investigation, which was most thoro, demonstrated that the housing shortage is far from being made up, and that the prospect for a considerable reduction in rents by reason of over-production is at least several years off. Of 184 cities which reported, 131 declared a housing shortage existed. No overbuilding is reported in 164 out of 178 cities; 120 out of 155 cities indicated rentals firmer and higher. Another statistician of recognized ability made another investigation of 50 principal cities. He arrived at the definite conclusion that practically all of them are from one to three years behind in their building requirements."

No Reduction In Rents.

The survey proves, as all other surveys have proved, that there is a definite and considerable housing shortage in all our principal cities, and it further concludes that the resulting high rents will continue to make the high interest now obtainable on real estate bonds, and investments, a very profitable security.

But Mr. Moore, altho not shedding many tears over the high profits he is reaping on real estate, "is not unsympathetic to any move designed to lower the general level of living costs." He therefore proceeds to tell us just how this lowering of rents can be accomplished. There is only one way, he tells us. Organization, propaganda, legislation, and political parties, he does not even mention. Mr. Moore is a powerful man. He knows just what he can count on for the courts and legislatures to do for him. Mr. Moore evidently has no fear that legislative bodies which are controlled by interests which he represents will bite the hand that is feeding them. But he does have a remedy for the high cost of living. Here it is:

"The only way permanent reduction in rentals can come about is thru a material reduction in building costs," he declares. "This reduction is possible only when three things are brought about—until there has been brought about a substantial reduction in the wages of all mechanics employed in producing building material and in erecting the buildings. This is true because 75 per cent of the cost of items entering into construction is for labor, the raw material costing not over 25 per cent. 2—the price of coal must be reduced. 3—freight rates must be reduced. 4—income taxes must be reduced, for every penny of income tax collected from the building industry is added to the building costs."

Immense Profits.

What chance is there for these changes to be effected. Not much, according to Mr. Moore. "The operators doubtless could starve the miners into submission if the country could exist without coal," our friend brilliantly remarks. "But the trouble is coal is such a fundamental necessity that the public cannot await the results of an endurance test of this kind. The railroad unions are without question the strongest labor organization in the country, especially in the four major railroad unions. Thus the prospect for forcing a reduction in railroad wages is not promising.

"If there is no large reduction in building costs there can be no substantial permanent reduction in rents. Therefore there is no danger of impairment of the earning power or security of real estate bonds offered by the well established houses whose national operations permit a close and first hand study of all factors involved. Rents will stay up for a number of years."

There are, in this remarkable analysis, several frank and very enlightening admissions. The most important is that the rents paid by the workers, pay the total operation of building costs, pay the income taxes of the real estate men, and pay for the interest on the real estate bonds, as well as the profits reaped by the landlord.

What About Cutting Profits?

Another is, that as long as labor can be "starved into submission" the real estate owners have not the faintest idea of reducing rents by paying their own income taxes, or by cutting their own high profits. Mr. Moore's naive solution to the high cost of rents is to lower the wages paid to organized labor. He is not concerned with the obvious fact that if the wages of the workers are lowered, even with a reduction of rents, the rents will still be proportionately as high, and the real estate dealers will reap as high a profit, the wage earners still paying the total expense of the real estate dealers, including their high profits and their income taxes.

The main points brought out by the prominent bankers are that the chief foe of the men of finance are the organized labor union members, and the chief foes of these wage earners, are the big bankers who unscrupulously, by hook or crook, keep the rents up and make the workers pay the entire freight, including the income taxes.

Then, for the hundredth time, his active mind reviewed the wonderful events since school had closed the day before for the summer holidays. There had been a special parade of the whole boy scout troop that night. How eargerly he had listened to the speech of the strange gentleman whom the scoutmaster had introduced as Mr. Hearst, editor of the "Murkville Pioneer!" And what a great speech it was!

The Scouts Scab.

Mr. Hearst's speech was loyalty, which was the thing that kept the American Democracy together. He quoted the scout law: "A scout is loyal to his country, his officers, his parents, his employers, and those under him." He was there to offer the boys a chance to put that excellent law into practice.

There were, Mr. Hearst was sorry to say, creatures on the face of the earth, who were loyal neither to country, nor employer. One of these creatures had obtained employment at the Pioneer Press in that very town. He had been discovered creating discontent among the workers, and, of course he was sent about his business. But his wicked designs had succeeded only too well, and the workers at the Press had gone on strike to get the vicious agitator back into his job.

But a true American like Mr. Hearst was not so easily beaten. The Pioneer Press was determined to carry on without these misguided men. And would all those boy scouts who were willing to turn out for work the next day please step to the front. What a rush there was! And one of the most eager was patrol-leader Billy Jarvis.

And the next morning without saying anything about it at home, Billy presented himself for duty. He soon found that work is not a pleasant thing. He ran errands, he carried great piles of paper and boxes of type. He counted and wrapped up cards and handbills as they came off the press. The managing director took him to collect paper and deliver work in his own private automobile. All the scouts were taken out to dinner in a gorgeous restaurant. They showed Billy how to set up type, and he did a whole paragraph for the "Pioneer," now reduced to one small sheet describing the help given by the Boy Scouts, and especially the youngest patrol-leader, Billy Jarvis, a loyal American citizen of thirteen. The first copy off the press was signed by the directors and the editor, and presented to Billy. It was this paper that he clutched so proudly as he hurried home.

He Scabs No More.

When he entered the mean little cottage in a dismal back street that served him as a town house, he saw that there was something wrong. His father more bitter and resentful than ever and his mother's eyes looked as if she had been crying.

Now his mother was kissing him impulsively, while his father was explaining in his slow, halting, earnest way that impressed Billy far more than the flowery words of Mr. Hearst. The workers at the Pioneer Press had been unorganized until one of the workers had got them into the union, so that they could be loyal to their class. The bosses had fired this man and the workers had gone out on strike against his dismissal. The firm was trying to carry on with the scabs —dirty traitors to their class! So other workers had come loyally to the help of the strikers. Along with all the other truck drivers, Mr. Jarvis had refused to deliver papers to the Press from the paper warehouse where he was employed. So he lost his job. "Now I'm afraid there will be no pocket money for you, Billy, and no camp this year unless this affair is settled soon," ended Jarvis gloomily.

As soon as his father had finished, Billy related all that had passed during the day and asked his father to clear up his bewilderment. He had tried to be loyal, and so had his father, yet they found themselves fighting against one another.

Then Mr. Jarvis answered, slowly, painfully seeking after words, but with an earnestnes and bitterness born of hard experience. Billy had seen how, in the Pioneer Press, there were directors who did no work—except when forced to during strikes!—but who rode around in automobiles, while the people who did work—"and you know how hard work is, Billy"—lived in miserable houses and were always hard up. So it was, all over the country. There was a class who worked for low wages, and a class who get rich by robbing and oppressing the workers.

Let's Get Busy!

Then he showed Billy the contradiction in the Scout Law. If a working class lad was loyal to his employers, he was disloyal to his parents, who were ground down by the masters. If he wanted to be loyal to his parents, he could not be loyal to the rich and the country, which was based on the robbery of the weak and helpless. Everyone had to choose one loyalty and stick to it and he asked Billy to choose the loyalty of the working class. So they talked for hours, and, at the end, they burned the Pioneer solemnly together.

Of course, reader, you know how the story ends. Billy persuaded his friends to stop being scabs. Right so far. He left the Boy Scout movement in disgust. Correct once more, dear reader. We congratulate you on your intelligence. What's that you say? He joined the Junior Section of the Young Workers League? Well, that's what we should like to write. But unfortunately, Billy had never heard of the Junior Section, altho there is a group in his town.

So get busy, comrades, with your propaganda. There's many a Billy Jarvis in every corner of the land willing and eager to come into our movement if only he can be told that it exists.

Poet Throws Barbed Wire Ditty Into Harry M. Daugherty

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., April 8.—The bouncing of Daugherty by President Coolidge has not gone unhymned. In a letter to the ex-attorney general, Maynard Shipley who has been editor, organizer and speaker in the radical and labor movements says:

"Allow me, as a citizen interested in your welfare and that of the nation, to repeat to you, at this crisis, the words you yourself spoke at your interview with that great and good man, Eugene V. Debs. You there said: 'I hope you won't commercialize your notoriety.'

"This recalls some verses of mine which were published at the time of this interview, and which it seems pertinent to repeat here:"

DAUGHERTY AND DEBS

Said the ant to the oak tree,
That far above it towered,
"I've ordered you to visit me,
Because I'm so empowered."

Said the aunt to the oak tree,
That still and lofty stood,
"I trust your future conduct
Will prove your gratitude."

Said the aunt to the oak tree,
That grew in majesty,
"I hope you won't commercialize
Your notoriety."

Said the oak tree to the ant—
Not a word; the royal oak,
Lost in silent dreams and memories,
Did not know the insect spoke!

Daugherty has not vouchsafed any reply to Shipley's friendly letter.

Another Labor Bank.

BOSTON, April 8.—A charter has been granted to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for a bank and trust company in Boston. The capital is to be $500,000 and the surplus $100,000. The official title will be the B. of L. E. Bank and Trust Co. As in the case of the other B. of L. E. banks, stock will be sold only to members of the organization, with a controlling interest in the hands of the brotherhood itself. Many New England engineers have applied for stock in the new Boston Brotherhood bank.

Mail Robbers Busy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 8.—Two bandits held up a United States mail truck here and escaped with eight sacks of registered mail, said to contain $20,000 in cash and negotiable papers.

English Horn and Irish Harp Get on Frankenstein's Nerves

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

Henri Verbrugghen, conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, brought his band to Chicago for a concert at Orchestra Hall on April 2. The concert opened with the London symphony of Vaughan Williams. The work is unique, picturing as it does the spirit of a great metropolis, with its gloom and suffering, with its roaring confusion of life, and its melancholy dusks and quiet. In the performance of it was a musical crime. One can forget a certain harshness of tone in the clarinets, oboes and English horn in praising the quality of the strings and brass, but one can not forgive the way in which an important phase of the original instrumentation was monkeyed with. In the prologue to the symphony occur, for instance, the chimes of Big Ben, which in the original are scored for great tubular bells. The Minneapolis orchestra played them on a harp and lost some of the finest music in the work thereby. It is just as sensible to play a piccolo cadenza on a trombone.

Not Enough Noise.

Another point in orchestration that was most annoying was the way in which the cymbals were played. After the barbarous custom of military bands, one cymbal was affixed to the bass drum, and all its tone was lost. Thus, what should have been a tremendous crash to round off a big climax in the first movement of the symphony sounded like a sauce-pan being dropped.

Two preludes, to the first and third acts of Lohengrin, followed. The first is a long ecstasy of religious feeling, the second is festive and brilliant, like the famous wedding scene it immediately precedes.

A work never heard in Chicago before was Roussel's "Feast of the Spider." It is music accompanying a ballet, and like so much ballet music, calls for the stage action to make it most effective. It does suggest vaguely the story, which tells how a butterfly is enticed into the spider's web, and killed.

A Dignified Conductor.

The concert closed with Liszt's symphonic poem "The Preludes." This is wondrously beautiful musical philosophy, based on a poem by Larmartine, the idea of which is that each great experience of life is only a prelude to the supreme experience of death.

Verbrugghen is a splendid conductor. It is interesting to compare him to the more familiar Stock. Where Stock is supremely reserved and calm, Verbrugghen is athletic and full of motion, but not, as so many flourishing directors, suggestive of an India rubber jumping-jack. His interpretation is in many respects different from that of the conductor of the Chicago orchestra, and, in some places, desirably so.

The Apollo Musical club, Harrison Wild, director, will present Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and "Rusurgam" by Henry K. Hadley, at Orchestra Hall on April 7 at 8:15.

Pauper Wages In Massachusetts.

Women's wages in Massachusetts manufacturing establishments during February averaged $17.23 a week, according to statistics compiled by the state department of labor. Hardly an amount to tempt a mother to leave home. But it does all right—tempts thousands who find employment in the cotton mills, the boot and shoe factories, the silk mills, and garment trades. And the reason is not hard to find for the report shows that thousands of fathers do not earn more than $25 a week, some of them as low as $21.56.

A study of Building Costs and Rental Returns, by William J. Moore, president of the American Bond and Mortgage Company. A Review.

Every organization which, in a one-sided way, has interested itself in Chicago's housing problem, has its own particular, and generally narrow remedy for the housing shortage and the high rents.

Thus, Carl D. Thompson, head of the Public Ownership League, says that "Large municipal apartment houses are the only solution". Mr. Vance of the Tenants League, which turns out to be a partnership between himself and another lawyer, charging two dollars a year for the tenants membership, and protecting the tenant for that year in court, says, "The only way to reduce Chicago's rents is to get legislation passed curbing the landlords and then go to law to see that the legislation is enforced."

Housing Shortage.

A somewhat rare solution is the housing problem, which is not only unusually frank and honest, but put forth by a man of authority, is contained in a recently issued "Study of Building Costs and Rental Returns," by William J. Moore, president of the American Bond and Mortgage Company of New York and Chicago. We have already briefly quoted this treatise to demonstrate that there is a housing shortage in America. After showing that because of high rents, real estate bonds are a safe and most profitable form of investment, and will continue to be for several years, Mr. Moore tells why he thinks rent will remain high, and what he thinks is the only road which will lead to a reduction of rents.

"The National Association of Real Estate Boards recently made a nationwide investigation as to over-production or under-production of housing facilities," the banker points out. "This investigation, which was most thoro, demonstrated that the housing shortage is far from being made up, and that the prospect for a considerable reduction in rents by reason of over-production is at least several years off. Of 184 cities which reported, 131 declared a housing shortage existed. No overbuilding is reported in 164 out of 178 cities; 120 out of 155 cities indicated rentals firmer and higher. Another statistician of recognized ability made another investigation of 50 principal cities. He arrived at the definite conclusion that practically all of them are from one to three years behind in their building requirements."

No Reduction In Rents.

The survey proves, as all other surveys have proved, that there is a definite and considerable housing shortage in all our principal cities, and it further concludes that the resulting high rents will continue to make the high interest now obtainable on real estate bonds, and investments, a very profitable security.

But Mr. Moore, altho not shedding many tears over the high profits he is reaping on real estate, "is not unsympathetic to any move designed to lower the general level of living costs." He therefore proceeds to tell us just how this lowering of rents can be accomplished. There is only one way, he tells us. Organization, propaganda, legislation, and political parties, he does not even mention. Mr. Moore is a powerful man. He knows just what he can count on for the courts and legislatures to do for him. Mr. Moore evidently has no fear that legislative bodies which are controlled by interests which he represents will bite the hand that is feeding them. But he does have a remedy for the high cost of living. Here it is:

"The only way permanent reduction in rentals can come about is thru a material reduction in building costs," he declares. "This reduction is possible only when three things are brought about—until there has been brought about a substantial reduction in the wages of all mechanics employed in producing building material and in erecting the buildings. This is true because 75 per cent of the cost of items entering into construction is for labor, the raw material costing not over 25 per cent. 2—the price of coal must be reduced. 3—freight rates must be reduced. 4—income taxes must be reduced, for every penny of income tax collected from the building industry is added to the building costs."

Immense Profits.

What chance is there for these changes to be effected. Not much, according to Mr. Moore. "The operators doubtless could starve the miners into submission if the country could exist without coal," our friend brilliantly remarks. "But the trouble is coal is such a fundamental necessity that the public cannot await the results of an endurance test of this kind. The railroad unions are without question the strongest labor organization in the country, especially in the four major railroad unions. Thus the prospect for forcing a reduction in railroad wages is not promising.

"If there is no large reduction in building costs there can be no substantial permanent reduction in rents. Therefore there is no danger of impairment of the earning power or security of real estate bonds offered by the well established houses whose national operations permit a close and first hand study of all factors involved. Rents will stay up for a number of years."

There are, in this remarkable analysis, several frank and very enlightening admissions. The most important is that the rents paid by the workers, pay the total operation of building costs, pay the income taxes of the real estate men, and pay for the interest on the real estate bonds, as well as the profits reaped by the landlord.

What About Cutting Profits?

Another is, that as long as labor can be "starved into submission" the real estate owners have not the faintest idea of reducing rents by paying their own income taxes, or by cutting their own high profits. Mr. Moore's naive solution to the high cost of rents is to lower the wages paid to organized labor. He is not concerned with the obvious fact that if the wages of the workers are lowered, even with a reduction of rents, the rents will still be proportionately as high, and the real estate dealers will reap as high a profit, the wage earners still paying the total expense of the real estate dealers, including their high profits and their income taxes.

The main points brought out by the prominent bankers are that the chief foe of the men of finance are the organized labor union members, and the chief foes of these wage earners, are the big bankers who unscrupulously, by hook or crook, keep the rents up and make the workers pay the entire freight, including the income taxes.

The Struggle In Britain

The MacDonald cabinet is quite correct in claiming that the tories and liberals sabotaged the Wheatley housing bill protecting unemployed tenants from eviction, but there is also reason to believe that it received but half-hearted support from the MacDonald wing of the cabinet.

The MacDonaldites have not as yet shown any great enthusiasm for measures that really challenge the right of the landlords and capitalists to control the lives of the workers and the opposition parties derive great comfort from the fact that the leadership of the labor party does not adopt an aggressive tactic for such measures. The attitude of the MacDonaldites towards the Wheatley bill was an apologetic one; the noble lords of the tory party and the right honorable gentlemen of the liberal party were quick to perceive their hesitancy.

The Wheatley bill was defeated by nine votes—proof conclusive that a militant policy would have put it over. The fight on the bill was looked upon by the liberals as a test of the fighting quality of the labor party leadership; the liberal leaders, Lloyd George and Asquith, remained neutral, refraining from voting and from all reports have been greatly heartened by the vacillating policy of the MacDonaldites.

The defeat of this measure—a purely humanitarian one in behalf of the most poverty-stricken section of the workingclass—affords an interesting sidelight on the temper of the British owning classes. The boasted fair play of these bloated Britishers evidently does not include anything that will encroach on the right of landlords to kick unemployed workers and their families into the street when the rent is not forthcoming. If such stern opposition arises against an attempt to restrict the profit-acquiring possibilities of a small section of the British ruling class the question is important of what will happen to parliamentarism in England if by a majority vote following the return of the Labor Party as majority party an attack is made on some fundamental basis of British capitalism.

The MacDonaldites have repeatedly emphasized their devotion to purely parliamentary processes, but the British capitalists have not and they will not hesitate to further sabotage the parliamentary program of the Labor Party while preparing to resist with every means available attempts to extend workingclass control of government and industry.

Our advice to MacDonald and his cabinet members is to use the prestige of their government positions to organize the British workingclass in a solid phalanx against British capitalism; to kick out of strategically important government positions, in the army and navy, and elsewhere, all lackeys of the capitalist system and fill the places with labor men who may not be quite so technically efficient but who are loyal to the workers; to encourage the establishment of councils of action by the labor unions, to unify British labor and prepare it to use the full force of its economic power against the sabotage of the capitalists, the landlords and their hangers-on.

Unless something like this is done even a parliamentary majority after the next election will be of little service in making the British workers the real rulers of Britain.

The British capitalists, like every other capitalist class, will fight to the last ditch to preserve their privileges and when that time comes —it is not so far away—they will abandon all pretense of democratic procedure just as the German, Italian, Bulgarian and Spanish ruling classes have.

For inability to pass remedial legislation at present the officialdom of the British Labor Party can be excused even tho it puts up but a feeble fight; it cannot be excused, however, for not broadening and extending, by educational and organizational methods, the economic base of workingclass political power—the unions of the workers which are the first line of defense and offense in the struggle against capitalism and which must be carefully prepared for that struggle thru centralization of their power and a quickened consciousness of the all-important part they will have to play.

Aid From the Enemy

The expulsion of Anton Bimba from Bookkeepers, Stenographers and Accountants' Union, Number 12646, of New York, for membership in the Workers Party of America, is the most high-handed and unjustifiable proceeding yet listed in the personal war conducted by Gompers against the Communists. We have refrained from commenting on this matter until all facts in the case were at hand and the liberal "Nation" has already characterized the expulsion as an unmistakable infringement on the right of political expression of American citizens.

The expulsion of Comrade Bimba violates not merely certain more or less abstract rights but the laws of the American Federation of Labor; he was expelled by orders direct from President Gompers and for the specific reason that he was a Communist.

It was the political affiliation of Comrade Bimba that irritated President Gompers; he was an active member of the union and not the slightest suggestion of irregularity other than his political beliefs has been made; was the union to which he belonged strong enough to enforce the closed shop Comrade Bimba would be jobless because President Gompers does not believe in freedom of union men to join any political party whose program meets with their approval.

Latest reports from New York are to the effect that the arbitrary action of President Gompers has alienated many members of the union who hitherto were his strongest supporters and so far as the Communists are concerned this is meat and drink to them; they thrive upon the mistakes of their enemies and they have not as yet discovered that expulsions of Communists by labor fakers of the Gompers type is hampering the party to any great extent. The Communists have a program which depends for its success upon winning a majority of the workers to their side and if any surer way of doing this than to have enemies violate the laws and customs they have taught the workers to respect has been discovered we are quite certain it will become part of Communist tactics.

It is probably one of the chief reasons for the Olympian anger of President Gompers that he knows quite well the Communists, conscious of the weakness of his position, are laughing at him and his anti-red campaign while they capitalize it for organizational and political purposes.

He calls that "fanaticism" but history will have a word or two to say on the subject and it is enough for us to know that with the aid of President Gompers, to whom they are a welcome contrast, the Workers (Communist) Party of America rapidly is extending its influence where it counts—among the workers and farmers of America.

Reformism In Full Swing

By J. T. MURPHY

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Interest in the British labor movement is intensified by the setback given the Ramsay MacDonald labor government in parliament on Monday. In order to understand the British situation you must read these articles by J. T. Murphy, British Communist and trade unionist. They will appear in the DAILY WORKER during the remainder of this week. Today's installment is as follows:

• • • •

EVERY day that goes by is simply crammed with incidents justifying every prediction and every word of criticism the Communists have made with regard to the Labor Government. Within a single month of office all the cards are on the table: "Labor Imperialism," "Empire Development," "Industrial peace," "social insurance," "sops for the workers," "national agreements," "wages boards," etc., etc., in short every possible measure to stifle the spirit of revolt. And the Trades Union bureaucracy are at one with the Labor Government in carrying this policy thru. The dock strike settlement is illuminating in this respect.

Compromise Strike.

The strike ended on a compromise. A compromise that could have been secured without the strike. The terms of settlement were practically agreed upon before the strike begun. Mr. Shaw proposed the compromise which was the main feature of the settlement, secretly, with the difference of four weeks only on the settlement of the second shilling.

The dockers demanded 2 shillings at once. The terms are 1 shilling now, another 1 shilling per day beginning of June. Mr. Shaw proposed the latter to begin at the end of June. But there had to be a strike for the benefit of the leaders. Bevin and Tillet had to win back the confidence of the men and make an attempt to smash the Stevedores Union which had captured many of the Transport Union's members in the unofficial strike of last year. They got the strike, magnificently complete. And then began the developments.

Promptly the Labor Government initated the Industrial Court of Inquiry in accordance with the policy of fostering conciliation and preventing strikes, or when strikes do occur to confine them to very limited channels. At once Bevin seized the position for lime light and the court abruptly closed with Bevin the winner. The chairman and the Minister of Labor brought the contending parties together and the same night the terms were arranged. But the men refused. They had been told there would not be any compromise whatever and resented the slightest climb down with so complete a hold upon the situation.

Government Strike-Breaking Agency.

The Prime Minister had already announced that the Government was taking every necessary measure to safeguard the food supplies of the "nation" and had the nucleus of an organization ready for the job. Then the Postmaster General, Mr. Hartshorn, one time leader of the South Wales Miners' Federation, proceeded to secure voluntary labor, that is blackleg labor to remove the foreign mails. The police proceeded to protect the blacklegs. The naval ratings were called in to help.

Meanwhile the union leaders proceeded to control the men. And this is how they did it. Bevin spoke as follows to the delegate conference which was returning to the districts to reverse the instructions of the men. "The Government is responsible for the moving of mails. They have refrained from using soldiers, naval ratings, blacklegs or force of any kind. But they are being driven up against it, and soon will have to take the choice of exercising their powers or going out of office. That was the choice and there is no need to beat about the bush. We discussed the position with the Government . . . I want you to see the influence on our judgement in the course of the developments that have gone on."

Three days later Bevin had won. The Labor Government had won and the transport workers believed they had won a lot. And so they had. Following upon the Locomotivemen's modification of the reductions which were being imposed upon them they had by direct action won back nearly to the position of 1922 when their wages were 12 shillings per day with the cost of living 79% higher than 1914. Now they were 11 shillings per day with the cost of living at the same figure. By the time they get the next 1 shilling there is every probability that the cost of living will have risen at least another five points and nullified the second shilling as a gain. Nevertheless they have broken the back of the offensive on wages and given an impetus to all other workers to be up and doing. And the demands for increases in wages are rolling in from all directions.

But let us look more closely at the terms of settlement. The first six clauses deal with the wages questions and the adjustment of piece work prices, overtime rates etc. thereto.

Terms of Settlement.

7. Local Joint Committees. Local Joint Committees shall on the request of either side, consider, with a view to arriving at local settlements, the following matters: a) Time workers differentials when working to or from pieceworkers. b) The adjustment of piecework rates which are deemed too high or unduly low. c) Adjustment exceptional working conditions, providing that the decisions and minutes issued by the National Joint Council shall not be displaced locally. d) Questions of safety working and general conditions affecting health.

8. Local Joint Committees shall meet within seven days of written request by either side to consider etc., etc. . . . Failing agreement within one month from such request or other time mutually agreed upon matters shall be deemed to have been referred to National Joint Council and its findings shall be deemed final and binding on all parties.

9. Decasualisation. The parties to this agreement shall agree to appoint a sub-committee, the Minister of Labor to appoint an independent chairman . . . . to examine the proposal for a guaranteed week with a view to arriving at an agreement to give effect to the Shaw report.

10. Either party to this agreement desiring to amend or end the agreement shall give one months notice. Upon such notice being given the parties shall meet forthwith to discuss the position. Failing agreement at the end of one month from such notice the parties may extend by agreement or either party may give fourteen days to terminate the agreement.

12. This agreement shall be considered as a modification of the national agreement of May 5th, 1920 and subsequent conditions attached thereunder.

With the concessions on wages and the promised inquiry into the decasualisation question the leaders have won the confidence of the men. With the creation of the above machinery and the popularization of the Industrial Court, the leaders and the Labor Government have now got their grip upon the transport workers for a long time to come. They have gained the machinery of conciliation to stifle strikes, to delay them and to strangle them.

Milk and Water Laborites.

Immediately they had succeeded the Daily Herald opens with a campaign for Courts of Inquiry. Here we are told, within a few short weeks a miners strike will be upon us. Why not a Court of Inquiry now and avoid all the distress and dislocation of industry which strikes entail? We are told to look at the Steel Smelters Confederation, the highest paid workers in the country operating with a sliding scale which goes up or down according to the cost of living, and they have had no strike for forty years. Look at the National Union of Railwaymen, how they are settling things without strikes. In this policy the General Council of the Trades Union Congress is lending every assistance and is turning to account its latest concession to the revolutionary workers of the unemployed committees. It has begun thru its joint committee of the Congress and the Unemployed Workers' Committee to take the sting out of the movement by giving it a respectable constitutional agitation with the sting drawn out of the demands. It is clear that the concession to the Unemployed is part of the big concerted move to maneuver the whole working class movement into a truce with capitalism. The final debate on Poplar adds strength to this contention.

Poplar Debate No. 2 Rent Bill.

John Wheatley, the Minister of Health scored a "parliamentary triumph" but he delivered, on behalf of MacDonald, a most hefty blow at the workers of Poplar and everywhere else where they had been actively fighting for the guardians to line up with the Poplar policy. He turned the tables on Asquith and the Tories but failed utterly to take his stand with the Poplar guardians and fight the opposition as a class war fighter. His case was purely a parliamentary case, on the rights and wrongs of the proceedure he had taken with regard to cancelling the order which nobody had been able to enforce. He said: "Let me summarize what I have been saying. I have not surrendered Poplar. I do not intend to surrender to Poplar. I have rescued MY department from a state of degradation. I have put my department in a position in which it can and will enforce the law and do so fearlessly because impartially and fairly. . . . . I am willing and anxious, as is the Government, to reform the Poor Law, and particularly the Poor Law system of London, at the earliest possible moment and in doing so I will see, if I am in office, that the rights of the poor and the principles of Popular Government are protected in the measure submitted to the House."

In an earlier part of the speech he declared, "I am not defending the Poplar Guardians. That is not my business or my duty."

Lansbury was left to face the brunt of this part of the business and it seems to settle very definitely the fate of Wheatley in the cabinet of MacDonald. To decline to line up with Poplar when every section of the opposition were attacking Poplar and cared not two pence whether the Poor Law was reformed or not so long as Poplar could be discredited in the eyes of the people, may be good parliamentarism in the MacDonald school but it is damned poor class war fighting.

Poor Law Reform.

Indeed his final declaration on the Poor Law reform is a complete surrender to the Liberals who are only becoming enthusiastic about poor law reform because they feel that the only way to defend the spread of Poplarism which is growing in the Boards of Guardians is to transfer the functions of granting relief to Councils where they feel the capitalist forces have a firmer hold. From being an outspoken critic of MacDonald, Wheatley is becoming his most powerful ally, may be later to supersede him, but only to pursue more vigorously the policy of MacDonald.

This he is making obvious on his building schemes. Planning to build on a large scale and cheap which will catch the eyes of the multitude he desires the stability of capitalism over a period of years in order to carry out the dilution scheme with regard to skilled labor in the building industry. He is therefore asking for a building scheme extending over fifteen to twenty years with a working agreement between employers and workers without the slightest inroad into the powers of the capitalists.

That he has got great scope with the housing problem no one can dispute. In 1911 nearly 5 million persons in Great Britain lived more than two in a room; over 1 million in Scotland alone were living more than three in a room. (The Government standard of overcrowding is more than two in a room, living rooms included.) If the surplus persons had been removed from the overcrowded houses and re-housed in 5-roomed houses on the basis of 10 persons to a house 200,000 new houses would have been required in 1911. By 1914 there was an absolute shortage of 320,000 working class houses. During the war practically no houses were built except in overcrowded munition areas. At the end of the war the shortage was 520,000. Under the Addison scheme (1919 to 1922) 176,000 houses were built. At the present time it is estimated that there is an absolute shortage of at least 800,000 houses, without making any allowance for an improvement in standard.

These were the conditions that forced up the rents. In 1915 the Government in war time introduced the first rents restriction act. This was continued until the summer of 1923 when the government announced its policy of gradual decontrol until 1925 when all control was to be removed. The act limited the landlord to increasing his rent not more than 40% above pre-war plus any increase in rates. Nor could the landlord turn out a tenant without finding alternative accomodation. The new policy permitted the landlord to turn out the tenant without providing alternative accomodation if he bought the house before June 1923 and wanted it for himself or child of his over 18. That would mean also that control of rents would lapse as houses were released.

Outdoing Liberals in Liberalism.

This week a private members Bill was read twice and is likely to be adopted by the Government as a Government Bill fathered by Wheatley, which proposes to extend State control until 1928 and impose new restrictions on the landlords right of recovering possession of the house. It further proposes to cut the 40% above pre war rent to 25%. That this will be popular outside there is not the slightest doubt. Add to this the proposal for 9 shillings-per-week-houses and it will be seen that the Labor Government is straining every nerve to win mass support and win confidence by social amelioration. They are striving to outdo the Liberals in Liberalism. Partly for these motives and partly for motives of international politics the question of the 48-hour week is receiving immediate attention.

Farmer-Labor Party Great Aid to Youth

By MARTIN ABERN.

A MASS Farmer-Labor Party in the United States can be of immense aid to the young workers in their struggles on the job and also politically.

The young workers in the industries and in the fields of American capitalism, as in every capitalist country, are, together with the female workers, the worst paid of all exploited workers; they labor as long, and in many industries where youth labor is especially employed, toil more hours than the older workers; their conditions of work, surroundings, are dismal and miserable. These are the terrible conditions that prevail for the fledglings, the millions of exploited and enslaved children in every imaginable industry and field in America—from the office boy in the business institutions, receiving a half dozen dollars or so per week, to the page boy in the congressional halls of American capitalism; from the child in an East Side sweat shop to the infant laboring and broiling under the terrific sun in beet or cotton fields; from the little girl's hands bleeding wasting away in the canning factories for a few nickels a day to the noisy street urchin, racing the streets or patiently standing on a corner trying to make a few pennies for the home larder by selling newspapers.

We have, too, the thousands of young workers in the basic industries, such as coal and steel, and in thousands of manufacturing works. Mainly these young workers (the children entirely) are unorganized in either a trade or industrial union.

Would Help the Youth.

A Farmer-Labor Party, really trying to serve the interests of the workers and exploited farmers, would make efforts to eliminate at once child profiteering. A Farmer-Labor Party would agitate to take the young out of industry and put them into the schools. Failing in that, it would agitate for greater protection for the youth in industry; it would strive for a minimum wage, a maximum working day and better working environment. A Farmer-Labor Party would support any effort to organize the youth workers and children into unions, not apart from the existing unions, but into the same unions. It may not be pleasant to think that young people have to be organized when they belong in school, but we deal with actual conditions not with our desires. A political party would, therefore, if it were really a working class political party, try to have strong economic organizations, unions, co-operatives, supporting its political efforts. It would encourage the unions everywhere to organize the unorganized workers, young and old.

A Farmer-Labor Party not yet having political supremacy or control of the government, but a strong minority party steadily growing, would have a powerful influence on the capitalist republican and democratic parties. These reactionary parties would watch their steps in promulgating reactionary measures against the working class. A Farmer-Labor Party in actual control of the government could perhaps appreciably crack the fabric of child labor exploitation. It could and should enact laws jailing forthwith those who employ child labor.

Tasks of Farmer-Labor Party.

With the Teapot scandal at Washington still stirring many minds, formerly unthinking, yet another, maybe more important than the other possible benefits, aid could be given the youth of America by a strong Farmer-Labor Party—especially if the Farmer-Labor Party is in power. It could, if it were genuinely for the interests of the workers and farmers, and not a middle class party (as is the so-called Labor Party of England, and similar "labor" parties in many countries) be a most powerful force in hindering and breaking down in a measure, the ever-developing military and imperialist machinery of American capitalist government. A real mass Farmer-Labor Party, such as we hope will be formed in Minnesota on June 17, could prevent to a great extent further militarization of the United States. It could and must try to abolish the Citizens' Military Training Camps as public nuisances, as a menace to the peace and welfare of the masses of workers and farmers. It should and must then immediately abolish the Reserve Officers Training Camps in the universities and colleges and thus stop the training of persons for scabbery and gunmen duty against workers on strikes. A mass Farmer-Labor Party would show the lousy role of Boy Scouts organizations and American Sentinels and enlighten the workers so that workers would not be fooled into sending their children into these scab-teaching organizations.

Educating the Youth.

Instead, a Farmer-Labor Party, and real working class party, would start a huge campaign to teach the workers and their children the real need, benefits of organization on the political and industrial fields. It would permit and foster the teachings of the value of unionism to the children; it would promote working class education rather and Goslingism and Goosestepism.

A workers' party in control of the government would, in short, among other things, so far as the young workers and children are concerned, strive for abolition of child labor, for the organization of the youth into the unions, for teaching the history of the struggles of labor, of the class struggle, would try for the demilitarization of capitalist America.

Struggle Against Capitalism.

A mass Farmer-Labor Party could sincerely strive to do all these things for the youth of America, but yet would fail so long as American capitalism existed. In making the attempts, the Farmer-Labor government would run up against capitalist opposition at every step. It would discover that capitalism prevents the realization of a single one of its aims. And thus, such a Farmer-Labor Party, if it were truly such, would come to realize, as the Workers Party and Young Workers League already realize, that no lasting benefits, perhaps not even momentary ones, can be attained for the masses of workers and farmers unless the whole system of capitalism is abolished, and replaced by a system in which the producers, the workers, farmers and so-called brain workers would have the total ownership and management of the mills, factories, mines, fields and the government wholly in their hands.

But even tho a Farmer-Labor Party cannot attain these needs of the young workers within capitalism, still the attempt must and will be made. The young worker must realize these demands. If working class parties cannot realize these needs of the youth under capitalism, the sooner they find it out, the better. And the sooner, then, they will make their main effort to destroy the capitalist system and establish a genuine workers' and farmers' government, which excludes all capitalists, preachers, lawyers and other useless elements in society, from any participation or rights in the government unless they do useful work. Ultimately, the position taken by the Workers Party and the Young Workers League must prevail; capitalist rule and misery for masses, or workers' rule, Soviet rule and happiness for the workers.

For Mass Farmer-Labor Party.

We are for a mass Farmer-Labor Party in the United States because it is a gigantic step for the workers and farmers, because a Farmer-Labor Party trying to carry out a workers' program under capitalism would find itself helpless and would have to turn to the Communist method—the overthrow of capitalism, the establishment of a Soviet government expressed thru a proletarian dictatorship. Then would begin the first real steps to carry out the demands and needs of the young workers on the economic and educational field; not only for them but for all workers.

WALL STREET OFFERS SCHEME TO "SAVE" EUROPE

DAWES' PLAN SCRAPS PACT OF WORLD WAR

Tells Germany to Pay But He Doesn't Tell How

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, April 9.—General Charles G. "Hell and Maria" Dawes today delivered to the Reparations Commission the report of the committee of experts of which he is chairman.

The report virtually recommends rewriting the financial provisions of the Treaty of Versailles.

It is a plan for obtaining reparations from Germany, while balancing her budget and stabilizing her currency.

This is the plan of Wall Street to rebuild a capitalist Europe out of the chaos resulting from the world-war.

It is the plan of J. Pierpont Morgan and his fellow international bankers, fighting for the present social system, to save Europe and the world from the growing power of the workers and farmers.

McKenna Submits Report.

At the same time there was submitted the report of a second experts committee, headed by Reginald McKenna, dealing with German wealth abroad and means for its return.

The Dawes report proposed:

1.—Creation of a bank of emission, to issue paper money for Germany and handle the reparations account.

2.—The taking over of German railways by a company which will run them for the benefit of both Germany and her creditors.

3.—A foreign loan of 800,000,000 gold marks to stabilize Germany's currency and take care of her immediate treaty obligations.

4.—Obtaining reparations payments from sale of railway and industrial bonds and from revenue from monopolies on luxuries.

5.—A sliding scale of reparations payments; starting at one billion gold marks the first year and increasing as Germany prospers.

6.—France and Belgium must release their economic hold on the Ruhr, but may retain their armies of occupation.

Revises Versailles Treaty.

The report, hailed as the most momentous document since the Versailles treaty, which it would in a measure revise, differs from that pact in this: General Dawes and his colleagues, who included Owen D. Young, based their entire findings on the hypothesis "that the fiscal and economic unity of the reich will be restored;" Germany is not told what she must pay and left to find the money; the experts, thru limited control and supervision, would have the Allies share which the late enemy interest and responsibility in the business of making every German bear a fair share of a fair burden.

Re-establishment of confidence in Germany, on the part of her own people as well as the rest of the world, is held to be vital to success of the plan.

Plan Is Complicated.

General Dawes' committee has proposed to create this confidence by making it to Germany's interest to pay her debts. To this end the broadest, most complicated scheme ever devised for rehabilitation of a nation and extracting payments is outlined.

Involving intricate mechanism of parallel and interlocking boards of directors—the whole supervised by a "reparations dictator"—to safeguard the rights of the allies who are asked to relinquish their economic grip on the Ruhr, the plan is presented as a unit. It concludes, almost bluntly, that it must be accepted in its entirety, or not at all.

Explain Committee's Attitude.

The Dawes report opened with an explanation of the attitude of the committee.

"We have approached our task as business men, anxious to obtain effective results. We have been concerned with technical, not political, aspects of the problems presented to us," the report began.

"The dominating feature of the German budget is Germany's obligation to the allies under the treaty

Hamon Wrote the Check That Elected Harding

Morgan's New Mortgage

WHEN Brigadier-General Dawes, house of Morgan henchman, was appointed as a member of the committee of experts to determine Germany's capacity to pay reparations, we stated that it was the first step in the underwriting of the reparations account by the finance-capitalists of the United States and that an international committee of bankers dominated by the house of Morgan would become the receivers of Germany.

* * * *

Bankers Feast on Germans

The recommendations made by the Dawes commission bear out every one of our predictions. The most important proposal—upon the successful consummation of which all other proposals depend—is the establishment of a new bank of issue with German participation but under allied control. "Allied" in this instance means house of Morgan control because the condition for the establishment of the bank is a loan of $200,000,000 and the recent loan made by this same financial group to France—secured by the French gold reserve—shows that from this source alone is this amount procurable.

Like vultures, the international bankers have waited and watched the breakdown of German industry and the increase of hopeless misery in Germany and western Europe until they could safely, at least without fear of immediate danger, take huge mouthfuls from the bodies of workingmen, women and children. It is the workingclass of Germany that must pay first and all the intricate calculations of the capacity of German industry, the mortgage value of the German railroads, the indexing of imports and exports, cannot disguise the fact—except for those who want to be fooled—that every dollar of the reparations comes, not from the German capitalists but from the sweated bodies of the German workers.

Germany Converted Into Slave-Pen

Nor can the workingclass of other nations escape the consequences of the arrangement that converts Germany into a gigantic slave-pen wherein will be manufactured for starvation wages commodities that must flood the world market if the reparations are to be paid. No other method of raising such an enormous sum can be devised and the tremendous repercussions of the reparations settlement will be felt in every capitalist nation—if the conditions are accepted.

The German workers are thrice enslaved by the settlement—they are slaves to their own capitalist class, slaves to the French, slaves to the house of Morgan.

This is the one outstanding fact compared with which the carefully drawn estimates of annual revenue from a dozen sources, but all deriving actually from the unpaid labor-power of the workers, are of little importance.

There is one other recommendation of the Dawes commission that is also of supreme importance as proving that parliamentary majorities mean little to the real rulers—the finance capitalists. Disputes arising over payments and capacity to pay are to be referred to the league of nations and this almost defunct body, which the congress and senate of the United States refused to endorse, is thereby resurrected by the house of Morgan whose scheme it was in the first place.

* * * *

More Misery—More Gold

With the investment of something like $200,000,000 by the most powerful group in America in the allied bank to which payments are to be made the participation of this country in the league is a foregone conclusion.

One hundred per cent Americans will derive great consolation from the fact set forth above as proving not only "our" right but "our" ability to profit from the world-war.

The shameless imperialism that began to dominate completely the government of this nation when this country entered the world war in 1918 has now reached its zenith with the report of the Dawes commission.

Washington, D. C., Refuses Memorial Tree For Nikolai Lenin---But Wait!

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 9.—A request received by the authorities here that a memorial tree be planted on 16th Street in the name of Nikolai Lenin has been refused. In spite of the fact that an ex-soldier, J. Bentley Mulford, made the request, it is pointed out that trees in memory of Washington veterans are planted on this street and the fastidious spirits of these veterans would object to the company of the immortal Lenin.

MAY OUST SULLIVAN

JAKE WILLING EVEN TO GIVE COOL MILLION

Witness Not Sure As to Oklahoman's Motives

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Further testimony concerning alleged "deals" to secure the republican nomination for Warren G. Harding, was given the Senate Oil Committee today.

J. F. Baughn, Harlingen, Texas, the first witness called, declared that Jake Hamon told him that he "signed the check that nominated Harding for president."

Farmer Is Witness.

Baughn, formerly a farmer at Duncan, Okla., said he had known Hamon for 18 or 20 years and that he "talked politics" with him after his return from the Chicago 1920 convention.

"He told me then that he had 'motives' for supporting Harding and if need be that he would spend $1,000,000 to carry Oklahoma republican. He never explained what his 'motives' were."

Investigation Will Proceed.

The Senate Committee, in a brief executive session this morning, decided to push its inquiry.

Senator Brookhart, the chairman, drew cheers from a crowd of spectators when he announced at the end of the executive session that "the investigation will proceed with a force and determination that it never had before."

Harding's Campaign Fund.

After Baughn was excused, Wm. H. Miller, former assistant attorney-general of Ohio was called.

J. B. French, friend of Hamon, testified Monday that Hamon said he gave Miller $25,000 to pay the Chicago hotel bills of the Harding headquarters. Miller, French said, was the pre-convention Harding manager in Oklahoma.

Miller denied that he accepted any money from Hamon to pay Harding's hotel bill.

"I paid out no money and I took in no money. I was neither a campaign manager nor a sub-manager," he said.

Miller declared Harding's campaign had been a "poverty campaign all the way thru," and said he had heard no reports at the convention that Hamon had paid any Harding expenses.

He was then excused.

Probe California Reserve.

Senator Walsh read several communications from Secretary of Interior Work, in connection with which various leases in California naval reserve Number 2, and announced he will shortly begin a thoro investigation of this reserve which previously had been neglected by the committee.

The committee then adjourned until Friday.

Witnesess who will appear Friday are: Wm Nichols, Oklahoma City police chief, and General Edwin F. Glenn, chief of the Wood headquarters in Columbus, Ohio, in 1920.

Mrs. Hamon, widow of the Oklahoma politician, has not yet been served with a subpoena. She probably will appear Saturday, Walsh announced.

D. of J. Refused Aid.

After presenting a letter from the department refusing to furnish files in the Bosch Magnto case, and the Green stock case asked by the committee, Stork went into lengthy details leading up to the sale of the Bosch Magneto company properties by the alien property custodian during the war involving Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburgh, former democratic national commit-

PROMINENT MEN HAULED IN AS KLAN MURDERERS

Two More Are Dying After Klan Massacre

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., April 9.—Twenty-four members of the Ku Klux Klan are under arrest here today charged with rioting and murder during a Klan demonstration at Lilly, Pa., Saturday. Two more of those shot by the Klan murderers, Patrick Bradley and Frank Miasco, are expected to die from their wounds.

State constabulary are still patrolling Lilly today, while influential Klansmen are trying to get their rioting colleagues out on writs of habeas corpus.

Governor Pinchot announced that he would govern his future course by reports received from state cossack Major Adams. Attorney General Woodruff declared at Harrisburg that unless further disorders are reported the state is not expected to interfere with local authorities.

Of the twenty-four Klansmen who participated in the massacre, some are prominent business men, two are constables, and one is a councilman.

Investigation Continues.

The death of Frank Miasco of Lilly brought the total dead to three today and a fourth man, Patrick Bradley of Lilly, is reported dying in an Altoona hospital.

Six more Lilly citizens have been arrested in connection with the outbreak and will be arraigned today. Additional arrests are expected.

Klansmen Get Hearing.

Twenty-six Klansmen will be taken to the Ebensburg court house from the police station here today for a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus to determine whether they can be admitted to bail. The men are held on charges of rioting and murder.

CLAIM JUDGE "DENNIE" HAS BROKEN DOWN

Faced By Forty Strikers Who Defied His Injunction

Judge "Dennie" Sullivan is going to be ousted from his job of using the machinery of his court in making war on the strikers of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

This was one of the developments that became known in the courtroom of the American prototype of the British labor oppressor, Judge Jeffreys, of two centuries ago, when he was faced by 40 strikers yesterday who had defied his injunction.

He's Just Worn Out.

The excuse is made that the "Honorable Dennie" is just "worn out", and that he needs a vacation. Others say that his spirit has been broken by the defiance of the strikers.

Anyway, it is claimed that he is making arrangements with the lawyers for both sides to have the strike cases transferred to the court of Judge Fels.

"Can't you go in and see if Judge Fels will take these cases?" Sullivan is reported as saying wearily to the lawyers. "I am going out of town for a few days to rest up. Just go into Judge Fels' court and tell him I sent you."

Over forty pickets were in court, filling the jury box and the lawyers' chairs as well as benches around the room. It has finally dawned on Judge Sullivan that in spite of his looks, his threats and severe fines and sentences, there are as many strikers on the picket line as there were when the strike began.

Dunne Addresses Strikers.

The strike meeting of the garment workers was addressed yesterday afternoon by William F. Dunne of the DAILY WORKER staff. He urged the strikers to continue their picketing and pay no attention to the injunction saying that this was no time for the workers to show any sign of weakness. He pointed out that obedience of the legal fictions of the employers' courts would end in the complete destruction of the labor movement.

Preparations are being made for the monster parade of strikers and sympathizers thru the loop district which is planned for Monday with a mass meeting in some loop theatre yet to be selected.

Altho the officials of the union are prohibited from ordering or arranging for picketing voluntary picketing is keeping the strike lines tight. This is a remarkable feature of the strike that has even aroused the admiration of the thugs and police.

Nelson Is Still Mum.

Alderman Oscar Nelson was still as mum as ever at Wednesday afternoon's meeting of the city council.

He said that he had not been asked to bring up the question of the strike, neither by Vice-President Meyer Perlstein, in charge of the strike, or by the "Committee of 15" of the Chicago Federation. He was not inclined to start anything himself.

While the city council was in session in the city hall the "Committee of 15" was also meeting, but at the offices of the Chicago Federation of Labor in West Washington St.

Late in the afternoon Judge Sullivan sent five of the strike cases to Judge Fels, carrying out the report that he was planning to turn all of his anti-strike activities over to Judge Fels, and leave the city temporarily.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

MONTANA OIL INDICTMENT HITS WHEELER

Got Fees For Oil Permits, His Enemies Are Charging

(Special to The Daily Worker)

GREAT FALLS, Mont., Apr. 9.—Charges and counter-charges fell fast on one another today following indictment of Burton K. Wheeler, Junior United States Senator from Montana, for alleged unlawful receipt of money in connection with the issuance of oil and gas prospecting permits.

Wheeler, who is prosecutor of the Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee, was indicted by the Grand Jury with Gordon Campbell, oil operator, and L. C. Stevenson, promotor. U. S. District Attorney Slattery said a warrant for the senator's arrest has been telegraphed to Washington.

Campbell, who the indictments charge, paid Wheeler $4,000 in connection with permits, immediately issued a statement denying the allegation and declaring his dealing with the senator "open and above board." Friends of Wheeler denounce his political foes as responsible for the indictment.

Wheeler Calls It Frame-Up.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Denouncing the indictment against him as a "frame-up" by the republican national committee to balk the uncovering of "a great conspiracy," Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana, today declared investigation of the department of justice and Harry M. Daugherty would not be stopped by the indictment.

Wheeler, chief prosecutor of the Daugherty committee, was indicted late yesterday by a federal grand jury at Great Falls, Montana, on a charge of illegally accepting a fee in connection with oil land cases for the Gordon Campbell interests since he became a member of the senate.

Wheeler prepared to go back to Montana to demand an early trial. He decided this was the best thing to do, after a long conference last night with Senator Walsh, his colleague, and other democratic leaders. Meantime bond for Wheeler's appearance in court is to be arranged by wire today.

Daugherty Plays Innocent.

Wheeler's indictment was like a bolt from the blue. Wheeler had no warning of it, altho he had charged that he was being investigated by the department of justice.

Altho dispatches stated that the indictment was the result of evidence secured by department of justice agents before Daugherty resigned as attorney-general, Daugherty said that he "never heard of the case," while he was in the department. He was inclined to believe it was a small fraud case worked up by the post-office department.

Republican Heads Knew.

Wheeler told the Senate he had been informed that the republican national committee several days ago knew he was to be indicted. Department of Justice sleuths have been investigating his history for months, he declared.

The young democratic-progressive made a complete denial of all the charges, and insinuations that have been made against him since he began the investigation which preceded resignation of Attorney General Daugherty from the cabinet.

"This was done solely for the purpose of injuring me, and detracting from the work of our investigating committee which has unearthed a con-of Versailles. We have been concerned with the practical means of recovering this debt, not with the imposition of penalties and guarantees which we propose are economic, not political," the committee said, by way of explanation.

Consideration was given to what extent balancing of the budget and stabilization of the currency could be re-established in Germany as she actually is at the present moment, with limitations as to her fiscal and economic rights over part of her area.

"We should say at the outset that we have been unable to find any practical means of ensuring permanent stability in budget or currency under these conditions," the experts reported. "We have therefore, been compelled to make the assumption that the fiscal and economic unity of the reich will be restored.

Modify Ruhr Occupation?

"Our plan is based upon the assumption that existing measures in so far as they hamper German economic activity will be withdrawn or sufficiently modified so soon as Germany has put into execution the plan recommended."

The committee expressed the opinion that if occupation of the Ruhr were modified, settlement of reparations "must be reinforced by adequate productive securities."

Referring to the "economic potentialities of Germany" the report said "the task would be hopeless if the present situation in Germany accurately reflected her potential capacity," but, "Germany is well equipped with resources. She possesses the means of exploiting them on a large scale and her present credit shortage has been overcome. She will be able to resume a favored position in the activity of the world."

The committee outlined its plans for a new bank of emission, to have a capital of 400 million gold marks, part to be subscribed in Germany and part abroad. The bank would be administered by a German president and a German managing board. Alongside this managing board there would be another board, called the general board which would consist of seven Germans and seven foreigners.

Proposed Relief for Germany.

The report goes into detail about provisions relative to the issuance of notes and maintenance of the bank's reserves and provides for a majority over which would give the allied members of the general board a controlling vote. The benefits that would accrue to German labor from stabilization of the German currency are noted.

"For the working classes instability is always evil," the report says "It has no compensation whatever."

If the statutes of the proposed bank are strictly observed there can be little danger of future inflation, the experts declare.

The proposed relief for Germany during the next two fiscal years is detailed.

"In addition to stable currency, the 34.—budget requires certain relief from immediate charges for treaty purposes," the report says, adding "while securing the budgetary position this will not imply cessation of payments indispenble to the allies in the form of deliveries in kind and the basic priciples of Germany's annual burden."

Hastening to reassure what is considered the French viewpoint, the committee says:

Want German Capital to Return.

"We repudiate of course, the view that Germany's whole domestic demands constitute a first charge on her resources and that what is available for her treaty obligations is merely revenue that she may be willing to realize. But if the prior obligations for reparations . . together with an irreducible minimum for her own domestic expenditures make up . . a sum beyond her taxable capacity, then budget instability at once ensues and currency stability is also probably involved."

The experts stress their belief that "success of our proposals to attain financial stabilization depend essentially upon return of confidence."

Without this, German capital invested abroad will not return, foreign capital will not be attracted and even collection of taxes will be impossible, the report says.

Taxation Burden On People.

In discussing a plan to regulate Germany's future payments in accordance with her increasing prosperity, the experts hold that "the German people should be placed under a burden of taxation at least as heavy as that borne by the people of allied countries. It particularly questions that the wealthier classes have paid their fair share in the past.

Considerable detail is devoted to "an index of prosperity," whereby Germany's increasing ability to pay is to be gauged. "Six sets of representative statistics—railway traffic, population, foreign trade, consumption of tobacco, etc., budget expenditure and consumption of coal—should be ascertained," and an average taken, it is proposed.

The committee expresses the belief that it is necessary "that treaty demands will not, in the period to which the settlement relates, be again the subject of negotiations and disputes." It suggests, however, that whereas the treaty prescribes German's obligations in terms of gold, these can be met by other payments possible and practical under the committee's plans.

Germany is not to have an external loan to meet ordinary deficits during the transition period as in the case of Austria and Hungary, the report says.

Germany is not, in so many words, to receive a moratorium, but the committee says "we are satisfied that neither by reduction of expenditures nor by increase in receipts can Germany (in 1924-25) be expected to provide out of her budget resources for any peace treaty payments to the allies."

Hope is expressed that during the period of "relief," expenditures on unemployment in Germany will exhibit a notable decrease as well as expenditures on the army.

Regarding the German railways, a transport tax of 250,000,000 gold marks per annum should be withdrawn from the revenue side of the budget and devoted to the payment of treaty charges, the experts believe.

"We believe that at the end of the fiscal year 1928-29, the financial and economic situation of Germany will have returned to a normal state and that in this and subsequent years the ordinary budget should support the inclusion of a sum of 1,250,000,000 of gold marks," the report says.

This is the gist of the committee's proposals: That this sum be the standard annual payment, "plus the additional sum computed upon the index of prosperity as from the year 1929-30 onward."

It is from the German railways that the experts propose to raise a considerable portion of Germany's increased internal revenue. They say that the railways have in recent years been badly mismanaged owing to post-war difficulties, have been enormously over-stuffed and extravagantly administered.

The capital value of the railways is estimated by the experts on a conservative basis at 26,000,000,000.

Hopes on German Railways.

Belief is expressed that the German railways can, without difficulty, earn a fair return on their present capital value for the joint stock companies, into which it is proposed to convert the lines.

The German railways, it is recommended, should pay eleven billion gold marks, represented by first mortgage bonds bearing five per cent interest and a one per cent sinking fund. A board of control will have 14 German members with German chairman and general manager.

Under the heading "industral debentures" the experts propose to require as a contribution to reparation payments from German industries the sum of not less than five billion gold marks, to be represented by first mortgage bonds at five per cent with a one per cent sinking fund per annum. For one thing, the committee points out, industrial concerns "have profited in many ways thru depreciated currency," and would be bearing an equal burden had the mark not collapsed. It suggests the exemption of agriculture from the obligations of the proposed mortgage.

"We are now," says the report, "in a position to summarize the full provision we contemplate for treaty payments.

Provisions for Three Periods.

"Budget moratorium period: First year, from foreign loans and part interest (200,000,000 on railway bonds) a total of one billion gold marks; second year, from interest on railway bonds (including 130,000,000 balance from first year) and interest on industrial debentures and budget contributions, including the sale of railway shares, a total of 1,220,000,000 gold marks.

Transition period: Third year, from interest on railway bonds and industrial debentures, from transport tax and from budget, a total of 1,200,000,000 gold marks, subject to contingent addition or reduction not exceeding 250,000,000 gold marks; fourth year 1,750,000,000 gold marks.

"Standard year: Fifth year 25,000,000 gold marks."

The first year will begin to run from the date when the plan shall have been accepted and been made effective.

As soon as the plan is put into action the reparations commission will be in possession of bonds for 16,000,000,000 marks, (11,000,000,000 from the railroads and five billion from the industrials) which may be sold to the extent to which the financial markets are capable of absorbing them.

Plan for Deliveries in Kind.

Referring next to deliveries in kind, the committee says that "unless they can be confined to natural products of Germany, they tend to become uneconomic in character."

France's wishes are deferred to in the report when it proposes that the costs of the armies of occupation are a first charge upon the proceeds of deliveries in kind. Another reason is given, however. The necessity is urged of expending "almost exclusively within Germany the sums available for treaty payments in 1924-25 and 1925-26, it being explained this will work out, first to the advantage of the German budget and consequently to Germany's creditors.

The report provides "that all payments for the account of reparations will be paid in gold marks or their equivalent into the bank of issue to the credit of an 'agent for reparations payments,'" and that the "use and withdrawal of the moneys so deposited will be controlled by the said agent and five persons skilled in matters relating to foreign exchange."

Here the committee again provides that Germany is never to pay more than the allies can receive without upsetting the balance of the exchange, or the trade balance, if payments are in kind.

But also too low a figure, unacceptable to Germany's creditors and unwarrantably favorable to Germany, is deplored.

Dawes Offers Up Devout Wish For His Plan

PARIS, April 9.—A devout wish that the experts' plans for stabilizing Germany's currency and balancing her budget may be successfully consummated was expressed by General Charles G. Dawes in a covering letter transmitted to Louis Barthou, chairman of the reparations commission, together with the report of committee number one.

Dawes declared the entire world had "vital and enduring concern" in what the experts proposed. He explained the open mindedness with which they had attacked their problems, and paid high tribute to his colleagues.

Expect Germany to Prosper.

Two outstanding features of the report which Dawes stressed in his covering letter were that the committee has endeavored to so arrange matters that Germany pays taxes as high as those in any creditor country but no higher, and that her reparations payments are to be guaged by her increasing prosperity.

"The plan submitted is fair and reasonable in its nature, and if accepted, is likely to lead to ultimate and lasting peace," Dawes wrote. "The rejection of these proposals by the German government means the deliberate choice of a continuance of economic demoralization, eventually involving her people in hopeless misery."

"The President of the Reparations Commission.

"Sir: Your committee has unanimously adopted a report upon the means for balancing the German budget and the measures to be taken to stabilize its currency which I now have the honor to submit.

Where Did We Hear This?

"Deeply impressed by a sense of its responsibility to your commission and to the universal conscience, the committee bases its plan upon the principles of justice, fairness and mutual interest, in the supremacy of which not only the creditors of Germany and Germany itself but the world also have a vital and enduring concern.

"Since, as a result of the war, the creditors of Germany are paying taxes to the limit of their capacity, so also must Germany be encouraged to pay taxes from year to year to the limit of her capacity. This is in accord with the just and underlying principle of the treaty of Versailles, reaffirmed by Germany in its note of May 29, 1919, that the German scheme of taxation must be 'fully as heavy proportionately as that of any of the powers represented on the occasion.' More than this limit could not be expected. And less than this would relieve Germany from the common hardship and give to her an unfair advantage in the industrial competition of the future. The plan of the committee embodies this principle.

"The plan has been made to include flexible adjustments which from the very beginning tend to produce a maximum of contributions consistent with the continued and increasing productivity of Germany; the conservative estimates of payments to be made in the near future are dictated by business prudence in outlining the basis of a loan and should not destroy the perspective as to the effects to be registered in the aggregate of eventual payments which will annually increase. * * * *

Oh My! Oh My!

"To ensure the permanence of the new economis peace between allied governments and Germany, which involves the economic adjustment presented by the plan, there are provided the counterparts of those usual economic precautions against demoralization which are recognized as essential in all business relations involving express obligations. * * * *

"Great care has been taken in fixing the conditions of the supervision over Germany's internal organization ference consistent with proper protection. The plan submitted is fair and reasonable in its nature and, if accepted, is likely to lead to ultimate and lasting peace. The rejection of these proposals by the German government means the deliberate choice of a continuance of economic demoralization, eventually involving her people in hopeless misery. * * * *

"In its work the full committee has held since January 14, 1924, forty-eight meetings. The sub-committee on the stabilizing of currency, composed of M. Harmentier, Sir R. M. Kindersley, M. Emile Francqui and Professor F. Flora, assisted by Henry M. Robinson and under the chairmanship of Owen D. Young, has held sixty-eight meetings and the sub-committee on balancing the German budget, composed of M. Alix, Baron Houtart and Dr. Pirelli, under the chairmanship of Sir J. C. Stamp, has held sixty meetings. These sub-committees have also had the assistance of Andrew McFadysan, the general secretary of the reparation commission. The time of the committee, outside of that consumed by its meetings, has been given largely to investigation and study.

Isn't He Verbose?

"In speaking of my colleagues and as bearing upon the value of this report, I feel that I should make known to the reparations commission and to the world that their governments have in no case limited their complete independence of judgement and action, either before or after their appointment by the reparations commission. Limited only by the powers granted by the commission, each of my colleagues has performed his work as a free agent; these men searching for truth and advice thereon were answerable only to their conscience. In granting this freedom, the governments have on the same lines followed the commissions spirit and intent in constituting the committee, but in so doing they have paid the highest tribute which governments can bestow, namely, complete confidence in a time of crisis in human affairs. In their vision, in their independence of thought, and above all their spirit of high and sincere purpose, which arises above the small things over which the small so often stumble, my colleagues have shown themselves worthy of this trust.

"That their work, which I know place in the commission's hands, may assist in the discharge of the commission's great responsibilities is their prayer and the knowledge hereafter that it has done so will be their full reward.

(Signed)

"Charles G. Dawes, chairman."

FRENCH PRESS HITS DAWES' REPORT; HUGO STINNES ON SICK BED

BERLIN, April 9.—At the hour when the reparations commission in Paris was receiving the report of the experts, Germany's strong man who led resistance to reparations demands—Hugo Stinnes—lay gravely ill at his home here. The industrialist's wife was constantly at his bedside and physicians held out some hope for his recovery.

Stinnes was operated on for gall stones March 22. He collapsed following a second operation last Saturday and grew steadily worse.

French Are Skeptical.

PARIS, April 9.—The French press was critical of the Dawes report, skeptical as to its success and unfavorable to its adoption. Pertinax, celebrated critic of the Eche de Paris, said:

"The work presented is hardly satisfactory. It gives Germany means of starting once more her evasions of 1921-22."

Heavy Selling In Wall Street.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Official publication of the Dawes' report was followed by heavy selling directed principally against industrials.

Studebaker broke to a new low on the week's decline at 91¾ where it was within half of the year's low. American Can also dropped to within fractional distance of the record 1924 low when it broke to 102⅝ and similar heaviness was exhibited by other industrial leaders while active rails were also under pressure.

Farmers Broke in Minnesota, So Another Bank Goes to the Wall

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 9.—Another bank has closed its doors here, reflecting the bankrupt condition of the Northwestern farmers. The Brainerd State Bank, with deposits totaling $500,000, was closed after a run on the institution.

Scab Crowe Still Sitting In County Office

President Coolidge yesterday was leading Senator Hiram Johnson in the Illinois presidential preference race by 19,684 votes in the unofficial count from 2,487 out of the state's 5,758 precincts.

Coolidge, 185,525.

Johnson, 165,841.

For senator, republican, ex-Governor Charles Deneen had a lead of approximately 14,000 over Senator McCormick. The count:

Deneen, 165,632.

For governor, republican: The count from 3,012 precincts was, Governor Len Small, 281,701; Senator Essington, 237,753.

Oil Record Swamps McAdoo.

On the democratic side the regular organization led by George E. Brennan, democratic boss of Illinois, swept everything before it. Unofficial returns show that Brennan's uninstructed slate of delegates to the democratic national convention received an overwhelming majority over the slate of William G. McAdoo, candidate for the democratic presidential nomination. Brennan's slate carried by two and three to one in nearly all parts of the state.

Johnson Routed In Michigan.

DETROIT, Mich., April 9.—President Coolidge's majority over Senator Hiram Johnson in Michigan's residential primary Tuesday probably will total 120,000 returns from the accumulating precincts indicated today.

Coolidge, 191,627;

Johnson, 89,139.

Ford, 35,572,

Ferris, 32,263.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 9.—President Calvin Coolidge was leading Senator Hiram Johnson by 15,567 votes in 865 precincts out of 1,936 in the Nebraska primary of yesterday.

The vote was:

Johnson, 23,216.

Senator George W. Norris, progressive republican, was assured of re-nomination with a vote of more than two to one over his nearest opponent.

Few democratic voters wrote in their choice for presidential nominee. William G. McAdoo received the largest number of voluntary votes. Governor Bryan apparently is re-nominated by a two to one vote over Charles Graff.

Wallace, Another Coolidge Crook, Aided the Livestock Ring Against the Farmers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 9.—After hanging fire for many months, the investigation of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has been started before a House committee headed by Representative King, of Illionis. The first testimony has come from John M. Burns, former attorney in the packers and stockyards administration, and from Earl S. Haines, formerly an examiner in this same division and previously employed in the stockyards and packers investigation by the federal trade commission.

Burns told how the farmers are robbed by the livestock commission men's ring, and how Chester Morrill, executive assistant to Wallace in directing the stockyards administration, refused to permit the National Livestock Producers' Co-operative Association to file an application to trade in live stock on the Kansas City exchange, after it had stated its intention to reduce the rate of commissions to farmers.

Recently, however, two individuals filed a rate 30 per cent below the regular commission rate on the Oklahoma City exchange, and the combine asked Wallace to block their doing business. They were subjected to such pressure that they finally agreed to charge the regular rate, and were admitted to the exchange.

Earl Haines, prominent in the federal trade commission's study of stockyards conditions, which led to the enactment of the present makeshift law, agreed with Burns that from 25 to 40 per cent should be returned to the farmers, from the $40,000,000 taken from them by the live stock commission men each year.

Haines resigned from Wallace's department last October, submitting a letter in which he declared that the important advantages gained by the farmers after 30 years of struggle against the meat packing combine are rapidly slipping away, due to the shielding of profiteers by the very agency of government that was created to guard the public against them.

Beach was charged with being the Ku Klux Klan candidate by his opponents. The klan influence was generally credited with being an important factor in victory.

Washington "Highly Pleased."

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Tho prevented from making any formal expression, state department officials today let it be known that the report of the Dawes committee was "highly pleasing" from an American point of view.

"We earnestly hope that this excellent piece of work will mean the solution of this serious problem of reparations," a high department official said. "It is not a governmental arrangement, however, and we can not express governmental approval of it."

The department spokesman paid high tribute to Dawes and his colleagues, who devised the tentative solution of the problem.

Labor Faker Reaps Reward for Helping Corrupt Politician

The Chicago labor leaders, who induced trade unionists to elect the corrupt Small to the gubernatorial nomination, are already reaping their reward. Yesterday, William Brims, of the Carpenters' union, convicted of conspiracy in 1922, had his sentence commuted and went free while other officials of the Chicago flat janitors' union were granted a stay of sentence on a similar case.

It is good news that labor men are prevented from serving unjust sentences, when their only crime is organizing labor. But these men got out of jail by aligning themselves with a corrupt political machine, instead of being freed because of the organized protest of the workers.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

SUGAR TRUST BEHIND CAL VS. FILIPINOS

Secretary of War Weeks Is Also Involved Here

By JAY LOVESTONE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 9.—When President Coolidge took the special pains to issue a lengthy message against the independence movement of the Filipino people, many wondered what was the driving force behind the Chief Executive's imperialist elbow.

An examination of the present conflict in the Philippines against the encroachments of the American capitalists tells the whole story.

Grabbing the Sugar.

The writer has obtained from unimpeachable sources the following facts which are typical of the policy of aggrandizement and exploitation pursued by the Washington government against the Filipino nation and the other subject colonial peoples.

No sooner had General Leonard Wood been sent to the Philippines than the American business interests launched preparations to take away the natural resources of the Islands from the natives. Mr. Atkens is one of the big sugar plantation owners in Cuba. Mr. Atkens also is the son-in-law of Secretary of War Weeks who is one of the bitterest enemies of Filipino freedom. When General Wood made his first attempt to drive the Philippine government out of business and hand over the sugar centrals to private American capitalist interests, this same Mr. Atkens used his intimate connections with the cabinet, particularly with Secretary of War Weeks, his father-in-law, under whom General Leonard Wood is working in the Philippines, to get in first on the spot, on the ground floor as it were, to grab up all the Filipino sugar centrals for himself.

The "Principal" Is Involved.

It was only the persistent determined opposition of the Filipino legislators and the native directors of these sugar centrals that thwarted General Wood's plan which would have thrown these sugar centrals into the hands of the family of Secretary of War Weeks. Mr. Atkens has repeatedly expressed great interest in getting hold of the sugar centrals of the Philippines, because, in his opinion, sugar can be produced much cheaper in the Philippines than anywhere else.

As it is the "sugar" agents of the son-in-law of the Secretary of War Weeks have been held up-to-date. Their prospecting has done little good and netted Mr. Atkens very slim results so far.

This case is characteristic of the policy of the government towards the weaker nationalities. Here we have President Coolidge, Secretary of War Weeks, and Governor General Leonard Wood tied up in a conspiracy to rob the Filipino people of their natural resources. It is the huge interests of Secretary of War Weeks and his crowd of Boston bankers that are making Coolidge so bitterly opposed to the Philippine independence movement.

Investigation Not Wasted.

But Congress is not showing any signs of life in bringing to the fore the resolutions demanding an investigation of General Leonard Wood's scandalous administration of the Philippines. In well-informed circles it is maintained that such an investigation would bring forth revelations far more shocking than the Teapot Dome disclosures.

"Yes," said Stork.

Mannington Drops From Sight.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Howard K. Mannington, much mentioned figure in the Senate Daugherty investigation, dropped from sight in New York today and it was believed he had gone to Washington to appear before the committee.

Mannington said when he arrived from France late Tuesday that he was in no hurry to go to Washington and that he usually stopped at the Continental Hotel while in New York.

The subpoena was served as soon as Mannington alighted from the steamer late yesterday. The Senate Committee wants him to answer charges made by witnesses that he was a party to an alleged split on funds paid for liquor illegally withdrawn from government warehouses and other charges.

UNITED CHICAGO EMPLOYERS BACK FIGHT ON STRIKE

New Garment-Boss Association Has Their Aid

Boasting that the Chicago Association of Dress Manufacturers is dedicated to the open shop the Employers' News, organ of the Employers' Association of Chicago, announces the formation of the dress combine.

The new garment association was was formed with the aid of the Employers' Association during the present garment workers' strike. It combines three smaller groups and is headed by Frank Mitcheil of the dress making firm of Mitchell Brothers, the largest concern in the Chicago market. E. M. Horton is managing secretary.

Dudley Taylor Planned It.

From other sources the DAILY WORKER has learned that Dudley Taylor, arch schemer for the open shoppers of Chicago, and attorney for the Employers' Association, discussed his plans for the new One Big Union of dress bosses some time before the present strike but could not whip manufacturers into line, because of the extra charges and obligations, until the strike frightened them.

The new dress association hires sluggers, retains Taylor and Le-Bosky, injunction attorneys, and "fixes" higher officials in city and county departments and its influence extends into the court rooms of injunction judges.

"Dennie" Sullivan Too.

Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's friendly and almost respectful attitude towards the employers' attorneys is in line with the relation previously established.

The entire cover pages of the Employers News is covered with an editorial against the garment strikers. More anti-garment strike stuff is on the second page and the rest of the four pages is taken up with articles on building trades, janitors, musicians and actors.

There is a mournful article on a "stench bomb" said to have been exploded in a movie house, and the Negro Press Association's declaration against unionism and "economic radicalism" at their Tennessee convention gets a column of space.

Negro Radical Hails Unity of Workers in Black-White Races

To The DAILY WORKER:—The capitalists of the United States try to prevent at all costs the unity and solidarity of the black and white workers of the United States. The capitalists know very well that if the black and white workers come to realize their identity of interests and cast aside their prejudices and animosities and join hands against their common enemy, the capitalists, that they, the capitalists, are doomed.

This accounts for the spasms the capitalist mouthpiece, the Tribune, is having on learning that awakened and enlightened Negro workers are joining hands with awakened enlightened white workers against the capitalists.

Increasing numbers of Negroes now realize that the anti-Negro propaganda spread thru capitalist newspapers and other agencies, is done by capitalist hirelings solely to poison the minds of the white workers against Negro workers and to direct their hatred against the Negroes, instead of against their real enemy, the capitalists.

Class conscious Negro and white workers all over the United States are now joining hands and gathering their forces together to deal a death blow to capitalism.—Gordon W. Owens.

Russia Sentences Crooked Bankers To Years in Jail

(Rosta News Service.)

MOSCOW, April 9.—The trial of Alexander Krasnostchekoff (A. Stroller Tobinson), ex-chairman of the Industrial Bank, has been brought to an end. The chief accused has been sentenced to six years' imprisonment and loss of civil rights for three years; his brother, Jacob Krasnostchekoff, has been sentenced to three years in jail, while the rest—to shorter terms.

A. Krasnostchekoff was charged with misusing his social position for promoting private commercial operations of his relatives—thereby causing the bank losses to an amount of 10,000 gold roubles and discrediting the Soviet power by favoritism and an arrogant demeanor towards the lower employes of the bank and orgies.

In the course of his speech, said Prosecutor Krylenko, "The Soviet power demands the highest ethical standard from its agents; it draws no line of difference between violation of ethics and breaking of law. As for the revolutionary record and the social position of the accused—far from being an extenuating, it is an aggravating circumstance."

"American Flag Follows $$$$!" Means Dollar Owns Flag, Says Shipstead in Case of Honduras

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Senator Shipstead, protesting against the invasion of Honduras by American marines, remarks that the slogan "the American flag follows the dollar" implies that the owner of the dollar controls the flag and the American foreign policy. He finds the flag and the policy sent into Haiti, Santo Domingo, Salvadore, Honduras, Nicaragua, Mexico and France, at the command of the dollar.

"There is an ever increasing number of people in America," he says, "who are beginning to realize that the American dollar represents the crystallized sweat of American labor.

"Forty billions of these American dollars were sent with reckless abandon on an experiment called 'a war to end war.' The experiment, of course, was a failure.

"The American bankers had put their money on the Allies to win. They had bet on a losing horse. So they had to rush $40,000,000,000 of the American people's money, and sacrifice 150,000 lives of the flower of American youth, to fix the race so that the horse they had bet on could win. . . .

"Shall we pile up heavier taxes and larger debts by financing imperial European governments in their game of destruction? If we do, we shall have to pay the price that European governments and peoples are paying now. That price will be paid by the people in America who produce the wealth by toil in the mines and in the factories, on the farms and shops, for nations, like individuals, must pay for their mistakes."

Shipstead proposes to deliver a series of speeches in the Senate and at various places in the east, showing up the bankers' scheme of getting "American honor" enmeshed in their bond issues sold at the point of the gun to Latin-American peoples, and in intrigues with French imperialism in Europe.

German Finks Sought Communist Deputies When Reichstag Quit

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

BERLIN, April 9.—When the German reichstag was dissolved secret police snooped about the big building waiting to lay their hands upon three Communist deputies, Koenen, Stoecker, and Froelich.

They would also have looked for Clara Zetkin, veteran warhorse of the revolution, had she been in parliament. But she has been in Russia for the last few months, recovering from illness. Now that she is nursed back to health, her friends are urging upon her the senselessness of coming back to Germany at this time merely to be arrested.

With the dissolution of parliament, deputies lose their parliamentary immunity. Against the four Communists there is an indictment for alleged sedition. Koenen, Stoecker and Froelich were able to escape the vigilant eyes of the secret service and are now leading an "illegal" existence. In Russia illegal exixstence was quite the thing among the revolutionaries, and Lenin sometimes addressed meetings in Petrograd altho orders for his arrest were out.

A touch of the grotesque was given the reichstag dissolution when the Socialist speaker of the house addressed a few closing words to the deputies. He asked all to rise to their feet and cheer for the German people—here everybody arose—and also (this was unexpected) for the republic! That left the German Nationalists in an awful predicament. To sit down seemed unwise to these monarchists, so they remained standing. Their rage prevented them from cheering.

Herald Auto-Stove As Noiseless Heater Of the Near Future

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 9.—The future home will be heated by an oil burning stove, smokeless, noiseless, built like and operated like an automobile engine. So says L. V. Nicholas, Chicago, president and spokesman for the National Petroleum Marketers' Association, meeting here today in the second session of a four-day convention.

The "auto-stove" already has been invented, Nicholas said in an interview. It is altogether different from the present oil burners, and has the same effective combustion with no waste of fuel as the automobile engine. Of course, it will give heat instead of power.

Striking Girls Win 10% Raise.

NEW YORK, April 9.—Union shop conditions and a 10 per cent wage increase have been won as a result of a three week's strike at the clothing shop of Marvin & Co., here. The 90 workers, mostly girls, are members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union. A minimum of $12 a week is established by the agreement which runs for a year. The contract permits a wage revision Oct. 1. The union is striking the non-union Sharfstein shop here, and also that of Berman & Mann.

FULL REVISION OF TAX BILL IS AIM OF ITS ENEMIES

Bonus Bill May Come First on Slate

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The new tax bill—with the Mellon rates written in—was ordered favorably reported by the senate finance committee today after nearly a month of discussion.

The committee's action puts the bill on the floor of the senate where it faces a bitter fight and apparently inevitable and complete revision by the progressives and the democrats. It will be taken up for discussion probably next Monday.

The bill is a complete revision of the measure passed by the house a month ago. Republican members of the senate committee by reason of the complacency of democrats were permitted to restore the rates first proposed by Mellon, which were rejected by the house.

Democrats are confident they can change it to meet their own view when it is taken up on the floor.

The senate finance committee began discussion of the bill nearly a month ago, and has held day and night sessions since that time in order to speed action on the measure by the present congress.

But with only about eight weeks remaining before congress plans to adjourn, the situation regarding the bill is considered precarious. It can not be taken up until Monday because senators desire to study its features. Leaders, however, think that it ought to be passed finally within four weeks.

Bonus advocates plan to shunt it aside when the bonus bill comes out of committee in a few days. If they succeed the bonus bill will be acted on before the tax bill.

Girl Hat Makers In Los Angeles for The 44-Hour Week

By MAUD McCREERY
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

LOS ANGELES, April 9.—More than 100 girl hat makers are striking here for a 44-hour week. The employers have agreed to give the shorter work week to the men operating machines but refuse to discuss the matter with the women employes or give any reason for denying to them the same working conditions granted to the men, according to Mildred Condry, one of the strikers.

The wage paid girl millinery workers is from $10 to $16 a week. This is the minimum wage required by law. Expert workers coming from eastern cities, lured by the climate advertising of the Los Angeles boosters, leaving better jobs back east, have to accept this small wage or join the large army of job seekers that crowd the downtown streets daily.

An effort is being made to enlist the sympathies of the women who wear the hats.

Union sign writers have organized three new motion picture studios, admitting 4 new members into the organization. The initiation fee has been reduced to $25.

The Los Angeles barbers' union here reports an increase in membership of 15 per cent since Jan. 1, 1914.

Los Angeles organized labor will endow a crib in the orthopedic ward of the children's hospital. The Central Labor council indorsed a proposal to subscribe $300 as the initial cost of a bed and $50 annually for maintenance. Local unions affiliated with the council will be asked to contribute.

Organized labor here, thru the Los Angeles Central Trades council, favors restrictions on immigration. U. S. senators from California are urged to fight to retain in the immigration bill the clause: "No one shall be admitted to the United States of America who is not eligible to citizenship." This is aimed at the yellow races.

LONG ST. LOUIS PAINTERS' STRIKE NEARING VICTORY

185 Contractors Paying $12 Scale

By H. L. GOLDBERG
(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 9.—Nearing the fourth week of the strike of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers there are all indications that victory will come to the strikers. The morale of the men could not be better and the officers of teh union hold the confidence of the strikers.

Demands are: $25 per day with shop steward system; the right to have tools examined on the job, and thereby protect the life and limb of the workers; sanitary drop cloths and rags to protect the health of the workers.

Most Dangerous Work.

Painters do the most hazardous work in the building trades. Dangerous rigging and high work continually take toll of human life. Poisonous fumes and ingredients of paint mixtures injure the health of the painter. It is from the painter's craft that the largest per cent of the tubercular patients flow into our hospitals annually.

Besides risking life and health the painter is compelled to work at top speed. The painters of St. Louis, especially have the reputation of being the fastest mechanics in the world. Employer painters figure all their work at the highest possible figure. They sometimes eliminate one coat of paint, and otherwise "skin" the work. Cheap substitutes are frequently used for lead, oil and turpentine, and worthless ready-made mixed flat wall paint are often worked off on the public as high-class material. The first-class mechanics are all union men who take pride in turning out neat painting and first-class work. If given time, good materials and tools they will invariably give satisfaction and adequate return for the money paid in wages.

Other Crafts Get More.

It should not be overlooked by the public that this strike, being conducted by the painters, decorators and paperhangers is of vital interest to them in a material way. Regardless of the advance value of all real estate, as evidenced by excessive rise of all rents, the price of painting contracts has remained the same practically, for the past decade.

It is interesting to compare what is called the "excessive demands" of the journeymen painters with the scale of wages that is paid to other crafts frequently working on the same building.

The carpenter's scale is $12 per day, bricklayers, $14 per day; plasterers, $16 per day; sign painters, $1.65 per hour; which is equivalent to $13.20 per day.

Approximately 185 contractors have signed the demands of the strikers, but standing solidly against the demands is perhaps, the largest combination that has been brought into action, against a single craft organization in any city in the United States. This combination consists of, the chamber of commerce, the builders association, the manufacturers association, the bankers association, the real estate exchange, the master painters, and the wall-paper dealers. This combination has the support of the capitalist press of the city of St. Louis.

Solid Front of Bosses.

The press has been so hostile in its attitude that it has refused to publish facts presented to it by the strikers, even if paid to do so. Here is the "United Front" of the open-shoppers fighting a single craft of the building trade. The enemies of organized labor learned long ago that unity of action, on the battle front means easier fighting and quicker victory. Therefore their forces are directed in mass against the journeymen painters. On the other hand, if the entire strength of the building trades were thrown into this struggle in behalf of their brothers a settlement would be effected by a complete surrender of the master painters in twenty-four hours. The forces now at work to destroy the brotherhood of painters, decorators and paperhangers appear to have forgotten that it was this craft of the building trades who, three years ago, led the way to the "Restoration of Normalcy" by voluntarily accepting a reduction in wages from $10 to $8 per day, (later raised to $9) only to find that no one took the cry of "normalcy" seriously save themselves.

Scabbing On Teamsters.

Under the old working agreement, it became almost necessary for the applicant for a job to own an automobile. His car was forced into service. In doing hauling, he was directly in competition with teamsters and draymen. This condition will no doubt be eliminated by contract after the strike.

The public can materially help the strikers by demanding that all painters, decorators and paper-hangers show their union cards together with the permit when they report at the premises for work. In the event the credentials are not forthcoming deny the mechanic entrance into the house.

Plan Paper Wage Conference.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 9.—A wage conference with the pulp and paper manufacturers of the United States has been requested by six international unions following the scale conferences of the latter in Buffalo.

Who Is the Leader?

Whenever the workers make a stand against the bosses and put up a fight for better conditions, the action is laid at the door of a few agitators and the bosses and their press seek to humbug the workers with fulsome praise for the rank and file while denouncing the leaders of the workers. For several years the world was told that the miners of District 26 were alright, but the whole trouble was caused by MacLachlan. The claim was made that MacLachlan did not represent the opinion of the rank and file. The bosses thought that by jailing him and branding him as a criminal, the miners would desert him.

The wonderful reception accorded the veteran leader upon his release from prison leave no doubt as to whom the miners regard as their leader. Even the "Financial Post," organ of big business, in its issue of March 14th is compelled to say:

> "If anyone had any doubts as to who will dominate the councils of the miners, these must have been set at rest by the demonstration accorded MacLachlan on his release from Dorchester. On the advice of his friends, he spent Thursday at Truro (far from the coalfields) so that he could not be charged with personally affecting the referendum. Nevertheless his release did affect it precisely as predicted by 'The Post' last week. The very fact that he was free again filled his followers with enthusiasm and made them contemptuous of the provisional executive and all its works.
> "In view of these things there should now be little question as to who is the hero of the miners and who will dominate the future councils of the workers. Even if the U. M. W. remains, it will eventually have either to consent to a reconciliation, or to submit to being run from without thru a set of dummy officers."

"Dummy officers" is right. If the appointees of Lewis who are acting as "provisional" officers of the district had the self-respect of rats they would clear out of the district. But these meal-ticket mediocrities will stick like leeches to the body of the district until they are torn off.

The miners, sick unto nausea of the presence of the gang that was foisted upon them, are demanding a district convention to put the quietus on Barrett's infamous contract; and further demand that a district election be held in which they can have an opportunity of again putting the boots to the Lewis gang.

Lewis, Barrett and Co. could not deliver the goods to their Besco masters owing to the watchfulness of the militant miners, who, after contemptuously rejecting the contract drawn up by Besco and the Lewis gang, will not rest until the authors of it are thrown off the backs of the miners.

Bar Militants as Delegates to Garment Workers' Convention

Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 9.—The officials of the Waist and Dress Markers' Union, Local No. 50, of this city are again worried about the "Red." The local, formerly No. 15, has been "reorganized." All members suspected of being progressives or of having any thing to do with the wholesale expulsions.

With the approach of the National Convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the officials began to see "red" in the reorganized local, too. Three members who were nominated as candidates for delegates to the convention appeared to the officials to be tinted with red. They were subjected to a grilling and then deprived of the right to run as delegates.

A special joint meeting of the local was called, where a report on these candidates was to be made. According to the official figures there are supposed to be 1,200 members in that local. Of these not more than 25 showed up. The meeting did not take place. The membership seems to be disgusted with the tactics of the machine and fails to come to the meetings.

Whom will the officials blame now when there are no more "reds" in that local?

Shoe Clerks Win 10 Per Cent.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., A 10 per cent wage increase for clerks receiving less than $35 a week and shorter hours are provided for in the new agreement between the Brooklyn Shoe Salesmen's union and the retail dealers' association of Brownsville. The union will attempt to get similar terms from the Williamsburg merchants.

Waiters Against Tips.

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 9.—The International Union of Waiters declares itself opposed to the return of the old system of tipping and for a continuance of a service charge, ranging from 10 to 20 per cent. Not only do the waiters make more money under the percentage system, but they declare it degrading to be forced to accept tips in lieu of salary.

Hits Mellon Tax Plan.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—"All the arguments for the Mellon Tax Plan are either intellectually dishonest or indicative of deplorable ignorance," said Dr. John A. Ryan of the National Catholic University, here, at the opening session of the College and University conference on law observance and citizenship.

Coalition in Bavaria.

BERLIN, April 9—Supporters of Adolph Hittler and General Ludendorff failed to return a majority in the Bavarian Diet. It is expected that the coalition government will have to be formed between the People's Party, the Socialists and Democrats. The extreme Nationalists returned 25 members.

Socialists Run Independent.

DAVENPORT, Ia., April 9. Police Magistrate Harold Metcalf, socialist, running as an independent, was reelected for a third two-year term by a majority of 1827 in the election April 5. Because of having lost their official standing in the last state election, Socialists were obliged to run as independents.

Kill 48-Hour Bill.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 9.—The 48-hour bill, recently passed by the senate (Democrat), has been killed by the Republican caucus of the New York state assembly here by a two to one vote.

Guatemala Jailing All Communists and Trade Union Leaders

TEHUANTEPEC, Guatemala, Apr. 9. This little country with its notoral party government is in the grip of a tremendous reaction in which all known Communists are jailed, other labor leaders suppressed and a traitor organization fostered by the government.

As another step toward the realization of the Berlin to Bagdad (excuse me, I mean New York to Buenos Aires) railroad is promised thru the beginnings of the construction of an international bridge between Mexico and Guatemala at Suchiate. With the railroad now running to the Guatemala border, and the railroad from Buenos Aires to La Paz, Bolivia, to be opened January 1, 1925, most of it being already in operation the only big stretch unbuilt is that of Central America.

Burns-Daugherty Praises Dinned Into Ears of Attorneys

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—Arthur A. Wheat, special assistant to the attorney-general, journeyed to this city from Washington to address the St. Louis Bar Association on "The Organization and Work of the Department of Justice." The speaker showered words of praise on the character and official record of Harry M. Daugherty as well as his chief snooper, "Billy" Burns.

Daugherty was eulogised for his alleged energy and efficiency." Hardly had the report of the Wheat speech cooled in newspaper type when the alleged energetic and efficient Daugherty was kicked out of office as a cheap crook.

Department Stores Take Notice.

BRISBANE, Queensland. The Queensland Labor government is taking action against retail dry goods houses for publishing misleading advertisements, stating that certain lines had been reduced to half price. The action is taken under the profiteering prevention act which prohibits publication of false and misleading statements regarding description, place of manufacture, or reduction of price of any commodity offered for sale.

TROOPS FIRE ON MINERS' HOUSES DURING THE NIGHT

More Soldiers Called to Aid Strikebreakers

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 9.—Additional troops of state cavalry have been called to intimidate the miners on strike here for union conditions, as the mines prepared to reopen. Marksmen hidden in the hills fired over two thousand bullets into the homes of the miners on the night of April 7.

H. F. Reed, representative of the union miners at the Liberty mine, declared there was no use for troops at all. He declared the non-union man would not have been killed Thursday if the mine guards had not intimidated the union men. Soldiers are tramping over the surrounding mountains in their endeavor to scare the union men back to work.

Reed again declared his willingness to meet with the coal operators, but Max Barker, of the Liberty Coal & Coke Co., has refused to have dealings with the union.

Governor Fields seems to have little sympathy for the struggle of the miners to better their condition as he is calling in additional troops to aid the employers and the strikebreakers. Spirited rifle fire is reported still going on in the hills, as the miners are determined to protect their families from the firing of the troops.

Los Angeles Typos Win $3 More; Taboo Struck Shop Work

(By The Federated Press)

LOS ANGELES, April 9.—A wage increase of $3 a week has been secured by Typographical Union 174 for all its members working on daily newspapers in this city and vicinity. The agreement is retroactive to Dec. 1, 1923, and will affect the wages of typographical workers in Long Beach, Pasadena, Santa Monica and Glendale as well as Los Angeles.

The agreement, which was adopted by a large majority of the union at its last regular meeting and will be effective as soon as approved by International President Howard, makes the scale for journeymen $48.50 for day and $51.50 for night work, with a corresponding increase for foremen.

A new clause provides that no work can be done by a union shop destined to or coming from a "struck shop." The agreement will run until Dec. 23, 1924, and will continue until 1927 unless a change is asked by either party prior to December.

Honors for Bandit.

Press dispatches carry a story that Ed Lockhart, notorious Oklahoma outlaw, was buried with full military honors by members of the American Legion at Tulsa. The American flag was wrapped around his body. Should by any chance the fabric of the flag and the body be preserved in its entirety wouldn't it be a stunning sight to see law breaker on whose head a price was set during his life time, stand up before the Judgment Bar and ask for an outside seat, center row, not too far back in order to listen to the Celestial choir for all eternity, because his worthless carcass had been neatly tied up in the American flag by members of the American Legion, when quicklime should have been the portion after the hangman did his duty. But the law slipped and Ed escaped his just deserts.

Rochester Asks, "What Next?"

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 9.—With the icemen out, and the carpenters and streetcar men threatening to strike, Rochester is wondering what will happen next. The icemen demand $36 a week for drivers and $34 for helpers. They have been getting $32 and $30. The Ice Industries Aussociation offers a compromise of $34 and $32. The 1800 carpenters who ask $1.12½ an hour are offered $1.10.

Munich Children 70 Pct. Tubercular, Pamphlet Shows

A most frightful picture of the working class children in Germany is reported by the International Workers' Aid in a pamphlet just issued.

Dr. W. A. Horsley Gantt, who was in Russia with the American Relief administration for the last six months investigating health conditions in Germany, is quoted as follows:

"The contrast between the health conditions in Germany and Russia is that Russia is just getting over her crisis while Germany has reached hers. I went into a half dozen children's hospitals in Cologne and Dusseldorf. Three-fourths of the children were sick, not from any common children's diseases, but from sicknesses such as rickets. The wizened, expressionless faces, narrow chests, covered with skin so flabby that it folded over the bones like a cloak, their deformed and twisted bodies often too apathetic and weak to cry, were characteristics present in nearly every child. In one hospital in which there were 115 children, I saw every child and had their weights and ages recorded. The average age was three years but the weight was that of a child twelve months old."

Seventy-eight per cent of the children are tubercular.

A questionnaire sent out to the schools of four cities revealed the fact that in Munich 70 per cent of the children are suffering from tuberculosis. In Dresden 285 pupils out of 1,204 were suffering from curvature of the spine due to malnutrition. In Nuremberg, 1000 out of the 1,850 were undernourished.

The International Workers Aid is bringing assistance to the German children. All workers should support their campaign.

Zinoviev Reviews the Main Points of Difference

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Today we continue publication of the famous report by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, made to the session of the Executive of the Communist International held on Jan. 6. Zinoviev's report deals with the main points of difference in the Russian Communist Party, clearly crystallizing the discussion that has so far been published in the DAILY WORKER. In order that our readers may get a broader view of this discussion, we are publishing enlarged installments. This report is divided into seven sections. Today we publish the third section. It is as follows:

* * * * *

III.

The Old and the Young.

I NOW come to the third point in dispute, to the question of the old and the young in our Party. On this point, comrades, you yourselves already posses a certain amount of experience, dating from the time of the earlier International; this applies especially to the comrades in the German labor movement. You know who were the so-called youth in Germany in the nineties. This "youth" was very radical in gesture at that time, but in reality it was only a variety of revisionism.

Engels was entirely right when he wrote at that time to Bebel: "I, the old one, and you, are in reality the only young ones in the party."

I believe, comrades, that our so-called old guard of the Bolsheviki may lay equal claim with Engels to representing the actual youth of the Party. There is no question of old papas, anxious to force their children to be good and obedient! The old Bolshevist guard is not so stupid as all that. But all the same it holds a place of some significance in the International, and has given sufficient proof that it is able to rear a Bolshevist party.

The Youth in the Party.

Then what is our conflict about? The two-fold current may be observed among our youth. The whole youth of the working class is on our side. This is an established fact. The working youth of Moscow, Petrograd, Ukraine and the Ural, as also the working youth of all the other industrial centers, have joined the "old guard" without hesitation, and have categorically declared: "Take care, these older ones are our teachers!"

The student youth, on the other hand, has immediately split into two camps.

In Moscow there has even been a majority against the old Bolshevist guard among the student youth. An interesting and remarkable phenomenon. Our students include a great number of workers, but also many petty bourgeois elements. The sympathies of the students have thus been divided between two camps. Whilst one party has supported us, another has opposed us. The latter party immediately issued the war cry of: Youth on one side, age on the other. But we know no problem of youth or age, but solely a problem of the political line, the one and only question which exists for us.

Comrade Trotzky appeared with an article in a form which no one could have expected from a comrade like Trotzky, endeavoring to incite the youthful elements of the Party against the old guard in a manner which may almost be designated as vulgar.

What caused him to take this step?

Why Use Such Arguments?

In my opinion, comrades, he only made use of the vulgar arguments because he had no better ones. Trotzky seeks support among those strata most easily accessible to his point of view, a point of view which has prevailed among us to a certain extent of late, and represnts in a certain sense a revised Bolshevism. He needed a base, and found this among certain elements of the Red Army. It need not be said that we shall not let him; have even these minorities, but shall win them over for ourselves. This will, of course, take place gradually. It will take time. As Marxist education is not yet deeply rooted among these strata, temporary success is easily attained by demagogy.

Preobrazensky, for instance, goes to the Sverdlov university and addresses the student somewhat to the following effect: "You are studying at the Sverdlov university, this monument of our cultural advancement, and are endeavoring to gain a knowledge of Marxism. This is a very great and important task. But of what use will the study of Marxism be to you if you are not able to apply your scientific knowledge to practical life?"

Preobrazensky can, of course, earn cheap applause for such words among a section of the students, who have perhaps studied Marx's "Capital" for half a year, but have not yet ruled the country. This section of the students is somewhat displeased with us because we do not offer them the immediate possibility of putting theory into practice. But such methods of agitation are nothing more nor less than mere vulgar demagogy. Preobrazensky's proceedings, too, are simply explicable by the lack of more serious arguments.

Demagogy Must Cease.

In a country of Russia's dimensions, in which there are so few Marxists, so few people who can read and write properly, in which there is such a tremendous demand for people possessing a real knowledge—to stand up before youthful students in such a country and to declare to them: After you have passed thru this university, you will find no opportunity for the application of our knowledge—this is mere vulgar demagogy.

It is no great feat to attract by such cheap bait those strata of our students whose petty bourgeois ideology is still very strong. These methods remind us almost too strongly of the similar methods practiced by the right wing of international socialism. I believe that I have no need to prove this.

(To Be Continued Friday.)

LETTERS POUR IN PRAISING DAILY WORKER

All Sections Laud Our Militant Daily

From all sections of this country and Canada letters are pouring in commending the DAILY WORKER on its fine work in rallying the militant workers in the fight against capitalism. From out the prisons of California and Leavenworth, from the Texas range country, from Canadian coal mines and Ohio pottery towns come letters declaring appreciation for what America's first Communist Daily is doing.

"The DAILY WORKER ought to penetrate the skulls of the Dubbs," writes Louis Suikert from Cincinnati. "It is a humdinger". "I like the paper fine", we hear from W. A. Walker of Centerville, Iowa. "It sure ought to jar the workers loose from the elephant and donkey parties."

Texas Represented.

"You are certainly getting out a good paper," comes word from J. Stidham of Anona, Texas. "It has the ring of militancy that should appeal to every worker who may chance to read it. Aren't you doing a nice job on that patriotic oil crew at the capital, as well as other patriotic fakers posing as friends of the 'dear people.' Its time the people were rightly informed about the scandals emanating from our 'war for democracy.'"

New England is not to be left without representation on our rapidly growing list of friends. Jim Lacey, of Roxbury, Mass., writes "The paper has exceeded my fondest expectations. My copy is read regularly by seven people, each issue."

Canada On the Job.

The militant workers unite in praising their working class Daily. Samuel Manning writes us from Edmonton, Canada, "I just drop you these few lines wishing you the very best of luck with the DAILY WORKER. It is the best working class paper I have ever seen in this country. If the workers could only get hold of the DAILY WORKER I am sure they would wake up. Here's hoping you keep up the good work and hoping that you double your subscriptions."

The DAILY WORKER does double service in some places, the workers passing it along to others. Eleanor Massey, writing from Kansas City, Mo., tells us, "You should see the squabble that goes on every night. Wages are low here so three of us read the paper every issue. I assure you we are not able to do without it."

Reaches Into Prison.

"Lots of boys up here get 'Novy Mir' and 'Molot'," B. Schidekoff writes us from Timmins, Ontario. "But we are not forgetting our English friends. We are out scouting for subs to the DAILY WORKER."

A class war prisoner in the Western Penitentiary at Pittsburgh, I. Blankenstein writes, "The DAILY WORKER is very fine. Much better than I dared hope to expect."

Crestline, Ohio is a little town, but it has some real Reds in it, as we learn from the letter of William Long, which says, "Some blood thirsty red of discontent has sent me a couple of DAILY WORKERS. The damn things are worse than hope. Those two doses have taken such a hold of me that I can't shake it off. Send me a three months trial treatment. For humanity's sake don't weaken the doses, but keep on delivering a little red pepper with each dose."

The workers are letting the DAILY WORKER know that it is their paper, that it belongs to them and they appreciate it.

THE struggle of the militants in the American labor movement and the needle trades in particular is becoming more bitter from day to day. In their efforts to maintain their power in face of the opposition from the rank and file, the officials of the needle trades industry have often accused the militant left wing of disrupting the union.

Three conventions of the needle trades are about to take place. The Needle Trades Section of the Trade Union Educational League deems it its duty to make clear its position to the workers in our industry and the labor movement in general on the various problems confronting the industry, and the solutions we offer as opposed to the policies of the officialdom and their right wing supporters.

We are militants; they are Gomperists.

We believe in the class struggle, they believe in peace between capital and labor.

United Front Against Bosses

We say that the working masses must organize themselves so as to present a united front in their battle against the enemy; they say that the workers should organize themselves only for the purpose of collective bargaining with the enemy.

We say that union officials must act as leaders of the workers in the struggle to win for them better conditions of living; they say that union officials must act merely as representatives of the workers bargaining for favor from the bosses.

We declare the workers must be organized in order to combat the organized power of the employers; they often try to help the employers organize so as to be able to carry on negotiations between their joint representatives.

We say that a campaign of organization amongst the workers of the industry must be carried on at all times; they regard the work of organization as something "seasonal," to be undertaken when the membership is on the point of disintegration or when negotiations are about to begin with the employers for new agreements.

We hold that the rank and file of the unions must especially be drawn into the work of organization; they believe this work must be done principally by paid agents.

We believe in the activity of the masses; they believe in the diplomatic maneuvers of particular leaders.

We insist upon rank and file control of the unions; they believe the unions must be controlled by paid officials.

Class Education.

We say that the leaders must be bound to the masses by close ties of comradeship; they keep the leaders aloof from the masses.

We maintain, that the workers must be educated and trained for the class struggle; they oppose this because they do not believe any class struggle exists.

We say, that the unions must wage a campaign to eradicate the evils from which the workers suffer; they try to reconcile themselves to all the evils.

We say that the sweat-shop system in the needle industry must be eradicated; they keep on friendly terms with all sorts of organizations of sweat-shop bosses.

We say that the activities of the union must be based upon the needs of the workers' battle for better conditions; they hold that these activities must be suited to the personal ambitions of paid officials.

We stand for the consolidation of trade and craft locals; they want to maintain the useless division into small locals.

We say, that the workers must become active on the political field, and carry on independent political action; they fraternize with all kinds of capitalist politicians and beg favors from them for the workers.

We hold, that our unions must wage a campaign that the unemployed should be guaranteed the necessities of life at the expense of the wealth created by the workers in the industry; they are satisfied with the good promises of the employers covering an entire industry; they make different kinds of agreements in every craft.

Lefts vs. Rights.

We say that the unions must decide upon maximum standards so as to guard the workers in the shops from the speed-up system; they readily accept minimum standards that tax the workers' strength to the limit.

We demand democracy in the unions; they want to perpetuate bureaucracy.

We demand proportionate representation on joint boards and at conventions, they want the small locals, which they can easily control, to overrule the will of the majority of the membership.

We hold that union officials must first and foremost fight for higher wages for the workers; they are interested only in higher wages for the officials of the machine.

We demand freedom of opinion for all tendencies both at union meetings and in the union press; they pursue a policy of suppressing the opinions of their opponents.

We demand unified activity of all groups in the interest of the union; they persecute their opponents and expel them from the union.

We aim to build and strengthen our unions; they follow a policy of demoralizing and disrupting the organization.

We fight for the interests of the rank and file; they fight only for their personal interests at the expense of the workers.

We are the Lefts; they are the Rights.

Carpenters Refuse to Work With Scab Building Material

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 9.—The carpenter's of this vicinity have declared war on the attempted domination of their jobs by the Master Builder's Association, effecting a general strike of 4,500 men. Independent firms have already come to terms, agreeing to pay the carpenters eleven dollars per day. The strike is holding up all construction work being carried on by members of the Master Builder's Association.

One of the main points of dispute is the insistence of the Association that materials used in construction come from non-union firms. The carpenters refuse to work on jobs which require the use of scab material.

TRADE TIES ARE KNITTING ORIENT TO SOVIET RUSSIA

Commerce Thrives with Persia and Far East

(Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, April 9.—The Russo-Oriental Chamber of Commerce has been in existence a year. It has done much to stimulate trading activities between the Union of Soviet Republics and the countries of the East.

During the war other countries contrived to get possession of eastern markets which had previously been dependent on Russian trade. The resumption of large scale Russian trade with the Eastern countries is very important from the point of view of helping to save the latter from economic and even political exploitation by monopolist Western nations.

Persia at Baku Fair.

The chamber has been most successful in stimulating Russian trade with Persia. At the Baku fair, for instance, Persian exhibits totalled 2,820 tons in 1923, compared with 440 tons in 1922. Persian traders purchased $450,000 worth of Russian goods, 25 per cent of the total Russian goods sold at the fair in 1923.

At the Nijni-Novgorod fair, 76 Persian wholesale traders were represented in 1923, compared with 29 in 1922, 20 in 1914, and 23 in 1913. While the total quantity of goods exhibited at the fair was 10 per cent larger in 1923 than in 1922, the amount of Persian goods exhibited was eight times as great as in the previous year. Business men from Eastern countries in general bought goods to the value of more than $500,000 at the fair.

The establishment in Persia of the Russo-Persian Bank resulted from representations made by the chamber, which was also largely responsible for the organization of the Russian section of the Teheran exhibition, to which 17,000 Russian exhibits were sent. It has done much to stimulate trade with Bokhara, Khorassan and Afghanistan. Plans for the development of trade with Turkey are now being considered, and a Russian delegation is about to be sent to Angora.

Displace U. S. and England.

In the Far East, trade with Mongolia has been restored, largely at the expense of Chinese, British and American interests. Commercial relations have been resumed with Western China, which is an important source of supply of many raw materials. Business men from Western China were prominent at the Nijni-Novgorod fair. There is a promising market for Russian cotton goods, sugar, oil, matches, goloshes and crockery. It is interesting to recall that in 1913 Russian exports to Western China amounted to 2,192,000 roubles, and imports to 5,129,000 roubles.

During the working year 1922-23, Russian trade with Eastern countries amounted to nearly 40 per cent of the pre-war figure.

Russ Winter Crops Are Satisfactory; Acreage Increased

(Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, April 9.—The general condition of the winter crops is satisfactory all over the Union of Soviet Republics, according to the latest data collected by the People's Commissariat of Agriculture. Alone the middle Volga area gives rise to some apprehension owing to the lack of sufficient snow or rain. The total sown area exceeds by 12 per cent last year's sowings.

Frankenstein Gives Russ Singers O. K., Even in Gypsy Role

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Ivan Dnieproff, tenor of the Russian opera company, sang at a concert held in Pilsen Hall under the direction of Jack Pfefer last Sunday night. Dnieproff, tho a Russian, sings many Italian opera roles, and sings them with a spirit and fire difficult to find in many another operatic tenor. He sang arias from "Martha" and "Tosca" in a way that leaves the tenors of the San Carlo and Chicago companies far behind. Dnieproff has been engaged to sing Italian and French operas with the Chicago next season, where he will fill the long felt want of an adequate lyrical tenor.

Olga Pozello, Russian balladist, occupied most of the program. Her style of singing the sentimental songs she chose reminds one much of the famous Isa Kremer. Tho her voice is a trifle harsh in quality, her interpretation, which manages to stay away from the banal tho it is sentimental enough, makes up for that.

Gabriel Krizanovski and Mme. Pozello sang for the first time in Chicago a duet arranged by themselves from Russian gypsy folk songs. They were not what one expects of gypsy songs, for they were of the lingering sweetness, long enduring sort of sentimental ballad. But the sweetness was not prolonged to the sour stage.

The program was rounded out by Ida Divanoff, a violinist with a big tone, and dramatic qualities of interpretation.

Australian Labor Leader Denounces Naval Base Plans

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Apr. 9.—In a special interview for the DAILY WORKER, M. Charlton, leader of the Labor Party in the Australian federal parliament, denounced the proposal to commit Australia to the building of a naval base at Singapore. He also protested against Prime Minister Bruce telling the world that Australia is behind the building of the naval base, when the people of Australia have never been consulted. The Singapore naval base, planned by the late Tory government of England, has been dropped by the MacDonald Labor government.

Charlton said that Australia had always retained separate defense, brought into being her own navy, and had declined to contribute toward the cost of the British navy.

ANTI-MUSSOLINI MEETING HALTED IN PENNSY TOWN

Constitution Is a Joke in Mt. Carmel

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 9.—Interference with an anti-Fascist meeting by the officials of Mt. Carmel, Pa., brought a protest today from the American Civil Liberties Union, sent to Chief Burgess Walter Kozlowski, and the announcement that another meeting would soon be held there to test the right of free speech. The Union called upon Burgess Kozlowski to furnish police protection "so that the meeting may proceed in a lawful and orderly manner in accordance with American traditions of free speech and assemblage." Court action will be taken if necessary, the Union declared.

Protest To Giff.

A protest was also sent to Governor Gifford Pinchot, enclosing press reports of the case and requesting him to take such action as he could under the law. The press reports show that Italians supporting the Fascist government secured the co-operation of the mayor and the police department in preventing the meeting.

"This is one of a number of recent instances of the sort in Pennsylvania," the Civil Liberties Union declared in a statement issued today. "Pennsylvania is at present the one state in the country where such arbitrary interference with meetings is frequent. The mayor of Wilkes-Barre recently interfered with a peaceful meeting called to praise one foreign premier; now the mayor of Mt. Carmel interferes with a peaceful meeting called to criticize another foreign premier. The Constitution guarantees to American citizens the right to discuss their own government in any way they like. They have surely the right to discuss foreign governments. The action of Burgess Kozlowski and Chief of Police Morgan is wholly without warrant in law, public morals or common sense."

Youth Views

By HARRY GANNES

Number of Child and Youth Workers Still Grows.

All available reports show a rapid increase in the number of youth and child workers. The thirty-eight per cent increase reported by the United States department of labor in the past few months nowhere near gives a true picture of the situation of youth labor.

Since the close of the war, the school attendance of the youth has become exceedingly lax, and with this the tendency to employ more and more youth 14 years of age and under is growing pronounced.

No action has been taken on the pending useless bills in Congress either for the abolition of child labor or the passing of a constitutional amendment "with a view of prohibiting child labor."

Strong oposition has been shown to any attempts to better the condition of the working children right in the congressional committee investigating the child labor constitutional amendments.

There is but little chance of even these lip-service measures passing in the present Congress. Every opportunity is given the capitalists and employers of child labor to talk and act against the bill while very little is being done really to get the facts of the exploitation of the children. Senator Medill McCormick, who parades as one in favor of the constitutional amendment, announces that no more information is needed on the subject, while at the same time, hundreds upon hundreds of child labor employers and their representatives appear before the committee in charge of the subject and urge that the measure in favor of the children be not passed.

This grim game of hide-and-seek with the lives of the working children will undoubtedly go on so long as the workers are limited in their expression against the sweating of children to Gompers and men of his stamp.

Before anything real can be done, a farmer-labor party based on the real needs of the workers and farmers, must come into existence. The agitation against child labor becomes a strong point in the argument for a class farmer-labor party. To expect anything whatever from Gompers or the bunch of robbers now in charge of the lives and health of the little children is to hope for the impossible from the enemies of the true interests of the American working youth and child laborers.

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

III.

THE AGITATOR IN JAIL.

FOR in that month, John Brown accomplished more for abolition than even the stern deeds of Kansas had effected. He had put by the sword forever, and now for a month took up the pen and made it as powerful a weapon. He wrote innumerable letters to Northern friends and they were published and read everywhere. Their tone was Christ-like; no longer was Brown the militant captain in the field, but the sweet, patient martyr waiting for his end in tranquil joy. In many letters he repeats the statement that he is glad to die; that his death is of more value to the cause than ever his life could have been. This was no vainglorious hysterical gesture with John Brown; he was calmly certain of it; he slept peacefully as a child at night, and wrote his letters by day, secure in his tranquil wisdom. Friends were planning an attempt to rescue him, but he forbade them to try, for he really felt that his death was necessary. "I am worth now infinitely more to die, than to live," he said.

He Goes To His Death.

And in his letters he gave Americans his last warning on the slavery question. He told them it must be settled; it could not go on. His letters were so strong, manly, and yet so touching, that even the jailor wept as he censored them in the course of his duties. As Wendell Phillips said, the million hearts of his countrymen had been melted by that old Puritan soul.

With absolute equanimity, John Brown wrote his will, wrote his last few letters to his family, determined the coffin in which he was to be buried, and the inscription on the family monument, said farewell to his fellow prisoners and jail keepers. On the morning of December 2nd he stood calmly on the steps of the scaffold and gazed about him. Before leaving his cell he had handed to another prisoner the following last and uncompleted message:

"I, John Brown, am now quite certain that the crimes of this guilty land will never be purged away but with blood. I had, as I now think, vainly flattered myself that without much bloodshed it might be done."

The Trap Is Sprung.

Now, as he looked about, he could see massed beyond the fifteen hundred soldiers Virginia had felt necessary for this execution, the hazy outlines of the Blue Ridge mountains. The sun was shining; the sky was blue, and his heart was at peace. "This is a beautiful country," he said. "I never had the pleasure of really seeing it before." He walked with perfect composure up the steps, watched by the eyes of the soldiery and officialdom of slave-holding Virginia. They saw not a tremor in his face or body: even when the cap was drawn over his head, his arms pinioned at the elbows, the noose slipped around his neck. He had refused to have the solace of any ministers, for they believed in slavery, and he told them he did not regard them as Christians. He needed no man's solace; he was braver than any one there. "Shall I give you the signal when the trap is to be sprung?" said a friendly sheriff. "No, no," the serene old man answered, "just get it over quickly."

Hugo's Prediction.

And quickly enough, it was all over for John Brown. The trap was sprung; his body hung between heaven and earth. In the painful silence that followed, the voice of Colonel Preston declaimed solemnly, the official epitaph, "So perish all such enemies of Virginia! All such enemies of the Union! All such foes of the human race!"

That was the verdict of the South, still infatuated and blinded by its slave system. But on the other side of the Mason-Dixon line such men were pronouncing a different verdict on John Brown, and on the other side of the Atlantic, the greatest man of letters in Europe, Victor Hugo, was saying:

"In killing Brown, the Southern States have committed a crime which will take its place among the calamities of history. The rupture of the Union will fatally follow the assassination of Brown. As for John Brown, he was an apostle and a hero. The gibbet has only increased his glory, and made him a martyr."

Are We For LaFollette?

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

THIS question is one which has recently been presented to the Party in a very pressing form.

One of the Party branches in the West sent to the National Office an enthusiastic letter announcing that a "LaFollette-for-President" club had been organized and that the Party members had captured control of the organization. The branch further announced that an intensive campaign to spread the "LaFollette-for-President" clubs over the entire city and county would be undertaken.

There may be other Party branches which have similar ideas in regard to our position in relation to LaFollette and it is therefore necessary to discuss the matter thoroly in order to prevent other units of the organization from going off on such wild-goose chases as that of the branch referred to.

Economic Forces at Work.

In discussing the conditions which made a proletarian revolution possible, Lenin said that there were two conditions, the first being that the bourgeoisie could no longer rule and the second the will-to-power of the proletariat.

The conditions which make it possible for the capitalists rule are created by the economic forces developed within the capitalist system. During and after the world war these forces made their appearance in a more or less developed form in practically every capitalist country. The war disarranged the whole capitalist structure of production. It created enormous burdens of taxation in every capitalist country. The consequences of this situtation are that the struggle between economic groups in capitalist society has been sharpened tremendously thru each group trying to escape the sacrifices made necessary to pay the cost of the heavy economic burden created by the war.

The result of the sharpened economic conflict reflects itself in the political struggle. In place of a more or less homogeneous ruling capitalist class, each economic group within the capitalist system which has divergent economic interests, organizes itself for the political struggle. The result is that the centralized capitalist ruling power breaks up into many struggling groups, which, while they continuously endeavor to combine against the working class, find themselves forced apart again thru the pressure of their distinct economic interests.

The continuous changes from government to government in Germany, the country which has to meet the greatest burden, economically, on account of the war, represents this process at work. This situation in England is developing along this line, with the added factor that under the pressure of a growing revolutionary movement the capitalists find it politically wise to permit a pseudo-working class government to rule for the present.

In the United States.

While the United States suffers least as a result of the world war, the sharpened economic struggle has become apparent here as well as in European countries. There is a growing movement on the part of both the lower middle class, the small business men, the shopkeepers and well-to-do farmers and on the part of the working class to challenge the centralized capitalist ruling power in this country. This movement expresses itself in the Third Party movement supported by the lower middle class and the class Farmer-Labor party supported by the exploited farmers and workers.

These two movements are not separate and distinct; they are intermingled with admixtures of Third Party elements in the class Farmer-Labor movement and working class elements in the Third Party movement.

There is, however, one point of agreement between the two movements. Both center their hopes upon the leadership of LaFollette as a candidate for president. Masses of farmers and workers who are supporting the June 17th Convention and who organizationally are for a Farmer-Labor Party are for LaFollette for president as well as the small business men, the professional groups, the aristocracy of labor, etc., which support the Third Party movement.

Our Policy.

Our Party recognizes this situation. It is endeavoring to fit its policies so as to meet this situation. Does that mean that we share the illusions of the masses of workers, farmers, professional men, small business men, etc., who look to LaFollette as the Moses who will lead them out of the economic wilderness which the ruling capitalist has created for them. Certainly if we shared these illusions we would have no right to call ourselves Communists. If circumstances develop so that our Party will find itself supporting the candidacy of LaFollette for president it certainly will not be because we have any such illusions. It will not be because we believe that LaFollette will materially change the exploitation of the economic lot of the workers and farmers from what it is under capitalism today.

We know that LaFollette as president, with the capitalist system in existence, would be the administrative head of a capitalist government. We know that such a government would have to serve the interests of the capitalists, just as the Ramsay MacDonald government in England today is ruling for and in the interests of the capitalists. There might be some slight softening of the capitalist rule, some modification of harshness, but there would not be and could not be any change from existing conditions which would materially infringe upon the interests of the capitalist class. This in itself is an answer to the question, "Are we for LaFollette?"

We are not and cannot be for LaFollette because we are Communists, and when we say we are Communists, we say that the road to emancipation of the workers and exploited farmers from the oppression and exploitation of capitalism is thru a Proletarian Revolution, Soviets, and the Dictatorship of the Proletariat and not thru a LaFollette government.

Our Propaganda.

It is our duty as a Communist Party to openly say this to the working class. We must tell the workers and exploited farmers now that LaFollette, as president, will have to serve capitalism and will not serve the workers and exploited farmers. We cannot recede a hair's breadth from this position. Any other position on our part would mean that we would no longer be a Communist Party.

Will We Support LaFollette If He Is Nominated?

What has been said above, does, not, however, answer the question whether we shall support LaFollette if he is nominated on a Farmer-Labor ticket.

Should that come about, and it seems very likely, then we will unquestionably support LaFollette in the election campaigns along with the masses of workers and farmers who are behind the Farmer-Labor Party movement.

This is, of course, something quite different from saying that we are for LaFollette and from going out and forming "LaFollette-For-President" clubs.

We are against LaFollette. We know that the political victory of the workers and exploited farmers lies over the dead body (politically), of LaFollette. We will say this to the working class of this country. If, in spite of what we say, the masses of workers and exploited farmers who are not yet Communists, insist upon nominating LaFollette and placing their hope upon him, we will not desert them in the struggle. We will go along with them and vote for their candidate, but at every stage of development we will point out that their hopes are illusions.

A Difficult Policy.

Unquestionably the policy which we must follow is a difficult one. It is not easy to strongly criticise and give support at the same time.

It is much easier to do what the western Party branch did, that is, to become an enthusiastic supporter of LaFollette and help to organize "LaFollette-for-President" clubs.

There is a great danger that unless our Party members clearly understand our policy in regard to LaFollette that other Party units will develop similar tendencies.

Even tho the policy of vigorous criticism, of continual exposure of the futility of his program while at the same time we are part of a United Front movement and give our support to the candidacy of LaFollette, may be a difficult one, that is the policy we must follow.

Let no Party member get the idea that we are for LaFollette because we may find ourselves supporting LaFollette as part of the Farmer-Labor United Front. Our central task is not to be for LaFollette, but to divorce the workers and exploited farmers from LaFollette.

8,000,000 People in Grip Of Biggest Combine

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Domination of the electric power industry by giant combines which levy tribute on millions is crowding hundreds of small municipal electric lighting plants out of business, according to reports of state public utility commissions which furnish the private ownership advocates with choice morsels for propaganda.

Sixteen of these privately owned power systems today reach out their tentacles to include communities with a population of more than 43,000,000. In other words, more than one-third of the entire country comes within their sphere of industries. They are extending and combining to such an extent that within a very few years this most vital source of power will be entirely engrossed by New York financial interests.

Control Workshops of World.

During March, President H. H. Porter, of the American Water Works and Electric Company, announced a new $315,000,000 superpower combine embracing the "workshop of the world." This newly integrated system covers the area between Cleveland and Erie on the north, the coal fields along the Kentucky-West Virginia state line south of Charleston and a point about 25 miles west of Baltimore, as well as the entire Pittsburgh district. According to Porter the combine will mean cheaper power and fewer labor troubles.

Th following table shows the 16 big private power combines and the population of the communities served by each:

1. Detroit Edison Co., 1,500,000.
2. General Gas & Electric Co., 1,250,000
3. Insull Group, 7,975,000
4. Public Service of New Jersey, 2,301,832.
5. Standard Gas and Electric Corp., 2,375,000
6. Pacific Gas and Electric Co., 1,715,959
7. Northern States Power, 1,213,000.
8. Consolidated Gas of New York, 4,000,000.
9. Brooklyn Edison, 2,000,000.
10. American Gas and Electric, 1,200,000.
11. Stone and Webster Companies, 1,500,000

Such power units serve communities averaging 2,700,000 population. They extend their tentacles into every state of the union. Nothing remains for the isolated municipal plant which once saved consumers from the individual private plant but surrender to the greater economy of combination.

Municipal Plants Go Under.

The metropolitan press hails with glee each surrender which it falsely treats as a victory for the principle of private ownership. Dealing with the abandonment of more than 20 municipal enterprises in Michigan during 1923 the Wall Street Journal fairly shouts "Municipal Power Fails in Michigan—Referendums Show Private Company's Popularity." Similar reports from Nebraska read "That municipal ownership once strong in Nebraska is rapidly losing ground is evidenced by the number of municipalities which have abandoned their electric light plants and contracted with the Nebraska Gas and Electric Company, a subsidiary of the Continental Gas and Electric Corporation."

The report of the New York state committee on public utility information stating that more than 660 municipal utilities have been abandoned or sold during the last few years gets the headline "Municipal Plants Disappearing Fast—Lower Production Cost of Privately Owned Power Stations Causes Abandonments." But this New York report goes on to show that it is the economy of the larger generating units and not private ownership which really counts.

The economy of such large systems to the consumer would be even greater if the enormous private profits of the present private ownership could be eliminated.

(The extent of these profits and the way in which they have been eliminated in Canada will be told in two subsequent articles.)

Opponents of Fascisti Elect 160 Despite Black Shirt Violence

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, April 9.—One hundred and sixty members of the opposition managed to break thru the wall of violence and murder which protected the Fascisti in the recent election. The new Italian chamber will thus have 375 Fascisti members and 160 minority members composed of 65 Socialists, 39 Catholics, 17 Liberal democrats, and a few Republicans and other small factions. The peasants party returned two members to the new chamber. Opposition leaders declare the Fascisti government surely would have fallen if the Fascisti had refrained from supressive measures during the election.

Robots in "R. U. R." Cannot Even Hear The Whistle Blow

Three halls have now been engaged for the new Labor Production of Karel Capek's great Robot melodrama "R. U. R." The play will have its first Chicago presentation on Sunday afternoon, April 20, in North Side Turner Hall 820 N. Clark street. A second performance will be given Wednesday evening, April 23, in C. S. P. S. Hall, 1126 W. 18th street. There will also be a Pullman performance in Strumail Hall.

Several innovations have been introduced in the Labor Production of "R. U. R." which represent daring departures from the method used by the Theatre Guild in its staging of the play. No liberties have been taken with the author's manuscript. On the contrary, certain devices of setting and costume have been adopted which will serve to bring out the real meaning of Karel Capek's significant dialogue. The production will be complete in every detail. The acting will be comparable to the high standard set by the Theatre Guild in its performances here.

The cast has been rehearsing now for several weeks, and the players are beginning to fit themselves into their parts naturally and easily. The Robots have become imbued with the spirit of their role, that it has actually become necessary to blow a big, hoarse factory whistle so that they will know when to stop work."

Tickets for all performances sell for 75 cents. They can be secured from the Labor Defense Council, 151 W. Washington street, Room 307.

Heavy Corn Exports From Russia Affect Agricultural Prices

(By Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, April 9—Due to a notable rise of prices on agricultural produce—which rise may itself be explained in part by the growth of corn exports from Russia, the buying capacity of the rural population has considerably increased during the last few months. This, in its turn, has had a favorable effect on the industrial turnover in towns. However, the lack in the broad monetary circulation of small units of small stable currency has up to now prevented the stabilisation of prices, as the buyers wished by a fictitious raising of prices to be insured against the depreciation of currency.

Under such conditions, the State is now, in the interest of the financial reform which is actually being effected, undertaking economic and administrative measures intended to stabilize and bring goods prices to a lower level in an orderly way. Accordingly, the system has been set up of regulating prices in the chief industrial centers, in Moscow—where regulations have already been issued fixing bread prices, Leningrad (Petrograd), the Donetz Basin, Baku (Caspian Sea), etc. At the same time, what may be called a "goods intervention", operated on the market by the Government on bread lines, and the concentration in the several districts of large amounts of goods, are undertaken with a view to maintaining the index of regulated prices.

This system of price regulating is being met sympathetically among both official and private business spheres, where it is expected it will ensure the success of the financial reform.

Russian State Bank Ready to Handle Big British-Italian Trade

(Rosta News Agency)

MOSCOW, April 9.—The Rosta News Agency learns in competent circles that the British and Italian de jure recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics finds the Russian State Bank well prepared for the enlargement of its foreign department business. It is being remarked, in this connection, that the foreign operations of the state bank have attained considerable dimensions during the last few months. The bank has established correspondent relations with a hundred of the largest banks of the world.

Operations in "Chervontz" (10 gold rouble bank notes) are carried on more especially with organizations and firms interested in the purchase in the Soviet republics of raw export materials. Accordingly, the largest share of "Chervontz" sold by the bank falls to England, where about 80 per cent of the "Chervontz" have been sold; with the United States, the Scandinavian countries, Germany and others coming next.

Even Rotarians Take Wallop at Mars in Little Canadian Town

(By The Federated Press)

LONDON, Ont., April 9.—"During the war the church preached just as much Christianity as the state would allow. She found that, having supported a military form in peace time, she could not effect a sudden change in the stress of war conditions."

This statement was made by Prof. A. G. Dorland of the University of Western Ontario at a meeting called to advocate the outlawry of war. The meeting was attended by representatives of the city council, the city churches, the Kiwanis, Rotary, and Lions clubs, the Jewish people, and the Trades and Labor council. A resolution was adopted pledging the organization represented "to proclaim the outlawry of war as a method of settling international disputes."

DETROIT PLANS VERY BUSY WEEK, APRIL 13 TO 20

Ruthenberg, Trachtenberg, Dunne to Speak

DETROIT, Mich., April 9.—The eight-day period beginning Sunday, April 13th, and ending Sunday, April 20th, is crammed with events of great interest to the Party members and sympathizers in Detroit and of vital importance to the Party.

The importance of Secretary C. E. Ruthenberg's speech on "The Decisive Stage of Our Labor Party Policy" neds no comment. All members are instructed to attend and others who may be interested are invited.

Many Lectures.

Comrade Trachtenberg's account of conditions in the two republics, Russia and Germany, will be very instructive as to the relative merits of revolutionary action and class collaboration from the workers' point of view. Altho Comrade Trachtenberg is a lecturer on social issues, his talk will be descriptive of the objective conditions attained by the working class in the two countries, as a result of diverging policies.

On Saturady evening, April 19th, "Bill" Dunne will preside over a banquet which has for its objectives, first, to provide those attenting with a sumptuous dinner and an enjoyable evening, and, secondly, to defray part of the cost of a new and complete banqueting equipment for the House of the Masses.

Sunday afternoon Comrade Dunne will speak on "Oil, and the Germs of a Labor Party," relating the importance of the disillusionment of the people as a result of the exposure of our oily administration, and the drive for a Farmer-Labor government.

All Attend.

We urge all readers to attend these meetings. As the meetings are held in various halls we caution all readers to note carefully the subject, speaker, time and place of meetings so as to be at the right place at the right time. The meetings are as follows:

"The Decisive Stage of Our Labor Party Policy," C. E. Ruthenberg, at Finnish Hall, 5963, 14th St., Sunday April 13th at 2:30 p. m.

"What I Saw in Russia and Germany," A. Trachtenberg, at House of the Masses, 2101 Gratiot Ave. Tuesday April 15th, at 8:00 p. m.

"Banquet, Dunne, Toastmaster," House of the Masses, 2101 Gratiot Ave. Saturday April 19th, 6:30 till midnight.

"Oil and the Germs of the Labor Party," William F. Dunne, at Auto Workers' Temple, 156 E. Adams, Sunday April 20th, 2:30 p. m.

Two Factions of Armenian Section In Boston Combined

The first results of the Boston convention, Feb. 22, which was held for the purpose of unifying the two sections of the Armenian workers and branches of the Workers Party have been gained in the city of Boston. The Branch of the former Armenian Federation of the Workers Party and that of the Armenian Workers Party there, met on March 24 and adopted the following resolution:

"In conformity with the decision of the Central Executive Committee of Workers Party of America in regard to the unity of the branches of the two Armenian Sections, the two Boston branches in a joint session called by the City Central Committee secretary on March 24, 1924, at Paine Memorial Hall, Boston, Mass., unanimously declare the union of the two separate branches into one unit."

The two branches will function hereafter as the Boston Branch of the Workers Party in the Armenian Section. The example of the Boston Branch should be followed by other groups of the Armenian Workers organization.

St. Louis Bakery Workers Demand $3 to $7 Increase

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, April 9.—The 1,400 union bakery workers in this city are negotiating for an increase of wages. The union asks $3 a week more. It is also demanded that foremen in small shops draw the same pay as in larger shops. This would increase foremen in some cases $7 a week. Another demand is that shifts which begin work before 6 a. m. or work after 6 p. m. shall receive the night shift scale of pay, which is $2 above the day rate. The present wage scale ranges from $28 to $42 a week, class of work governing.

The organized employers are fighting the union's demands, declaring that to grant the increase would necessitate an increase in the price of bread, which the employers say the "public" would not stand for. To any one who may believe that story the union workers cite the recent indictment of the bread trust by Basil Manly, in which the bakery combine was shown up as guilty of flagrant profiteering in bread.

Rationalizing Reaction

That section of the Socialist Party that of which the New Leader is an expression is very pessimistic about the radicalism of the farmers. It resurrects the hoary doctrine according to which the present discontent in agricultural sections is caused solely by low prices for farm products and proceeds upon the theory that there is only a temporary dislocation of markets—in fact that the widespread bankruptcy of the farmers is merely a passing phase, that prosperity will return.

We do not intend here to do more than point out the typically false premise on which this conclusion is based—the premise that American agriculture is not undergoing a fundamental crisis with the farmers losing their ownership of the land—because we are more interested in the studied attempt made to discredit the farmer-labor movement of the northwest. With this mass movement that is calling the June 17 convention the Socialist party has seen fit not to co-operate. At first the reason was that the Communists were identified with it, but now the process of rationalization has gone a little further. Farmers are unreliable politically, says this socialist sage, they have voted for democrats and republicans and only the industrial workers can be trusted.

This might be mistaken for a very crude and inadequate Marxism if it were not for the fact that the Socialist party is supporting the Cleveland meeting called for July 4 by the Conference for Progressive Political Action—an organization whose sole justification for existence is that it endorses candidates on both capitalist party tickets and is depending upon that organization—controlled by trade union bureaucrats—to launch a national labor party.

Bankruptcy cannot extend further than this—rejection of a mass rank and file movement of workers and farmers in the hope that a national labor party will be established by the most reactionary set of trade union officials in the world, officials whose every act and utterance is a confesssion of subserviency to middle class and capitalist politicians.

Right today the Conference for Progressive Political Action is split between the democratic and republican parties; the breach will grow wider after the old party conventions and the uttermost concession to the mass demand for a farmer-labor party will be the endorsement of LaFollette as an independent candidate.

The editorial as a whole is an admission that the Hillquits and O'Neals are in the Gompers camp, body and soul, and that the remnants of the Socialist party, if any survive thru the year, will be willing to join with the workers and farmers in a class farmer-labor party when the bureaucracy of the labor unions is ready and not before.

South African Unrest

Fate has been a little slow in overtaking Jan Smuts, the Woodrow Wilson of South Africa, but has at last caught up with him.

His cabinet has been forced to resign and he is now confronted with a solid opposition composed of the Nationalist party and the South African Labor party—a bloc whose unity is the result of the tyrannical rule of Smuts, long the darling of the liberals the world over because of his advocacy of the league of nations.

Smuts was one of the leaders of the Boers in the war against Great Britain but sold himself to the British imperialists when the struggle was over and has been the tool used in oppressing his own countrymen—one of the slimy individuals whom Great Britain has always found purchaseable in her colonies and without whom she could not rule.

The bloody suppression of the strike of the South African miners in 1922 alienated the workers and since that time the nationalist movement has been gaining strength. The last Smuts majority was secured by gerrymandering and trickery, but the coalition of the labor and nationalist parties in the coming election will make the success of such tactics more difficult. The victory of the Labor party in the motherland has given great impetus to the South African labor movement and it will not be surprising if the result of the coming election is a government much more advanced than the present personnel of the British cabinet.

The developments in South Africa are of additional interest because they corroborate the contention that in India, Egypt, Australia and South Africa the colonial labor movements, because of the great advance made by colonial industry during the war and the consequent lessening of dependence upon England, are rapidly losing their imperialistic outlook and acting as independent units.

Poland Quits Poincare

The Polish government has not shown any unusual brilliancy but it has apparently had enough sense to realize that backing Roumania, at the behest of France, in her Bessarabian adventure, is an undertaking whose risks are wholly out of proportion to the possible returns.

There is in Bessarabia at present a strong movement for independence and union with Russia as an autonomous republic. The Roumanian boyars, vassals of France, will probably try to suppress the movement by force and if this attempt is made the Red Army will come to the support of the Bessarabians who were subjugated by Roumania during the period of turmoil following the Russian revolution. The Bessarabians naturally prefer the opportunities offered them under a Soviet system to the bitter exploitation to which they are subjected by the Roumanian aristocracy and the struggle in Bessarabia, therefore, has an economic as well as a nationalist foundation.

The absolute dependence of the Poincare government upon the House of Morgan, shown by its agreement to conditions for the recent loan that make further lavish military expenditures difficult to negotiate, has already had its effect in Eastern Europe. The puppet states along the Russian frontier were willing to take French money and munitions for war on Soviet Russia when she was weak and French militarism was sweeping the little states into line. Today the situation is entirely changed. Soviet Russia is the first power on the continent and neither Poland or the little entente cares to further irritate her.

The refusal of Poland to back Roumania is probably the first step in the dissolution of French hegemony in Eastern Europe; it is doubtful if France will ever receive anything in return for the millions of francs expended to weld a ring of iron around Germany and cut off Soviet Russia from the rest of Europe by a "cordon sanitaire."

The Polish workingclass has been showing such militancy of late despite the terroristic activities of the government that a war against Russia in behalf of the Roumanian Bessarabian claims might easily result in outright revolt. It is the peculiar quality of the Soviet government that it grows stronger in proportion to the increase of workingclass strength in the capitalist nations and no tactics of the capitalist class can counteract this phenomenon.

The alliances that France has consummated in Eastern Europe, as is the case with the Franco-Polish-Roumanian pact, will be found to be worthless paper agreements when actual warfare against Soviet Russia looms as a result of them.

The Red Army of the Russian workers and peasants and the Soviet power are proving themselves the greatest peacemakers in all Europe.

Encouraging The Legion

The core of any army is still human and horseflesh, and all the new devices, guns and machines, gas and flyers, are simply supplementary arms, battle preliminaries, rather than the essentials of combat.

The world has just been informed of the invention by a Danish scientist of an automatic steel "soldier" which can fire a rifle or a machine gun. It would be interesting to learn what would be decided by a battle between two such "armies."—"Scrutator", in the Chicago Tribune.

We submit the above to console the members of the American Legion and other lovers of war who may, in view of the publicity given mechanical devices of destruction, begin to believe that there will be no need of human sacrifices in the next war. We would want no misapprehension of this kind to deprive us of the most amusing and asinine spectacle ever furnished—that of the ivory-domed legionaires informing the war-mongers of the ineffable joy it gives them to be made responsible for furnishing the requisite amount of cannon-fodder. The pacifists, as a rule, have but little sense of humor but we have seen several of late who were smiling broadly at the "rebukes" administered by the loud-voiced dupes of American imperialism.

Our Position on Hiram

Hiram Johnson had tough luck in Michigan and elsewhere. His chief difficulty seems to be that no one can discern the difference between him and Coolidge. Coolidge is credited with breaking a policemen's strike but Hiram went out of his way to denounce Tom Mooney and has taken credit for the appointment of William J. Burns. These achievements would give him an even break with Cal only Cal has the machinery.

As far as we are concerned we have watched Hiram's efforts to show that he is entitled to the leadership of the republican party with much sympathy and consider that he has proved his contention with everything except votes. We believe that the gamblers, bootleggers, white-slavers, oil stock salesmen, hop-peddlers and other criminals who put over Harding for the capitalists in 1920 will make no mistake by picking either Johnson or Coolidge.

Like the woman whose drunken husband had a fight with a bear, we feel that it is the first fight we ever saw in which we do not care who wins.

All we have to say about the primary election in which Governor Small was re-nominated against the opposition of the world's greatest newspaper is that this opposition was about the only asset he had.

Reformism In Full Swing

By J. T. MURPHY

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Interest in the British labor movement is intensified by the setback given the Ramsay MacDonald labor government in parliament on Monday. In order to understand the British situation you must read these articles by J. T. Murphy, British Communist and trade unionist. They will appear in the DAILY WORKER during the remainder of this week. Today's installment is as follows:

• • • •

The 48-Hour Week.

THE Government has practically committed itself to the ratification of the Washington Convention establishing a legal 48-hour week in industry. The term industry exempts in this case agriculture, transport by sea, and commerce, under which head comes large sections of the distributive trades. It is rather wide in its application of the 48-hour principle, taking an average over a period of three weeks and permits a nine-hour day for five days when there is a Saturday half holiday. The limit of hours worked may be exceeded in the following circumstances: 1—In case of accident, urgent work to be done to machinery and plant or force majeure. 2—In continuous processes carried on by succession of shifts subject to the condition that the working hours shall not exceed 56 in the week on the average. 3—where by regulation the government may allow (a) permanent exceptions in preparatory and complementary work necessarily done outside the limits laid down for the general working of an establishment and, (b), temporary exceptions "so that establishments may deal with exceptional cases of pressure of work." In the latter case the maximum of additional hours shall be fixed, and overtime at time and a quarter be a minimum rate."

Compromise Terms.

These are typical English qualifications which only an Englishman who is past master at compromising could have drafted. The Washington hours convention was drawn up by a commission of which Tom Shaw, now Minister of Labor, was chairman, and Miss Bondfield was a member. Mr. George Barnes was at the time of the Washington Conference the British government's labor representative and received a special wire from Mr. Lloyd George to sign the Convention.

That it will go thru when Mr. Henderson presents it to Parliament as his first Bill is fairly certain. But the government is striving also for International ratification first to raise its prestige in the International Labor Movement and second as a means of struggle against foreign commercial competition. Only Bulgaria, Czecho-Slovakia, Greece, India and Roumania ratified the convention. Altho Germany, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Spain, Sweden passed eight-hour day legislation, much of it has vanished and Germany especially is seeking to bargain reparations for the ten-hour day. On the other hand of the membership of the Trades Union Congress 2½ millions have the 47 hour week or less. These have been achieved thru trades union action and consequently so far as the big primary industries are concerned the ratification does not make any difference to their hours. But it will mean a lot if ratification can be used to stem the reaction in Europe. It would encourage the workers in Europe and that of course will help British commerce so far as advantages in competition are concerned. Accordingly Miss Bondfield's statement at Geneva can be taken as an indication that the British government will take the initiative in calling an international conference to secure simultaneous ratification. She said: "The British Government would endeavor to fulfil what it regarded as a duty in view of the statements made on its behalf at Washington, and would promote all practical means to secure simultaneous ratification of the convention by the various countries."

Amelioration Offered.

That both the French and the Germans will use the reparations question as a means of fighting the Convention can be taken for certain. But in any case the British Government has nothing to lose even by independent ratification. It introduces no violent change here whilst it will act favorably towards them in Europe.

Now we can sum up the little bill of social amelioration which Labor Government will be able to present the workers and poorer sections of the population. Then we can turn to what it is giving the imperialists.

1. Recognition Soviet Russia.

2. Abolished the "gap" in Unemployed Insurance pay and other annoying features which had been the subject of much unemployed agitation.

3. To the artisans, it will tell of the Rent Control extention, the reduction of rents and the building of cheap houses.

4. To the farmers it will point to the advancement of loans and the extention of the Trades Facilities Act to their industry, the initiative in co-operative farming.

5. To the agricultural Laborers it will point to the restoration of the Agricultural wages boards.

6. To the workers in industry it will point to the ratification of the Washington Convention, the legalizing of the 48-hour week, the alleviation of unemployment by replacements for the Navy, the success of the Courts of Inquiry.

Reformism to Nth Degree.

7. To the unemployed on relief it will recall the Poplar debate and the canceling of the Mond Order.

8. To the women it will point to the removal of certain taxes on food stuffs (yet to be announced in the budget), the proposal for widows' pensions and the extension of insurance to cover many other phases of social life, to their attacks on rents and housings possibly the extention of the purchase to women on same terms as men.

With its left hand it will hand out these things to the poorer classes to prove that its policy of gradualism is a working practical policy. With its right hand it will also make its free will offering in order to prove as Mr. MacDonald and Mr. Henderson declare "that they are not a class party, or that in any sense do they place one class before another, but are indeed really non-party serving the interests of the nation as a whole." So, in this direction too Reformism is in full swing.

The Empire.

The first statement Mr. MacDonald uttered as premier in relation to the Empire was one on India, whereby he secured lavish praise from every capitalist rag in the country. It was a definite warning to the Swarajists of all shades that the British Government would stand no movement of India that thought it was going to get anything by unconstitutional action was mistaken. India would only get self government when the British Parliament permitted it. Later the Labor Lord Olivier made the statement to the effect that India will be administered until 1929 in the manner now in use. In 1929 a Commission of Inquiry will be set up to review the working of the present system of "semi self-government" and say whether what is called the experimental decade has proved that native India is ready for and capable of complete self government, or whether some further period of probation is necessary to make sure that the withdrawal of the British element of authority will not be followed by civil war or widespread anarchy. So the Tories are quite satisfied. When the Prime Minister trounced MacNeil a few days ago it was on his faithlessness to the tradition of "continuity in foreign affairs." That he is carrying this policy thru is evident on the question of Egypt too. The Government has again announced continuity and the Egyptian Nationalists are protesting vigorously. They declare this statement of MacDonald's only strengthens the policy of legalizing "the usurpation of Egyptian rights, inasmuch as the four reserved points grants to Great Britain all the essential powers and domination."

Following Old Imperialist Policy.

In addition the capitalists have nothing to complain of in the way of grants in aid. The Government has agreed to continue the policy of the previous government in relation to the grants to the Sudan Government and have voted a further £3,500,000. This is for the purpose ostensibly at any rate, the development of irrigation and let it be observed according to the Colonial spokesman "which is now for all practical purposes in the hands of the Sudan Plantation syndicate. This syndicate shares the spoils between Itself, the Government, and the planters."

And now for the colonies and more good business. The new Trades Facilities Bill which passed its second reading this week provides that the British government pay, up to a maximum of three-quarters of the interest on any loan raised in this country or the Dominions within the Emipre for the purpose of embarking upon an undertaking of public utility character. The payment is not to amount to more than £1,000,000 in any one year, and the limit which is placed upon payment is five years. the main purpose of this proposal emanating from the Imperial Conference is to stimulate orders for goods from this country and to help to some extent the unemployment from which we are now suffering."

The bosses have no grounds for complaint against Labor's service to the Empire. And now let us see them in action on Foreign Policy.

After the first steps in the direction of the Recognition of Soviet Russia, MacDonald set about what he calls an atmosphere under which peaceful negotiations could be conducted. And then continuity once more again. Whatever he may have said, whatever the Labor Party may have said about the revision of the Versailles treaty, the Labor Government has to say nothing about it. That in effect is the rebuke delivered to Henderson in the Burnley by-election this week for having ventured to speak party politics instead of remembering that he was a member of the Government of the Nation. Henderson said the treaty must be revised. MacDonald says whatever your private opinion may be the government has not declared for that and we must continue where the others left off. So the Labor in office is different to Labor out of office. And now Mr. Henderson has been elected he at once proceeds to make amends and declares, "I go not to serve a party but the Nation. Not to look after particular interests but everybody's interests." And there you are.

So please follow continuity. First the development of the League of Nations. Germany says MacDonald must come into the League and we hope Russia. This week the Reparations tax of 26 per cent on imported goods from Germany has been reduced to 5 per cent. On practically the same day as this decision is made a dispatch is sent to Poincare favorable to stronger military control over German armaments and pointing to a League of Nations control. On the same day in an interview to the Daily News MacDonald projects not only the League of Nations control over the military resources of Germany, but also the Internationalization of the Rhineland under League of Nations control. With regard to Reparations he awaits the Report of the Financial inquiry with a view to drawing America more closely into the arrangements contemplated in order to secure help against France with regard to payment of debt. It will be a case of Britain and America advancing the credits to Germany with the Thomas Railways and other industrials as securities and a struggle with France as to how much she is going to get out of the business. To combat France's military development and to take away the scare which France has always put up concerning military aggression MacDonald proposes the Internationalizing of the Rhineland. To get reparations he proposes the granting of the loan by British and American finance and to get the payments of Debts from France he proposes to jointly work the oracle with the American Government in the final arrangements as to the disbursements arising from German recovery. The League of Nations is to be the cover for the business because as MacDonald says, "it will be much more comfortable even to Germany to feel that she is under the supervision of a collectivity of which she is a part than to be the special victim of some particular nation's control."

To sum up. Instead of a revision of the Treaty of Versailles the Labor Government is going to develop it. Instead of being an instrument for the ending of Imperialism she is going to pull off what Lloyd George was unable to do. She will make a partnership with America to colonize Germany by the same methods that have already been adopted for the colonization of Austria and Hungary. When this account is presented to the capitalists of Britain as the prize for giving the Labor bureaucracy the spoils of office they will have no grounds for complaint.

Reformism is indeed in full swing.

WALL ST. FIXES FRENCH REPARATION POLICY

FEDERAL JURY WILL PASS ON OIL THIEVERY

Case Will Take More Than Ten Days

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Actual presentation of evidence before the Federal Grand Jury called to investigate alleged criminal conspiracy in connection with the oil scandal will begin April 16, government counsel announced here today.

Atlee Pomerene and Owen Roberts, in charge of the case for the government, have completed their case for presentation to the jury, it was learned. A long list of witnesses probably will be called.

George L. Miller, one of the owners of the Miller Brothers "101 Ranch" in Oklahoma, admitted before the Senate Daugherty investigating committee today that he employed John E. Todd, former law partner of Harry M. Daugherty, "to get his case before the attorney general."

The committee dug further into the alleged inactivity of the department of justice in prosecuting the Miller Brothers for return of Indian lands valued at $500,000 which it is charged they obtained by fraudulent means.

A special federal grand jury today is to be impanelled to take up the criminal side of the oil leasing scandal.

Under direction of government counsel, evidence will be presented to the grand jury to show a conspiracy to defraud the United States. Indictments will be sought against five or six persons, it was indicated, including former Secretary of the Interior Fall, whose part in the alleged conspiracy will be presented to the grand jury as that of the person chiefly responsible for the plan to violate the law in turning over naval oil reserves to the Sinclair and Doheny interests.

New Mellon Tax Plan Goes to the Senate; Debate Next Week

WASHINGTON, April 10.— The new Mellon tax bill was formally presented to the Senate today.

Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee, reported out the bill and its provisions were officially made public.

While the income tax, surtax, and inheritance tax provisions are not expected to survive the senate, Republicans are prepared to fight hard for them in order to obtain the best possible compromise. Smoot announced that the bill would be taken up for debate "early next week."

Presentation of the evidence, it was indicated today may take ten days or two weeks.

Even Poison Ivy Spreads.

DETROIT, Mich., April 10.—With American legion members as officers, tho without official American legion participation, a Denby for senator club has been organized in Royal Oak, a suburb of Detroit, and is expected to spread.

Chicago Labor Applies For Strike Parade Permit

TWO MINERS DIE AS MINE GUARDS FIRE ON KENTUCKY UNION MEN

PINEVILLE, Ky., April 10.— Three companies of state militiamen surrounded properties of the Liberty Coal & Coke Company here today following fights between union and non-union workmen in the mines.

Fighting began when mine guards fired on striking union miners and two were killed.

Governor Fields called out the troops last night.

The situation was quiet today, and women and children of miners who found shelter in the courthouse returned to their homes.

OPPOSITION IS DEVELOPING TO FORD'S SCHEME

Senate Committee Is Against His Offer

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Ford offer for Muscle Shoals accepted by the House will meet defeat in the Senate Committee on Agriculture, it appeared today following an informal poll.

Any move to report the measure favorably to the Senate probably will be beaten by an approximate vote of 9 to 8.

Five Senators on a committee of 17 have pledged themselves to defeat Ford. They are Senators Norris, Nebraska; McNary, Oregon; Keyes, new Hampshire; McKinley, Illinois, and Johnson, Minnesota.

Five others are pledged to support Ford. They are Senators Harrison, Mississippi; Heflin, Alabama; Caraway, Arkansas; Smith, South Carolina and Ladd, North Dakota. It appears that Kendrick, Wyoming and Ralston, Indiana, will stand with the Ford forces. Both are democrats.

Capper, Kansas; Gooding, Idaho; Harreld, Oklahoma and probably Ransdell, Louisiana, will vote with Norris, the DAILY WORKER has been informed—giving him enough votes to beat the Ford offer.

Blind Men Working On Piece System Shamefully Robbed

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 10.— Blind workers employed in the institutions at Sydney on piece rates, are paid scandalously low wages. Single men are paid $6 a week and married men get $7.50. Thru overtime and bonuses, some earn between $10 and $15 per week. This is far short of the minimum wage for unskilled workers in New South Wales.

Union officials urge nationalization of the institutions, to be run as business undertakings and not as charitable institutions. Nothing can be done in this direction till a labor government is returned to power in New South Wales.

Germans' Food Rations Only Half Pre-War Period

(By The Federated Press)

BERLIN, April 10.—The statistical office of Germany publishes a table showing the decrease in consumption of foodstuffs in Germany as compared with the pre-war period. These statistics reveal the systematic undernourishment among the workers of Germany.

Here are a few of the striking comparisons made: The German people today consume 3-5 of the pre-war ration of rye bread; 1-2 of wheat bread, rolls and noodles; 1-4 of barley and barley products; 1-2 of meat, and 4-5 of the pre-war ration of potatoes.

Freiheit, Jewish Communist Daily, Celebrates Second Anniversary

Freiheit, the Jewish Communist daily, is this week celebrating its second anniversary season with meetings in all the big cities of the nation.

The Chicago celebration will be held tonight at Orchestra Hall, 220 S. Michigan Blvd., with Alexander Bittleman, J. Louis Engdahl and Morris Backall as speakers, and an elaborate musical program including the Freiheit Singing Society and the Freiheit Mandolin Orchestra.

MONDAY OR TUESDAY TO SEE MARCH

Workers Will Demonstrate In the Busy Loop District

The Chicago Federation of Labor will apply to Mayor Dever today for a permit to hold one of the most spectacular labor parades ever held in Chicago, which will demonstrate to the entire country that organized labor in this city is behind the striking garment workers to the last ditch.

At last taking heed of the growing demand of the rank and file trade unionists that active and aggressive support be given the striking garment workers, the "Committee of 15" has decided to issue a call for the striking garment workers to march next week, probably Monday or Tuesday.

Go Thru Market Street.

The parade will proceed thru the loop district, and will twice march past the "front line trenches" of the Market street picket lines.

The marchers are to carry banners declaring that Sullivan's injunction against picketing is an affront to every working man and woman in the country.

Mass Meeting In Theatre.

Arrangements are being made to hire a large downtown theatre. The historic parade, demonstrating the solidarity of the strikers of Chicago against an illegal injunction which would enslave them to their jobs, after marching thru the downtown district, will enter the theatre in a body. Prominent national labor leaders will denounce the injunction against the garment strikers and will offer any aid from their respective unions desired by the garment workers.

But it will not be the music of the bands nor the nationally known speakers which will receive the most honor at the hands of the rank and file trade unionists of the city. The places of honor will undoubtedly go to the striking garment workers, who in spite of wholesale arrests, police brutalities, and the injunction, have kept the picket lines intact. The garment strikers have patiently waited for the other unions to get into the fight which they have been bitterly waging on the injunction.

To know that at last the call which men like Alex Howat, have been making for twenty-five thousand union men to get on the picket line, defy the injunction, and fill up the jails if necessary, is at last being answered, will hearten the strikers to carry thru the slack season to victory.

Promised Financial Aid.

Financial aid from the Chicago Federation of Labor has also been offered to the striking International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, and the offer of an initial payment of $30,000 accepted with thanks by Meyer Perlstein in behalf of the strikers, it was announced after a meeting of the "Committee of 15" with Perlstein.

The striking garment workers are at last promised the active help of the Chicago Federation of Labor, for which they have waited so long and patiently, and which they so richly deserve. A growing protest among the garment strikers had been making itself felt at the fact that many of the scabs were related to union men. Nothing definite has yet been done by the Chicago Federation to make the so-called union men take their wives and sisters out of the striking shops.

But now, the Federation has at least promised action on this matter also. Members of the Committee of 15, said to the DAILY WORKER that it has been decided to privately call on the offending union families, and if the scabs did not quit work at once, the families would be publicly exposed and all would be expelled from the union. But strikers declare that the scabs related to union men have been prolonging the strike for some time, and they would like to see the Federation do something besides make promises.

"The only thing that could stop the parade and mass meeting now would be that Mayor Dever might not issue the permit." A Johannsen told

June 17th Farmer-Labor Conference Biggest Organizational Factor In the 1924 Drive On Capitalist Parties

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 10.—All at once, the extent of the revolt of the American voters against private ownership and operation of their government has become evident to Calvin Coolidge, and he has sent messengers scurrying here and there to find means of killing the LaFollette movement before it becomes a political tornado.

Appointment of a Morgan lawyer as attorney general has done the administration no good. Announcement that the War Finance Corporation must help the farmers, but that neither the Norris-Sinclair bill nor the McNary-Haugen bill can be approved, has chilled some of the luke-warm callers at the White House.

Selection of Lawyer Butler of Boston, former handy man for Murray Crane, to manage the national campaign, has dampened the flickering ardor of Indiana and Illinois supporters. Discovery that Coolidge looks with favor upon the vice-presidential candidacy of either Albert J. Beveridge or Ex-Gov. Allen of Kansas, finishes the list of woes recited by regulars who hoped that Coolidge would wake up in time. Now he wakes up, in a panic, and the progressives laugh.

For it is recognized, by the shrewdest politicians in the old party ranks here, that the La Follette vote next November is bound to sweep a large part of the middle west and all of the northwest, and that it will offer thrills to the bystanders in Illinois and Missouri and Michigan especially. Its extent in Pensylvania will be very great. And it is going to be felt in Kentucky, Tennessee, Texas, Oklahoma, Arizona and possibly Georgia.

June 17 Worries C. P. P. A.

The national committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action meets here April 12. It will get reports from branches in 30 states, as to plans for state campaigns and for selection of tickets of presidential electors. This organization is worried by the amount of publicity received thus far by the rival group supporting La Follette—the Farmer-Labor Federation which will hold a convention June 17, in St. Paul for the adoption of a platform and nomination of candidates. The St. Paul convention is supported by the Committee of 48, the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, which latter body is supposed to be largely influenced by the Workers Party. The Conference spokesmen declare that the St. Paul gathering will embarrass LaFollette by the extreme radicalism of the convention speeches, and by prominence given to W. Z. Foster, Ruthenberg and other favorite bugaboos of the capitalist press. H. E. Teigen, secretary to Sen. Magnus Johnson of Minnesota, member of the committee which called the St. Paul gathering replies that these fears are unfounded, the people in the Northwest know what they want, and they will tell the world in plain, moderate language that will be backed up by their votes.

La Follette may accept the St. Paul nomination without waiting for the nomination of the Conference at Cleveland on July 4, or he may not. His action will depend upon the events of the Republican and Democratic conventions. Already it appears that McAdoo and Al Smith are to be supported by a great number of wage-earners who think these men are sympathetic with the needs of labor. Moreover, the Democratic convention is presumably going to reject Al Smith on the ground that he is a Catholic. La Follette would be glad to be the first choice of these workers, but he is willing anyhow to be their second choice, when the Democratic convention has taken its orders.

A Few Certainties

Out of the mist of political uncertainties, these points emerge:

1. LaFollette will be a candidate for president in 30 or more states.
2. He will be supported by the St. Paul group which is going to establish a definite Farmer-Labor party on a permanent basis, and by the railroad-labor and other elements in the Conference for Progressive Political Action, which does not yet see a chance for a new party, and is opposed to the Workers Party element.
3. He will get enough electoral votes to prevent the re-election of Coolidge, and perhaps enough to throw the election into the House.
4. He may enlist a great share of the Catholic vote, on a protest basis, as a consequence of the failure of the Democrats to name Al Smith.
5. He will have the support of Ladd Frazier, Magnus Johnson, Shipstead, Norris, Brookhart and possibly Howell and Borah in the campaign. He may have the support of Wheeler and Dill from the Democratic side of the Senate.

Coolidge is now trying to find a basis of agreement with Borah that will not involve a repudiation of the foreign policy of Hughes. He needs the help of Capper and McNary and Norbeck and Gov. Pinchot. But he clings to his Daugherty-Weeks crowd, and the day of reckoning with the La Follette revolt—which bids fair to be a revolution—rolls nearer.

Young Workers and Service Men Are Rallying Against Capitalist Wars

With the American Legion making every effort to pit the World War Veterans against the radical movement in their struggle against capitalist wars, the Young Workers League of Chicago will hold a Giant Mass Meeting to further their campaign against the militarists.

During the past few weeks much was said and written in an effort to connecting the work of the pacifists with the American Section of the Young Communist International.

At this meeting the speakers, among them being, Max Shactman, Editor, the Young Worker; Martin Abern, National Secretary of the Young Workers League of America, and William F. Dunne, Editor, the DAILY WORKER, will point to the difference between the position of the milk and water pacifists and the stand of the militant communists.

Strenuous efforts have been made to have at this meeting, many of the soldiers and sailors who have fought under the Banner of the American Dollar in France.

The meeting will be held on Sunday, April 13th, 8 P. M., at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd. The Young Workers League of Chicago, under whose auspices this meeting is being conducted announces that the admission will be free.

REVOLUTIONARY RUSS ENVOY TO BERLIN USES ROMANOFF'S EMBASSY

M. BRATMAN-BRODOWSKY

BERLIN, April 10.—Looking after the diplomatic interests in Germany of the Russian Soviet Government is M. Bratman-Brodowsky, Soviet Ambassador to Berlin, recently appointed.

Proof that the German government realizes that Czarism has lost all claims to restoration is signified by the fact that the former embassy of the Romanoff representative was turned over to M. Bratman-Brodowsky.

Germany, England and Italy are among the European powers which have acceded diplomatic recognition to the workers' republic and pressure to force France to fall in line is increasing.

FILIPINOS FIGHT PESO WAGE IN SUGAR FIELDS

Guevera Tells of Union On Plantations

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Not political revolt, but determination to win a living wage on the sugar plantations in the Philippines, is the purpose of the new society or labor union known as the Power of the Poor, or Kusog So Imol, according to Commissioner Guevara. The commissioner, interviewed by the Federated Press on the New York Times' cable dispatch from Manila, which declared this society to be "secret" and "armed," replied that the charges were "utter nonsense."

"The substance of the matter," said Guevara, who led the first strike of seamen in the islands, and knows the Philippine labor movement all thru, "is that one peso per day is the wage of sugar plantation laborers, and that they realize that this is slave labor. They know that sugar production costs are lower in the islands than in Hawaii or Cuba, and they propose to better their condition. The charge of bolshevism and threatened armed revolt is generally made by employers and others interested in keeping workers under their private domination."

The Filipinos are jubilant at the fact that they have blocked the attempts of the Wood administration at Manila to force the sale of the big sugar "centrals," pledged for loans to the Philippine Bank, to American sugar interests. Secretary Weeks' son-in-law, Atkins, who is one of the big sugar barons in Cuba, recently visited Manila to look over the possibility of getting some of these mills at a bargain. He represents Boston capitalists. Filipino planters predict that by 1940 they will have paid off their debt and will co-operatively own every sugar mill and refinery in the islands.

DAWES PACT IS MORGAN'S ULTIMATUM

To Poincare, Tied Up By Previous Loan

WASHINGTON, April 10.—France probably will approve the Dawes plan, as it is understood that the Poincare government is bound by conditions of the Morgan $100,000,000 loan to accept the report. The liberal government of Great Britain also is expected to give approval. The action of Germany still is in doubt.

With strong objections certain to be made to it, the Dawes report stands better than an even chance to effect a final settlement of the reparations problem, official and diplomatic Washington believed today.

The principal objection expected is that the report does not recommend a definite total reparations figure, a fact to which Germany already is objecting. Reparations the Reich now is under obligation to pay total 132,000,000,000 gold marks.

An effort may be made to make it appear that under the proposals of Secretary of State Hughes which brought about the Dawes inquiry, the experts were obligated to set a total figure.

Dawes Has His Fears

The reason the experts report did not deal with a total sum is that General Dawes found at the start that to try to fix a total would wreck the inquiry.

The total indemnity that Germany must meet, even if the Dawes plan is accepted, may be worked out in a European economic conference called to put the experts' report into effect, or might result from a satisfactory execution by Germany of her obligations under the plan over a period of years.

Objections to Proposals

PARIS, April 10.—While the reparation commission studies the experts' reports, France keeps pace with Germany in objecting to the proposals.

The old familiar game of European politics already is being played with this effort of international bankers.

CANADIAN MINERS STRIKING AGAINST OPEN SHOP PLAN

Coal Barons Refused to Renew Agreement

(By The Federated Press)

GALGARY, Alta., April 10.—Coal operators in Western Canada are refusing to renew the old agreement with the miners' union in District 18 for three years and a strike of 8,000 to 10,000 miners is on in Alberta and British Columbia. The agreement, which expired April 1, provided, with some modification, for the scale and conditions prevailing in the central competitive field of the United States. The operators want to cut wages and to make the new contract for one year instead of three.

The strike is expected to be drawn out thru the summer in view of large supplies of coal on hand. The Canadian Pacific Railroad claims to have six months and the Canadian National 12 months stock of coal. Mines have been running on part-time a large portion of the last year.

The strike demands include some changes not in the present agreement such as abolition of tents and bunk houses, ending of night work and inauguration of hiring thru the union office.

confidence." The principal French objections voiced by the press today were that:

1. Moral guarantees were valueless as far as Germany was concerned.

2. The Germans could not be trusted to carry out the experts' recommendations even if they formally accepted them.

French Fear Germans

"With their Swiss and Dutch colleagues," said the Petit Parisien referring to the mixed boards of control proposed, "the Germans soon would be masters of the situation."

The French expect international negotiations lasting several months.

• • • •

Germans Oppose Bankers' Plan

BERLIN, April 10.—Germany was busy today giving reasons why the Dawes report should not be accepted.

Three main objections voiced in Government circles were:

1. A definite total reparation sum should be fixed, so that Germany might have a mark to shoot at.

2. France, and Belgium should be required to take their troops out of the Ruhr.

3. Practically all the various sums demanded should be reduced.

Objections Raised

A storm of objections to the experts' reports, tempered with general admiration for the workmanlike job, was brewing in European capitals today.

The French raised objections on several grounds. The Germans on others, while Italy and Britain and Belgium considered the texts and prepared for the battle over their their revision that appears inevitable.

In Washington, it was believed the report stood better than an even chance of success. But in Europe, the first reactions indicated that many changes in the plan will precede its adoption. The chief objection raised by practically every nation was that the experts had failed to stipulate a total sum of reparation Germany must pay.

GARMENT STRIKE PARADE THRU LOOP NEXT WEEK

Chicago Workers to Give Financial Aid

the DAILY WORKER "But even if he refused us a permit, there is no law against our running floats thru the downtown districts advertising the illegal injunction by organized labor. We could still hire the theatre and run the floats up to it."

Is Dever a Real Friend.

It is not thought likely, however, that Mayor Dever will thwart the will of the thousands of workers who want to show their loyalty to their class. He has frequently declared his interest in the laboring people of the city, and his desire to aid the striking garment workers in some way. Here is the Mayor's chance to prove it by issuing the parade permit without delay.

After the last meeting of the "Committee of 15" with Perlstein, who represented the garment workers, it was again declared that the matter of taking the police brutalities, the injunction, and other phases of the bitter strike before the city council had not been taken up or even discussed. Members of the Federation Committee admitted they had no thought of taking the matter before the city council, altho there has been a demand for this action from the rank and file for some time. One member of the "Committee of 15" declared the matter would not be brought up except at a request from Perlstein, but it appears Perlstein has taken no action on the matter as yet.

What About the Council?

"The only public demand I have so far seen that the matter be brought before the city council has come from the DAILY WORKER," Oscar Nelson told the DAILY WORKER when approached in the council chambers at the metting in city hall, Wednesday. "If Perlstein, or the Committee of 15,' or members of the Chicago Federation of Labor were to bring the strike before the city council, I believe they would have done it thru me. The matter, as far as I know, will not be brought before the council in the near future."

Amalgamated Contributes.

It is reported that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers have already contributed a substantial sum to the International Ladies' Garment Workers Strike Fund. A definite announcement was promised on this today.

Anton Johannsen and Meyer Perlstein, who left for New York on the five o'clock train last night to tell the Executive Board of the international about the plans for the parade, saw Mayor Dever yesterday morning at city hall and applied for the permit for the labor parade. The Garrick theatre will be used for the mass meeting if it can be obtained.

Dennis Sullivan gave up yesterday. Sullivan, only a shadow of his pre-strike self, worn to a frazzle by his ineffectual attempts to stop picketing in Chicago, leaves for an extended vacation today. Twenty-four strike cases have been transferred to the court of Judge Fels. "Dennie" will try his best to forget, in a change of enviroment, his losing battle against picketing. He is chagrined over the failure of the strikers to take his injunctions seriously.

But "Dennie" did his best to make the strikers remember him while he is away. Nineteen striking girls were fined $350 apiece and given additional sentences of ten days in jail.

One man was fined $450 and given ten days in jail. The sole charge in these cases was picketing. There was not even a charge of violence, but Dennie was in a bad humor yesterday so he laid it on thick.

Yetta Hornstein, who was the only striker charged with violence, proved conclusively that the shop manager who testified against her was a liar and that the only violence used was by the police in arresting her. But Sullivan evidently approves of police violence so he fined Miss Hornstein $350 and gave her twenty days in jail, ten more than the others received. The twenty-four additional cases will come up before Judge Fels today.

An interested spectator in the courtroom where girl strikers were being railroaded was Roger Bronson, formerly head of the promotion department of the Citizens' Committee to Enforce the Landis Award and prosecutor of the members of the Upholsterers' Union recently framed-up on conspiracy charges.

The names and sentences follow: Meyer Krantz, $450 fine and 20 days; Yetta Ornstein, $350 and 20 days; Julia Broza, $350 and 10 days; Bessie Gettman, and the following all were sentenced to $350 fine and ten days in prison: Mary Siegel, Ida Dubnoff, Jennie Chanin, Esther Richman, Rose Printz, Eva Jacob, Rose Unofrieo, Rose Finesilver, Rose Silver, Jennie Miller, Sarah Seidel, Caroline Wegloska, Bertha Plant, Theresa Rhode and Lilian Greenberg.

Appeal has been taken and execution of senteces is delayed meanwhile.

Expect Soldier Bonus To Get Right of Way Over Tax Reduction

WASHINGTON, April 10—The soldier bonus bill will be reported to the Senate this week and probably will get the right of way over tax reduction, Senator Smoot indicated today. Smoot announced the finance committee will take up the bonus tomorrow. He expects to report it to the Senate Friday and get it up next Tuesday or Wednesday.

The indications were that progressives believe they have a better chance to wield their balance of power on the Senate floor by compromising as occasion arises than by attempting to put over any rate schedule of their own.

Bosses Don't Fear Organization Campaigns When Conducted Thru William J. Burns' Stool Pigeons

AN unusual case where a labor spy was instructed to "proceed in a very active organization campaign" comes to light with the publication thru Industrial Solidarity, I. W. W. organ, of a confidential letter to the manager of the Los Angeles branch of the William J. Burns International Detective Agency, from H. D. Dowell, former Thiel operative and now manager of labor espionage for the associated copper interests in Arizona.

Dowel refers to "W. I." a stool pigeon operating in the Metal Mine Workers Industrial Union of the I. W. W. and employed by the Burns agency which in turn is retained by the copper companies.

Apparently Dowell had found that active organization workers escaped the suspicion that often attaches itself to the "hall cat" type of radical unionists.

The letter follows:—

Los Angeles, Calif.
June 8, 1923.

George P. Pross, Mgr.
Burns International Det. Agency,
Van Nuys Building,
Los Angeles, Calif.

Dear Sir:

After reading the report of W.1 dated June 1st, would say that I believe you should write him to the effect that he should proceed in a very active organization campaign, making himself as strong with the various delegates and organizers as possible, which will increase his acquaintances among members now fully paid up and otherwise, in Globe, Miami, Ray, and Superior districts.

Yours very truly,
H D Dowell

c.c. to F.H. Carlock.

"W. I." has since been expelled from the I. W. W. His activities in lining up new members were of course negatived by his policy of turning them in to the bosses for discharge.

600 GUN TOTING KLANSMEN JOIN IN LILLY RAIDING

Kluxers Fired When the Miners Protested

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., April 10.—Klansmen who went into the mining town of Lilly, 600 strong, to stage a demonstration, were well armed, additional advises here declare. Coming from Altoona and Johnstown in two special trains, the Klansmen who a few days ago murdered two and wounded many Lilly citizens marched thru the town defying the miners.

Klansmen visited Lilly twice during the month and erected fiery crosses, which were promptly torn down by the miners. The killing started when miners who did not want the Klan saddled on their town resisted the intimidation of the paraders. The Klan leader declared, "Shoot," and the Klansmen fired into the helpless crowd.

Samuel Rich, state leader of the Klan, declared in a statement that the Klan murders were precipitated because the Klansmen "were forced to defend their rights."

Giant Movie Merger Of Loew and Metro Companies Completed

NEW YORK, April 10.—Negotiations will be completed here today for a gigantic merger of moving picture companies which will make Marcus Loew, president of Loew's, Inc., and Metro Pictures corporation the greatest film magnate in the world.

Loew will take over the Goldwyn distributing corporation and the Louis B. Mayer Productions, Inc., but these corporations will preserve their identities and continue operations subordinate to Metro.

Goldwyn probably will merge with Metro into one large distributing corporation. Metro and Mayer studios at Hollywood will be dismantled, it is reported, and future productions made at Culver City, at the Goldwyn lot.

Reverse I. W. W. Conviction.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 10.—The appellate court has reversed the criminal syndicalism conviction of Alfred Erickson, owing to hearsay evidence. This is a blow at the professional witness system in criminal syndicalism trials. The court upheld the conviction of the five defense witnesses arrested at the Stewart, Driscoll and Wukusich trial. These men were not permitted to testify without confessing membership in the I. W. W. and were then charged with criminal syndicalism on the basis of that admission. The case will be carried to the state supreme court.

WHEELER TO CALL HIS FOES IN FRAME-UP

Hot Hearing Promised In His Defense

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The Senate investigation of charges against Sen. Wheeler, Montana, will swing into action immediately after the appointment of the special committee today by Senator Cummins, presiding officer of the Senate.

Until the committee has been named the line of inquiry cannot be fully determined, but Wheeler's friends said it must be pushed with all possible speed. Any witnesses suggested by Wheeler will be called, it is understood.

Wheeler will ask that John L. Slattery, United States District Attorney for Montana, who secured his indictment, and N. T. Lease, former mayor of Great Falls, Mont., and foreman of the Grand Jury which returned the bill, be called to testify.

Lease Is Ancient Foe.

Lease was a member of the State Council of Defense, dominated by the Anaconda Mining Company, that denounced Wheeler for not railroading a number of labor men to jail during the war.

It is also possible that he will insist that Judge Charles N. Pray be summoned. Gordon Campbell, Montana oil man, indicted with Wheeler, is said to be anxious to come to Washington to clear Wheeler.

The committee also will be asked to go into the origin of the charges to determine where they originated and whether the Department of Justice had any part in their investigation.

Meanwhile the Daugherty investigating committee will conduct a collateral inquiry into Wheeler's charge that he is the victim of a "frame-up." Wheeler will continue to serve as "prosecutor" on the committee, chairman Brookhart said.

Chairman Brookhart and Senator Wheeler, Montana, of the Senate Daugherty, investigating committee, will leave tonight for Washington Court House, to examine the books of the Midland National Bank, of which Mal Daugherty, brother of the former Attorney General is president.

Brookhart made the announcement today after a short executive session of the committee.

Telegram as Evidence

GREAT FALLS, Mont., April 10.—Indictment of Senator Wheeler was based partly on a telegram from Washington to Gordon Campbell, oil operator stating that the Senator had just appeared before the Department of Interior with reference to oil matters, a Federal District official here declared today. He stated a letter along similar lines was in possession of the prosecution.

Wheeler Probe Starts

Senatorial investigation of the indictment of Senator Wheeler, Montana, has been started from two angles.

Senator Cummins, Iowa, presiding officer of the Senate, named the committee which will ascertain for the senate itself the facts concerning the charges against Wheeler. Cummins put at the head of the committee Senator Borah of Idaho, his selection being generally applauded as assuring not only a thoro inquiry, but a completely impartial one.

Shortly before the Borah committee was named the Brookhart Committee investigating Daugherty, began to look into the Wheeler case and from William J. Burns and an employe of the telephone company, got evidence that the Republican national Committee and Daugherty both were fully informed of the proceedings against Wheeler.

Fast Work

Burns testified:

1. That three agents of the Department of Justice were sent to Montana to investigate the case in which Wheeler was indicted.

2. That he, Burns, had discussed the Wheeler case with Daugherty.

3. That M. Blair Coan, an employe of the Republican National Committee, is in Great Falls, Montana.

From a telephone company employe the committee learned that George B. Lockwood, Secretary of the National Committee, talked with Coan at Great Falls by telephone yesterday.

Morgan May Strive to Investigate

President Coolidge will ask Attorney General Stone to make an immediate inquiry into the indictment returned against Senator Wheeler, Montana, by a Great Falls Grand Jury, it was learned today.

If he finds the evidence insufficient to warrant court action, Mr. Coolidge will ask Stone to have the indictment quashed immediately.

If, on the other hand, the President finds that there are real grounds for the indictment, he will demand immediate prosecution.

Appointment of the committee to investigate the indictment of Wheeler was announced today by president of the Senate Cummins.

DEFENSE COUNCIL NEEDS $5000 FOR APPEAL OF CASES

Prosecution's Delay Can Be Capitalized

If the prosecution continues to delay proceedings in the appeal of the Ruthenberg case long enough, it will soon find that the Labor Defense Council, 166 W. Washington St., Chicago, is in a position to put up no mean fight. Chief Justice Charles E. White has again granted a delay in the filing of exceptions to the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg.

While the repeated postponements have been not of the defense' choosing, they certainly offer the defense an opportunity to gather funds to pay off its debts and thus be in a position to fight the appeal thru in proper fashion, when the Michigan Supreme Court gets ready to hear it.

The financial statement of the Labor Defense Council for the month of March shows that it still owes some $5,000. During the month of March, total income amounted to well over $4,000, but more than $3,000 of this went directly into legal expenses. On January 1st of this year, the Labor Defense Council set out to raise $15,000 by March 1st. No such sum was secured however. Between January 1st and April 1st, receipts from all sources did not total over $11,000. Thus the added time given by the postponement can be put to good use.

Most of the money now coming into the office of the Labor Defense Council is from the sale of Ruthenberg appeal coupons. Up to the end of March, nearly $4,000 has been raised in this fashion. The Labor Defense Council has given away upwards of 200 copies of "A Week" in premiums for the sale of Ruthenberg appeal coupons.

THE POWER COLUMN

LEADERS PRESSED FOR POSITION AS NEW CITIES CLIMB

SMALLER CITIES STILL TAKING LEAD

CHANGES in position in the great drive for 10,000 new subscribers to the DAILY WORKER were many during the week's period ending April 9. Miles City continues to hold first place by virtue of a single sub turned in during the week, which barely enabled it to keep a notch ahead of Warren, Ohio, which moved up to second place with 10 subs in addition to the 20 turned in a week ago and a 60 per cent of its quota of 50. South Bend, Indiana, boosted itself from the cellar class into third place, by turning in 11 new subs. Kansas City, Mo., captured a temporary hold on fourth place and a lead of the larger cities by boosting its rating from 30 per cent to 42 per cent, just speaking ahead of Brooklyn, which held the position of honor last week. Brooklyn has however, an enviable record of 81 new subs or 40.5 per cent of its quota. Philadelphia is making a bid for fame with a total of 58 subs turned in, of which 28 is its record for the past week.

Amongst the biggest cities, Chicago, during the week has outdistanced its rivals for the time being, having passed Boston and increased its lead over Cleveland, Detroit, and New York. The standing which follows makes interesting reading for those who have an interest in the succes being made by THE DAILY WORKER and will moreover point to an obvious lesson for comrades who have not yet fulfilled their obligation to the militant labor movement and "their paper".

Individual Record Encouraging

THE Honor Roll of individual militants who are energetic enough and wise enough to see the importance of the task of increasing THE DAILY WORKER circulation, is growing both in the size of the list and the number of subs turned in. Comrade J. D. Speigel of Chicago, heads the list for the week with 15 new subs as the result of his effort. Comrade Speigel's methods are worth copying and we quote from his letter which contained his bid for real working class honor. He writes: "I have devoted only a little time for the past week to obtain my subs. There are many good ways in which to get more subscriptions. The method which I used is as follows:

"I first distribute five papers to five of my shop mates. The next day I did the same with five others and the next day five more, so that in three days I had made fifteen of those who work in my shop acquainted with THE DAILY WORKER. I then told them that I was going to send in $1.00 for each of them for a two months trial sub, and that they did not have to pay me until they began to receive the paper. So far, I was successful and everyone wanted to subscribe. I do not have to worry about the money part because I work with the fellows and as soon as the paper reaches them they will repay me. I hope soon to send in a larger amount of subs."

Let some of the other live wires take a shot at the record made by Comrade Speigel!

Those who have turned in subscriptions during the three days ending April 9, and the number of subs turned in by each is as follows:

N. Y. TYPOS YIELD TO LEADERS AND ACCEPT $3 OFFER

2,700 Affected; Raise Is Retroactive to Jan. 1

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 10.—Accepting the employers' compromise offer New York newspaper compositors have instructed their officials, Typographical Union No. 6, to sign an agreement extending to July 1, 1926. The union gave up its demand for reduction of hours and reduced its wage demand. The vote favoring the new contract, which was negotiated by Local President Leon H. Rouse and International President Charles P. Howard, was 816 to 262. Minority opposition was based chiefly on the retention of the present 7 1-2 hour day (third shift 7 hours), instead of the 6-hour day demanded.

Back Pay to January 1.

Three dollars a week increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, is gained under the agreement. The increase is raised to $4 from July 1, 1924, to Jan. 1, 1925, and to $5 from Jan. 1, 1925, to July 1, 1926. The old scale was $55 for day workers, $58 for night workers, and $61 for third shift. The union had reduced its original demand for a $72 weekly minimum to a flat $5 increase.

Twenty-seven hundred men are offected. At a recent rank and file meeting the officers were authorized to appeal to the international union for permission to take a strike vote. Because negotiations were continuing this formal action was not carried out. Overtime at time and a half rates, formerly paid on a 48-hour week basis, will now be paid on a 45-hour week basis.

War as Hell Exposed By 'Private Peat' in Cleveland Speech

(By The Federated Press)

CLEVELAND, April 10.—"Private Peat" revealed was as it is to a large group of Cleveland business men, containing a number of distinguished war profiteers. The Canadian declared: "Our newspapers and even our school books are saturated with praise for military glory, and are largely silent as to the cost and criminality of it. We who served know war has four elements: tears, filth, wooden crosses, and a degenerating influence," declared the soldier author. "The pupils today are learning that it is glorious, chivalrous and honorable."

Hard Winter In St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, April 10.—The St. Louis municipal lodging house has closed for the season. More than 100,000 homeless and destitute were housed from Nov. 1 to April 1, as compared with 46,000 during the same period last season. When the institution opens next fall the giving of free meals will be abandoned. It is claimed that the free meals habit has too widely advertised the "hotel."

Democracy or Despotism---A Few Reflections Upon the New York Newspaper Scale

NEW YORK CITY, April 10.—For brazen despotism the manner in which the newspaper scale was imposed upon the membership of "Big Six" stands without a parallel in all the annals of trade union history, unless we dig up the odoriferous record of Mr. George L. Berry.

As between the autocracy of Berry and that of those responsible for the present scale there is nothing to choose. The one difference is that Berry openly flaunts his dictatorship over the Pressmen, while Leon H. Rouse, president of "Big Six," and Charles P. Howard, acting president of the International Typographical Union, try to conceal their despotic acts beneath sweet-sounding democratic phrases. The latter method is by far the more contemptible.

The history of the negotiations leading up to the present scale falls into three divisions. There were three distinct stages in the proceedings, to-wit:

First Act of Betrayal

First: The rousing meeting in December when the scale committee presented the proposition of a six-hour day with a wage of $60 and $66 for day and night work respectively, to be in effect a trifle more than one year, or to be exact from Jan. 1 1924 and Feb. 28, 1925. This was amended to demand $66 day work and $72 night work on the six-hour day basis, and left for the committee to present the scale to the publishers and endeavor its achievement.

Second: The meeting of March 23, when the scale committee reported that the employers had refused to offer more than a three dollar raise and that the question of hours would not be considered by the publsihers. At this meeting both Mr Howard and Mr. Rouse reported that they could not recommend the publishers' proposition to the union, the scale committee concurring in the report. Mr. Howard in particular emphasized the declaration that he did not want to conceal anything from the membership—that everyting was to be open and above board. Then, lo and behold, the membership was presented with a ballot with three clauses to be voted upon. (a) Acceptance of the publishers offer. (b) Arbitration. (c) a $5 increase and if rejected to ask for strike sanction. Nothing was said about when and where and under what conditions the December proposition of the membership was abandoned; not a word about throwing overboard the demand for hours and the reduction of the demands to a paltry $5. Many suspected that when Mr. Howard protested that there was nothing to conceal, that vital facts were being concealed from the membership; like Shakespeare's female of easy virtue, he protested too much.

Some "Prog." He Is!

Third: The meeting of April 6, called for the alleged purpose of considering "proposals as to wages and hours upon which strike sanction shall be requested." (official call). The membership, bewildered and to a large extent infuriated at the brazen abandonment of the original demands had protested so vigorously that Leon H. Rouse and his scale committee were afraid to ask strike sanction of the Executive Council in spite of the fact that the $5 proposition of March 23, carried by a vote of eleven to one. Furthermore it was felt that the membership would not vote for a strike on a difference so small as two dollars. Many felt at the March 23 meeting that the publishers really intended paying $5, but that the president and scale committee of Big Six were afraid a plain proposition of that type would be defeated, so they pretended they were waging a ferocious conflict with the publishers and owners. Subsequent events have served to lend weight to this interpretation.

Hog-Tying the Union.

The call for the April 6 meeting was set forth plainly as being for the purpose of formulating strike demands from the International Executive Council. But again the "joker" was inserted so that they had no chance to present their own demands. This "joker" was revealed when Mr. Rouse announced that since the call for the speeial meeting there had been another offer from the publishers, that he would advise the membership to accept.

At this juncture another heavy jolt was in store for the membership. Instead of forcing the publishers from their offer of three dollars, the three dollars was accepted, with the provision that there would be a dollar raise the 1st of July and another the 1st of next January—making a total of a five dollar increase after the scale has been in effect one year, intead of immediately or as of January 1, 1924, even taking for granted that the deceptive vote of March 23, was the will of the membership which it certainly was not.

But this yielding to the enemy was climaxed by the most vile, impudent and brazen piece of chicanery that was exer imposed upon a trade union membership. This was the clause hog-tying the membership to the publishers for a period of two and a half years.

This from a "progressive" local President and a "progressive" International President, seeking re-election because of his progressiveism! One of the fundamental demands of all real progressives in the organization has consistently been short-time contracts. By this action both Howard and Rouse have proved themselves renegades to the principles they have at various times professed to uphold.

Despotism Rampant.

At this meeting gag rule was enforced to the limit. With the exception of a few members who voiced objections to the actions of the officials, effective speakers for the opposition were denied the floor. Rouse in one case refusing to recognize a member on the pretext that the "older" members should be heard from. It is needless to note that had the member been on Rouse's side he would have easily got the floor. It was clear in this case that the ramshackle steam roller feared a wreck and dared not attempt to meet the argument of the member who was refused the floor.

Several members were clamoring for the floor when Rouse gave the gavel to Howard and turned the meeting into a minstrel show with the President of Big Six and the Acting President of the I. T. U. indulging in a mutual admiration performance—Rouse eulogizing Howard and Howard later returning the compliment.

Fear Rank and File.

While engaged in this delectable performance they both tried to impress upon the membership the notion that a great victory had been won. To achieve their aim they both became third rate sophists.

Sophistry consists in parading one plausible argument to the exclusion of all others. In this case the arguments of Rouse were not even plausible, but downright silly. The burden of his apology for leaving the membership in the lurch thru juggling the scale of wages and hours and imposing gag rule upon them in the form of prepared motions was to the effect that since this is "presidential election year" we were lucky to get anything and that as the result of the Washington scandals in government times were bound to get worse. Such infantile twaddle would disgrace a high school boy, but it was put forth by Rouse with all the vehemence of undisputable fact. The two and a half year contract was praised as an act of statesmanship.

The very argument of Rouse to the effect that we were approaching hard times is an argument in favor of shorter hours, but he dared not draw the logical inferences from these arguments. In face of a crisis, hours of labor should be shortened in order to take care of the unemployed. A mere amateur in the realm of politics and economics, this clown at the head of Big Six, dared not invite criticism of his betrayal of the trust placed in him by the membership.

What's Their Idea.

The one reason why long-term contracts are frowned upon by intelligent members is because the cost of living constantly fluctuates. Since the war no one can anticipate the movement of prices from one year to the next, say nothing of a period of two and half years—a quarter of a decade. Simultaneous with the rise of the cost of living all world currency is depreciating rapidly; sometimes a steady decline for a period of time, then a spasmodic downward plunge, with occasionally a slight recovery here and there. But the general trend is downward. Who knows but that our dollar will keep decining as it has and is declining right now? Any upheaval in the world of economics or finances, which is today always imminent, will send the American dollar to the bottom of the pit. Where then will be our great victory?

And the scale is made to expire in the middle of the summer of 1926—the slackest season of the whole year which gives the publishers assurance that the union will be at a disadvantage when this scale expires. If the publishers themselves had written the scale and appointed their own scale committee they could not have done better for themselves in this respect.

In face of this damning fact, Acting President Howard boasted to the membership that at the end of next December they would have the best scale in the jurisdiction of the I. T. U. He conveniently neglected to inform the membership that right now Chicago has a better scale and that the cost of living is far lower in Chicago than here. The Chicago night scale is two dollars more than ours, but a year hence we will catch up with Chicago. However, Chicago is nothing to boast about as their scale was purchased at a horrible price—by sacrificing the right of appeal from discharge, placing the right of appeal in the hands of a joint committee of members of the union and publishers instead of in the hands of the union. Chicago is also tied for two years.

The result of the meeting was that 816 voted to accept the publishers offer, while 262 voted against. This is only a total vote of 1078 out of an attendance of at least 2500, so over half of those present at the meeting expressed their contempt of the imposition upon them by refusing to vote.

Unable to stand criticism of their perfidy to the membership those responible for the scale loudly proclaimed there was no perfidy involved. Unable to excuse their bureaucratic stifling of the voices of the membership they hypocritically prated about democracy. Refusing to permit the membership to hear the argument against their proposals they solemnly assured the members they could exercise their democratic rights by voting for something they had heard but one side of. Professing democracy, they stifle free speech, the very cornerstone of democracy.

Demand a New Deal.

This is tyranny! And tyranny cannot go unchallenged. Therefore smash this steam roller, already creaking in every joint and mistaking its weird rattle for power.

Deal a new deal! Instead of permitting Rouse to hand-pick his Executive Committee, elect them from the membership and make them responsible to the membership.

This is another progressive measure that has always been advocated by the Progs at I. T. U. conventions. At every I. T. U. convention of late years the Progs have fought against appointments of important committees. If that is good for the Convention, which lasts one week, it is a hundred times more important for our local union, where the Executive Committee constantly and permanently functions.

Down with this shameless suppression of the will of the membership!

Place the control of the affairs of the organization in the hands of the representatives of the membership!

The issue is plain—democracy or despotism!

NEW YORK PRINTERS GET THE NEWS FROM THE DAILY WORKER

News of the wage negotiations in the newspaper printing industry in New York City was carried to the workers first in the DAILY WORKER. In one newspaper composing room, especially, that of Pulitzer's New York World, copies of the DAILY WORKER, carrying the news of the negotiations, were posted on the workers' bulletin board, with other trade union matter. The same was probably true in other offices. The newspaper printers know where to get the truth about their fight with the big publishers.

Sue for Right to Fight Fascism in Pennsylvania Town

NEW YORK, April 10.—Chief Burgess Walter Kozlowski, Mt. Carmel, Pa., is threatened with court action in a letter sent by the American Civil Liberties Union here announcing that the union will hold a test meeting for free speech in his town. Kozlowski co-operated with Mussolini adherents in Mt. Carmel to prevent an anti-fascisti meeting, March 26. Governor Gifford Pinchot is also receiving a protest from the union.

The mayor of Wilkes-Barre recently interfered with a meeting of citizens to praise one foreign premier (Lenin), the union points out, and now another Pennsylvania mayor stops a meeting to criticize another foreign premier, Mussolini. Both meetings were within the constitutional rights of the citizens.

Suit for false arrest against the San Francisco police department has been filed in federal court by the California attorney of the Civil Liberties Union. The suit is part of the union's campaign to stop the lawless persecution of radicals, and is on behalf of George Quinlivan, secretary, Marine Transport Workers' Union. Lawless raids against the Transport Workers have been carried out by the San Francisco police at the instigation of the Shipowners' Association, it is charged.

Endorse St. Paul Convention and LaFollette, Too

(By The Federated Press)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 10.—A resolution indorsing the presidential candidacy of Robert M. LaFollette was passed unanimously at a meeting of the Missouri National Progressive league. About 400 persons attended. It was voted to send delegates to the national convention in St. Paul, June 17. The board of directors is instructed to call a state convention for a state ticket. Sheridan Carlisle, formerly with the Farmer-Labor party in Missouri, is chairman of the league.

CHARITY DENIES AID TO STARVING DENVER FAMILY

Tell Him to "Come Back Monday"

To The DAILY WORKER:—In a recent issue of the DAILY WORKER, your article, "Charities Head Lauds Workers' Housing Probe."—I wish I could think they were sincere, but I don't. Here in Denver it would mean that the Associated Charities were using workers' probes into housing conditions for Community Chest propaganda to get money for their own selfish use and afford fat positions for a few favorites among their own dishonest clique.

Work Monday—Starve Saturday

I notice they are "careful how they spend their money on the individual."

Here is an example. About seven blocks from where I live a Mexican with wife and little girl moved into a house, paid a month's rent and had food supply to last one day. He had not a penny until he could get some work. The lady next door is a widow depending for her living on whatever work she can get now and then. While the man was looking for work the two women got acquainted, and the widow learned of their desperate need. She advised the woman to go with her to the county and apply for aid until her husband could get work, and she herself went with her. The lady in charge of the City and County of Denver office said: "Come back Monday"—this was Saturday—"and I'll see if I can't find some work for your husband."

"But," the widow said, "they haven't anything in the house to eat—have had nothing to eat all day."

"Tell your husband to come down Monday morning and we'll see about some work for him."

Work and Pray—Live On Hay.

They next went to the Salvation Army—it was afternoon.

The lady said, "We don't give anything out after 2 o'clock."

"But they have got nothing in the house to eat, have had nothing to eat today." The widow persisted.

"We don't give anything out after 2 o'clock."

The man went to the City and County office Monday to see about work. There was none, the woman said, "Come back tomorrow," but she didn't offer him anything to eat.

If they had been left to the mercies of the organized charity—would that man have been able to take a job when he found one? Oh, yes, they are indeed very careful about giving aid to the individual—who needs help.

Paris Papers, Bribed By Czar, Angry at Communist Expose

(By The Federated Press)

PARIS, April 10.—Almost as big a political scandal as the oil affair in the United States is the series of revelations made by L'Humanite, the labor daily of Paris, concerning the corruption of the French press and French politics by agents of the czar of Russia during the days preceding the war.

Day after day L'Humanite has been publishing documents, telegrams, secret reports, etc., unearthed by the soviet government in Leningrad, which show that the highest circles in France were the recipients of bribes.

The dauntless Communist paper has offered a prize to the persons who would guess what newspaper, what newspaper man, and what member of parliament drew the greatest benefit from the czar's generosity. The prize winner guessed the following names: Le Temps for the paper, Calmette for the journalist, and Senator Perchot for the political personage.

The other papers are furious. They threaten to bring a series of law suits. The first to sue is the Matin. L'Humanite announces it will celebrate the beginning of the trial by further embarrassing disclosures.

Impeccable Technic And Ecstasy Mark Carl Flesch Violin

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Carl Flesch, Hungarian violinist, was soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra at the regular concert in Orchestra Hill last Friday and Saturday. His choice of music for performance fell upon the Beethoven concerto, and his choice was a wise one. Flesch is a middle aged man, and he plays with a fine classic interpretation, thoroly German, with a beautiful tone and impeccable technic. So the classic German violin concerto of Beethoven was the very work Flesch was best fitted to play.

"Poem of Ecstasy."

Scriabin's "Poem of Ecstacy" was also played. Scriabin was a mystic, and expressed a metaphysical mysticism in music. The work played on this occasion takes as thesis the idea that all the experience of life is a vast and compelling ecstasy of action. The music is as big as the thesis. It rises to great climaxes, there are moments of great stress and pain, and moments of intense and thrilling joy.

The Rhenish symphony of Robert Schumann, arranged for modern orchestra by Frederick Stock, took up the first part of the program. Stock did more than re-orchestrate the work, he revivified it, and recast it in a new and more beautiful mold. The symphony has no definite pictorial meaning, altho the fourth movement is intended to describe the Cologne cathedral. All thru the five movements breathes a festival atmosphere, in fact, the finale symphony is the poem of ecstasy of a less mystical and far sadder man.

Weber's overture to "Abu Hassan," a clever little prelude to a clever little opera, opened the program.

Next week Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Chicago pianist, will be the soloist, playing a concerto by Moskowski. The Beethoven seventh symphony, the symphonic poem, "The Dying Swan," by Perinello, new to Chicago, and the overture "Cockaigne," by Edward Elgar, compose the rest of the program.

NEW POLITICAL PRISONER SENT TO LEAVENWORTH

Passing Out Communist Literature, His Act

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 10.—After all the grandstand play by the government in the release of political prisoners and the attempt to make people believe that the vicious war-time espionage act is a dead letter, the department of justice has sent another political to Leavenworth. Joseph Baltrusaitis of St. Louis is the victim. The American Civil Liberties union here, having filed application for a pardon in Washington, describes this as "one of the most flagrant and inexcusable political cases on record."

Baltrusaitis was arrested in November, 1920, on the charge of distributing Communist literature, the theory of the war-time act being that this discouraged recruiting and enlistment of soldiers. But the war was over two years before his arrest and five years and a half before he was sent to prison last month. Baltrusaitis is a Lithuanian. His arrest was in the nature of a frame-up. A government detective engaged him in friendly conversation and asked for a Communist pamphlet.

He was sentenced to two years in October, 1921. The conviction has now been affirmed on appeal. His defense was that he could neither read nor write English and could not have known the contents of the pamphlets.

Twelve Cincinnati Socialists, indicted in 1917 for opposing the draft, will also be sent to prison for their opinion during the war if they lose their appeal to the U. S. supreme court, the Civil Liberties union points out.

"War on War" Is Sedition if Put On Soldier's Grave

(By The Federated Press)

PARIS, April 10.—"War on War" is seditious when placed as a motto upon a monument to soldiers who fell in the world war, according to the French courts.

In one of the communes of the Department of Yonne, the city fathers, with the approval of the population, voted to have the inscription War on War (Guerre contre la guerre) placed upon the soldiers monument. The police ordered the motto removed. The town council voted unanimously to pay no attention to the order.

Thereupon the mayor was arrested and fined, besides being ordered to remove the inscription.

RUTHENBERG WILL TELL PARTY ROLE IN F.-L. MOVEMENT

Important Meeting on Tactics April 22

C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary of the Workers Party, will address the Chicago membership meeting Tuesday, April 22, 8 p. m., at the Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted street, on the "Decisive Stage of Our Labor Party." The campaign for a class Farmer-Labor Party is the most important task before the Workers Party today. Ruthenberg will point out and urge that every party member must be fully acquainted with the United Front tactics and policy of the Workers (Communist) Party in the Farmer-Labor Party campaign, the struggle for the proletarian dictatorship and a soviet government.

Workers Party and June 17

The Workers Party is the driving force behind the campaign for the formation of a class mass Farmer-Labor Party at the monster convention to be held in the Twin Cities, on June 17. Why is the Workers Party giving every energy for a successful June 17th convention? How will the forming of a national mass Farmer-Labor Party affect the Workers (Communist) Party? What are you, Party member, doing to build the Farmer-Labor Party and the Workers Party? These issues are more alive and important today than ever before for every Communist and for the Workers Party, and must be made clear to every Party member.

Every party member is therefore instructed to be present at the membership meeting on Tuesday, April 22, 8 p. m., at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted street. Discussion will be open to all members. Learn to know why the party is working for a class Farmer-Labor Party and thus for the best interest of the Workers Party and Communism. Attend the membership meeting April 22.

Edwards—Cannon Debate Sunday.

On Sunday, April 13, 1924, 2:30 p. m., at the North Side Turner Hall, 820 North Clark street, will take place the debate between James P. Cannon, of the Workers Party, and Forest Edwards, of the I. W. W., on the subject: "Resolved, That the Workers Party Must Fail to Achieve Anything of Importance for the Workers." Affirmative: Edwards. Negative: Cannon.

The I. W. W. members are going to be at the debate in full force. Every Wobbly is on the job and we can be assured that hundreds of them will be there. We expect every member of the Workers Party to rally to the debate and hear Communism explained to the Wobblies. Admission is 25c. If you want to be inside, be sure to purchase your ticket in advance.

Zinoviev Reviews the Main Points of Difference

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Today we continue publication of the famous report by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, made to the session of the Executive of the Communist International held on Jan. 6. Zinoviev's report deals with the main points of difference in the Russian Communist Party, clearly crystallizing the discussion that has so far been published in the DAILY WORKER. In order that our readers may get a broader view of this discussion, we are publishing enlarged installments. This report is divided into seven sections. Today we publish the fourth section. It is as follows:

* * * *

IV.

"Degeneration" of Old Guard.

IN THE midst of the discussion, Trotzky surprised us with an article something to the following effect:*)

We are being everlastingly bothered with these accursed scholars of Lenin. Were not Bernstein, Kautsky, and Guesde scholars of Marx and Engels and did they not degenerate? Did they not gradually develop into traitors? Who can give us a guarantee that Lenin's scholars are immune against degeneration.

Spirit of Rank and File.

Trotzky naturally clothed this mene tekel in a more elegant form, in the form which we are accustomed to see him utilize, and which is admirable when used against the bourgeoisie, but most unhappy when applied against the old Bolshevist guard. Trotzky here operated with insinuations only, and believed that nobody would understand him, thus proving that he does not yet thoroly know our Party. Scarcely a week has passed after the publication of his article, when a storm of indignation against Trotzky's procedure broke out in the Party.

As you have seen, Comrade Radek has confirmed this. The indignation was sincere among the ranks of our best workers, who declared openly: "Comrade Trotzky, we all love you, we all respect you, but we beg you to let us alone with such insinuations. We know our Bolshevist guard, which has created our Party; we know it thoroly, and we know that you, Comrade Trotzky, were a Menshevist for a long time—Trotzky came over to us from the Mensheviki, we did not go over to him—so please make an end of all such insinuations.

Combat Degeneration.

"If you really seriously believe that our old guard could follow in the footsteps of Bernstein and Kautsky, kindly state this straightforwardly, but not in the form of vague insinuations."

As I have already said, a real storm of indignation broke out, Trotzky was obliged to publish three further articles, in order to define his views more precisely. Now, this clearer definition did not clear up the matter at all, but rather aggravated it.

No proofs can be adduced that our old guard is on the road to degeneration. To be sure, there exists no absolute guarantee against degeneration.

We have said again and again that, should the speed of social revolution slow down, seen from the historical standpoint, we may very well be threatened by the danger that our dictatorship gradually assumes the aspect of a petty bourgeois state. And we repeat it here once more: This danger exists. As Marxists, we observe it, but at the same time we seek to counteract this danger by every possible means.

But the final result of our exertion depends in the end, not upon the preventive means adopted by the Party, but from the course taken by world events, from the development of the world revolution. But Trotzky did not speak of this general danger, but permitted himself to be drawn, in the heat of the discussion, into a concealed attack against the political bureau of the Central Committee.

And thus he avoided a detailed designation of those scholars of Lenin against whom he directed his arrows, and omitted to name Kameneff, Stalin, Zinoviev and Bucharin, precisely the men whom he had in his mind's eye when speaking of the degenerated Bernstein, Kautsky, Guesde, etc.

Now, I think we are a little better than Bernstein and Kautsky, and believe too that precisely this comparison should induce Comrade Trotzky to regret having made it.

The Limits of the United Front

Letter to the District Executive Committee of District 7 (Michigan) Authorized by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party.

Chicago, April 4, 1924

District Executive Committee,
District Number Seven,
2101 Gratiot Ave.,
Detroit, Mich.

Dear Comrades: The Central Executive Committee has given careful consideration to the statement of the minority of the District Executive Committee in reply to the instructions of the Central Executive Committee that the District Executive Committee proceed immediately with the work of organizing local and a state Farmer-Labor Party in the state of Michigan.

The objection of the minority of the District Executive Council seems to be based upon the following points:

The Minority Position.

(a) The Michigan State Federation of Labor and the Detroit Federation of Labor are committed to the Conference for Progressive Political Action and support the July 4th Convention. A campaign for the organization of local and a state Farmer-Labor Party will bring us into immediate conflict with the leaders of these organizations and the minority is against provoking such a fight. It is the opinion of the minority that if we proceed with the organization of a Farmer-Labor Party under these conditions that the support of such a party from the trade unions will be of a limited character.

(b) The minority argues that if we wait with this organization campaign until after the June 17th Convention and "a man who will be big enough to grasp the significance of that convention" is sent to St. Paul by the Detroit Federation of Labor, it may have a much better chance than now.

In the statement of the minority we also find the following: "The primaries for the gubernatorial nominations take place in September. Within a month or two, therefore, a stand will have to be taken on Bakers' candidacy for governor on the Republican ticket. A decision to fight his candidacy would involve us in a fight with the trade union leaders. But regardless of our possible decision to make this candidacy an issue later on, it is the opinion of the minority that nothing should be done now to provoke a fight."

C. E. C. Opinion.

The Central Executive Committee is of the opinion that in this statement, particularly in the phrase "regardless of our possible decision to make a fight," there is a very dangerous manifestation of opportunistic tendencies on the part of the minority of the District Executive Committee, tendencies which must be stamped out wherever they appear in our Party.

The Central Executive Committee believes that the objective conditions the District Executive Committee faces should have made clear the correctness of the policy prescribed by the Central Executive Committee even aside from the question of correct application of Communist principle. In the state of Michigan the situation is the following:

Both the Michigan State Federation of Labor and the Detroit Federation of Labor are giving their support to the Progressive Voters League. It is the announced policy of this organization to enter into the old party primaries and to support "good Republicans or Democrats" in these primaries. Both the Michigan State Federation of Labor and the Detroit Federation of Labor and also the Progressive Voters League are part of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, which is the expression of the third party movement.

Our Party, on the other hand, is giving its support to the movement for a class farmer-labor party which expresses itself in the convention called for June 17th in St. Paul, Minn. We are fighting for the formation of a class farmer-labor party as against the third party and as against the policy of going into old party primaries.

The Issue.

Here then we have a clear issue whether the workers and the farmers of the state of Michigan shall continue to support the Conference for Progressive Political Action or whether we shall make a fight to win them for the class farmer-labor party. What have we to lose in such a situation by proceeding with the work of organization of a class farmer-labor party and fighting to secure the support of as many workers and farmers as we can? We have nothing to lose, for if we make no fight, then we leave the field to our enemies; if we do make the fight we are certain to make gains because we will take part of the workers and farmers from our enemies. The proposal of the minority to delay action until after the June 17th Convention would simply mean that we permitted our opponent to entrench himself further to make our task after June 17th harder.

Of course, the Central Executive Committee cannot lose its policy on the hope, as expressed by the minority of the committee "that the Detroit Federation of Labor may send to the June 17th convention a man who may be big enough to grasp the significance of that convention." It is not a Communist viewpoint to base our struggle and principles upon the hope that some progressive person may be in a certain strategic position and serve us as a Moses in realizing our aim.

What Is the United Front?

The statement of the minority, however, raises a broader issue than the question of our immediate policy in forming a Farmer-Labor Party in the state of Michigan. It raises the question of what is our United Front policy? Why do we enter into a united front? What should be our tactics in the United Front? And what are the limits of the United Front?

If we conceive the United Front as merely to establish friendly relationships with certain progressive labor leaders and then to work in harmony with them, the United Front and policy would be indeed a path along which we would find nothing but smiling roses. If this were the United Front then we could go on forever in the United Front and have the plaudits of progressive liberals and even of the reactionary labor leaders and finally find ourselves supporting the candidacy of Herbert Baker on the Republican ticket. But this is not a Communist conception of the United Front. We are not in the United Front for the purpose of maintaining friendly relations with leaders of the labor movement. Our purpose in entering into a United Front is to fight with the workers in their immediate struggle and during the process of those struggles to make the workers more class-conscious and to win their support for our Communist principles. Unless we can, in a United Front movement, win greater support, influence, leadership, as Communists, the United Front is a failure so far as we are concerned.

Under such a conception of the United Front, this policy cannot lead us along a path of roses. If we fight within the United Front for our principles, and we must fight, we are bound to come in conflict with both reactionary and progressive leaders of the labor movement. These conflicts are not to be avoided, but rather welcomed at a certain stage of development as the means of divorcing the rank and file of the workers from the influence of their present leaders and bringing them Communist influence, and the present situation in Michigan demands that this be done.

United Front Has Limits.

The committee must also emphasize that the United Front has its limits. The minority of the District Executive Committee, when it even considered the possibility that we could support or would not fight against the candidacy of Herbert Baker for governor in the Republican primaries, over-stepped the limits of the United Front. We cannot go that far, even tho the masses of workers and farmers still lack class-consciousness so much that they are ready to support a candidate of the Republican ticket. For us the limits of the United Front is expressed in the question whether any particular struggle of the workers and farmers develops class-consciousness and class action on their part. We can support and do support the Farmer-Labor movement because it represents the growing class-consciousness of the workers and farmers in this country. The development of class political action by the workers and farmers against the ruling capitalist power is a great step forward. We therefore join in this movement and form a United Front to hasten its development. Once workers and exploited farmers are fighting against the capitalist class as a class, one of the conditions exists without which we could not even dream of a proletarian revolution in this country.

While we can enter into United Front struggles such as those described above, we cannot under any circumstances participate in a United Front which has the opposite effect and leads back to non-class conscious action. For us to support a candidate on an old party ticket would be a denial of the fundamental theories of our movement. For us, the Republican and Democratic parties are the instruments of the class rule of the capitalist class. Whether the individual elected on the Republican or Democratic tickets is a particularly good or a particularly bad man is of no importance to us. The Republican and Democratic parties are part of the capitalist machinery of government. How can we be part of a United Front which asks the workers to vote for the Party of their enemies? The parties which express the class rule of the enemy we are seeking to overthrow? To state the question it is sufficient to make clear that we cannot enter into such a United Front.

Concrete Proposals.

We trust that this statement will make clear to the District Executive Committee and particularly to the minority members of the Committee that we must at all times advocate our Communist ideas, have our own Communist policies for which which we fight inside of the United Front, and that in directing the District Executive Committee to begin a campaign for the launching of a Farmer-Labor Party in the state of Michigan, that the Central Executive Committee instructed the District Executive Committee to form the only kind of United Front which is of any value to us as Communists.

Concretely, the Central Executive Committee instructs the District Executive Committee to immediately prepare and publish a statement against the policies of the Progressive Voters League, the Conference for Progressive Political Action, and the candidacy of Herbert R. Baker.

2—That the District Executive Committee immediately proceed with the organization of local and state Farmer-Labor parties in Michigan and the calling of a convention for the formation of a State Farmer-Labor Party.

Fraternally yours,
William Z. Foster, Chairman.
C. E. Ruthenberg,
Executive Secretary.

PAPER RUBLE TO BE WITHDRAWN AFTER APRIL 25

Prices Dropping to the Delight of Peasants

By JESSICA SMITH.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

MOSCOW, April 10.—The Russian paper ruble is stabilized at last. For a brief period it will bridge over the difficulties in getting enough small change of the new currency into circulation but by April 25 it will be entirely withdrawn from circulation and will leave the field to the new stable treasury notes, chervonetz, and metal coinage.

The paper ruble was known in Russia in the days of the czar, when unbacked paper money was issued at harvest time each year to meet the increased demands on circulation but never in large enough quantities to endanger the gold ruble. In 1914, however, began the huge government deficit which had to be covered by paper money and was accompanied by the disappearance of metal money.

Inflation Since 1917.

Before 1914 there had been less than two billion rubles in paper money in Russia. At the time of March, 1917, revolution this increased to 22 billions. The civil war, blockade, destruction of the old government apparatus and creation of the new all meant enormous expenditures at the beginning of the soviet regime. Having no other sources of income, the soviet government had to continue the emission of paper money, with the result that the paper ruble decreased 50 billion times in value during the last years.

During the period of military Communism money was not an important factor, and the depreciation did not mean much. But with the introduction of the New Economic Policy, the revival of trade, and the operation of private capital within certain limits, some stable unit was necessary.

Experts have arrived at the sum of 100,000,000 gold rubles as the sum that may be issued during the coming year in small denominations without endangering the stability of the new money. Future emissions will be based on the increase in the turnover and the corresponding demand for more money in circulation. The government is making every effort to cut down expenses and increase its revenue and will undoubtedly be able to cover the budget during the coming year.

Prices Coming Down.

The immediate beneficial results of the money reform are obvious. Every day the papers carry long lists of price reductions, such as clothing, 20 to 25 per cent; textiles, 10 to 15 per cent; metal goods, 20 per cent; butter, 20 per cent; eggs, 35 per cent; milk, 20 per cent; meat, 10 per cent, etc. Prices on salt, kerosene and sugar make them easily attainable for the peasants.

The money reform is doing more than anything else to bring about the much talked of "smichka" (union) between town and village. The peasants can save enough money to buy some of the things they need, and the prices of those things are at last within their reach.

Italian Communists Poll Heavy Vote Despite Violence

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, April 10.—Communists in the recent elections polled over 300,000 votes, latest returns show. In spite of fascisti killings and wholesale stealing of votes the opposition votes counted against the fascisti totalled over three million as against the four million fascisti votes.

Defense Office Raided in Frisco; 5 Wobblies Seized

(By Defense News Service.)

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., April 10.—Five I. W. W. members were arrested here when the "Red squad" of the police department raided the local office of the General Defense Committee of Chicago. All were charged with vagrancy altho they were employed at the time of arrest. The five include Ed Delaney, defense secretary; Archie Sinclair, speaker for the committee; Herman Dreschler, Herbert Mugge and Chas. Mageson.

Friends of the defendants see behind this raid the hand of the American Ship Owners' Association, which apparently is fearful that the Marine Transport Workers' Union of the I. W. W. will call a waterfront strike May 1. Marine workers in Pacific ports have many grievances, and the union has been steadily organizing in all western harbors since the big strike on the San Pedro docks last year.

Trials of I. W. W. members accused under the state criminal syndicalism law are coming up at Euréka, Sacramento and Los Angeles in mid-April.

Ku Klux Klan Is Petering Out on The Eastern Coast

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 10.—The Ku Klux Klan is petering out in the east. Weakened by internal fights and no longer able to frighten its opponents with its night shirt antics, the klan is making desperate efforts to stay in the limelight. Unsuccessful meetings to lure back the rapidly deserting membership have been held in New Jersey at Bayonne, Syracuse and Jersey City. A free for all fight broke up a West Hoboken meeting.

Taking advantage of a students' dispute at Columbia University, New York, a band of klansmen set up on the campus and lighted a cross made of mop handles and then ran as fast as their brave feet could carry them. They are now sending letters to a graduate Negro student, Frederick W. Wells, threatening to kill him unless he moves out of Furnald Hall, a college dormitory. The majority of Furnald Hall, including some Southerners, have petitioned that Wells remain. The college officials stand by Wells, and have placed three detectives in the building to watch the night shirters.

44-Hour Working Week Established by Law in Queensland

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

BRISBANE, Queensland, April 10.—The 44-hour working week is established by law in Queensland. Other legal achievements of the labor government are industrial conciliation and arbitration with the "public" members not loaded against labor; statutory protection for trade unions; wage protection under which there can be no docking from the worker's wage by the employer at the time of payment; increased compensation for workers for accidents and industrial diseases.

The right to work and insurance against unemployment, government employment bureaus, guarantee of full civil rights for all state employes, homes for workers at reasonable cost, and government monopoly of workers' accident insurance are other measures now on the statute books.

The government proposes legislation for equal pay for men and women in like employment, and to amend the railway act to safeguard the rights of the railroad workers more completely.

Many Mine Deaths Force Workers to Demand Protection

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
(Staff Correspondent of Federated Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 10.—Following several explosions in coal mines in New South Wales hitherto considered absolutely safe and fool proof, the miners are demanding drastic amendments in the coal mine laws.

Among the amendments demanded are that electric coal cutters are not to be worked in gaseous mines, that electric bells give warning of coal falling down shafts, and that automatic steam cutoffs, in the event of drivers collapsing during winding, be provided.

Shot firers are to have certificates, waste workings to be examined daily. Sealed areas close to the working face are to be examined before every shot. All fallen strata to be taken out of the mine to prevent heating. Systematic spraying of dry coal dust with water. A sample of gases in sealed areas to be analyzed and taken quarterly.

California "U" Bars Liberals.

BERKELEY, Cal., April 10.—W. W. Campbell, president University of California, has refused a lecture date before the university to Alexander Meiklejohn, the famous liberal president of Amherst, a number of whose students refused to accept their degrees when the trustees fired him. The University of California has long been the center of goose-step education in this state.

$200,000,000 1923 Loot Of Power Monopolies

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)
Article II.

Profits of the super-power trusts in 1923 absorbed about one-third of the hundreds of millions of dollars paid by consumers for their service, according to the annual reports of ten of the sixteen combines named in the first article in this series. The gross income of these companies for a single year amounted to $602,784,119 of which only $404,182,341 was necessary to pay for the cost of the service. The remaining $198,601,777 represented clear profit to the owners.

Such profits which gave common stockholders returns ranging as high as $31.10 on each $100 invested are evidence of the unwarranted rates which private monopoly is imposing.

Insull Combine Got Most.

The Insull combine centering around Chicago overtops all others in the magnitude of its gross income and profit. The four companies comprising this group took in $131,456,330 during 1923. Of this $11,675,313, representing 10 1-2 per cent on the par value of common stock; Commonwealth Power, $11,869,214, amounting to $11.55 a share of no par value common stock; Public Service of Northern Illinois, $4,580,673, or $15.22 per $100 share, and Midwest Utilities, $11,449,844, giving common stockholders $23.24 on each $100 of investment.

Over 11 Per Cent Without Risk

Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, controlling all the public utilities in the larger cities of that state, received a gross income of $79,107,882 during 1923, of which profits absorbed $20,121,122. This left common stockholders a profit of $5.69 a share. As each share of no par value represents an investment of approximately $50 the return is equivalent to $11.38 on $100.

Consolidated Gas Company of New York, which swallowed up New York Edison and other electric light properties in certain suburbs, received a gross income of $123,741,998 during 1923. Of this $35,808,770 was clear profit. This meant a profit of $7.77 on each $50 share of common stock, more than 15.5 per cent.

Some Pickings.

North American Company made a profit of $27,176,069 on a gross business of $75,465,265. Its profit appears as a return of only $3.11 a share but the company recently issued five shares of $10 stock in exchange for each $50 share formerly held by stockholders. Thus this year's profits means a return of $31.10 on each $100 invested. North American controls utilities in the most important industrial centers of Wisconsin, Missouri and Ohio.

The 23 public utility companies in all parts of the country operated by Stone & Webster made a profit of $17,155,956 on a gross business of $42,468,428. American Water Works and Electric, forming the nucleus of super-power in Pennsylvania, made a profit of $14,066,361 on a gross business of $34,066,361, giving common stockholders $13.29 a share.

What Pacific Gas Got.

Pacific Gas and Electric controlling the majority of utilities in Northern California, made a profit of $16,478,332 on a business of $39,971,743, giving common stockholders $10.24 a share. Southern California Edison made a profit of $11,390,068 on a business of $20,545,430, allowing common stockholders $9.50 a share.

Detroit Edison and Brooklyn Edison reported profits of $9,359,726 and $7,670,329, giving their common stockholders $11.83 and $13.07 a share.

Injunctions Back Profits.

The rate of profits in some instances might not be considered excessive in a speculative industry. But under the present rate making theory which is enforced by the courts the common stock of these big utilities is no more speculative than an A No. 1 bond. If state commissions attempt to reduce rates below a level which will give the public utilities a so-called fair return on their inflated valuations they are promptly stopped by court injunction on the ground that such rates are confiscatory.

As a result it will be impossible for consumers to escape unnecessarily high electricity and gas rates as long as the doctrine of private ownership is applied to public utilities.

(The people of Ontario, Can., found this out and shifted to public ownership of super-power. The result will be described in the next article.)

KENTUCKY MINERS ENSLAVED BY NEW SCAB CONTRACT

Four-Year Pact Provides for Open Shop

By J. A. HAMILTON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., April 10.—Coal Age for April 3, 1924, reports the contract just signed between the Kentucky-Tennessee Coal Operators Association and District 9, United Mine Workers of America. This is one of the several "Provisional Districts in the union, whose officers, Wm. Turnblazer, president, and E. L. Reed, secretary, are appointed by President Lewis. It covers Southeastern Kentucky and Eastren Tennessee, which are but partially organized.

This contract has several noteworthy features. First, it runs until April 1, 1928, thus overlapping the contracts in the other districts by a year. In case of a strike in 1927, the union men in this district would be scabbing on their brothers, yet unable in view of their agreement, to go on strike as members of the union.

Contracts Union Scabbed in 1922.

The same situation existed in 1922, and undoubtedly handicapped the strike, altho the railroad shopmen's strike prevented the situation from being as serious as otherwise. The continuance in operation of the Kentucky mines was the occasion for one of the charges in the new-famous letter of Frank Farrington to Lewis, in which Farrington repeated the rumor that Lewis was well-paid for allowing these mines to operate during the strike. Something other than the good of the union must have influenced Lewis in allowing his appointees to sign another over-lapping contract, and one for four years, while the rest of the district are only for three years.

Wages Cut 20 Per Cent.

Another feature is the low wage scale. Tonnage rates are not given in the report but are said to be cut 0 per cent below the 1920-1922 rate. The day-rate varies from $3.64 for outside yard couplers to $5.40 for inside machine runners. (In other districts machine runners are paid tonnage, and often make two or three times $5.40.) Wonder what band of "Reds" was responsible for this? In misrepresenting the Nova Scotia matter, Lewis has done his best to blame upon Moscow and the Nova Scotia radicals the cuts made in that unhappy mining section, and in reality encouraged by Lewis' emissaries and henchmen.

A third feature is the absence of check-off for the union but there is $1.00 per day taken from each member of the union to maintain an arbitration committee of two miners and two operators (one of each from each state) and an umpire selected by these four.

Open Shop Recognized.

Another mark of distinction is the open-shop clause, which provides for freedom of members or non-members of the union from discrimination or interference by the company or by the opposite group of workers. If you join the union, all right; if not, all right.

That Lewis should approve of such an agreement for such a length of time as four years, and especially to overlap the other agreements, should certainly lead to the suspicion that something is the matter with the union policy. It may well be inquired whether such a rotten agreement is not better suited to discourage rather than encourage complete unionization of this Southeastern Kentucky-Tennessee field. However, Lewis seems to be more interested in "stabilization" than in "unionization" of the industry.

Cleveland Labor Conferring May 14 On 3rd Party Issue

(By The Federated Press)

CLEVELAND, April 10.—By unanimous action delegates to the Cleveland Federation of Labor instructed their officers to send out a call for a progressive political mass meeting May 14. All local unions are asked to elect three delegates and instruct them to vote on the following propositions:

1. Shall we form a non-partisan political movement independent of all existing political organizations to protect the rights and interests of the workers and secure honest government?
2. Shall we confine our efforts, as heretofore, for labor representation in and thru the existing political parties?

The Ohio State Federation has affiliated with the conference for political action by vote of its state convention in Mansfield three months ago.

"The Story of John Brown"

This is "The Story of John Brown," by Michael Gold. Published by the DAILY WORKER thru arrangement with Haldeman-Julius Company, of Girard, Kans. Copyrighted, 1924, by Haldeman-Julius Company.

* * * *

His Soul Goes Marching On.

JOHN BROWN was hung on December 2, 1859. Exactly eleven months later Abraham Lincoln was elected President of the United States. Exactly eight months after that, Northern troops were marching southward, to put down the rebellion of the slave states that had hung Brown.

No one at the time believed events would march so swiftly after Brown's death. There were many who knew that some sort of conflict between the North and South was inevitable; it had been brewing for decades But there were as many more who were confident that slavery would win its legal fight, and would spread over the whole continent. And the great mass of Americans just faintly understood the issues involved; to most of them, John Brown seemed some kind of mad fanatic.

Abolitionists Gain Strength

President Lincoln's election undoubtedly provoked the Civil War. And his election was undoubtedly due to the discussion on slavery that raged after John Brown's deed. Lincoln was the first Northerner to be elected in forty years; the South had always carried things before it, and would have done so again had not John Brown roused the entire North to a consciousness of what slavery meant.

And yet even most of his friends thought him mad at the time of the deed. Abraham Lincoln, in a campaign speech at Cooper Union, in New York, said: "Old John Brown has been executed for treason against a state. We cannot object, even tho he agreed with us in thinking slavery wrong. That cannot excuse violence, bloodshed and treason."

Only men of the stamp of Wendell Phillips fully understood what John Brown had done. His funeral oration at the last resting place of John Brown's body had all the vision of the prophets:

Phillips Eulogy

"Marvelous old man! . . . He has abolished slavery in Virginia. You may say that this is too much. Our neighbors are the very last men we know. The hours that pass us are the ones we appreciate the least. Men walked Boston streets, when night fell on Bunker Hill, and pitied Warren, saying, 'Foolish man! Thrown his life away! Why didn't he measure his means better!' Now we see him standing colossal on that blood-stained sod, severing that day the tie which bound Boston to Great Britain. That night George III ceased to rule in New England. History will date Southern emancipation from Harper's Ferry. True, the slave is still there. So, when the tempest uproots a pine in your hills, it looks green for months, for a year. Still it is timber, not a tree. John Brown has loosened the roots of the slave system; it only breathes—it does not live—hereafter."

Wendell Phillips was a prophet; and even men of wide vision like Lincoln could not attain his lofty view. At first there was a rush of Northern politicians to disavow and condemn John Brown's deed. Later, there was approval; still later understanding; still later, worship.

Madness of the Brain

Yes, the old man seemed mad, as all pioneers are mad. Gorky has called it the madness of the brave. But such madness seems necessary to the world; the world would sink into a bog of respectable tyranny and stagnation were there not these fresh, strong, ruthless tempests to keep the waters of life in motion.

Who knows but that some time in America the John Browns of today will be worshipped in like manner? The outlaws of today, the unknown soldiers of freedom.

"And his soul goes marching on."

(THE END.)

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

JOIN THE SCHOOL ARMY!

By JOHN HARVEY.

THAT big capital should control the schools is just as normal under the present system as their control of the government; but only now and then when there is a scandal does the "public" awaken to this relationship. At present there is no scandal affecting the schools such as the public scandal exposing the government, and for this reason the complete control of the schools by business cannot be exposed in such a spectacular and convincing manner. But fortunately there are always garrulous principals and superintendents who in their haste to please the interests they serve are unnecessarily frank and their speeches when printed in the papers help to destroy the illusions of the workers.

Talk Is Cheap.

Such a man is William McAndrew, superintendent of the Chicago public schools. During the short time he has been in Chicago he has talked a great deal about the correct manner in which to educate children. It is significant that almost all of his speeches have been delivered before business organizations, his first public speech in Chicago being before the Chicago Association of Commerce. His speeches show that he is a man of great ambitions. If he could carry out successfully the plan of education that he laid before the Chicago Association of Commerce he would succeed in making each child a soldier in his school army for the defence of the private property holders in Chicago and America.

"The public schools are not for the children; they are not run so the pupils who attend them may become better fitted individually." All the property owners of the city and state are taxed for public education, irrespective of whether they have children of school age or not—therefore, reasons McAndrew, they should be trained to serve and support the tax payers (property owners) in return for their kindness. With this debt hanging over the heads of the children, they should only concern themselves with purposeful education which will help them to repay it, and should not be concerned with their advancement. These are the convictions of Superintendent McAndrew.

"Children should go to school for the same reason that men join the army—for the sake of patriotism," says McAndrew. From his previous statements it would appear that he were willing to substitute "private property" for patriotism, and had no illusions about why men join the army.

Speeches Before Business Men.

But even in speeches before business men the schools must maintain a front of public service, especially when the speech is to be printed in the papers, so McAndrew descends to a few misstatements in an attempt to prove that this service to the property owners is a service to the whole community, state and nation.

In his desperate attempt to show that this service of the comparatively small number of capitalists is a public service, he makes the mistake of saying that all of the people of the United States are taxed to educate the children of some. If this statement were true it would show that the school served the interest of the entire population when it served the taxpayers. But, unfortunately for McAndrew it is not true, and he, as superintendent of schools should know from what taxes the educational fund and his own salary are derived.

The educational fund in Chicago as in practically all cities thruout the country, is derived from city and state taxes on real property. When making the statement that all the people of the country pay the school taxes he overlooks the fact that the working class, the majority of the population, contains practically no owners of real property while many of the middle class also are propertyless. And in place of saying that all are served when the tax payers are served, he should state that the schools are being used to serve a minority of the population (owners of real estate) against the vast majority of the population, the workers and others who own no property.

Also, Superintendent McAndrew fails to point out that real estate is taxed proportionately, and, therefore, the even smaller minority of big industrialists and financial interests, since they own the most property and pay the biggest school taxes, and they think they should in proportion receive the greatest support from the schools. That this small group has complete control of the public school is shown by the following:

Capitalists Benefit From War.

Only the biggest capitalists will benefit by the coming imperialist war, while all of the farmer and middle class tax payers will be hurt by it, many of them ceasing to be tax payers as a result. Yet in the public schools of Chicago, as in the schools thruout the country, the children are being busily trained for war.

The extreme antagonism against the workers is not characteristic of all the tax payers, yet it is this antagonism characteristic of the big capitalists (antagonism against the unions, labor party, strikers, etc.) that the schools are feeding the children, especially the working class children.

The government which has been shown to act only in the interests of the big capitalists by the Teapot Dome scandal and which fights against the farmers and other small tax payers, is continually held up to the children as perfection, and its living and dead presidents are held before the children as the country's great men. In certain working class districts the public school children are required to swear allegiance to the government every day.

Thus Superintendent McAndrew in his speeches only shows us the more clearly how the "public" schools are training their students for the army of capitalist supporters—to aid the capitalist class in its imperialist wars and its continuous warfare against the workers.

Our Musical Critic Loves Color Tone of Madame Butterfly

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

"Madam Butterfly," with Tamaki Miura, the Japanese singer, taking the leading part, was the offering of the San Carlo Opera Company for last Saturday afternoon at the Auditorium theatre. A better Butterfly than Tamaki Miura cannot be desired. Grace, delicacy, refinement and a distinctly Oriental atmosphere characterize both her acting and her singing of the pathetic lyrical music. Her appearance, beautifully costumed, small and comely in form, was not the least pleasing quality of her charm.

The most impressive performance outside that of the name part was Francesco Curci as Goro, the old marriage broker, a comedy character admirably played. Mario Valle as Sharpless, the American consul, and Anita Klinova as Suzuki, Butterfly's servant, gave adequate and satisfying performances, but Demetrio Onofrei as Pinkerton left much to be desired.

It is difficult to costume a European opera chorus as Japanese and not have it look like a sort of pajama party. But the San Carlo did it, and did it well.

But when all dicta are said and forgotten it is the performance of Tamaki Miura that sticks in the memory. At the conclusion of the famous aria of the second act ("One Day He'll Come"), the oboe player in the orchestra was wiping his eyes. And if a composer can write music and a singer sing it in such a manner that causes an oboeist in an opera orchestra to weep they have both achieved the ultimate.

Following the opera the Pavley and Oukrainsky ballet put on six short dances. The famous "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers" from the Russian Bat theatre was used by them in a charmingly graceful French polka. Mlle Elisius danced to a Chopin nocturne in a way quite suggestive of the interpretive movement of Isadora Duncan. The program ended up with a whirling, brilliant hymn of joy in which the full ballet corps participated.

COLUMBIA NEGRO REFUSES TO MOVE DESPITE KLUXERS

Wells Will Defend Self Against White Bigots

(Crusader Service.)

NEW YORK, April 10.—Opinion among Columbia students living in Furnald Hall concerning the desirability of Frederick W. Wells, a colored law student, remaining as a resident in the dormitory became more sharply divided yesterday after a cross had been burned on the campus early in the morning in an effort to terrorize Wells into moving. A petition in behalf of Wells found many signers and a movement was begun to force the students house committee to withdraw its resolution that the Negro find lodgings elsewhere.

Will Defend Himself.

Wells himself, while affected by the demonstration of the burning of the cross and white students running thru the hallways crying, "Down with the Negro," did not weaken in his determination to keep his room. He declared that if attacked he would defend himself and that only a request by university officials would make him leave the dormitory. The officials, however, are expected to make no such request.

"It will take more manly men than those who now oppose me to oust me," Wells said.

Sentiment in Furnald Hall appears to be rapidly swinging in support of Wells. Joseph Zavatt, senior law student, who heads a group of students that circulated a petition against the action of the hall committee, said:

"There are other students who support my stand. They don't want to sign their names, but they will protest against the committee's action, just the same, by secret ballot."

Charges of existence of a Columbia klan came from a former prominent student of Columbia College who said he was present, but did not join, at a klan organization meeting held near the campus in 1921

J. B. Rucker, of Norfolk, Va., chairman of the hall committee and leader in the fight against Wells, refused to deny or affirm klan connections.

Indignant at Southerners.

I. R. Goldberg, of Marblehead, Mass., a member of the hall committee, announced his resignation because of adoption by this committee of the resolution urging university authorities to ask Wells to leave. At least four other members, all of Northern birth are expected soon to resign.

In resigning, Goldberg, who is a Jew, attacked Rucker, Southerner, "deliberately misrepresenting the feelings of the majority of students in the hall with regards to the Wells matter.

"I believe Mr. Rucker, self-appointed chairman, is not the type of man I desire to associate with," Goldberg said.

Dean Herbert E. Hawkes said no racial discrimination will be permitted at Columbia and, in evidence of the attitude, Herbert I. Howe, director of dormitories, accepted a five dollar deposit from Wells for a room for the summer.

Whitewash Coal Barons for Deaths In W. Va. Explosion

(By The Federated Press)

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., April 10.—"Nobody" was responsible for the explosion which occurred in mine No. 2 of the Yukon Pocahontas Coal Co. here March 27. It was just a regular blowup that killed 24 coal diggers. There had to be a mock investigation, however. A coroner's jury that visited the ill-fated mine reported April 4 that the explosion was caused by "powder or electric detonations and assisted by coal dust." It does not blame anyone.

The wrecked mine is located in McDowell county, owned and controlled by non-union coal operators. This county charters the infamous Baldwin-Felts detective agency whose thugs have by brute force kept all semblance of unionism out of this territory. The accident was a "dust explosion" that can only be caused by illegal accumulation of dust in a mine. The law requires that such dust shall be removed or dampened by systematic sprinkling with water to prevent its ignition.

But a jury in McDowell county does not consider laws where workers' lives are concerned. People here cannot remember a single "illegal" accident in the mines.

No one was even held responsible for the murder of Sid Hatfield and Ed Chambers on the courthouse steps of Welch in this county.

Blot Truth From Histories in Behalf Of "Americanism"

ALBANY, N. Y., April 10.—All textbooks in the schools of New York state are being searched for "un-American matter," according to Frank Gilbert, deputy commissioner of education. Any book found to assail or "misrepresent the motives" of American patriots in the revolutionary war, will be declared tabu. The state legislature provided for this probe.

Churches Back Klan In Violence Crusade Against Jewish Mayor

(Crusader Service.)

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 10.—The Buffalo Council of Churches, representing virtually all of the Protestant denominations in this city, is backing the Ku Klux Klan in a bitter campaign against Mayor Frank X. Schwab, who is a Jew and a member of those groups outside the charmed circle of Klanism.

The campaign against the mayor opened today with the burning of a 10-foot oil soaked Klan cross in South Park Avenue, near the Woodside Methodist Church, of which the Rev. Robert Doherty, Klan sympathizer, is pastor, and ended with Police Chief Zimmerman calling upon the preachers to keep out of police affairs. The campaign against the Jewish mayor and chief of police is camouflaged behind a so-called "moral issue" which supporters of the mayor declared is made out of the whole cloth.

Another Labor "Victory"

The utter futility of the tactics adopted by the trade union officialdom of Chicago in the recent primary election is shown by the fact that State's Attorney Crowe, the arch-enemy of labor in Chicago, was re-nominated while Len Small, fought by the bigger capitalists represented by the Tribune and Daily News and endorsed by "labor," was also re-nominated on the republican ticket for governor.

It is evident that the official wiseacres of the Chicago labor movement believed that the Small machine, in return for their endorsement, would aid them in defeating Crowe, but the dreary truth is that many of the Small followers must have supported Crowe to enable him to pile up his lead in a county that Small carried by a good majority.

It is also noticeable that Newton Jenkins, endorsed on the republican ticket for United States senator by the Conference for Progressive Political Action, did very poorly in Chicago but fairly well in downstate districts where the unions are much weaker. It seems apparent that the very practical officials who have so much to say about the visionary ideas of the Communists are not even able to organize their own forces for action on the old party tickets.

Their action in endorsing candidates in the capitalist parties has simply added to the confusion in the local labor movement without any compensating results having been attained.

These same tactics have been followed for years without any result other than an increase in the number and expansion of the scope of injunctions and we wonder how much longer these "practical" leaders can continue to justify such childish displays of political action.

There is so much reverence for respectability in the Chicago labor movement that the officialdom chooses to mix on a footing of some equality in the party councils of the capitalists without any guarantees of immunity for the unions rather than break once and for all with the bosses and conduct a clean-cut campaign on class lines—win or lose. It is a condition symptomatic of the American labor movement as a whole.

Borah's Lamentations

Sad and desolate sits the Republican Party! The national committee, championing Daugherty, is merely on working terms with Coolidge. More cabinet members are asking "who's next?" Senator Pepper is working overtime distilling abstractions to hide the rottenness of his party. And, Senator Borah, at "fighting" republican liberal who always ls to get his feet wet in a storm, is now eaching sermons in a wail of lamentations. l in all, a desperate state of affairs for a verning party, it must be granted.

Borah's latest lament is characteristic of at blindfolded leadership that liberalism in merica is only capable of. The mental giant om Idaho sees the source of all the present ls in Washington in the fact that both par— republican and democratic—are receiv- vast campaign contributions from the big business interests. "So long as the present system and standards prevail in American politics, regardless of party, you will have conditions no less deplorable than those which now confront us," is the belief of Mr. Borah.

Right you are, Senator—but only partly. To get at the basic source of the prevailing rottenness in American politics, one must answer two fundamental questions which your analysis compels inquiring. First of all, how does it come about that there can be such big private interests spending huge sums of money as investments in the two political parties? Secondly, why do these captains of finance and industry spend their money so recklessly, as it were, on the republican and democratic parties and why do these level-headed business men consider it a good investment to blow in their beloved dollars on the Falls, Denbys, Daughertys, McAdoos, and Coolidges?

To answer these questions one must go to the root of all Teapot politics, whether it be played on the piers of Los Angeles, in the White House at Washington, or in General Wood's palace in the Philippines. It is only thru the private ownership of the means of production and exchange socially used and necessary, that certain individual capitalists, or groups of capitalists, can dominate industry and develop such big private interests as those that today finance the republican and democratic parties. Secondly, it is solely because the capitalist ownership of government is essential to a continuation and perpetuation of the present system of exploitation of the working and poor farming masses by the owning capitalist class that the huge campaign funds are sound investments. Herein lies the difficulty. Borah and his liberal cohorts might legislate pure campaign laws from now till doomsday. As long as the means of production and exchange are in the hands of a special privileged capitalist class, ways and means will be found to make the lawmakers be the willing tools and do the bidding of the bosses. Capitalist money speaks eloquently in countless tongues and manners.

Borah's lamentations are the typical impotent cries of our blind bankrupt liberalism that is today rendering inestimable services to the powerful reactionary capitalist interests by its high-sounding pleas for purity in politics. Only when the conditions under which Teapot politics flourish are abolished; only when the workers and poor farmers of this country take away the government and the industries from the employing class, will the graft, bribery, corruption, and reckless wasting of our natural resources be done away with.

French Militarism

Hundreds of thousands of American workers and farmers, and millions of the workers and farmers of other counties were maimed and slaughtered in the imperialist World War in order to end the menace of militarism. This is the fraud under which the workers of many countries were lashed into the armies of their bosses.

The Communists of all countries, unlike the social-patriotic betrayers of the decrepit Second International, did not fall for these snares and delusions of the employing class and did their best to turn the imperialist war for the defense of capitalism into a class war, a social revolution in behalf of the international working class, the revolutionary proletariat.

Since the conclusion of the last capitalist infernal slaughter of the workingmen and poor farmers, event after event has substantiated the correctness of the Communist attitude and practice towards capitalist wars. France, the cradle of bourgeois, of capitalist democracy in its pristine and purest form, the France which was supposed to have been most endangered by German militarism and for the security of whose ruling class we became the best armed capitalist anti-militarists yet seen, is now the worst example of capitalist militarism. The fact that the French government which proclaimed but yesterday, in shrieks to the seventh heaven, its hatred of militarism, is today the most ardent militarist government under the sun, affords the very best proof that all capitalist wars are imperialist wars and that the only task for the workers and farmers under such conditions is to turn these wars of their exploiters into one war along the whole front against all the exploiters.

The French ruling class maintains today a bigger army than it did in 1914, before it successfully disposed of the menace of German militarism. The total strength of the French army is today 785,924 men against 720,000 of ten years ago. There are in France today 30,000 commissioned and 70,000 non-commissioned officers. Five years after German militarism was crushed by the combined "pure" democracies of Paris and Washington, of the Quay d'Orsai and Wall Street, France has 2,450 generals more than it had when its "security" was first challenged. In 1914 the total army expenditures of France totalled 1,262,000,000 gold francs. Allowing for the depreciation of currency, one finds France still burdened by the staggering sum of 3,720,000,000 paper francs being expended for the materials of war. Except for the reserve of 4,000 airplanes and 2,000 military airships now in service. France also has a huge supply of civilian airplanes which can be of service in making France the undisputed master of the air.

The case of French imperialism is typical of the conduct of the peace-loving ruling classes of the other allied capitalist countries that were so panicky yesterday over the menace of militarism. There is nothing and no one that can end militarism except a complete destruction of capitalist imperialism of which militarism is only a special violent form. Militarism and imperialism are the twin strike-breaking brothers of capitalism. The World War and its aftermath have taught the workers of every country that their salvation lies only in a decisive, crushing, irretrievable defeat of this unholy trinity.

Y. W. L. Anti-War Meeting

The Anti-War mass meeting, to be held Sunday, at 2733 Hirsch Boulevard, should be attended by everyone who wants to understand the Communist position and particularly the Young Communist position on capitalist war.

It is the young workers and students who are the first to be conscripted for imperialist warfare and the recent publicity given to anti-war movements among the youth of the United States is evidence of the hatred with which the capitalists and their press regard anything that tends to diminish the enthusiasm of the youth for being slaughtered for interest and dividends.

The Young Workers League, thru its activity among the youth, has succeeded in getting under the hides of the war-mongers. The meeting Sunday is under their auspices and they can be depended upon to make it interesting.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

"Happiness and Peace, Home and Abroad"---MacDonald

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

THE wing of the British Labor Party now filling the cabinet posts by grace of the liberal party is rapidly losing what little labor character it had when it took office. It has severed its connection with even the moribund second international, most of the cabinet ministers have resigned their official positions in the trade union movement and the cabinet group has indignantly repudiated the charge that they are subject to the discipline of the party that put them in office.

The executive of the Trade Union Congress, the official expression of the British labor movement is not obeyed by the cabinet ministers but is merely "consulted" thru the medium of a "liason committee"—a striking contrast to the strict discipline maintained over their politicians by the capitalists.

The Communists are not surprised by these developments but in the mass of material that is published in America concerning the British Labor party and its program there is danger that the movement will be confused with its officialdom. MacDonald does not speak for British labor nor does the cabinet clique represent British labor—even its most conservative section.

The MacDonald cabinet with one or two exceptions represents the British middle class and some lower sections of the capitalist class; the pronounciamentos of MacDonald and his immediate followers are designed to express and do express the attitude of those sections of British society towards present day problems.

An Appropriate Medium.

We do not have to go to England to ascertain the views held on economics, politics, ethics and religion by Ramsay MacDonald. Collier's, which vies with Hearst's in broadcasting a particularly objectionable form of liberalism, has published recently an interview with Ramsay MacDonald in which his opinions on these matters are set forth at length.

In this article I will quote liberally from the above interview and, I think, destroy any lingering doubt as to whether Ramsay MacDonald is anything other than a rather mild and muddled liberal. It might be well to say here that his mildness vanishes, as is the habit of liberals, whenever the masses of Great Britain or her colonies, show signs of doing some of the "saving of the working class" that liberals of the MacDonald type seem to regard as peculiarly their own function.

> The leaders of our party, says MacDonald, are not Communists, not soap-box radicals nor wild-eyed fanatics; they are composed largely of educated men, ministers of the Gospel, lawyers, writers, the intelligentsia of England.

Ramsay MacDonald himself is a presbyterian and always says grace before meals. Truly the fate of the British Empire is safe in such sanctimonious hands. As to the British working class that is another matter that the agile MacDonald handles blithely. In reply to the question: "What are you going to do for the benefit of labor?" MacDonald speaks out with presbyterian candor and in a decisive tone that, coupled with the sentiments expressed, accounts for the equanimity with which British capitalism has viewed the rise of this group to government positions. He says:

> If you mean whether I am going to disrupt our economic condition—by radical legislation, no! if you mean what constructive legislation will be put thru, I can best answer that by saying that every measure attempted will be done with an eye to protect the rights of labor against the encroachments of capital. On the other hand the rights of capital also will be protected.

What About the Class Struggle?

If MacDonald does not know that the protection of the rights of capital is a betrayal of labor he is a first-class ignoramous; if he does know this then by the above utterance and the policy he has followed since in office he brands himself as a charlatan of the first water.

MacDonald, speaking for the group that has purged itself of all labor coloring since it took office and that looks askance at Wheatley, the left-winger from the Clyde, who alone puts up a fight against British capitalism, voices the doctrine of class-collaboration and would have British labor believe that capital and labor can lie down together without danger that the labor lamb will rest quietly in the stomach of the capitalist lion.

Listen to what he says of the bitterest enemies of the British working class:

> Personally, I have nothing against the Opposition leaders, many of them are honest in their intentions. Lord Curzon is a very able man.
> Furthermore, I will say something that will surprise you. I expect Lord Curzon to be a great service to me in the administration of the Government. There are many surprises due to the Conservatives and Liberals at the manner in which a Labor Government will be administered.

It is almost needless to add for those who have been following the career of the MacDonald government that the surprises, so far as the capitalists are concerned, have all been pleasant ones.

It was when asked for his opinion of the liberal party that MacDonald really opened his heart. It was a subject that he loved and he was generously voluble:

> It has some very able men at the head of it. Their sentiments are exactly the same as ours, with the exception that they have not the moral courage to carry their convictions to the logical conclusion.
> The time is coming quickly when there will be only two parties, the Conservatives who represent capital, and the combined forces who favor a government by the people. The public will learn that the bugaboo of a Labor party is a myth; that we are not Communists, will not be controlled by the small minority of our party who are Communistic; that we do not favor direct action; that we are wholeheartedly in favor of parliamentary government according to law, and bitterly opposed to any Bolshevik control; we are constitutionalists.

Capitalist Lackey.

Here we have in extenso the MacDonald creed and in it there is no expression of faith or hope in the working class. It is the impartial state where good men rule because of their goodness that this man, upon whom the socialists of the world have heaped encomiums, visualizes; he wants a government "according to law" and laws that matter—those affecting property rights and the control of the lives of the workers because of them—are property rights. Any change in these laws the MacDonaldites have already abjured; they must, therefore, protect the very basis of capitalism and they will.

Even the mild reform of capital levy is repudiated by MacDonald with something approaching holy horror—altho the British working class voted for it. Expressions of the popular will can be disregarded safely, even by apostles of democracy, when their consummation would alienate the real rulers—the big capitalists and the cockroach substrata.

Speaking of the capital levy MacDonald says:

> It is impossible even if we were so inclined, without Liberal support. Furthermore, we are not at all certain that a capital levy is at present the best for the country. It would put us upon a sound financial basis. But the danger to the economic world of such a sudden change in economic policy necessitates careful thought before it is attempted.

"The economic world" that would be endangered by carrying out the pledges made to the British working class before election is the economic world of the British capitalist class and if you have read the above exhibits of MacDonaldism you know already that the group for which he speaks have no intention of even remodeling extensively the structure of British capitalism.

Only such measures will be urged as will make no serious inroads upon the control of industry and finance by the exploiters of the workers.

In the MacDonald cabinet are many representatives of the old British official caste, the landed aristocracy and the financiers—the Haldanes, Chelmsfords, Thomsons, Oliviers, etc. Their policies are the historical imperialistic policies of Great Britain altho at present covered with a liberal camouflage and under the MacDonald government the colonial peoples are enslaved as they always have been; with the additional insult that the Curzon policy of giving them reactionary nationalist governments as more efficient instruments of oppression is being followed.

Arresting Strikers.

At the same time that MacDonald breathes wishes of peace on earth and goodwill to men and sends a message of congratulation to that tool of British imperialism, the Egyptian national government, sixteen members of the Communist party of Egypt have been arrested for taking an active part in the strikes of the underpaid workers in Alexandria. They are charged, in accordance with the best democratic traditions, with the following crimes—crimes with which e ery revolting working class has bee charged since the class struggle b came party of history:

> (2) Attempting to upset the basis of social order by force, terror, and other illegal methods.
> (3) Inciting workmen to commit attempts against private property and besiege factories belonging to private persons.

Let us turn now and peruse th message of congratulation sent recently to the middle class governmen of Egypt by Ramsay MacDonald—th liberal Christian pacifist:

> The Egyptian nation, which, having been endowed by its sovereign, King Fuad, with a modern and liberal constitution, is now for the first time represented by the Parliament elected upon the broad foundation of popular suffrage. . . . The advance of Egypt . . . amongst the company of the free and progressive peoples of the world . . . an era of happiness with peace at home and abroad.

"An era of happiness with peace a home and abroad." The class struggle no longer exists in the Britis Empire. Two million British workers are without jobs. The Indian an the Egyptian workers may starve an fight and fight and starve again an revolutionary workers fill the colonia jails but in Great Britain the MacDonald cabinet has made its peac with British capitalism, the "radicals" and "extremists" are hated by "labor" premier and noble lor alike; no drastic measures but maintenance of the status quo unti British capitalism gets on its fee again with the aid of a "labor" government.

Fascism Threatens.

The British working class is no quite so naive as the American socialists and it is not quite so well satisfied with the respectable parliamentarians who have severed their connections with the crude and impatient workers and everything tainted with the revolutionary doctrine of the class struggle.

Encouraged by the spinelessness of this so-called labor government British fascism mutters in its beard and prepares to junk the democracy for which it no longer has use; the MacDonaldites will cling to the frail ship until it is swamped by the rising waves of the storm that the decay of British capitalism is bringing and then its wreckage will join the debris of European capitalist parliamentarism that strews the shores of the continent.

Today, under its present leadership, the British Labor party is a menace to the entire working class movement for it is destroying the morale of the working class at the time when the ruling class is girding for war on every form of working class organization and activity. The hope of British labor is in the Communist Party of Great Britain and the left wing of the working class movement of which MacDonald and his group speak with scorn and indignation.

The Red Farmer-International - By T. DOMBAL

WITHIN the ancient Kremlin walls an unprecedented event took place, and many are not fully aware as yet of its tremendous significance. It must be especially emphasized that this event—the first International Farmers' Conference—represents a turning point in history of mankind, and can be counted among the most important events of our epoch.

That is no exaggeration, but an appraisal of the facts based upon the prospect of coming events. Besides, Comrade Zinoviev who greeted this first International Farmers' Conference in the name of the Communist International, emphasized that the colossal significance of this Conference would be recognized in a year or two years. It is most interesting that Comrade Lenin, whose state of health already permits him to read the papers and to follow political events, took an extraordinary interest in this conference. Comrade Zinoviev made the remark that our leader has an eye; if among such numerous important events of our time he recognized the paramount significance of this conference, he is not mistaken, for this event is of epoch-making significance.

Vanguard of Militant Farmers.

Namely, that a violent change is taking place in the minds of the farmer masses of the West, and of most of the capitalist countries. This first International Farmers' Conference is an outspoken expression of this change.

The vanguard, the best part of the farmer army is hastening to the aid of the workers' army, it abandons the camp of the capitalist class and declares a pitiless war upon capitalism in the name of the vital interests of the broad farmer masses. That is exactly the great historical, epoch-making significance of the conference. The rest of the farmer masses will without any doubt follow the vanguard. The history of social movements shows us that the bearers and the spokesmen of the true interests of the class, those who step from under the yoke of oppression into the arena of the political struggle are usually a small troop of the best representatives which is soon followed by the whole class. It was not in the name of an idealistic, sentimental brotherliness, but on the ground of reality of the vital interests of the farmer masses that their true representatives arrived at the conclusion that only the closest co-operation with the working class, only the struggle of the working class in common with the farmers, against the class of exploiters of workers and farmers, against the landowners and capitalists, can free the farmer class from the yoke of centuries of oppression and subjection. True, the working class are two different social formations which are just as different as is the environment in which they live.

But apart from that, the two classes have common interests, and they find a common language in order to understand each other.

Unity of Worker and Farmer.

In reality the farmers are no less exploited by capitalism than are the workers; in many countries they are even more oppressed, as for instance, in the colonies and half colonial countries. Capitalism heaps upon them constant tortures and privations. That is why the farmer class which is prepared to fight against the enemy seeks for an unselfish, loyal ally and finds such an ally in the working class. The farmer-class realizes well enough that the landowners and the industrial and commercial bourgeoisie have contrasting interests and yet they act in concert against the workers and farmers. This instructive example of the co-operation of the two exploiting classes points more and more to the necessity of an alliance of the workers and farmers.

The conference was virtually a means of arriving at a common political and economic platform for the alliance of workers and farmers.

The conference took up the question of war and peace and arrived at the conclusion that the continued existence of the capitalist world system means a new period of calamity for the broad farmer masses. Economic questions were also brought up. The conference arrived at the conviction that in many countries the capitalist class shifts all the burdens which resulted from the war upon the shoulders of the workers and farmers. This is done in various forms: in the form of taxes, duties, in the form of depreciation of money, thru the constant inflation of paper money, etc. The farmer delegates became convinced that the blame for the high cost of living which drives workers as well as the farmers into the depths of despair, lies upon no one but the capitalist class which refuses to make any sacrifices in order to support its government. In this instance again, the correlation of farmers' interests and workers' interests was made clearly apparent.

Decline in Production.

It was further established that an ever greater decline in production may be observed in the capitalist countries and that the capitalist government does not in the least concern itself with the farmers' lot, which is going ever downward, under excessive burdens; and the only way out is the destruction of the present unjust regime.

The last circumstance speaks especially for the necessity of unity against the common enemy, capitalism. The more the life itself convinces the farmers of the impossibility of an independent, victorious struggle, the more does this idea make headway with elemental force among the unconscious masses.

The example of Bulgaria is obvious. Then we have the opposite example of Soviet Russia, where the farmers, thanks to their alliance with the working class obtained a victory. This example shows which road the movement, for liberation of the farmers, must follow.

The conference created the nucleus of the Red Farmers' International in the form of the International Farmers' Council. But it consciously drew the line of demarcation between itself and the impotent phantasies which would have it that the farmer class plays an independent political role. The conference showed the millions and tens of millions of working farmers the goal, namely, the road of hard struggle against capitalism and the alliance of workers and farmers on an international scale.

The principal watchword was adopted: "Farmers and workers of all countries unite!" This alone goes to show sufficiently well that this Red Farmers' International menaces in the highest degree the existence of capitalism.

Work For Farmers' International.

The conference did not only reckon upon the possibility of a period of common revolutionary struggle of the workers and farmers against the capitalist exploiters, but also upon the possibility of a longer, peaceful period of economic co-operation with the working class. In this respect it was decided, in order to do away with small-scale farming and gradually to introduce higher forms of agriculture, to create an Agricultural Institute similar to the Institute at Rome, but with the difference that, in contrast with the Rome Institute, which provides only for the development of landowners' estates, the Moscow Institute will have in mind the farmer.

The conference recognized as tasks of the present moment the necessity of the struggle for the government of Workers and Farmers, the struggle for an international alliance of workers' and farmers' republics.

As we see, this conference, in which 122 farmer delegates from 40 different nationalities participated (among them were even leaders of the various oppositional farmer parties, farmer associations, leagues, etc., and even certain farmer representatives in parliaments) made decisions which could be, and in fact will surely be, of tremendous significance for the political development of the laboring masses of the people of the whole world, the deadly enemy of the working class may well tremble before this Red Farmers' International. In fact, the more successfully it develops, the sooner will it lead to the downfall of capitalism. Every class-conscious worker must work for the Farmers' International.

Workers, Farmers, Unite!

May it grow, this first international farmers' organization; may it develop, may the call: "Workers and farmers of all countries unite!" reach the most remote farmers' cottages in all countries of the globe!

O. K. OF DAWES PLAN SHOWS MORGAN RULE

INJUNCTION JUDGE FOELL SCOLDS GIRLS

"Dennie's" Successor Talks To Pickets Like Old Maid

Judge Charles M. Foell let it be known yesterday that he will be as tyrannical and high-handed in endeavoring to stop the picketing of garment strikers as was his czarist predecessor, "Dennie" Sullivan.

In postponing the 43 injunction cases willed him by his bloated colleague, Judge Foell took occasion to deliver a lecture to the strikers which sounded as if a weak old maid school teacher were trying to impress her pupils on the first day of school.

Weak, Old Maidish Judge.

"I want it clearly understood that I know the law," said Foell, after ranging the girl strikers around him. "You must not go on the picket line between now and Tuesday morning when your cases come up.

"If you do you will be very severely punished. To picket is to break the law, and you might as well understand right now that the court intends to enforce the law."

It is now revealed why Sullivan "plastered" such heavy sentences on the last striker to come before him. He was giving Judge Foell the cue that it is the wish of the employers to exact exorbitant fines as an attempt to keep the strikers off the picket lines. The strikers did not seem much impresed by Foell's little lecture. Several of them smiled at him openly, and Foell had to hammer on the desk with his fist to keep their attention.

Judge Foell is a pitifully weak man. In spite of his small stature, his baldness and his weak eyes, an unfortunate conceit makes him appear quite ridiculous. It is pointed out by court room attaches that Foell's very weakness of character might make him all the more unjust in imposing fines on strikers, as he will use that as a means to show his importance.

Fourteen more strikers were arrested on Market street this morning, but the picket lines are holding as solid as ever.

Sullivan's court is closed. He was bleary eyed and sickly yesterday, his last day in court, as were many of the city hall people who had imbibed election moonshine too freely. Those who have regard for real justice are glad to see the domineering Sullivan leave the city. The only notoriety he achieved was as a tool of the bosses, who in order to do their bidding, excessively fined and sentenced to jail working girls whose only crime was in striving to earn a living wage for themselves and their families. Sullivan released 21 on appeal bonds before leaving, the union putting up twenty-one thousand dollars worth of bonds.

The Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has approved the decision to aid the strikers financially and ten thousand dollars will be immediately turned over to the strikers.

18 Miners Injured By Failure of Poor Safety Machine Device

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUQUOIN, Ill., April 11.—Eighteen coal miners were injured, some perhaps fatally, when the cage in which they were being lowered into the Kathleen mine, of the Union Colliery Company of St. Louis, five miles from here, dropped fifty feet to the bottom of the shaft today.

The accident is attributed to the blowing out of the safety fuse on an electrical hoist, and the failure of "safety dogs" to hold the hoisting drum.

The shaft is about 200 feet deep. The injured miners, residents of Duquoin and Dowell, are being cared for in the Browning hospital here.

Morgan and the Masses

The French government, brazenly announce the big press services of the United States, "will accept the terms laid down in the Dawes report" because it is understood that this was one of the conditions of the recent loan" made by the House of Morgan.

A Brussels dispatch, of April 10, gives the further information that "in the course of a conversation between Charles G. Dawes of Chicago, Premier Theunis and Economics Minister Van de Vyvere" the funding of Belgium's foreign debt, particularly that portion concerning the United States, was decided upon.

• • • •

WHAT IS DAWES?

Charles G. Dawes holds no mandate from the people of the United States. On the commission of the experts he was merely the representative of the House of Morgan and as such he acts when he arranges for the funding of the Belgian debt. That a private citizen can make such arrangements and his decision be heralded as final by the capitalist press of the world is a striking commentary upon the real source of government power.

• • • •

WAR FOR MORGAN

Remember that the French and Belgian debts to the House of Morgan run into billions of dollars; remember that as the basis of the Dawes scheme for payment of reparations on the part of Germany a loan of $200,000,000 is contemplated; remember also in this connection that the sole reason that the United States went into the world war was that the loans of the House of Morgan to the allied governments had to be secured against the danger of a drawn battle between the contending imperialist nations—in which event the House would have been allowed to whistle for its money.

• • • •

NO MAXIMUM AMOUNT

The Dawes report fixes no maximum sum that Germany must pay; it arranges for payments over a period of eight years, bringing in an amount of approximately $4,000,000,000 and it appears from this deliberate evasion of the question of the total sum that it is to be fixed in accordance with success of the allied imperialists in enslaving the German workingclass with the co-operation of the German rulers. If the organized strength of the German workers can be broken, then there will be no limit to the demands made upon them and international capitalism will have, in the continental nation where technical development has reached its highest point, an inexhaustible supply of cheap labor flooding the world with manufactured commodities.

The Wilson league of nations was the war-baby of the House of Morgan; it was supposed to have been the super-government of the finance-capitalists and the agency that would enforce the collection of their loans. It failed to meet with approval in America for reasons with which we do not need to deal here, but a central machinery was set up and kept oiled.

One of the recommendations in the Dawes report is that disputes over payments of the German reparations shall be referred to the court of arbitration of the league; if the Dawes proposal is accepted—and with minor modifications it will be accepted—the most important business of the international bankers becomes the collection of German reparation payments and over this all-important task the league will exercise supervision; it will force recognition for itself and its role as collector-in-chief for the House of Morgan to whom the nations of Europe are mortgaged.

• • • •

THE ROLE OF THE MILITARY

Is there anyone, in the face of the facts, who does not believe that in its adventures in every European bourse and counting house, the House of Morgan depends upon the army and navy of the United States for backing?

How do the activities of the House of Morgan abroad affect the American masses and how will this outright underwriting of the bankrupt European nations express itself in national politics?

The House of Morgan needs in Washington, a government which accepts its dictates without question. It needs something more efficient in the form of government than the collection of cheap and crooked politicians who made up the Harding cabinet. It needs a government with a liberal mask for the masses, but unswervingly loyal to the real masters.

It is entirely probable that the House of Morgan will, in the coming presidential campaign swing in behind the democrats and with the slogan of "Save Europe" attempt to secure an endorsement of its plans for world hegemony by resurrecting in one guise or another the league of nations as an issue.

• • • •

VIGILANCE NEEDED

One thing is certain, the present year will see an effort, more strenuous even than the propaganda campaign that preceded our entry into the war, to put the government of the United States squarely behind the House of Morgan and its program for enslavement of the workingclass of Europe.

It is a hideous scheme and one that only the utmost vigilance on the part of the most advanced sections of the workers and farmers can frustrate; the servile attitude of the capitalist press, the approving statements concerning the Dawes plan coming from the politicians of both capitalist parties is the best argument for the establishment of a mass farmer-labor party for war on American imperialism that has yet been put forward.

The workers and farmers of America should give their answer to the House of Morgan and its democratic-republican satrapy on June 17, by the organization of a powerful class party.

CHICAGO WORKERS WILL FIGHT ALIEN BILLS IN CAPITOL

Will War on Fingerprint Plan in Washington

The Chicago Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers proposes sending a delegation to Washington, D. C., to voice the protest of the labor movement against the passage of the vicious "selective" immigration laws calling for registration of foreign-born. It also urges the councils thruout the country to join in this movement. It is proposed that action be taken simultaneously by the various councils so as to create a strong delegation which could voice the protest in an impressive manner. This action would lead towards a nationally unified movement of the councils.

Miltant Action Necessary.

The Chicago Council has no intention of petitioning for favors. It aims to bring pressure to bear on the capitalist politicians and to show them what the working class thinks of their nefarious schemes. At the last meeting of the council every delegate was also urged to ask his organization to support this movement financially. The delegates unanimously went on record to urge that resolutions be adopted by their organizations protesting against the anti-alien laws, and that such resolutions be forwarded to every labor gathering and to the coming International Trades Union conventions, for their approval. The delegates voiced the sentiment that the organization to follow must be the establishment of a nation-wide farmer-labor party which will take up this issue as one of its aims.

More organizations have recently affiliated with the Chicago Council. It is continually growing in strength and now includes 70,000 organized workers directly affiliated. The Finnish workers, organized into one language council, have helped to swell the ranks. The Scandinavian workers are uniting the various existing organizations, based on the one issue and report that delegates will be selected. Mass meetings are being arranged by the Italian workers' organizations. The Lithuanian Workers Alliance has made arrangements for a mass meeting April 13.

Danger of Johnson Bill.

In Pullman a council for protection of foreign-born workers, comprising 23 organizations, has been organized and connections have been established in the small Lake County cities: Hammond, Whiting and Indiana Harbor, as well as in Gary, Indiana. These councils have also established connections and are acting jointly with the Chicago body.

The Chicago Council for Protection of Foreign Born Workers will issue a circular, to be spread broadcast, setting forth the issues involved in this campaign. Altho the Johnson Bill is the only bill reported to Congress by the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization, experience shows that when the least objectionable of the proposed bills are reported, as a rule, some of the vicious bills, or paragraphs of these, will be grafted on in the form of amendments, before the law is finally adopted.

It will be pointed out that this is a political issue and that the remedy is Independent Political Action of the working class and that it can be taken up only as class issue, vitally affecting the workers, foreign as well as native born.

Hard Coal Miners Protest Drive at Foreign Born Labor

MINERSVILLE, Pa., April 11.—A protest against the attempt of the Congress to pass discriminatory laws against the foreign-born workers of this country will be waged at a huge mass meeting to be held Sunday evening, April 27 at the Miner's Union Hall. The meeting will be addressed by well known speakers from New York and Philadelphia in English, Lithuanian and Russian.

The meeting is arranged jointly by several labor organizations of Minersville and vicinity.

Porto Rican Suffragists.

SAN JUAN Porto Rico.—The women here are demanding the right of suffrage. The Porto Rican section of the Pan-American league of women has sent a petition to the American congress and calls upon American women to help them.

MEXICO GROANS UNDER HEAVY WEIGHT OF ITS DEBTS TO WALL STEET

MEXICO CITY, April 11.—While Mexico is suffering the most acute crisis since the days of Carranza, the Obregon government has been compelled to send $3,000,000 from January to April 1, to the International Committee of Bankers under Lamont, the Morgan partner in New York. It is part payment on $17,500,000 to be made this year on account of the "recognized" debt of $700,000,000, the terrific price paid for recognition and temporary non-intervention.

At the same time Mexican federal employes are starving, being owed about two months' pay.

CANNON DEBATES EDWARDS SUNDAY ON I. W. W. ISSUE

Ralph Chaplin, Chairman; Crowd Coming

Throngs of Workers Party and I. W. W members will jam North Side Turner Hall, 820 N. Clark street, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 when James P. Cannon and Forrest Edwards debate the respective merits and principles of the two organizations.

Better qualified speakers could not easily be found. Cannon, now assistant secretary of the Workers Party has traveled thru Russia where he saw a Communist government in action and earlier in his career was thru hard battles with the wobblies. He knows both the syndicalist and Communist movements in theory and practice.

Forrest Edwards, affectionately known as "Pop" Edwards by the veterans of the pre-war harvest drives which he led for the I. W. W. is a veteran wobbly par excellence. Judge Landis recognized this when he sentenced him to 20 years in Leavenworth in the famous Chicago trial. He was released last summer in the commutation act that included Richard Brazier, Ralph Chaplin and others.

Ralph Chaplin, poet, artist and rugged class war fighter, will act as chairman at the debate. The proceeds will be equally divided between the National Defense Council and the General Defense Committee.

Tribune Candidate, Beaten by Deneen, Demands Recount

An official canvass of the vote cast in the Illinois primary for Senator McCormick and former Governor Charles Deneen will be necessary to decide the winner of the Republican Senatorial nomination, it was declared today by supporters of both candidates.

With 52 precincts missing, Deneen is leading McCormick by 3,450 votes. The count stood:

McCormick, 250,292.

McCormick supporters have little hope of overcoming the lead on the strength of the unofficial count and plan to petition for an official canvass when the balance of the precincts are in. McCormick and Deneen have hired lawyers to represent them before the state canvassing board.

Charges were made by Deneen headquarters that attempts would be made to tamper with the returns.

Trachtenberg Has Good Meetings in Coal Mine Towns

MONESSEN, Pa., April 11.—Alexander Trachtenberg's meeting in Bentleyville, was well attended. The lecture was inspiring and instructive to the audience, composed of party members, all coal miners, who came from mining camps thru almost impassable roads of mud and a drenching rain.

The Marianna branch members came ten miles in a small open Ford truck. Daisytown, nine miles away, was also well represented.

The comrades were all pleased to hear of Workers Russia progressing and all left in a happy frame of mind.

BURNS MUST GO!

U. S. GOVERNMENT PREPARES TO BACK DAWES PLAN FOR ENSLAVING GERMAN LABOR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The American government is prepared to support the unofficial role laid out for the United States in the reparations settlement proposed in the Dawes report, it was understood authoritatively here today.

The principal phases of the part of the United States under the Dawes plan, as viewed, are:

1.—Furnishing of a considerable part of the huge foreign loan contemplated to put Germany on her feet and in a position to resume reparations payments.

2.—Appointment of private American citizens in strategic positions on the various boards of control to see that the Dawes financial plan, if accepted, is carried out by Germany.

Administration quarters here pointed out today that these two phases of American co-operation, even tho they are private in character, probably would not be undertaken without governmental sanction.

In accordance with the present understanding between the state department and private American bankers, no loans are made to foreign countries without approval of the government.

France Acts on Plan.

PARIS, April 11.—The reparations commisson today accepted the report of the Dawes committee of experts and recommended its acceptance by the allied governments, provided Germany agree to its terms.

Action of the reparations commission upon the report came with unexpected suddenness after the various members had reported upon the attitude of their governments.

Louis Barthou, French member and president of the commission, announced France's acceptance, after talking with Premier Poincare this morning.

Sir John Bradbury, British member, informed his colleagues that Ramsay MacDonald and the British labor cabinet had approved the plan.

Belgium and Italy Lined Up.

The Belgian and Italian members fell into line and shortly after six o'clock this evening, acceptance of the proposals was announced, with the provision that Germany must accept them as a whole.

At the same time word came from Berlin that the German government virtually had decided to accept the Dawes report.

The plan now will be sent to the allied governments for separate consideration.

An official communique stated that the commission "considers the reports offer a practical basis for rapid solution of the reparations problem and therefore within the limits of its power, approves the conclusions and adopts the methods therein set forth."

The commission adds that it is "obliged to reserve its approval and action until Germany declares its willingness to colaborate in execution of the plan."

Another Use for Injunction

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Justice Stafford of the District of Columbia supreme court has issued an injunction against the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America and its local unions and members, officers and attorneys, to prevent enforcement of the working rules affecting out-of-town contractors.

BROOKHART AND WHEELER VISIT DAUGHERTY TOWN

Also Home of Roxie And Jess Smith

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, Ohio., April 11.—This little Ohio town awoke today with the realization that this was the day when its leading citizens come under the penetrating scrutiny of a senatorial investigating committee.

Washington Court House, smug little farming community, has been frequently mentioned in the papers as the home of Roxie Stinson, Jess Smith and others who by their testimony, caused the retirement of Attorney General Daugherty, also a native.

Townspeople Await Committee.

Half the townspeople were waiting on the streets for a glimpse of Senators Brookhart and Wheeler who were delegated to examine the books of the Midland National Bank of which Malcolm S. Daugherty, a brother of the former attorney general of the United States, is president.

The bank's books had been subpoenaed several weeks ago by the Daugherty committee but Mal Daugherty refused to bring them to Washington and the committee decided to send a sub-committee down here in the belief that the books contain evidence of the financial operations by Harry Daugherty, Jess Smith, his close personal friend and others.

Proceed Against Stubborn Witness.

Senators Brookhart and Wheeler arrived early today and went at once to the suite of rooms set aside for them at the Cherry hotel. Later they were to hold a brief conference with Mal Daugherty and his attorney regarding the scope of their examination of the records.

The sub-committee proposes also to take testimony from Daugherty who refused to answer a subpoena to come to Washington in connection with stories given the committee by Roxie Stinson, former wife of the late Jess Smith.

Mal Daugherty Confident.

Mal Daugherty himself, big, gruff and always speaking in a loud voice, was confident that the senatorial examination of his books would reveal no incriminating discrepancies, pointing to either himself or his brother, the former attorney general.

All British Shipyard Workers Locked Out In Drive On Wages

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 11.—British ship owners today announced a nation-wide lockout against all shipyard workers, effective at midnight tonight. The cause of the lockout is refusal of striking workers at Southhampton to accept the paltry offer of the owners' terms and resume work, although they were advised to do so by their own national union officials urged them to.

ALLIES FIGHT SOVIETS FOR CHINESE R. R.

Property of Late Czar Is Issue in East

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 11.—State department denials that American and French official pressure was brought to bear, with that of Japan, to prevent the ratification at Peking last month of the Russo-Chinese recognition compact, bring up the fact that the Chinese Eastern Railway is the prize over which Russia and Japan are struggling—with China as an involved spectator.

This railroad, built as a short cut across Manchuria for the Trans-Siberian railroad, has until very recently been operated by a mixed body of Russian counter-revolutionaries and of Japanese-controlled Chinese.

Powers Dictate to China

Information reaching here from the Orient is to the effect that China and Russia, if left to themselves, could quickly settle their dispute over this property. The Chinese would kick out the remnants of the Kolchak and Seminov forces that cling to the management, and welcome the representatives of the Soviet republic. But they dare not offend the Powers, who are lending money to the Peking government, and who back the Russian Whites.

More than four years have passed since Moscow sent a note to Peking, offering to "return the Chinese Eastern Railway to the Chinese people without any compensation whatever." China was afraid to accept this gift from a government which she was not permitted to recognize. Persia accepted a similar return of concessions extorted by the czars, but Persia was comparatively free. The Moscow offer has been repeated from time to time, but always the money-lending Powers have reminded the Chinese officials that the French government does not want this Russian investment to pass from the control of the czarist Russians. The embargo is to continue until Russia pays the czarist debts to the French.

Won't Pay Czarist Debts

Joffe and Karakhan, the two envoys of Moscow who have presented the issue to the Peking government—such as it is—have refused to make any pledge of payment of czarist debts to France, and they have reminded the Chinese that with the steady growth in power of the Russian government the impatience of the Russians with Chinese obedience to the Japanese and French will increase. Russian national interests do not permit of the retention of Russian counter-revolutionaries in control of a railroad so vital to the security of the Siberian border as is the Chinese Eastern. British and Italian recognition of Moscow has noticeably increased Russian prestige in the Far East. It is reported that the Russian government is not ready today to give the same generous terms to China as were offered when Russia was at war with the imperialist powers. She may decide to resume her share in control of the railroad thru Manchuria.

Milk Thief Leaves $10,000,000.

HIGHLAND, Ill., April 11.—Evidently the production of the celebrated Pet brand evaporated milk is a profitable business. Louis F. Latzer, president, Helvetia Milk Condensing Co., is dead here at 75, leaving a fortune estimated at $10,000,000.

Students of Journalism in Moscow Send Greetings to Daily Worker

ONE of the most interesting letters, yet received by the comrades of the DAILY WORKER, giving cheer in the great task undertaking to build the first English-language Communist Daily, comes from the members of the class in English Composition and Journalism conducted by Comrade MacLeod, at the "Communist University of Toilers of the East," at Moscow. We reproduce this letter in full, knowing that it will be of great interest to all of our readers. It is as follows:

* * * *

Moscow, Russia, January 22, 1924.

The DAILY WORKER, Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.

Dear Comrade: You have undertaken a great task.

We can readily vision the responsibilities which you have shouldered in accepting the editing-leadership of the DAILY WORKER. To change a small weekly paper into a nationally-circularized daily organ is no small job; and the cramming full of each page with the up-to-date news which American workers should have,—only a he-man could do.

The undersigned are students in the "COMMUNIST UNIVERSITY OF TOILERS OF THE EAST", Moscow, Russia, and members of the class in English Composition and Journalism conducted by Comrade MacLeod (late of Philadelphia). Some of us have lived for years in America; some of us are Hindus and have suffered from the brute force of British Imperialism; some of us are from China where American Capitalism is firmly entrenching itself; and some of us are sons of the Oppressed of the Far East,—Japan and Korea. But, cosmopolitan tho we may be, we all can handle the English language more or less efficiently.

We speak for all of us when we tell you that every time you touch a sensitive capitalist-nerve; every time you expose the treachery of yet another yellow double-dealing labor-leader,—the thousands of miles between you and us vanishes in thin smoke. And whether you are hammering, or being hammered,—we are with you all the way thru,—from A to Z.

But to help you materially,—how? Just this: we will furnish you each week with not less than half a dozen items of current Russian news. We will cover ordinary every-day happenings, the latest analyzed reports of governmental departments, recent economic developments, sketches of Russian life, etc. In short,—we shall make translations, either verbatim or freely, from the day's newspapers or the week's magazines, of news which we believe would be of interest to you and to the American workers. Thus you will have secured a new acquisition by reason of your "Our Correspondent in Russia" having been doubled a couple dozen times. Our initial reports will reach you about a week after you receive this letter, for the translation on which we are now working, Comrade MacLeod will be "editing" in a few days.

If we can be of further assistance to you in any way,—let us know, and we shall get on the job before sunrise.

With the best of the best wishes to you, your co-workers, and the T. U. E. L., and to the long-slumbering, but now awakening proletariat of America; and with the hope that the DAILY WORKER, and those for whom it is spokesman, will ride atop the crest of the onrushing revolutionary wave, shining forth its rays of truth so that all who wish may know the true and only way for piloting those who seek for freedom and Life, we are,

Yours for the Third International, for the Red International of Labor Unions, and for the World's Revolutionary Proletariat,

Jack Schwarzstein, Esther Schwartzstein, Sullivan Smith, Esther Wassermann, Fred Wilson, John Dugan, John Utkin (Kongts), Abdul Ahmad Var, John Hwang Jon, William Takara, Karim Roz Ab Roon, Vatu Sing Djong, Maru d. Maru Foodahn.

Young Workers League To Stage Anti-War Meet, Workers Lyceum

With the American Legion making every effort to pit the World War Veterans against the radical movement in their struggle against capitalist wars, the Young Workers League of Chicago will hold a giant mass meeting to further their campaign against the militarists.

During the past few weeks much was said and written in an effort to connect the work of the pacifists with the American Section of the Young Communist International. At this meeting the speakers, among them being Max Shactman, editor the Young Workers, Martin Abern, national secretary of the Young Workers League of America, and William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, will point to the difference between the position of the pacifists and the stand of the militant Communists.

Strenuous efforts have been made to have at this meeting, many of the soldiers and sailors who have fought under the banner of the American Dollar in France.

The meeting will be held on Sunday, April 13th, 8 p. m., at the Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd. The Young Workers League of Chicago, under whose auspices this meeting is being conducted, announces that the admission will be free.

Tax Reduction Bill Worries Statesmen; Have Four Plans

WASHINGTON, April 11.—The Senate today approached consideration of the tax reduction bill.

Some time between now and June 10 leaders hope a revenue measure will be sent to President Coolidge, but they admitted today they cannot now foresee the probable date, nor predict the terms of the bill finally enacted.

Meanwhile the clamor from the country for tax reduction legislation increases. Within the past week, senators said their mail on this subject has almost doubled.

Split into many groups of thought on taxes, the senate has before it three main plans and half a dozen compromise ideas, most of the latter still in nebulous form. The principal proposals are the original Mellon reduction program, to which administration leaders still cling stoutly, the House compromise and the Senate Democratic proposals.

To many senators none of these three is acceptible and there is a movement on to evolve a fourth plan, embodying some features of all the other three.

Costello, Former Labor Press Head, Is Teapot Witness

(By The Federated Press)

CHICAGO, April 11.—Under a subpoena by Senator Walsh, prosecutor in the Teapot Dome inquiry, E. J. Costello, former managing editor of The Federated Press, has left for Washington to testify in the Hamon-Harding angle of the Republican convention of 1920. Costello was told by Hamon in the Congress hotel in Chicago that Harding and Calvin Coolidge were to head the Republican ticket and that Hamon was to have a seat in the Harding cabinet. This was told by Hamon a few hours before the Blackstone hotel midnight conference where the Harding deal was finally put over.

Costello, who was with the Associated Press for seven years before organizing The Federated Press, had previously to that been publicity manager for Hamon in Oklahoma. He has wide acquaintance in oil circles.

Kentucky Miners Ready for War As Troops Rush On

PINEVILLE, Ky., Apr. 11.—Kentucky settled down to a real mine war today as the women and children started an exodus to safer parts and the governor called more troops in his attempt to break the spirit of the men.

Rifle fire has been going on intermittently at night. Another detachment of Kentucky national guardsmen, the third one, another troop of cavalry, machine gun and infantry units, and a tank company from Covington are now on the scene. Another detachment of guardsmen has been made ready by the governor.

The situation is considered to have grown more serious owing to the attitude of the governor in attempting to shoot the strikers into submission, and the determination of the miners that they will fight until the union is established in Kentucky.

Workers Health Periled.

NEW YORK, April 11.—"Only the most vigorous expression of public opinion against industries which use lead and benzol without providing adequate protection for the workers will save the health and lives of thousands of women," is the warning of the Consumers league here. A campaign against occupational diseases was launched at the annual meeting of the league April 11.

Reply to the Thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin

individuals. Until we have succeeded in this, nothing will help much, not even a policy of straight lines.

We analyse before the workers the social make-up of the two old parties and thereby show that they are controlled and dominated by big capital—the master and enemy of the working class. Candidates on the tickets of the two old parties will either do the biddings of the capitalists or fail. In either case, the workers are the losers. Therefore, don't support candidates of the old parties.

We then analyse the social make-up of the Third Party and if we find that it is controlled by a petty-bourgeois liberalism, we say so. And we explain what it means in terms of the economic interests of the workers, poor farmers, wealthy farmers, other petty-bourgeois elements, and big capital. In other words, we explain the political aspirations of the Third Party by means of its social-economic basis.

In doing this, we will find that the "friendliness" to labor of a third petty-bourgeois party rests on an economic basis. The middle classes revolting against big capital need the assistance of labor and are, therefore, compelled to offer some concessions to labor. And it is here that we point out the limitations of these concessions and the general unreliability of the election promises.

We proceed further to explain that the workers and exploited farmers can best utilize this division in the ranks of the bourgeoisie by organizing their own party and fighting their own battles, at the same time giving their organized support, as an independent class Farmer-Labor Party, to candidates of the Third Party where such support will assure the defeat of the old parties or increase the divisions in the ranks of the bourgeoisie, or assist in splitting away large masses of workers and farmers from the two old parties.

4—The sense of the fourth argument is that it is impossible to support and criticize Third Party candidates at one and the same time, which is the same as saying that the Farmer-Labor Party cannot support a Third Party candidate and at the same time carry on an independent Farmer-Labor campaign.

If this were true, then how could a Communist Party support candidates of a Farmer-Labor Party and at the same time carry on an independent Communist campaign? And again, how could the Communists of Mexico, on the advice of the Comintern, support Calles (petty bourgeois candidate) and carry on an independent campaign? And finally, how could the Comintern support the colonial struggles of the oppressed nationalities (petty bourgeois in character) against European and American imperialism and at the same time carry on among the proletarian elements of the same nationalities a class campaign along Communist lines?

The answer is that of course it can be done as we have shown above. That it is difficult and even dangerous no one can deny, but this is no reason for not doing it.

5—Support of Third Party candidates "would make it appear to our members that we put all our hopes in parliamentary reforms and that all our propaganda of mass action is no more than a phrase."

The direct opposite is true. It is those who cannot appreciate the real mass nature of the present revolt against the two old parties and who refuse, by adopting elastic tactics, to divert the class elements of this mass movement into the channels of a class Farmer-Labor Party, that are making a mockery and empty sound of the Communist conception of mass action. Mass action is not something static, immovable and unchangeable. It is a process and a development which has its beginning in such mild occurrences as the present movement of large masses of workers and exploited farmers away from the old parties and in the direction of independent political action and culminating, thru various changes and developments (not always running in a straight line) in a direct struggle for power.

This is the Communist conception of mass action and it is such mass action that we will assist in developing by adopting the tactics of the Central Executive Committee.

Restating Our Objective.

Our immediate objective is the unification and consolidation of all politically mature farmer-labor forces in the United States for an independent campaign along class lines in the coming presidential election. Our aim is the formation of a mass party of workers and farmers, and the advancement of Communist influence within it.

In striving toward this objective we find ourselves confronted with a petty bourgeois Third Party movement which is neither of our making nor under our control. It is clearly a revolt of large masses of workers, farmers and petty bourgeois elements against big capital and thus runs somewhat in the same general direction as the Farmer-Labor Party movement. This Third Party movement contains in its ranks large masses of workers and exploited farmers. Hence, the bigger the volume of this movement, the better the chances for a class Farmer-Labor Party, provided we meet the situation as it is and do not run away from it.

This situation creates a problem for us. The problem is to develop our Labor Party policy in such a manner as to increase the volume and scope of the split-away movement from the two old parties; at the same time carefully and after proper preparation diverting the class elements into the channels of the class Farmer-Labor Party. The thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin misses completely this central problem of our whole Labor Party policy. The thesis of the Central Executive Committee states the problem, analyses its factors, and gives the best solution of it was in the hands of the Whites, naphta production had ceased, the rouble was no longer a rouble.

If anyone was paid 100 million roubles, he found they had sunk in value to 80 millions by the next day. How is it possible to execute any plan when the first necessities are lacking, when we have no bread, no means of transport, no money no coal, no naphta?

This is why Comrade Lenin insisted again and again on the recognition of this crude reality, which pointed out the path along which living Socialism had to march. Socialism follows neither Bellamy nor the Erfurt program.

It follows in the track of the erection of disinfecting establishments, of the improvements of the conditions of the soldiers' lives, of the struggle against poverty, against the depreciation of Soviet money, against the shortage of fuel, etc.

And it seems to me, comrades, that the obstinate persistence in clinging to a beautiful plan is intrinsically nothing else than a considerable concession to the old-fashioned view that a good plan is a universal remedy, the last word in wisdom. Trotzky's standpoint has greatly impressed many students. "The Central Committee has no plan, and we really must have a plan!" is the cry we hear today from a certain section of the students.

Comrades! The reconstruction of economics in a country like Russia is indeed the most difficult problem of our revolution. As I have already stated, the two most important leading institutions of our state have had to work without Trotzky's aid. Trotzky does not work for them even yet.

Rise In Russian Economics.

We want to have transport affairs managed by Dserjinsky; economics by Rykov; finance by Sokolnikov; Trotzky, on the other hand, wants to carry out everything with the aid of a "state plan." The State Planning Commission is an important corporation, called into being by Lenin himself. But the "state plan" is no universal remedy.

In October Comrade Trotzky, and after him 46 comrades of his fraction, addressed a letter to the Central Committee, stating that we are in the midst of an internal political and Party crisis; in a word: the country is on the verge of a precipice. This is the way it looks to these comrades.

How does this come about? It comes about because Comrade Trotzky has no eye for the actual situation of our country. He knows neither our peasantry nor our workers to a sufficient degree. He knows Russia too little, and has no feeling for the realities of our country.

Russia's actual economic condition is better today than we might have expected. The bread question no longer exists. The year before last we exported 45 million poods abroad, in 1923 this export had risen to 250 million poods, and we hope to realize an even more extensive program in 1924.

We are beginning to be felt as a factor in the international bread market. Further: in 1922 our naptha output amounted to 218 million poods; in the year 1923 it amounted to 300 million poods.

Today we may regard the most urgent necessities of the country as covered, so that we are in a position to export a part of our real values. With respect to the coal of the Donetz Basin, we have exceeded the fixed normal output, for the first time, by 10 per cent. The deficit on our traffic and transport, which was previously 150 millions, has been reduced to 40 to 50 millions, so that our traffic is now almost free from deficit.

Lenin's Opinion.

Comrade Dserjinsky has performed perfect miracles here. We are now engaged in the promotion of our metallurgy. This is now rendered possible by the regulation of our coal and naptha output. One depends upon the other. Metallurgical production increased fourfold in 1923, as compared with the year 1922. Naturally, this is but a modest gain, a diffident beginning. Metallurgy had reached a specially low ebb. You see, comrades, that we record progress even here. And above all we have one thing today: Money.

After he had been ill for a few months, Lenin once asked us with a smile: "Comrades, how is it that we manage to go on existing with our wretched Soviet rouble?" Lenin frequently remarked: "I have no fear that our power will be overthrown by an insurrection. What I am afraid of is that our miserable rouble will strangle us some day by running us into financial bankruptcy.

"To be sure we have secured our place in the Kremlin, but nobody will accept our rouble!" Scarcely a year has passed since Lenin said this. Today, comrades, we have the Chervonetz, known to all of you.

At the present time there are 300 million gold roubles in circulation, of which 270 million are in chervonetz. The whole international bourgeoisie envies us for this. The cervonetz represents a real value. You know that finance mirrors the situation of the economic totality. If our economics had not improved, we should have no chervonetz today.

We are now about to carry out a comprehensive financial reform. The Central Committee has already worked out a suitable project, and will submit this in a few days to the Federal Council Congress meeting in Moscow. This reform deals with introduction of a uniform gold and silver currency, having as security a considerable gold reserve which has accumulated of late.

Our Condition Improving.

At the Fourth World Congress of the Communist International, Lenin laid special emphasis on the fact that we had already earned 20 million gold roubles by commerce, and observed: "So we have made a beginning." Now, I am not betraying any great secret when I tell you that since then we have earned 20 times 20 millions, if not more. We possess a real gold basis for our currency, and need no longer fear that our rouble will strangle us.

This is a fact, comrades. Even should the other symptoms proving the uplift of our economics be lacking—the increase of coal and naphtha output, etc.—the above mentioned suffices in itself to prove the improvement of our position. For it is perfectly clear that if our finances were to collapse, then not even an old Bolshevist guard could keep itself above water by any heroic deeds, the less so that precisely this guard possesses no very great experience in financial questions.

It is true that even before the war we raised international loans, as, for instance, when we borrowed the impressive sum of 25 francs at the time when we formed the Zimmerwald Left.

We cannot cite any greater financial operations from our past. But we were nevertheless successful in finding a member of the Central Committee, a comrade who is at the same time an old revolutionist, who understands financial questions, and has so far managed our affairs entirely satisfactorily.

Further. Agriculture has recuperated in an equal degree. Production has reached 70 to 80 per cent of pre-war production. There are many comrades, even among those belonging to the "opposition" as, for instance, Comrade Sossnovsky, who is well-informed on this subject, who even assert that we have reached 100 per cent of pre-war production. We have reached 40 per cent in state economics, whilst we were only at 22 per cent a year ago.

Change in Human Nature.

You see, comrades, that we are marching forwards. Truly we are advancing slowly, truly it would be better if our pace were quicker; but at least we are progressing.

With respect to the position of the working class, we are by no means satisfied with this. We cannot by any means designate it as good. It would be highly agreeable if we receive 100 gold roubles monthly.

But unfortunately we cannot do this yet. But we can at least maintain that in all the leading centers of the country, the position of the working class is such that the worker can manage to live on his earnings. Everyone knowing the circumstances will acknowledge this. In the most important centers wages have almost reached pre-war level. Besides this, the average worker now enjoys a number of privileges which must also be taken into account. The productivity of work has increased.

During the war years, the position of the worker was the worst imaginable. In order to support bare life, he was frequently obliged to steal, or to produce articles quite outside his actual profession. Thus many manufactured lighters and sold them.

Today we have an entirely different working class, with an entirely different psychology. This may be observed with especial clearness in Petrograd. In 1922 we had 33,000 metal workers in Petrograd, and in 1923 almost double this number, 61,000.

But today the workers work systematically, as for instance, in the manufacture of tractors. This has made the workman an entirely different human being.

Realization of Actual Condition.

Today he comprehends the needs of the country, and has taken up his real profession again. This explains the extensive support now accorded to our Party by the broad masses of the working class. The working class has not supported us to such an extent since the months of the year 1917.

And now, comrades, can you imagine it possible that Comrade Trotzky stands up before the Central Committee and declares that the country is on the verge of an abyss? "The state plan" exercises too little influence amongst us.

The comrade who makes such an assertion is entirely lacking in ability to realize Russia as it actually is. Trotzky is not Radek. When Radek does not understand these things, we can comprehend the reason. Radek has his own line in which he is an expert.

So much for our differences of opinion with the "opposition" in the sphere of economics.

Special Magazine Supplement
THE DAILY WORKER

SECOND SECTION
April 12th, 1924. This magazine supplement will appear every Saturday in The Daily Worker.

June 17th and July 4th

By C. E. RUTHENBERG

THE "New Majority," organ of the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States, has made a wonderful discovery—nothing more nor less than the fact that the Workers Party of America is opposed to a Third Party and for the formation of a class Farmer-Labor Party.

The Farmer-Labor Party has just completed a circle in politics in relation to the formation of a mass Farmer-Labor Party in the United States. After the Cleveland convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action the Farmer-Labor Party withdrew from that organization and John Fitzpatrick, one of the leaders of the party, denounced the Conference for Progressive Political Action as a "scab outfit" and as "dual" to the Gompers machine. It then called the July 3rd Convention and when it found that the 600 representatives of labor unions and other workers' organizations who assembled there were in earnest in their desire to create a mass Farmer-Labor Party and formed the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, it split away and proceeded on its own isolated path. Recently representatives of the old Farmer-Labor Party met with the organizations which called the June 17th Farmer-Labor Party convention, but when they found that they could not have their own way they split away from this group. And now, lo and behold! what has happened? The Farmer-Labor Party of Buck, and Brown, and Fitzpatrick has decided to go back to the "scab outfit" and "dual" organization of the Gompers machine—the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

Buck Seeing Things.

The source of the discovery of the policy of the Workers Party in relation to the Third Party by the New Majority is my article of March 27th in the DAILY WORKER. The New Majority quotes the following from my article:

"The immediate work before the farmer-labor group is a strong offensive against the Conference for Progressive Political Action. The Cleveland convention can have all the third party elements. It can have the representatives of the well-to-do farmers, the small business men and the broken-down old party politicians who are looking for new fields in which to conquer. It can even have the labor aristocrats, the ten thousand-a-year labor leaders, who are petty bourgeoisie in all their ways of living and thinking.

"But the Conference for Progressive Political Action Gleveland conference must not have a single exploited farmer or industrial worker without a fight.

"From now on there will be a struggle between the two conventions for the support of the masses of exploited farmers and industrial workers."

This, writes the editor of The New Majority, shows the duplicity of the Workers Party. At the St. Paul conference which called the June 17th Convention, he writes, the Workers Party led those associated in that call to believe that it was for co-operation with the July 4th Convention. Here, however, we have the real policy of the Workers Party stated, and that is a bitter struggle against the July 4th Conference.

Where the Workers Party Stands.

What is the truth of the matter? If the Workers Party has one policy at the St. Paul conference, has it now adopted a new attitude? Let us examine the matter, and if the editor of the New Majority, who seems to read the DAILY WORKER assiduously, will follow the argument, even he will gain some enlightenment on the subject.

The St. Paul Conference adopted the following resolution in relation to the July 4th Conference:

"This Conference re-endorses the proposal adopted by it on November 15th to hold a convention of all the farmer-labor groups on June 17th in the Twin Cities.

"In re-affirming its decision to hold a convention on June 17th, the convention declares that the organizations participating will recommend to the Convention on June 17th such a course of action in nominating candidates and adopting a platform as will leave the way open for co-operation for support of the same candidates and platform with the Conference for Progressive Political Action or any other group, provided, of course, that group endorses independent political action."

The Workers Party favored this resolution when it was adopted at St. Paul on March 5th. It still holds the same view.

The confusion of the editor of the "New Majority" is due to the fact that he does not distinguish between a class Farmer-Labor Party and a Third Party. To him the Farmer-Labor Party and the Third Party are one and the same thing; since the Workers Party states that it is going to fight against the Third Party getting any exploited farmers and industrial workers to join it, therefore the editor of the "New Majority" infers that the Workers Party has some sort of nefarious scheme for splitting the forces of the exploited farmers and workers.

The Facts of the Situation.

What are the facts of the situation? Is it just a happening due to the mulishness of certain individuals that there are two conventions called, one for St. Paul on June 17th and one for Cleveland on July 4th? A person ignorant of economic class divisions might argue that this is the case. It is not so, however to people who have some knowledge of social science, for there must be other causes than the failings of human beings to explain the fact that two such movements as the June 17th Convention and the July 4th Convention groups are developing side by side.

What is happening in the United States is that two economic groups are splitting away from the old parties at the same time. In one of these groups are the exploited farmers and the industrial workers of the city, and in the other are the small business men and broken-down old party politicians referred to in the quotation above.

Both of these groups are discontented with the rule of the two old capitalist parties. Both are moving toward the crystallization of their political power thru the organization of a Party that much they have in common. There is a deep chasm of difference of economic interests which divides them. The things that the exploited farmers and industrial workers desire in order to improve their economic position are not the things which the small business men, well-to-do farmers and broken-down old party politicians desire. Even if the two groups united in forming one party, the time would come sooner or later when that party would split into two groups representing conflicting interests of the economic groups included in it.

Party of Conflicting Interests.

The policy of the Workers Party in this situation is to help build a Party which will represent the economic interests of the exploited farmers and industrial workers. It calls that party the class Farmer-Labor Party.

At the same time the Workers Party welcomes the splitting away from the old political parties of the well-to-do farmers, the small business men, the professional groups, and the broken down politicians who go with them. It hopes that these elements will form a Third Party and carry on a struggle against the two old parties, for the formation of such a Third Party will weaken the centralized capitalist power in this country and create a more favorable situation for the advancement of the movement of workers and exploited farmers.

What our Party is opposed to and will fight against is to have both exploited workers and farmers, and the well-to-do farmers, small business men, etc., unite in one party. Such a party containing conflicting economic groups could not be a permanent organization and would only hinder the development of the class movement of farmers and workers.

Therefore the Workers Party will carry on an unrelenting struggle against the Conference for Progressive Political Action to win away from it every worker and exploited farmer. It does not wish to win away from the Conference for Progressive Political Action the small business men and old party politicians and well-to-do farmers.

Does the fact that the Workers Party carries on such a struggle nullify the resolution adopted by the St. Paul conference, as the editor of the "New Majority" argues? Such an argument can only come from a confused mind. It is entirely compatible, with separate organizations of the workers and exploited farmers, to at the same time have co-operation between the two organized groups.

A Class Farmer-Labor Party.

In a statement by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party printed in the DAILY WORKER of March 22nd, was a re-affirmation of a similar statement adopted by the National Convention of the Workers Party, the following appeared:

"While we carry on our campaign for the organization of a class Farmer-Labor Party we must at the same time try to drive the Third Party forces to split away from the old capitalist parties. And if this split takes place and a Third Party is organized which is an expression of revolt against Wall Street and which is not merely another capitalist party, the Farmer-Labor Party must make an election alliance with it against the old capitalist parties and the capitalist government. Such an election alliance shall not take the form of organizational unity between the class Farmer-Labor Party and the Third Party, but of a common campaign against the capitalist parties and against the government of the capitalists."

This statement of the policy of the Workers Party is in complete agreement with the resolution adopted at the St. Paul Conference. The difference between the Workers Party and the decrepit old Farmer-Labor Party of Fitzpatrick and Buck and Brown, is that the Workers Party wants the workers and farmers to organize their own class party and then make an alliance with the Third Party for a common campaign in support of the same presidential candidate if all the circumstances are such as to make such an alliance desirable, and Buck and Brown and Fitzpatrick want to lead the unorganized workers and farmers into the Conference for Progressive Political Action and let them serve as the tail to the kite of the ambitious politicians, small business men, and well-to-do farmers.

Ambition of Labor Fakers.

The policy of the Workers Party means that the industrial workers and exploited farmers will be able to stand on their own feet and fight their own political battles, not only in the election campaign of this presidential year, but after the presidential campaign is over, thru the formation of a closely knit, well-organized class Farmer-Labor Party.

Beard "Refutes" Marx

WHY DO even the most intelligent and honest of bourgeois historians speak slightingly of the Marxian interpretation of history in view of their signal failure to disprove its soundness?

Charles A. Beard, author of many valuable works on the American constitution and political development, writing in "The American Mercury" for April, on "What is A Statesman" dismisses Carlyle's "great man" theory and the Marxian explanation of men as the product of historical forces as equally untenable and displeasing to what he terms the "requirements of the scientific spirit".

Intellectually Honest.

Yet Professor Beard is intellectually honest; despite his defense of the liberal position and his endeavor to prove that the statesman is neither an arbitrary creation nor a product of economic, political, social and geographical environment, he forgets his task long enough to say:

If it is not the exit that makes the statesman, is it brains? Not brains alone. A man may be well equipped with powerful engines of logic and controversy and well stocked with knowledge, and yet, if he runs against the current of long time, he passes away as grass that withers.

And again:

For every martyr that achieves fame there are a thousand cranks stoned to death by the mob and consigned to oblivion.

Finally, Professor Beard concludes that "above all, he (the successful statesman) must be justified by events, that is, by good fortune."

"Perhaps," he says, "beyond reason and understanding both Carlyle and Marx may be reconciled, a little bit."

It is no reconciliation that Professor Beard has brought about but an unconscious vindication of the Marxian position. "Justified by events" means nothing more than that the policies of the successful statesman must fit in with the needs of the historical epoch in which he lives.

The Changing Epoch.

A Joseph Chamberlain could not have come to power and based a British colonial policy on the needs of heavy industry until after Birmingham, a steel and iron city, had succeeded Manchester, a textile town, as the economic basis of British colonial policies. A Thomas Jefferson could only have made effective his ideals of individual liberty in a nation where a pioneer culture based on free land had laid the economic basis for them. A Lenin, speaking in the name of the revolutionary workingclass as the leader of the party of the revolutionary workers—the Communist Party—unites the largest nation in the world while in every other nation demoralization proceeds with astounding rapidity. There are no statesmen today except those who fight capitalism; many of them will die unrecognized because the historical milieu is not yet ready for them but also unrecognized will go those defenders of capitalism who are unwilling or unable to see that the forces unleashed by capitalism are clearing the stage for a new epoch.

Of the capitalist rulers who now strut before the eyes of the world not one will be remembered a hundred years hence and it is extremely doubtful if there will be any mentalities of the type of Professor Beard to plead their case.

Why They Hate Marxism.

History makes men and no prophetic gift is strong enough to save from oblivion the individual who, failing to understand historical tendencies, sets himself against the current. Those who stand out on the pages of history credited with some notable accomplishment—we do not speak now of the "drum and trumpet" heroes—were the products of mass movements that are easily explainable in the light of the Marxian interpretation of history in spite of the efforts of believers in providential intervention to obscure the economic basis of all history. They belittle Marxism because it deals to conventional history and economics a blow that it cannot return. Marxism is the scientific basis of the revolutionary workingclass movement and it refutes in toto the whole mass of lies and contradictions that the rulingclass and its apologists pass out as gospel.

Zinoviev Reviews the Main Points of Difference

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Today we continue publication of the famous report by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, made to the session of the Executive of the Communist International held on Jan. 6. Zinoviev's report deals with the main points of difference in the Russian Communist Party, clearly crystallizing the discussion that has so far been published in the DAILY WORKER. In order that our readers may get a broader view of this discussion, we are publishing enlarged installments. This report is divided into seven sections. Today we publish the fifth section. It is as follows:

V.

ECONOMIC QUESTIONS.

A CHAPTER of extraordinary importance.

Do any essential differences of opinion exist in our Party with regard to economic questions? No, such do not exist. But still various tendencies may be observed even in this sphere. It appears as if certain elements of the "opposition"—not, so far as I am aware, comrades Radek and Trotzky—have the intention of proposing a revision of the New Economic Policy as such. This has not yet been stated openly, but during the course of the contest waged against the old guard the attempt has frequently been made to play off against us the hate and contempt felt by the workers against the so-called "Nepman."

You will comprehend, comrades, that hatred against the bourgeoisie is not a privilege belonging solely for instance to the German working class, among which it takes a very crass form at present, for the reason that class warfare is being carried on in the crassest possible form in Germany. Matters are very different in Russia.

Use of Dogmatic Arguments.

Our workers, too, hate the bourgeoisie, but find themselves in the remarkable position that they cannot yet kill off the bourgeoisie, but have to tolerate it. They see the elegant shops, are in a position to close these at any time, but are obliged to continue to tolerate them. This circumstance has created a unique psychology among our workers. They understand that our present bourgeoisie is a necessary evil. They understand this with their brains, with their understanding.

But the passionate hate of the proletarian against the bourgeoisie is still as strong as ever. And this the "opposition" is utilizing for its own purposes, for lack of better arguments. Up to the present, however, no positive proposition towards the revision of the New Economic Policy has been submitted.

In economic question we—that is, Lenin and we—differed often and greatly in opinion from Comrade Trotzky: You must comprehend that economic matters are entirely different to military matters. If we, for instance, decively defeat a Wrangel in civil war, this success creates a fundamentally new situation for us. In economics, on the other hand, Lenin considered the matter to be quite different. Here successes of this nature do not exist, and it is of the utmost importance to exercise patience, to realize that time is the main factor, and that years must pass before economic success really becomes visible.

Trotzky's Failing.

Trotzky has always been among the impatient comrades, satisfied with nothing. He has always thought that everything was going wrong. Trotzky lacks the comprehensive glance of the steward, of the proletarian steward, who now actually has an economic system under his stewardship. He is entirely lacking in this capacity.

He possesses no feeling for the actual economic conditions of Russia, and has never possessed it. This is a psychological factor which must not be forgotten.

It is upon this soil that our differences of opinion with reference to economic planning have arisen.

I shall first briefly enumerate the names of our decisive leading organs of state economics. In the first place we have the Council of People's Commissaries, to which belong a number of the members of the Central Committee of the Party, some of our best state functionaries. Thus transport affairs, for instance, are managed by one of our most excellent comrades, a member of the Central Committee, Comrade Dserjinsky.

The leadership of finance is in the hands of an old tried and tested Bolshevik, a member of the Central Committee, Comrade Sokolnikov. Our highest economic authority is again an old Bolshevik of long service, a member of the Central Committee, Comrade Rykov. To this must be added the "council for Labor and Defence," in which there are also members of the Central Committee. These two authorities represent the corporation actually controlling economics.

Can This Be Done?

Besides this, we possess another institution, the "State Planning Commission." This is composed of about 300 professors and specialists, onetime workers in the sphere of economics, whose experience and knowledge are very valuable to us, but who represent for the most part quite ordinary bourgeois elements. This situation is headed by Comrade Krshyshanovsky, a capable old Communist, further aided by Comrade Zyuryupa, another old Communist. This "State Planning Commission," tho headed by a communist, is nevertheless an institution composed entirely of bourgeois professors and bourgeois intelligenzia.

The task set these people is to work out a scientific economic plan, and to collect and sift suitable material for the solution of general economic questions.

And now Comrade Trotzky has taken the idea into his head that just this "State Planning Commission" should be made into the most important economic institution of Russia, and this at the expense of the rights of supremacy enjoyed by the Council of People's Commissaries and the Council for Labor and Defense. Trotzky himself has been a member of the Council of People's Commissaries for years, and is also a member of the Council for Labor and Defense, but has never attended the sessions of either of them.

He has boycotted both institutions for years.

Menshevik Psychology.

When Lenin fell ill, Lenin himself proposed, with the support of the Central Committee, that Trotzky should be chosen as his deputy, as chairman in the Council of People's Commissaries and in the Council of Labor and Defense. Trotzky rejected this proposal indignantly. Indeed, Trotzky has boycotted all the most important leading institutions of the state, and is always complaining about the secondary position accorded to the State Planning Commission, which, in his opinion, would organize everything much better. This is a grave error on Trotzky's part, a schematic conception not entirely free, in my opinion, from a dash of Menshevism.

And indeed, how do the worthy Mensheviki picture to themselves the fate of transition to socialist economics? Something in the following manner: one fine day the working class discovers that it possesses the majority in the country, a majority of real genuine proletarians in dungarees.

This majority takes over power, and immediately works out a thoro and first class system of economics, upon which this everything proceeds in perfect harmony in accordance with this plan. The Erfurt program was one of the recipes for the plan which will stick, glue, and cement everything together. It might as well be named the Bellamy recipe, for the Utopian Bellamy worked out his finished plan on very similar lines. Thus the social revolution is imagined.

This Utopian idea forms the core of the views of the opportunists as to the introduction of Socialism. Comrade Lenin tried over and over again to make this clear to us, and to Comrade Trotzky. Do you see now he asked us how real Socialism will actually come into being? You realize that Socialism will not come about as the realization of an ingenious plan, but on the basis of the special condition of the actual relations of forces.

And in point of fact the transition did not begin in Russia by the realization of a plan, but with a struggle against—what do you think the louse. The problem of fighting the louse was a cardinal problem for us, for it was the problem of fighting spotted fever.

Comrade Lenin spoke publicly of this as early as 1919 at the VIIIth All-Russian Soviet Congress. On that occasion he said: "Either Socialism conquers the louse or the louse conquers Socialism."

Socialism began to be a reality in a poverty-stricken agrarian country, crushed by wars, and long before the executors of the will of the revolutionary masses had worked out any finished plan.

True Conception of Economics.

How could we work out any description of plan up to now, when as recently as eighteen months ago we were obliged to send almost our last gold abroad to obtain rye for Petrograd and Moscow, in order that our workers should not actually starve?

What sort of plan could we have at a period when our railways, even as late as 1922, had only twelve hours reserve fuel for the line between Pegrad and Moscow? And what fuel! Green wood straight from the forest! The Donetz basin, our colliery centre,

The Farmers' Strike

By J. W. ANDERSON

THOUSANDS of farmers in the Northwest have gone on strike and refuse to pay both interest and taxes. The movement is spreading rapidly and very quietly and is causing the mortgage companies considerable anxiety.

A dry land farmer, from McKenzie county, North Dakota, called at my ranch last fall to buy some potatoes. I said to him: "How are you fellows getting along, in your section of the country?"

"Fine, fine," he said; "We are getting along just fine."

"Are you going to be able to pay out?" I asked.

"No, hell no! We are not trying to pay out. We have just quit paying taxes and interest, and we are getting along better than we did before. We are living better than we ever did, and we have a little money to spend."

"If you don't pay any taxes then how do you plan to run your county government?"

"County government be damned! What do we need of county government? We are law abiding citizens and can get along pretty well without any county government. We don't see much of the county government over our way, anyhow. I don't care if the assessor never comes around, and we all behave ourselves pretty well, and don't need any sheriff."

"But, if you don't pay your interest, the mortgage companies, will foreclose on you and put you off your farm."

Joke Is On the Bankers.

This brought forth a hearty laugh after which he said, "Why, bless your soul, don't you know that there are five times as many farms as farmers, and when they put us off one farm we will just move across the road onto a deserted farm, which we can rent for simply keeping the windows in the buildings and the fences in repair. Why should we pay taxes when we can rent good farms, with good improvements, for less than the taxes? A man would be foolish to own land and pay high taxes under present conditions."

Another farmer said to me, "Coolidge was right when he said in his message that we farmers must help ourselves. That is just what we are doing, we are helping ourselves."

"How are you doing it?" I asked.

Different Methods.

"Well, in quite a few different ways. You know, the bankers are just waking up to the fact that a deserted farm, growing up to weeds, is not a paying investment. They didn't know that two years ago, when they began foreclosing right and left, but they see it now—some of them. If the farmers only knew it, they hold the trump card. They can stay in Montana longer than the bankers can. If the busted farmers of the country would just sit tight, and hold together, they would have the bankers eating out of their hand in a short time. If they were business men, they would see to it that no one made anything out of land, only the man who works the land. They would force land values down, and when low enough, buy their farms back at their own terms."

We have about reached that situation in Montana already. A short time ago a friend of mine living 25 miles west of Sidney bought a half section of good land for four dollars per acre. The terms were nothing down and nothing for two years, interest 6 per cent. At this rate land will soon be down to where a farmer can afford to buy land again.

About three-fourths of the dry land farms in Montana are deserted. The buildings on these deserted farms seldom last more than three or four years; kindling wood is scarce in some sections, you know. The fences also disappear.

Bankers Fought Farmers.

In 1920 the banks led in the fight against the Nonpartisan League. The farmers wanted economic justice and a square deal in selling their grain. The commercial and financial interests of the state united against the farmer. They joined forces with the interests who exploit the farmers.

These shortsighted pawn brokers could not see that their own success was built upon that of the farmer. As a result of agricultural bankruptcy, over 200 banks have failed in Montana alone during this depression.

We are almost back to normalcy! The Montana farmers today are independently poor. They have taken their losses and are cheerful; Only those who are broke and don't know it, continue to worry.

The cheerfulness of the bankrupt farmer is almost universal. He has nothing to lose, and is, therefore, afraid of no one. He laughs at the threat of the banker or the sheriff. He is a free man and knows it, and enjoys it. He tried hard to pay out, and worried himself sick trying. Then he saw what the Federal Reserve did to him. He considered how the government helped the railroads and refused him a square deal. How the government held the price of wheat down during the war.

He saw how organized business, the railroads, the banks, and the federal government were all united against him, and for the purpose of exploiting him, and this led him to go on strike; to take matters into his own hands.

Most Farmers Not Fooled.

Not one farmer in ten expects a square deal from our Teapot Dome government in Washington. They know that Wall Street is in control there, and Wall Street stands for exploitation.

They are not fooled by the disinterested patriotism and sudden love of the $10,000,000 Wall Street credit corporation which will lend $100,000,000 of "credit" to the Northwest banks in order to save the farmers. It looks like a good business proposition, and not an act of charity, when a corporation with a capital stock of only ten million dollars can lend one hundred million dollars of "credit," all of which one hundred million will bear interest. The farmer may look like such a fool but he is not foolish enough to fall for this.

Four Immediate Steps.

All farmers who are heavily mortgaged should do four things, and the sooner they do them, the better for all concerned.

First, he should take bankruptcy.

Second, he should refuse to own land and pay taxes, as long as he can rent for less than taxes.

Third, he should try to save enough in a few years (when relieved of taxes and interest) to buy a farm for cash.

Fourth, he should then try to keep out of debt and refuse to do business of any sort with any bank, until the banks are owned and operated for service and not for profit under a workers' and farmers' government.

geois party; it would be an expression of parliamentary fetishism which would destroy our position among the working masses. It is however, our duty to utilize the political fermentation among the masses in order to drive a wedge between the bourgeoisie, no matter how insurgent and liberal, and the working class, no matter how little enlightened. We must remember not only the immediate outcome of the elections and our glory in its results, but also the future struggles of the working class.

The Conference for Progressive Political Action is an embodiment of that part of organized labor which, under the leadership of reactionary labor officials allowed its lot to be thrown with the bourgeoisie. Dominated by the bureaucrats of the railroad craft unions who were eager to deliver the organizations represented in the conference to the democratic party under the candidacy of McAdoo; faced with a scandal which for a while made the nomination of McAdoo undesirable while the appearance of another democratic candidate with a reputation of a so-called friend of labor is highly improbable, the Conference for Progressive Political Action is biding time, still in expectation of a contingency which will make the creation of a third bourgeois party unnecessary. Further than a third party the Conference for Progressive Political Action is not ready to go. In this it is eagerly sustained by the socialist party on the one hand, by the liberal groups, such as the Committee of 48, etc., on the other. There is little doubt that at best the July 4 conference of the Conference for Progressive Political Action will result in the proclamation of its readiness to support a third bourgeois party. This departure, being a decisive break with with the tradition of labor supporting one of the old capitalist parties, will also strengthen our work in favor of a real class labor party. We will have to create a center which either in these coming elections or in the near future will separate the masses of the workers from their liberal bourgeois leaders, as our activities in the industrial field are trying to separate them from the conservative bureaucracy in their economic organizations.

E-1. The Oil Scandal.

The monstrous frauds unveiled in the entire government machinery in connection with the oil investigations, far from shaking the foundations of American capitalism, or even changing the political complexion of the congress has nevertheless created that state of political amazement and widespread mockery at the accepted bourgeois political phraseology which makes the masses more susceptible both to class propaganda and to the formation of a class political party. The material furnished by the investigations, however, must be utilized not in the same spirit as it is done by third party spokesmen, but as proof of rottenness of the capitalist system as a whole, and as our urge for the workers to become a political power.

II. Principles of Our Election Policy

It follows from all these circumstances that our role in the coming elections must be based on the following principles.

(1) We pursue the policies of a United Front of Labor as outlined by the Communist International; namely: we strive to unite the largest possible number of workers and poor farmers on a program of struggle against capitalist domination.

(2) We did not come to the working masses with a full and detailed program of revolutionary class struggle as exemplified by the program of the Workers Party, but we come with a minimum of class demands which, while drawing a line between, the proletariat and the bourgeoisie, will make the beginning of a political struggle against bourgeois rule and will be able to attract the adherence of large masses of workers.

(3) We work for the formation of a labor-farmer party controlled by workers and farmers and putting forth a minimum of class demands as outlined above.

(4) We do not enter into any political maneuvers which may becloud our aims in the eyes of the workers and make them think of us as political manipulators of the old type and not as fighters for the cause of the workers.

(5) We view our participation in the election campaigns as one of many occasions for spreading the propaganda of class struggle, for arousing the working class to political activity, for organizing the working class into a political party; we do not view it, however, as a means to achieve immediate and important changes in the American system of legislation. We fully recognize the importance of the parliamentary tribune for the class enlightenment and consolidation of the working people, we do not, however, strive for parliamentary seats at the expense of our class position. We hold the same true for the working class as a whole.

(6) We aim at strengthening the Workers Party and putting it on the political map as the most radical and most consistent leader of the working masses.

III. Our Line Of Action

Based on these principles we pursue in connection with the coming election the following line of acton:

A. Before June 17

(1) We make a many sided and vigorous campaign for participation at the June 17 convention. The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party and every party unit carry the campaign into every accessible labor and farmer organization, the aims being:

(a) To enlighten the workers and poor farmers as to their position in capitalist society and the only way of liberation.

(b) To induce the workers and farmers organizations to form state and city labor-farmer parties which would appeal to the votes of the laboring masses in time of election.

(c) To induce the newly organized labor-farmer parties to affiliate with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party wherever such affiliation does not threaten to disrupt the local labor-farmer forces.

(d) To induce each labor and farmer organization and each local branch of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party to send delegates to the June 17 convention.

(2) We carry on a systematic propaganda not only against the old capitalist parties but also against the third bourgeois party which is in the process of birth. We point out the bourgeois character of the coming party, using particularly the frankly and openly capitalistic nature of the insurgent group's activities in the present congress. We brand the labor officials who wish to make the workers an appendix to a third party as betrayers of the working class striving to establish political peace with the bourgeoisie where war must be the rule. We point out that "delivering" labor to a third bourgeois party is no less reactionary than delivering it to the old capitalist parties.

(3) We do not conceal from the workers and farmers that we are Communists; we make it clear to them what Communism is; we do, however, state that even those workers who do not agree to the methods and aims of Communism must take their fate into their own hands without relying on their enemies of the other classes.

(4) We make vigorous propaganda in favor of the formation of a mass party of workers and exploited farmers at the June 17 convention.

B. At the June 17 Convention

(1) Whatever the number of our members and sympathizers at that gathering may be we fight for the formation of a party of labor and exploited farmers on the following basis:

(a) The party is to be composed of organizations of hand and brain workers and exploited farmers; it does not admit organizations of business men, manufacturers, bankers, rich farmers, however friendly to labor; it admits individual membership by recommendation of local units of the party.

(b) The party strives towards the establishment of a labor-farmer government in the United States of America.

(c) The party program includes nationalization of the key industries; nationalization of the banks, nationalization of the means of transportation, nationalization of natural resources (ores, coal, oil, water power), nationalization of storage facilities for farm products, of elevators and mills; a five year moratorium for the farmers' debts.

(d) The party endorses and supports only such candidates as accept both the class control of the party and the party program.

(2) If this program is not accepted by the majority of the convention we may yield on point (c) relating to the party program, we do not, however, yield as to the class composition of the party—fully conscious of the fact that a party controlled by labor and exploited farmers may in time become revolutionary even if it is moderate at its inception, while a party controlled by bourgeois elements must necessarily become reactionary even if it starts with a liberal program.

(3) In the extremely unlikely eventuality that the convention is swamped by bourgeois elements and the majority does not agree to the formation of a party on the above specified basis, we secede from the convention with as many labor and farmer delegates as agree to a class party and form such a party independently. The party to nominate its presidential candidate and candidates for the legislative chambers.

C. After the June 17 Convention

Whether a class labor-farmer party emerges from the majority or the minority of the June 17 convention, we aid in consolidating the new party, in carrying on its campaigns, in organizing its publications, all the time, however, emphasizing the difference between Communism and the new party. The attitude of the Workers Party towards other political groups will then be as follows:

(1) The Workers Party endorses and supports the candidates of the new labor-farmer party while conducting the election campaign in a strict Communist spirit.

(2) The Workers Party urges the new party to send a committee to the July 4 Conference for Progressive Political Action in order to negotiate with it as to joining the labor-farmer party.

(3) The Workers Party urges the new party that in case the negotiations fail it should try to attract as many labor elements from the July 4 conference as will be ready to join a class party.

(4) The Workers Party stands for a relentless criticism of the third party to be born at the July 4 conference, under whatever name and with whatever progressive program it may appear, the basis of criticism being that the third party is bourgeois in its composition, since it has refused to accept the control of workers' and farmers' organizations.

(5) In local elections we strive towards a united front on the broadest possible basis, not overstepping, however, the class lines of workers and exploited farmers. We strive to unite all labor elements on a labor program; we support candidates nominated by labor organizations; we make it clear to our Workers Party members that in supporting such candidates we help to unite labor and to split it away from the bourgeois parties; we lay particular stress on the idea of bona fide labor representatives being unlikely to betray the cause of the workers while bourgeois parties and their labor supporters are destined to harm the cause of labor. We thus appear in the eyes of our own membership and in the eyes of the masses as the foremost fighters for the cause of labor.

(6) By no means do we form election alliances with the third party. The reasons for such a policy may be thus summarized:

(a) An alliance would be practically futile since the Workers Party does not command large masses which could actually influence the outcome of an election.

(b) An alliance would perturb the class vision of our membership and cause among them great consternation, appearing to them as an obvious deviation from the straight line of class struggle.

(c) An alliance with the third party would make it impossible for us to explain refusal to support a candidate of the democratic party in case the candidate is friendly to labor. That some democratic candidates may be at least as progressive as third party candidates is hardly unlikely.

(d) An alliance with the third party would make it impossible for us to criticize it. It is a hazardous and phantastic assumption that we can both support the candidates of the party and at the same time reveal its bourgeois character and assert its future betrayal of the masses of labor and farmers. It is absurd to assume that we can have common campaigns with the third bourgeois party for its bourgeois candidates, and at the same time conduct an independent campaign for our own program. Even if the strength of the vote at our command should help elect one or the other third party candidate, for the working class the gain from such an election would be far outweighed by the harm caused thru blurring the class lines and strengthening the bourgeois party. The idea of giving the workers an object lesson by inducing them to vote for a progressive bourgeois in order that they may later be enlightened by his betrayal, is worth no more than the idea of preaching support of a democratic nominee in order that his betrayal may later repel the workers from the democratic party.

(e) An alliance would make it appear to our membership that we put all our hopes in parliamentary reforms and that all our propaganda of mass action is no more than a phrase. Such a disappointment would repel from the Workers Party its progressive adherents who wish to see it not the tail end of a bourgeois progressive party but a vanguard of militant working masses.

If we put all our forces behind the June 17 convention; if we do preparatory work on a large scale with the aim of making the June 17 convention the great event in the labor movement rather than to make it a preliminary event to a third bourgeois party convention; if we sincerely wish to have the labor-farmer party the central force in the new political enlightenment of labor—we may avoid a division of forces, and the convention may become the beginning of a new era in the history of class struggle in the United States.

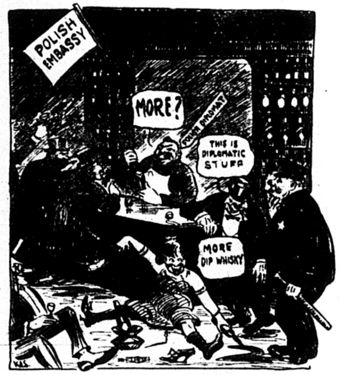
Tackling a Juicy Mellon

By J. O. BENTALL

Morgan Supplying the Funds



After Us—the Deluge!

THE ingratitude of the world is getting to be something fierce.

Not only have we attacked the benevolent oil king who out of sheer sympathy with the burdened people took the heavy teapot off their shoulders and made a number of million dollars for himself as a great service to his government, not only have we abused the fat attorney general who in all sincerity aided himself and the greatest crooks that have ever raised the banner of patriotism in America to save her from the pitfalls of honor and decency, and not only have we assailed the sacred institution of graft and bribery by the impertinent ousting of the flag-waving idol of the navy who legally and properly connived to give away freely the people's property in return for much honest boodle to himself, but now we proceed to tackle the very lord of the money pile we have dragged together by our riotous living.

"Andy" Mellon Appears.

Andrew W. Mellon was not ond of the ordinary pikers who looked for a job and a meal ticket when he was prevailed upon to make the supreme sacrifice and accept the menial position of secretary of the treasury.

Honest Harding, who slipped by the immigration officer at the gates of heaven before his record and finger prints had been scrutinized and O. K.'d by the careless St. Peter, had, according to unreliable and false testimony, much difficulty in persuading Mellon that he was not the man for the job.

Mellon had almost everything else—in Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York—so why should he be deprived of acquiring what he might have set his innocent heart on in Washington

Mellon had been able to show the world everything except his own self-sacrifice. The golden opportunity had come. Never had it knocked at the door of the humble Mellon and not been let in. It should not have its locks wet with the dew of the night outside his door now.

There were big hindrances and obstacles in the way—such as would have discouraged almost any ordinary coward. Careless and almost righteous lawmakers had placed on the statute books of the nation certain unwise laws that forbade poor men to have their hands both in the tills of prosperous corporations and in the United States treasury at the same time. It is these almost righteous lawmakers that cause so much trouble to small thieves.

What's a Law Nowadays?

Lookit their laws:

"No member of the Federal Reserve Board"—of course, that would include secretary of the treasury—"shall be an officer of any bank, banking institution, trust company, or Federal Reserve Bank, nor hold stock in any bank, banking institution or trust company, and before entering upon his duties as a member of the Federal Reserve Board he shall certify under oath to the secretary that he has complied with this request."

Mellon was the largest stockholder in the Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh; Mellon was the largest stockholder of the Fidelity Title and Trust Company of Pittsburgh; largest stockholder of the National Bank of Commerce of New York; president and director of the Mellon National Bank, the largest bank in Pittsburgh; stockholder of the Aluminum Company of America; of the Gulf Oil Corporation; of the Standard Steel Car Company; of the Overholt Distilling Company, and of many other too numerous to mention, as the farmers say on their auction bills.

In order to serve the government our hero gave up several of the directorates and sold millions of dollars worth of stock. Five of America's most crooked lawyers assured him he need not sell the rest. But he is said to have threatened to do violence to their advice.

Then came the most ticklish point in the game. Mellon was a member of the board of trustees of the University of Pittsburgh, and of Western Pennsylvania Hospital and other charities of that kind where he was very inactive. His attorneys assured him in spite of his conscientious scruples that he might remain if he would promise never to attend to any of their business.

Vive la Overholtism!

To explain away his prosperity in connection with the Overholt Distilling Company took many pages of the Congressional Record. The session that dealt with this spirited part of Mellon's exploits is said to have been the dryest in the last seven days. The stock in the Overholt warehouse and in Mellon's cellar has not been given away except when sold at fancy figures or served to liven up congressional meetings. But the ingratitude of his best friends among the prohibition agents has made him sulky. If he gives freely of his Overholtism they talk too much, if he is stingy with it they talk more.

Do you know what grief is? You have tried to plow with a plow that won't scour, have you? Well, next time you want vexation get up early and step into Mellon's treasury boots and walk a mile in this ungrateful world, which cannot appreciate the self-sacrifice of a man who gives up almost a part of his thirty million dollars a year to accept a job that pays him twelve thousand, and then kicks if he wants to get up a tax law that exempts him from forking over his share of the government's board bill.

Who are we low dogs to yelp at this giant among philanthropists? We are not fit to be served by this greatest of humdingers.

YES, WE ARE WEARING
OUR OLD CLOTHES TODAY.
I WAS walking
DOWN MAIN store street,
IN OUR county seat town,
WHEN I met two men,
FEEDERS AT the public crib,
AND ALL dressed up.
THEY KNEW me,
BUT DID not speak,
AS THEIR elbows touched
BEHIND ME in silence,
AND THEY thought
I COULD not hear,
ONE OF the chaps said:
"That's Ye Olde Editor
Wearing his old clothes."
THEN THEY laughed.
I BIT my lips
AND WENT on my way.
MEN WHO makes clothes,
ARE TELLING the world,
THAT HALF of the men
IN THE United States,
ARE WEARING their old clothes.
MANY FARMERS and families
HAVE NOT seen much of ANYTHING NEW in their homes,
BUT BILLS, notes and mortgages
FOR THREE years past.
AND THEY do wonder
HOW LONG they can endure,
MISFITS IN public places
ALL DOLLED-UP in POLITICAL ROBES of sin,
WHO PROTECT the rich
AND NEGLECT the poor
YES, WE are wearing

Rossini Gets Kind Words fom Our Musical Advisor

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and Hadley's "Resurgam" were presented at Orchestra Hall Monday night, by the Apollo musical club. Rossini's oratorio, dealing with the sufferings of the mother of Jesus after the crucifixion is rather unique among oratorios since the music is lyric rather than dramatic. Rossini was of the favored and lucky of the earth, and his philosophy of life and religion was a happy one. So when he produced an oratorio fitting solemn Latin words to joyous and life loving music, the wiseacres of his time raised their pious hands in horror and brayed shocked disapproval. But the intensely lyric Rossini has survived, and the wiseacres are dead and buried.

Women Out-Sing Men.

Of the singing that of the women soloists was more impressive than that of the men. Alice Gentle, so successful last week with the San Carlo opera, repeated her success in the quite different field of oratorio. It takes a singer indeed to sing Carmen one night and the Stabat Mater the next and make successes of them both. Leah Pratt, the contralto, sang the famous solo "Fas ut Portem" with a voice of beautiful quality, and style of considerable lyric intensity. William Phillips, baritone, sang well, but he was struggling with a bass part that was too low for him. Walter Wheatley, the tenor, showed a voice of fine quality, but there was always a sense of strain in his interpretation. The excellence of the Apollo club chorus under Harrison Wild's direction goes without saying.

Hadley—Big and Dramatic.

Hadley's "Resurgam" (I shall rise again) is a great contrast to Rossini's work. There is no lyric quality in the music, it is all big and dramatic. The orchestration is modern, and hence more sonorous than that of the Italian composer. The oratorio is in four parts, Birth, Life, Death and Re-birth, calculated to show the guiding hand of God thruout all stages of existence. The end, a huge climax in organ, orchestra and voices, is a supreme testament of the beautiful side of religious faith.

Lenin and the Agrarian Question

By P. MIECIAISIEV

LONG before the revolution of 1905, Nikolai Lenin had conceived the idea of an alliance between the proletariat and the peasantry. This idea he brought before the Russian revolutionists at the very moment when it was being rejected by the social democratic party of Germany, at the time the most powerful group in the Second International, which until very recently has doggedly followed this method of carefully avoiding in its congresses the problem of the peasantry.

Not only did Lenin bring this question squarely to the fore; he made it the basis of his program and the cornerstone of his policy. Before the revolution, as well as while it was going on, he watched carefully to see that this problem was not overlooked and to insure its rational solution.

Marvelous strategist and peerless prophet that he was, he had realized that the proletariat would gain a powerful ally in the revolution if the party adopted a policy of fairness towards the peasantry and that, on the other hand, it would assuredly be crushed if it were to cut itself off from the masses in the country.

Lenin was the author of the agrarian program of the Communist Party. He understand the tremendous importance of such a program for the Russian revolution. And if the first program of the Russian social democratic group, adopted at the Second Congress, was to a great extent an adoption of the program of the social democrats in Germany, the same cannot be said of the agrarian program.

Nevertheless it was not on the program itself that Lenin concentrated his attention; an able organizer, eminently a man of action, he gave all his attention to generalship. After various trials, he pointed out the obligation that the party would be under of revising its agrarian program according to the frontier and the extent of the peasant revolution.

From the beginning of his active service, Lenin busied himself with the formation of special groups of peasants for the purpose of furthering the revolution and of putting its victories on a firm basis. In the very first agrarian program, written by his own hand, he urges the organization of the peasants into committees. In such organization he sees "a practical policy for propaganda and a means of organizing the farmer movement and of rendering it articulate."

And, altho imperfect and timid in the extreme in its exclusively agrarian demands, this program is indisputably imbued with the spirit of the revolution.

Altho the second agrarian program, adopted at the Fourth Congress, seemed to include demands more fundamental, it was evasive and opportunistic. Prepared under the influence of the Mensheviki, it had lost every trace of revolutionary spirit. It narrowed the possibility of agrarian reform to the democratic "zemtvos" and to the landed proprietors, not to the working peasantry.

In no way did it satisfy the revolutionists of the party, and Lenin continued to fight for the "nationalization of the land," which was to be accomplished thru the peasants' committees.

Realizing the tremendous importance of the agrarian question for the coming revolution, making every effort to give fair treatment to the proletariat and to the Bolsheviki Lenin, after the first revolution, turned his attention to this problem. He was rounding out its theory and elaborating its practice when war overtook him in Austria.

It was during this period that he wrote his best work on the agrarian question. With painstaking care he criticized the "municipalization of the land"—a movement whose petty-bourgeois character he laid bare. The "Agrarian Program of the Social Democrats During the First Russian Revolution," the "Agrarian Question at the End of the Ninteenth Centry," the "New Views on the Laws of the Development of Capitalism in Agriculture," are among the best that has been written on the question, in Russian or in any language.

His last work, "New Views on the Laws of the Development of Capitalism in Agriculture," suggests the method of solving the problem of exploitation on a large and on a small scale a problem which had caused the flow of streams of ink and which the workers of the reformers and of the theorists of the Second International had served only to confuse.

Thus, on the eve of the year 1917, Lenin was laying the foundations of the new revolutionary policy which was to become the cornerstone of the agrarian program of the future Communist International and which the experiences of the Russian revolution enriched, nurtured and linked indissolubly with action.

Hardly had he returned from exile in April, 1917, when Lenin, in his celebrated tracts on justice, gave particular attention to the agrarian problem. He advocated the immediate seizure of the land of the great proprietors and its redistribution by the peasant committees; in the first years of the century he had already foreseen the tremendous part that these organizations were to play. It was thru the medium of these committees and of soviets of deputies that the peasantry put forward the demands which underlay the first agrarian law of the Soviets. It was upon their support that the realization of agrarian reform was based.

Man of action, a being above all practical, Lenin built up the agrarian program and the agrarian policy, not upon abstract theories, but exclusively upon experience, and let himself be guided always by the wishes of the working class and of the peasantry.

It was in his communications, in his conversations with the workers of St. Petersburg and other cities, still solidly attached to the town, that he had worked out the cardinal points of his first agrarian program. It was from the demands of the revolutionary peasantry in 1905 and 1906 that he took the idea of the nationalization of the land, of the abolition of private ownership of land. He listened with strained attention to what the peasant deputies to the Congresses or to the Dumas of the empire had to say; he pondered the minutes of the Congress of the Peasants' Union, the agricultural plan of the group "Toil," and all the documents having to do with the state of mind and with the demands of the peasant masses.

The same was true in 1917. No sooner had the pamphlet containing 242 complaints of the peasants appeared than Lenin set to work to study it diligently and took it for his guide. He did not allow himself to become alarmed at the narrowmindedness of the social-revolutionists who were disregarding these demands. He understood them in all their profound revolutionary implications, supported them, incorporated them into the first agrarian law and helped the peasantry to realize them for itself under the guidance of the revolutionary committees.

"There are those," he said to the Second Congress of the Soviets, "who claim that the decree itself and the pamphlet of complaints are the work of the social revolutionists. Let us admit that this may be so. Their authorship is of no importance. We should deal with facts, and we should give to the masses unhampered opportunity to use their own initiative. . . . We believe that the peasantry itself will know better than we how to solve that question. . . . Let the peasants themselves decide, let them mold their own lives."

This confidence in the masses, this faith in their creative ability, this defiance of any tendency towards bureaucracy, is extremely characteristic of the Lenin of the revolution. Lenin sought to know how "the peasants themselves" would solve the problems which concerned them; he placed them on their guard against mistaken decisions, he guided them, and he did not cease to repeat to the Soviet workers that it was necessary to instruct the masses "in learning thru their own experiences" how to manage their affairs.

Faith in the creative ability of the masses and prudence in the agrarian question, as in everything that touched on the economics of the land: these were the outstanding features of this fearless and unconquerable revolutionist. Even when the agrarian question appeared already settled, and when we were busying ourselves with the placing of our victories on a firm basis and with insuring the permanency of the use of the land, Lenin never for one moment left the path of extreme prudence.

"It would not do now (spring, 1922) for us to tie our hands with formulas, with rules, or with any regulations whatsoever until we have gathered a sufficient number of facts in the field of local economics and until we have thoroly studied the demands and the real needs of rural economy. Let us not allow a single unnecessary regulation, irrational, premature and not based upon experience, a regulation to which the local authorities would be held, and which would be dangerous and harmful in the extreme."

At the same time, Lenin called for the elaboration of the agrarian code, for whose adoption by the Council of the Commissioners of the People and by the Central Pan-Russian Executive Committee he was responsible. . . . After its adoption he announced that the party would never hesitate to revise and perfect it, to accept amendments and corrections which may be introduced by the peasantry.

Even while showing the greatest care for the peasant mass, whose part in the revolutionary movement and in the realization of socialism he understood perfectly, Lenin took into account its heterogeneous character and drew his conclusions accordingly.

Even before the October revolution, he dwelt on the necessity of forming a special organization of the proletarian and semi-proletarian elements of the rural district. He emphasized the fact that this organization was particularly needed, that it was indeed indispensable at the moment when it would be necessary to put agrarian reforms into practice. By this means only could the poor peasants defend their interests after the partitioning of the land.

After October he urged the organization of committees of poor peasants, whom he wished to entrust with the most practical and urgent problems for the mass of the workers and needy peasants: the food problem.

In order to encourage the poor peasants and the workers who emigrated from the cities to engage in agriculture, Lenin urged co-operative use of the land. He did not fail to take into account of the difficulties of this task, more arduous than "the overthrow of the weak spirit of Nickolas Romanoff." But he supported with enthusiasm the first attempts at co-operative agriculture, took an intense interest in them, and saw to it that they were supplied with the financial credit necessary to insure their success.

Lenin gave careful attention to the organization of the agricultural workers. Considering this section of the proletariat the most ignorant, the most backward and the most oppressed, he had since 1917 urged the industrial workers to help the day laborers and the farm workers to band themselves together into unions.

He understood that the agricultural workers were not only excellent support for the soviet power in the rural sections, but also the organizers of land cultivation on a large scale. As early as the outbreak of the revolution of 1917, he mentioned the fact that it would be necessary to leave out of the redistribution of the land a small quantity of large model tracts to be cultivated under the direction of experienced farmers.

But in the organization of the national domains, he did not forget the interests of the rural population. In the law having to do with the social forms of agriculture, he emphasizes the fact that the "national domains ought not to hold themselves apart from the local peasantry, but should be in direct contact with it and support it."

At the same time that he supported the poor peasantry and was using every means to fight the koulaks and the rural bourgeois, Lenin understood the role of the middle class peasantry. The attitude towards this class was to him a fundamental problem of the revolution and of the economic organization of the city.

Our Labor Party Policy -- Thesis by Lore and Olgin -- Reply by Cannon and Bittelman

THE theses submitted herewith is that of a minority represented by Comrades Lore and Olgin and expresses the views of that section of the party which acknowledges what has been termed the "anti-third party" tendency.

THE present theses is written in answer to one adopted at the last session of the Central Executive Committee. The theses in reply to Comrades Lore and Olgin, by Comrades Cannon and Bittelman also is published in this issue of the magazine.

I. Forces, Tendencies, Movements.

IN limiting a policy for our participation in the election campaigns of 1924, both presidential and congressional, we must proceed from the following considerations.

1. Negative.

(a) The numerical weakness of the Workers Party; the lack of political training on the part of its members.

(b) The organizational weakness of the left section of the labor movement.

(c) The absence of class consciousness among the large masses of both organized and unorganized labor.

(e) The absence in the United States of America in the elections of 1924 of a catastrophic situation which would warrant the expectation of a sudden and tremendous change in the political attitude of the working masses.

2. Positive.

(a) The growing influence of the Workers Party among the more dissatisfied strata of the working class.

(b) The growing tendency of the left section of the labor movement towards consolidation into a semblance of a distinct proletarian political party.

(c) The marked dissatisfaction of a portion of the poorer farmers in the various states.

(d) AA. The so-called insurgent movement in the ranks of the old capitalist parties, especially the republican, a movement identified with the name of La Follette. BB. The Conference for Progressive Political Action.

(e) The oil scandal and the Daugherty investigation.

Each one of these factors must be taken in its proper proportion in any elaboration of plans for the coming election.

A. The Workers Party.

The number of enrolled members in the Workers Party is in the neighborhod of 25,000. This is the entire portion of the working class that the Workers Party can directly command thru its discipline and organization. The number of citizens among the members, entitled to a vote, is still smaller. The Workers Party as such is, therefore, unable to influence directly in any appreciable degree the outcome of the elections. It cannot throw directly any social weight on the scale of one political formation or the other.

The membership of the Workers Party itself, on the other hand, is not a homogeneous one. It is distributed mainly among language federations. It has not yet thoroly assimilated the Communist idea. It is not thoroly versed in Communist tactics. This is mainly due to the recent formation of the Workers Party and to internal struggles that precluded normal party life and expansion. What has attracted the membership to the Workers Party and made it proud of the name Communist is the position of the party, its outspoken and unwavering class line in matters political and economic. Any step on the part of the Workers Party which may be construed as a deviation from its radical course must cause a depressing reaction in the membership of the party in its present stage of development and result in abstention from activities and in a falling off of an appreciable number of members.

B. The Left Wing.

The left wing of the labor movement is a groping rather than a clear vision, a tendency rather than an organizational consolidation. The workers' organizations represented in the various state farmer-labor parties are dissatisfied with capitalist exploitation and disgusted with the political machinery of the old capitalist parties. They have not yet, however, acquired a full understanding of the necessity of organizing a class labor party with a proletarian class program. They have not yet learned to rely on their own representatives as distinct from and opposed to bourgeois progressives calling themselves friends of labor. The so-called farmer-labor parties have neither control over their members nor even a strong influence over their behavior in times of election. They are loosely knitted formations of very recent origin which have not yet crystallized into effective organizations. Not even the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the most radical of all those not fully class conscious political formations, has developed a party loyalty and a conscious party cohesion. This makes it very difficult, if not utterly impossible, to use the left wing of labor as a flexible instrument in Workers Party strategy concerning this year's election.

C. The Bulk of Labor.

There is a vast difference between the right wing of labor in America and Europe. In the latter, even the backward workers have learned to rely on their own political representatives, differentiating their parties however moderate, from the parties of the lower strata of the bourgeoisie. Such is the case particularly in Germany and England. In America the vast masses of the workers are still deluded by the idea of an all-embracing national rather than a class party. Dissatisfied with the republicans they vote for the democrats. Becoming dissatisfied with the democrats and republicans they may transfer their vote to a third, more radical bourgeois party if such were to be formed. The only means of splitting them away from the bourgeoisie is the formation of an outspoken labor party with a form of organization, a program, a line of action and a personnel of political candidates of such a clear proletarian class character, as to become an irresistible force of attraction to the masses of labor. Viewed in this aspect, the formation of a liberal third party which by its reformistic tendencies may strongly attach to itself large masses of workers, is a direct menace to the future of a proletarian class policy in the United States of America. It will be much more difficult to combat a third party than it is to prove the exploitationist dictatorship of the two old parties.

D. Traditional Disgust With "Political Game."

There has been no party life in the United States congress in recent years, i. e., there has been no marked clash of class interests in the political squabbles of the republican and democratic parties, both of them representing, as they do, a united front of various economic groups and classes. The average non-socialist worker grew to look upon party activities as upon something that has only a remote bearing upon his daily existence. The attitude is only another form of expression of American individualism which relies upon immediate clashes of interest in actual life rather than upon political clashes in the legislative chambers. Taken as a whole, the American working class is far more revolutionary and class conscious in daily struggles against capitalism than it is in its political expressions. The same workingmen who wage enormous battles against the exploiters by means of strikes and protection of strikes, submit unhesitatingly to the political leadership of the exploiters and their agents. "You cannot beat the politician at the political game" is the common conviction of the average American worker. The masses disbelieve pre-election promises of the old parties yet they have not realized the necessity of founding their own party. Instead, they look with contempt upon all parties, believing that the workers can stand aside from the parliamentary strife. The example of the socialist party which even in times of its marked growth only followed in the footsteps of the capitalist parties, solicitating votes thru pre-election promises which it could not fulfill and working thru a machinery of party politicians who were not of the working class, only added to the disappointment of the labor masses in political action.

Under such conditions, only a clear cut party of labor and exploited farmers controlled by organized labor and farmers, acting thru representatives of workers and farmers, and nominating its own candidates on a definite class program of labor and exploited farmers, can dispel the mistrust of the labor masses, destroy their political inertia and make them fight capitalism thru political weapons with at least the same determination as they have hitherto fought capitalism with the weapons of strike and boycott.

E. No Mass Revolt in 1924.

The political strategy of the Workers Party in 1924 will be greatly impeded by the absence of a sweeping national issue which would stir the laboring masses and lash them into spontaneous mass revolt in the political field. The economic situation is gradually approaching a crisis. Economic depression has been on the increase thruout the latter part of 1923. Yet there has been no rapid and alarming falling off on production and transportation, and there is no state of panic. Unemployment is evident in various parts of the country, notably in the mining and clothing industries, but it has not assumed and will not assume in the coming few months such proportions as to awaken the working masses to the realization of imminent danger. There is no atmosphere of deep unrest in the industrial centers. There are no signs of political upheavals. Only in large sections of the farming districts is there profound dissatisfaction due to an acute crisis in agriculture. The millions of farmers who are bankrupt or facing bankruptcy have given rise to a vanguard of radical groups who voice the imminence for the farmers to influence legislation in their own interest and thru their own spokesmen. This movement, the like of which has been witnessed in America in former decades, is here and there seeking an alliance with organized labor, yet it is just as eager to form affiliations with the lower strata of the city bourgeoisie wherever the latter are opposed to the dictatorship of big capital, and willingly submits to the leadership of liberal politicians. The farmer movement is a typical petty bourgeois movement, and while at present a portion of the dispossessed farmers are deeply stirred the farmers en masse will naturally gravitate towards a liberal bourgeois party rather than towards a class labor party.

All these circumstances are obstacles on the path of the Workers Party towards its historic task of utilizing the coming elections to organize the working class, sharpen its class consciousness and deepen its war against capitalist dictatorship.

On the other hand, there are a number of circumstances which augur well for our campaigns in the coming elections and which, when properly utilized, may strengthen the working class and increase the influence of the Workers Party.

A-1. Influence of the Workers Party.

The Workers Party has become an influence in excess of its numerical strength. Communist discipline, Communist determined appeal to class struggle, Communist boldness of attack on labor fakirs and wavering labor politicians, Communist revolutionary determination in exposing the viciousness of capitalism and its supporters in whatever disguise they may appear, have won the Workers Party support and recognition wherever it came into contact with organized workers. The Workers Party has become the symbol of straight and unyielding class struggle. This position may be enormously strengthened if we continue to be the crystallizing center for the formation of a class party of workers and exploited farmers. (The strengthening of our prestige will inevitably result in a great number of members. We may be weakened if we becloud our line of action and lose in the eyes of the masses the most precious quality which attracted them to us often against their will: a revolutionary class policy.

B-1. Tendency Towards a Class Party.

The consciousness growing out of the participation in the world war; the disillusionment in the outcome of the war; the growing centralization of power in the hands of the capitalist class; the unemployment of 1921-2; the reaction as expressed in the open shop campaign; the strikes of the steel, textile, mine and railroad workers—all this has not remained without influence on the working masses. A change is coming over the American working class. A tendency towards liberation from the bourgeois ideology is on the increase. While the change is more of a molecular character, while there is no mass revolt and no spontaneous regrouping, there is a growing inclination toward what is vaguely termed as "independent political action." The various conferences for the formation of labor parties in the last year, the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, the conference set for June 17, 1924, are only an expression of the political changes that are taking place in the working class. This creates a favorable medium for our work of propaganda and organization for class struggle. We may become what the Communist party ought to be in every country the leader of the working class. The success depends upon our tactics in the near future. We must follow a direct and obvious class line. Into the mass of disillusioned and dismayed workingmen we must bring the class understanding of class division and class war. Into the dimness of political gropings we must pour the light of revolutionary class consciousness. Out of the chaos of a transitional period in the history of the American labor movement we must bring a well-organized and well conscious class party. The inarticulate dissatisfaction of masses of workers must thru us find its expression and its organized release in political struggle. This we can achieve, not by trying to lead the working class over devious ways over political machinations and obscure paths of dubious political deals with the petty bourgeoisie, but by remaining Communistic thruout, i. e., by not relinquishing our class line in the eyes of the working masses.

C-1. The Farmers.

The bitter restlessness of a mass of farmers may be of advantage to our work in that it increased the range of dissatisfaction with the old political parties and creates a number of possible allies for the future mass party of labor. The poorer farmers, imbued with the ideology of the petty bourgeoisie which in substance is opposed to the revolutionary ideology of labor, are situated on the social scale between the proletariat and the bourgeoisie. Insofar as they yield to the influence of class conscious labor, they may be an ally in the struggle against capitalism. Insofar as they make the workingmen yield to bourgeois leadership, they are dangerous to the working class. In the measure as the consciousness of the workingmen will grow and their determination to fight capitalism will become manifest, the poorer farmers will yield to the influence of labor. Our tactics in the coming elections must lead, not to the creation of a hegemony of farmers, however dissatisfied at the present moment, over the masses of labor that are striving toward independent political expression, but to the creation of an alliance between workers and exploited farmers on the basis of a common fight against capitalistic rule. The situation is favorable for a class party controlled by the working class. Much depends upon our line of action in the near future.

D-1. Republican Insurgency. Conference For Progressive Political Action.

The so-called insurgency in the ranks of the republican party, embodied in small groups in the house of representatives and the senate and linked with the name of La Follette, is important for the working class mainly thru the general political agitation it creates in the country and particularly thru the attacks it levels against the two old capitalist parties. However, it carries also a grave menace for the future of a proletarian party, as it creates a new illusion of an all-embracing national party which is to save labor thru strict adherence to the principles of liberal bourgeois democracy, thereby blurring the class lines. This menace should not be overlooked. It may outweigh the advantages to be derived by the working class even from the formation of a third bourgeois party. Such a party will not change materially the character of American capitalism nor its political domination. It is fallacious to assume that in a highly developed industrial country in the period of its vigorous growth, with powerful industrial corporations and an enormous centralized finance capital, political power will soon pass into the hands of the middle and small bourgeoisie.

A third bourgeois party, at its best, would be no more than a united front of a portion of the big bourgeoisie (primarily of the manufacturing group) and the mass of the middle and petty bourgeoisie. Such an alliance, coming into existence with the pomp and pretensions of saviour of the nation, may become an obstacle for the creation of a proletarian party and may subsequently be much more difficult to combat than an open and avowed enemy of the working people.

Realizing that the movement towards a third bourgeois party is by no means as speedy and spontaneous as to create what is termed in the political jargon as a landslide; realizing that even the formation of a third party under the leadership of an outspoken liberal of the La Follette type would not mean a fundamental change in the character of the American political life inasmuch as actual power would still remain in the hands of a combination of the two old parties; realizing that even the absolutely improbable passing of power into the hands of a third party would mean for the working class infinitely less than the passing of power into the hands of a coalition of reform socialists and bourgeoisie in the European countries; realizing that it is our duty to warn the working class from falling into the soft arms of the liberal bourgeoisie which will be just as efficient in squeezing the life blood of the workers as is every variety of the bourgeoisie, realizing that our warning must be not in the nature of negative propaganda only, but in the nature of a separate and distinct party of labor which would compete with a third party, and wherever possible hamper its growth so as to give room for the growth of a labor party; we still may utilize the political excitement created by the insurgency of the republicans and by the third party movement; we must come to the workers and farmers who have been stirred by the present political agitation and induce them to create the weapon which is plausible even to the backward proletarian—a party of labor. It is not our duty to improve the machinery of capitalist exploitation; it is not our task to throw our weight in favor of one bourgeois party as opposed to the others; it would be impossible for us to do so even if we wished to, because we have no weight; it would be deviation from our class line if we were to make propaganda in favor of one bour-

Reply to the Thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin

By BITTELMAN and CANNON

The thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin on the Workers Party policy in the elections for 1924 is based upon two fundamental errors.

1—A mis-conception of the strategy and tactics of the Communist International.

2—A wrong analysis of the economic and political forces operating within the frame-work of present-day America.

Strategy and Tactics of the Communist International.

The strategy of the Communist International consists of the mobilization of the working class and all other oppressed groups that can be allied with it for an aggressive struggle against capitalist exploitation, for the destruction of the capitalist state, and the establishment of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

From this it follows that a Communist Party, which is the one to carry on this strategy, must itself be a fighting organization linked up with every phase of the class struggle and moving along consciously and persistently in the direction of the final proletarian struggle for power.

The class struggle does not develop along straight lines. Its ways are devious and complicated. As Trotzky said, "In politics the shortest distance between two points is a zig-zag." The thesis does not follow the method of Lenin when it attempts to speak of a "straight", and "direct" and "unyielding" policy as opposed to a policy of devious ways, political machinations or obscure paths.

A policy is correct, Communist and revolutionary if it promotes, deepens and intensifies the class struggle; if it accentuates class divisions and solidifies the working class as against the capitalist class and if it strenghtens the Communist Party and broadens its influence over the laboring masses.

A policy which satisfies the above requirements is a good Communist policy, irrespective of whether the line of its path is straight, broken or circular. The shape of the line of our tactics is determined, not by our free will but by the prevailing conditions of the class struggle.

The thesis is wrong and non-Marxian, and manifests a failure to understand the fundamentals of Communist strategy, when it attempts to dump all non-proletarian groupings into one reactionary heap which is to be condemned and fought against always in the same measure and with the same tactics. The established strategy of the Communist International, which is based on a Marxian conception of capitalist society, always differentiates between the immediate interests of the various groups and strata of the non-proletarian classes for the double purpose, of (1) mobilizing at a given moment the greatest possible force of anti-capitalist opposition, and (2) winning over all the exploited and oppressed elements to the proletarian cause thereby bringing about the isolation of the capitalist class. The thesis sins heavily against this principle of strategy and also against the actual facts involved in the third party movement when it proposes to treat this movement, which is a revolt against big capital, precisely as we treat the republican and democratic parties, which are the parties of big capital.

And, lastly, the whole thesis is pervaded with a spirit of pessimism, passivity and fear of tackling a complicated situation, which is altogether out of proportion to and unjustified by the known facts of the present situation and the established policies of the C. I. This spirit is peculiarly reminiscent of an attitude formerly shared by certain sections of our movement that the beginning and end of all Communist activities is propaganda of Communism—straightforward, unyielding preaching of Communist principles. It is this attitude that prevented for a time some of our members from accepting the Labor Party policy of the Workers Party.

The Present Situation.

The thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin does not disprove the fact that we are witnessing now in the United States a growing revolt of the working masses on the one hand and of the petty bourgeois elements on the other hand against the domination of the two old parties. The thesis is very careful to avoid the use of the term revolt. It says instead: "growing tendency, growing influence, marked dissatisfaction," etc. But this difference in terminology which is important, of course, does not, however, alter the fact that there is on foot a growing movement involving large masses of workers, farmers, and petty bourgeois elements tending to split away from the two old parties. This is the most important cardinal fact in present day American politics. Therefore, no strategy can be correct which fails to put this fact in its proper light and to analyze its basic factors. The thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin is deficient in both. It fails to probe down to the real economic basis of the insurgent movement, inside and outside of the two old parties, and therefore misses its true volume, scope and significance.

The Economic Situation.

The thesis admits "the economic situation is gradually approaching a crisis" and that "the economic depression has been on the increase thruout the latter part of 1923." This is correct but the present crisis is not of the type of the periodic, pre-war capitalist crises and herein lies its significance. It is not a temporary or passing affair. It is a manifestation here in the United States of the general critical state of world capitalism. This crisis may have its ups and downs but its lasting and permanent nature can not be disputed.

It is this lasting and permanent nature of the present economic depression, plus the recent political developments, which have unmasked the American government as the tool and sergeant of big capital, that is responsible for the acuteness of the class relations prevailing at present in the United States.

The Political Situation.

The thesis of the C. E. C. which is to be submitted to the Communist International speaks of the mass revolt in the United States against the domination of the two old parties as a revolt against the economic and political rule of big capital. And that is what it is, but this fact the thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin fails to take note of. It speaks of a "growing dissatisfaction", "bitter restlessnes" of the workers, farmers and petty bourgeois elements without realizing that what we are confronted with now is a movement and not merely a state of mind. A movement of large masses against the present rule of the bankers and big industrialists, and that this movement is tending unmistakeably in the direction of a third petty-bourgeois liberal party. Whether this party materializes—if it does—as a petty-bourgeois liberal party or as a regular capitalist party similar to one of the old parties is still somewhat problematical. It may eventually turn either way, which does not in the least change the present nature and significance of the movement. As to our tactics and attitude towards a third party the thesis of the C. E. C. provides for either case. The thesis of the Central Executive Committee lays down clearly and definitely the conditions and terms for a possible election alliance between the Farmer-Labor Party and the Third Party.

Our Attitude Toward the Third Party Movement.

The thesis of the Central Executive Committee bases its attitude toward the Third Party movement on three sets of considerations.

1—The Third Party movement accelerates the development of the class struggle, produces a clearer crystallization of political groupings on the basis of real economic interests, and weakens the united capitalist front against the working class.

2—The Third Party movement involves and is followed by large masses of workers and exploited farmers who are revolting and struggling against the domination of big capital. For these masses the Third Party movement is objectively a transitory stage to the class Farmer-Labor Party. The successful development of the Third Party movement will seriously affect if not shatter the domination of the Gompers machine in the A. F. of L. thereby opening the way for favorable changes in the labor movement.

3—The movement toward and the formation of a third petty-bourgeois party creates a favorable situation for the development of a class Farmer-Labor Party which is the main objective of our present strategy.

The thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin fails to take cognizance of any of these considerations. It admits that this movement "is important for the working class mainly thru the general political agitation it creates in the country and particularly thru the attacks it levels at the old capitalist parties." But it fails to understand the far-reaching implication even of this statement. What it does see is the probable coming into existence of "a third bourgeois party, which would be no more than a United Front of the big bourgeoisie and the mass of the middle and petty bourgeoisie which would become an obstacle for the creation of a proletarian party and may subsequently be much more difficult to combat than an open and avowed enemy of the working people."

What this Third Party movement may eventually materialize into, nobody knows as yet. For the present, however, it is not a United Front of big bourgeoisie with the middle and petty bourgeoisie but a movement of revolt of the workers, exploited and well-to-do farmers and various elements of the petty bourgeoisie against the rule of big capital.

That the Third Party movement carries with it serious dangers for the success of the Farmer-Labor Party movement goes without saying. The thesis of the Central Executive Committee clearly points out these dangers, and proposes definite measures to meet them.

After setting forth the conditions under which it is possible for the Farmer-Labor Party to support the candidates of the Third Party in the 1924 elections, the thesis of the C. E. C. says the following:

If under the conditions set forth above an election alliance, either national or local, is made the Farmer-Labor Party must maintain a distinct organization and carry on an independent campaign for its own program and utilize the situation to the utmost to crystallize in the definite form of an organized Farmer-Labor Party all those workers and exploited farmers who can be brought to the support of a class party.

Thruout any campaign in which we maintain an alliance with the third party, we must constantly criticize and expose it and its candidates, show up the futility of its program, and make it clear to the workers who are reached by our own campaign that the third party will bring them no salvation and no relief. We must make it clear that the whole campaign is simply a starting point in the struggle for the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government, which in turn is a step towards the Proletarian Dictatorship, the one and only instrument for their liberation.

All the elements of the classes which are participating in the revolt against and split from the old capitalist parties will be represented in the St. Paul convention on June 17th. But the probability of the class farmer-labor elements—the rank and file workers and poor farmers—predominating will be greatly increased by the aggressive role of the Workers Party in the campaign for the convention and the tendency of the third party elements (including the labor bureaucrats, who are ideologically part of the petty bourgeoisie), to turn to the Cleveland Conference of the C. P. P. A. or to some other center which may be created by the La Follette group to serve as the nucleus of the third party.

Our task at the June 17th Convention will be to strenghten and clarify its class character, fight for the adoption of a class program, organize it into a class party separate and distinct from the Cleveland conference or any other third party conference which may be held. The party formed there shall negotiate, thru committees, with other conferences on the question of common campaign or common candidates only as an organized body.

At the St. Paul Conference we shall nominate and fight for proletarian candidates as against any other candidates at the conference. We shall utilize the conference to lay the basis for the organization of the Farmer-Labor Party thruout the country and also advance there the proposal and plans for an economic organization of farmers to serve as the foundation for their political organization.

This step of supporting the candidates of a petty bourgeois liberal Third Party, under the conditions laid down in the thesis of the Central Executive Committee, is a correct one; not only because it is in accord with the general strategy of the C. I. (as manifested in its attitude to the British Labor Party and the Mexican presidential elections), but also because it offers the best tactical move of eventually separating the masses of workers and exploited farmers from the leadership of petty bourgeois liberalism and bringing them into the ranks of the class Farmer-Labor Party, which is a step along the road to Communism. On the other hand the position toward the Third Party movement taken by the thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin offers the best means of perpetuating petty-bourgeois influence over the masses of workers and exploited farmers that are now following this movement.

The thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin takes the position of no support for the candidates of the Third Party under any circumstances, and this for five reasons:

1—Our support would be futile because we do not command large numbers of voters who actually influence the outcome of the election.

And suppose we did command large numbers of voters? Would we then be justified in supporting candidates of the Third Party? Obviously not, according to the general strategy of the thesis of Comrades Lore and Olgin. Then where is the point of this argument?

2—It would "perturb the class vision of our membership and cause among them great consternation, appearing to them as an obvious deviation from the straight line of class struggle."

This argument figures very prominently in the thesis that the working class in America as a whole, being disgusted with the political game, will not follow, let alone approve, the tactical move involved in the support of a Third Party candidate.

If this argument has any validity at all, then the only conclusion to be drawn is: Total abstention from politics! Boycott all capitalist institutions! No compromise! No dealings with the enemy until we come to the final direct struggle for power and until then—preach Communism!

This is the straightest possible line of the class struggle. The only trouble with it is that it is wholly imaginary.

3 (Support of Third Party candidates would make it impossible for us to explain our refusal to support a "Friend of Labor" on the ticket of the democratic party.

By this argument the thesis shows that it is dealing not with social forces, classes, and parties, but with individuals.

The conception of "labor friends" which underlies the nonpartisan policies of Gompers and the C. P. P. A., can be exploded only on the basis of class relations and the social analysis of political parties. It is our duty to teach the workers to think in terms of classes and parties and not

Hits Dudley Taylor

"The action of the notorious Dud-ey Taylor, with the active co-opera-ion of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, in attempting to break down Trades Unionism by using the Crim-nal Court as an adjunct to the "ille-al injunction weapon against labor, alls for action on the part of every Local Union in Chicago and Cook County", said Fitzpatrick.

Support Striking German Seamen, Dockers, Urges Transport Labor Committee of Red International

The International Propaganda Committee of the Revolutionary Transport Workers, affiliated with the Red Labor International, in view of the attempts of the German shipping companies to destroy the 8-hour day and cut wages, has issued an appeal to the seamen of the world; the wages of German seamen are already so low and their working conditions of such a character that sporadic strikes, in foreign ports and at home, have been taking place. The German dockers and seamen have been supporting one another in splendid fashion but this apparently does not suit the social-democrat bureaucrats who hold office in the unions. The conditions against which the transport workers are struggling are set forth in the appeal, published below.

To the Seamen of all Countries!

They are fighting against the abolition of the 8-hour day and the reduction of real wages. For at least a bare subsistence wage. Against the capitalist offensive.

The reformist trade union bureaucracy has shamelessly betrayed the struggling workers. Instead of utilizing the united front of the dockers and shipyard workers for strengthening the position of the militant workers and for leading them to victory, the reformist Judases did everything to split the fighting front by separating and isolating the dockers from the shipyard workers.

The reformist trade union bureaucrats have accepted an arbitration decision which virtually abolishes the 8-hour day for all dock workers. They have treacherously proclaimed this decision "a splendid victory," and have actually advised the dockers to abandon their fighting brothers of the shipyards, thus enabling the brutal and greedy capitalists to defeat the shipyard workers the more easily and to subject them to their unhampered dictatorship.

But the militant dockers and shipyard workers have rejected this treacherous advice of the reformist lackeys of the Bourgeoisie, and have refused to accept the arbitration decision. The solid united front of the dockers and shipyard workers is intact.

Comrades and Fellow Workers! Seaman of All Countries!

If the German shipping barons succed in depriving the German workers of the 8-hour day, it is absolutely certain that your own exploiters, under the pretext of German cut-throat competition, will proceed to lengthen your own working hours and to reduce your wages.

This You Must Prevent!

The German dockers and shipyard workers are fighting not only for their own, but for your interests as well. Their victory is therefore your victory; their defeat—your own defeat.

Therefore practice the fullest solidarity with the German dockers and shipyard workers:

No seaman should perform blackleg work in German ports!

No German ship, and no ship from any other capitalist country is to be laden or discharged in German ports!

The crews of all foreign ships in German ports should at once organize relief committees in support of the strikers!

See to it that the officers of your ship give no aid to German strikebreakers loading or discharging any ship!

See to it that no ship is repaired in German ports!

Comrades! Seaman of all countries! In all capitalist countries the shipping barons are determined to lengthen the working hours and to reduce the wages of the dockers and shipyard workers. The shipping companies thruout the world have united in an international offensive against the very existence of the shipping slaves. You must offer resistance! You too, must unite internationally and create a solid international front against your common enemy! If you do this, victory is inevitably yours!

Long live the fighting solidarity of the German Dockers and Shipyard Workers!

Long live the Solidarity of the Seamen of All Countries!

With revolutionary greetings.

The International Propaganda Commttee of the Revolutionary Transport Workers.

Rubber Trust Ambassador.

LIMA, Peru.—The miseries of the workers in the Peruvian sugar fields driven to their tasks by the slave driver's whip are likely to be duplicated soon in the rubber fields. Miles Poindexter, lame duck U. S. senator, now ambassador here, has just made an extended tour of inspection in the rubber jungles to see what American capital can do there. It is easy to predict that what it does will make the Congo look cheap.

IMPEACH COOLIDGE!

LARGE TONNAGE, HIGH DEATH RATE, FOUND TOGETHER

Only Qualification of Foreman Is Results

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 11. —Have you ever wondered just why there are so many coal miners killed in our coal mines every year? Hardly a month of this year has gone by without its mine tragedy with many lives lost. Last year there were 2,452 coal diggers killed in the mines, according to the U. S. bureau of mines and there were many more times that number crippled.

The reason for this staggering death list can be seen in the following want ad now running in a Charleston (W. Va.) newspaper:

WANTED — Experienced Mine Foreman. Married Man to live on property. MUST BE ABLE TO PRODUCE LARGE TONNAGE AT LOW COST. Mine located in eastern Tennessee. New operation, completely electrified, ultimate tonnage 1,500 to 2,000 tons daily. Permanent connection for proper man. ONLY MAN WHO CAN PRODUCE RESULTS NEED APPLY.

There you have it in a nutshell "Large Tonnage at Low Cost." It costs money to sprinkle explosive dust or to employ sufficient gas inspectors or a timber gang large enough to timber dangerous tops. But the boss who keeps the "permanet connection" is the man that keeps the production costs down and the tonnage up.

And when the inevitable happens the coal company isn't out anything. Insurance companies take care of damages to blow-up mines and they settle for the dead coal diggers. That is, they pay the survivors the meager compensation award if they haven't been able to beat them out of it at court.

Auto Workers' Vote Goes to Candidate Endorsed by Labor

By CYRIL LAMBKIN
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., April 11.—I. Paul Taylor, ex-minister and ex-socialist, endorsed by the Detroit Federation of Labor, lost the mayorality of Highland Park, a suburb of Detroit in which is located the great Ford factory, by 47 votes out of a total of 8449 votes cast. The winner is Clarence E. Gittins, a corporation lawyer.

The significant thing about this election is not the close vote, but the remarkable division in the balloting. In only two precincts was the vote close. In the other twelve the one or the other candidate won or lost by a wide margin. Taylor, who has a socialist reputation and who made his appeal mainly to the workers, received two-thirds or better of the total vote of the sections surrounding the Ford and the Maxwell factories. The nice residential sections cast a two-thirds or better vote for Gittins.

Never before have we had such a remarkable demonstration of the class struggle in the good Mr. Ford's own lair. This division augurs well for the class Farmer-Labor Party which will be organized on June 17th in St. Paul.

Teachers Get Pay Boost.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 11.—Salary increases of $200 and upward have been ordered for teachers and supervisors in the San Francisco public schools. The minimum entering salary is now $1,400 a year, increasing to a maximum of $200 for teachers. The order by the board of education followed information that teachers in some other cities of California were receiving higher pay.

The Dictatorship of Hunger In Germany

forces German workers to labor long hours for small pay. A skillful machinist must work for the same amount of nourishment

2 hours in the United States, 7¼ hours in Germany.

This enables German Big Business to produce cheaply.

To meet German low prices in the world market, Big Business in other countries must sacrifice profits or reduce the scale of wages to the German level.

forces German working mothers to give away their children. A want ad in a German paper reads:

"Will give away baby immediately after its birth. Necessary clothing available. Offers to be made by letter to L. Z. 2172, Agency of Sulz."

Another reads:

"Will give away forever little daughter aged nine months. No compensation expected. Offers to be sent to B. H. 1390, Agency of Lindenthal."

Communists and the Coming Crisis

Car loadings decreased last week by 28,726 as compared with the same week in 1923.

Unfilled steel tonnage decreased by 2,620,525 as compared with this time last year.

In addition to the fall in these two barometers it has been discovered recently that the carloads have been averaging ten per cent less than normal in weight for several months—in other words ten per cent should be deducted from the peak carload tonnage figures.

Figures such as these coupled with reports of unemployment in other than basic industries shows that production is, to make an Irish bull, slowing down with considerable speed.

Flourishing industry requires something more substantial than optimistic prognostications emanating from the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs and other haunts of the babbittry. It requires markets and these the capitalist system is finding it increasingly hard to discover and exploit.

Before the first fall frost the capitalist press will be carrying explanations of the conditions underlying "business stagnation" instead of the glowing reports of profit-making activities.

The coming winter will be a terrible one for the workers of this nation and many of them, misled by their ignorant leaders, will be blaming the unemployment on the depression "that always comes in a presidential year." The farmers are no longer fooled by this hokum and this myth will be pretty well exploded in many industrial centers during the coming campaign in which the Workers (Communist) Party will be active. The Workers (Communist) Party is the only organization participating in the united front farmer-labor movement that has a clear understanding of the unemployment problem.

The capitalist class of the United States, if figures mean anything, is going to give the Workers Party the opportunity of organizing unemployed councils before the year is out and of explaining to the workers that unemployment is inseperable from a system that takes from the workers the greater portion of their product.

In the coming industrial and financial crisis both the workers and farmers will be entirely without financial resources—the farmers are already bankrupt and the high cost of living has prevented the workers from accumulating any substantial savings. It will be the most far-reaching and critical situation that American capitalism has yet faced because it is directly linked up with the world-wide breakdown of capitalism, because it is symptomatic of an organic lesion of the system.

The Communists alone of the organized groups within society face the coming crisis with entire confidence. They know that out of the misery and struggle for the necessities of life which capitalism cannot supply comes the broader movement of the workers, that gradually becomes a force challenging capitalism in all its citadels, the movement for which the Communists have a program that means victory for the workers and farmers.

Those Filipino Fanatics

A Manila dispatch informs us that "three leaders in the recent outbreaks of fanatics in Surigao province have been sentenced to death and 158 others have received sentences of thirty years imprisonment."

These "outbreaks of fanatics," strangely enough, never occur in any but those countries subjugated by an imperialist nation and where a struggle for freedom is going on.

George Washington, Tom Paine, Patrick Henry, Thomas Jefferson, were branded as dangerous fanatics by the British government and John Brown, when he took his rifle and went out to free the black slaves was hung for his fanatical devotion to abolition. American imperialism now produces its own crop of fanatics.

We look upon the dispatch quoted as proof that some of the Filipinos would rather die in a fight for freedom than live under the rule of Leonard Wood, the potentate who rules the Phillipines for the American plunderbund.

We are sorry the Prince of Wales was not allowed to go to South Africa. It is the only piece of British territory in which he has not fallen from his horse and this apparent discrimination may add to the unrest there in labor circles.

"His Record Is His Platform" is the slogan of McAdoo's followers. Many a man has stepped off of better platforms than this with a rope around his neck.

JOIN THE WORKERS PARTY

Socialists and Democracy

Among the common pactices of the Communist terror, the author names the following: Violation of women, driving sharpened poles thru bodies, breaking bodies on the wheel, choking people to death, burning and burying people alive, cutting off limbs, noses or ears, branding people with disfiguring marks, flogging women and stripping them naked in public places.

Do not be hasty, dear reader, and jump to the conclusion that the above is from the Chicago Tribune, the Los Angeles Times or some other capitalist sheet. Oh, dear, no! It is from the socialist Milwaukee Leader, of April 8, 1924, and is merely a part of an article resurrecting the hoary lies that even the capitalist press is ashamed to print.

Curiously enough this article is published in juxtaposition to another which, in attempting to explain the tactics of the Socialist party of Bulgaria, acknowledges that it supported the bloody Zankoff government and even formed a coalition with it. The mass murders of workers and peasants perpetrated by the government of which they are a part and the apology for their treasonable activities by the leading organ of the Socialist party in America is sufficient to show that this shameless crew of the Second International is the same in every country in the world.

The article says:

> When the danger of chaotic anarchy was past, the Socialists left the coalition with the Zankoff government and assumed the opposition on a constitutional basis.
> Thanks to this Socialist opposition, the fundamentals of democratic government have been saved.

Translating the above into the language of class-conscious workers it means that the Bulgarian socialists supported the counter-revolutionary Zankoff government until enough workers and peasants had been butchered to make Bulgaria temporarily safe for capitalists, landlords, socialists and other vermin.

It does not take much to satisfy the yearning of this crew of phrasemongering traitors for democracy; the "fundamentals of democratic government" that have been preserved in Bulgaria are few and far between; like the loyalty of the socialists to the workingclass they are meaningless terms and in Bulgaria it was by mass murder of the workers and peasants that the socialists demonstrated their loyalty to them.

By the testimony of their own organ in America the socialists have convicted themselves not only of slandering the Communist Party of Russia and the workers and peasants' government of Russia, but of supporting counter-revolution and condoning the terroristic acts of a capitalist government by pleading that in Bulgaria the socialists were "preserving the fundamentals of democracy."

This is exactly the same excuse that was given by the allied imperialists when they sent millions to the slaughter in the world war.

Wallace's Tricks

Every member of the Coolidge millionaire cabinet seems to have his specialty in misleading the masses of this country. Upon the shoulders of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has fallen the arduous task of misleading the poor farmers.

Of late Mr. Wallace has been working non-union hours in a desperate pre-election effort to bluff especially the wheat farmers into the ridiculous notion that their conditions are on the upgrade. The latest lullaby sung by Wallace to the farmers of the wheat belt is that "some improvement in the wheat situation this year is indicated by apparent increase in consumption and by smaller winter wheat acreages in most of the leading producing countries."

Here we have a raw case of blinking the facts and fooling the farmers deliberately. The facts of the present agricultural crisis, particularly insofar as the wheat farmers are concerned, are these: The principal wheat-consuming countries will have a greater unused surplus crop on hand this year than last year. In 1923, Europe increased its wheat crop by 240,000,000 bushels. Outside of the United States the reduction of winter wheat has reached the tremendously insignificant height of 1 per cent.

More than that. Many countries are using rye interchangeably with wheat and have large crops of rye on hand which they will consume before they will make new purchases of wheat. The curse of our wheat farmers is that they are blessed with a fertile soil. Present indications point to a greater 1924 yieldage per acre which will more than overcome the reduction of wheat supply that might be entailed by the smaller acreage.

Wallace's propaganda will not help the farmers. No matter how roseate they be, lies, false impressions, and fake figures will not help the wheat and other farmers. In the past five years the farmers' and ranchers' livestock has decreased $3,914,887,000 in value. At the same time their land depreciated more than thirteen billion dollars in value. The farmers' economic and political ills are too fundamental and too ingrained in the very capitalist system itself to be ended or even relieved by Wallace and his tricks.

In view of the recent high casualty rate among sweethearts of the male sex it would seem to be a good plan to frisk the loved one for a gun before getting down to the real business of the evening.

Hugo Stinnes, billionaire steel king, is dead, but not from starvation like the thousands of German workers whom he exploited.

W. VA. MINERS CONFERRING ON NEW WAGE PACT

80,000 Now Working in Open Shop Mines

By J. A. HAMILTON.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

FAIRMONT, W. Va., April 11.—Several hundred delegates from miners' local unions in sub-districts No. 3 and No. 4 of District 17 met here today in special convention to consider the ratification of the new three-year agreement, and other important matters.

The 23,000 or so miners represented here—20,000 in Sub-District 4; 3,000 in Sub-District 3—comprise almost the whole union organization in West Virginia. There are a few thousand members in the Kanawha River Valley in the South; a few hundred in Masin County (Pomerot Field) on the Ohio River; one or two thousand in the vicinity of Wheeling (the last in District 6), leaving some 80,000 unorganized miners in this state, which in 1923 produced almost one-fifth of the country's bituminous coal (105,000,000 tons), and whose production has been increasing much more rapidly than the average.

Organized In 1918.

Sub-District No. 4, taking in the Morgantown, Fairmont and Clarksburg fields, along the West Fork and Monongahela rivers in the northern part of the state—is the baby subdivision in the miners' union. It dates back only to 1918, when the miners in these fields were organized simply by agreement with the companies, without a general strike being necessary. Much of Sub-District No. 3 Grafton-Philippi field, east of Sub-District No. 4 had already been organized a few years.

District 17 began in the Kanawha River Valley in Southern West Virginia, but open-shop campaigns have almost wiped out the original part of the district, letting the burden fall upon the infant sub-district, the Northern field of maintaining the cause of unionism in this beknighted state. Several thousand men in the Kanawha Valley have been on strike, however, for several years (Paint and Cabin Creeks) and rumors are about that the union intends to put on an aggressive organization campaign.

Not In Central Competitive.

West Virginia is not included in the Central Competitive field in wage negotiations but its scale is based upon that of the competitive field. However, the Northern W. Virginia scale calls for 62.7 cents per ton for loading in rooms after machine cutting (in "thick" veins formerly five, now four feet or over) as against about 74 cents in the Pittsburgh District for thick vein, and higher rates in some other sections; the day rates are also about 2 per cent lower. On the other hand, the Northern W. Virginia miners are not troubled with the draw slate (slate which overlies the coal and either comes down when the coal is blasted or must be pulled down for safety) which makes life miserable for the Pittsburgh vein miners in the Pittsburgh District and especially in Eastern Ohio; where they must handle 12 inches or less of this slate without extra compensation. The Pittsburgh vein in W. Virginia runs eight or nine feet in thickness, enabling a foot or so of roof coal to be left to hold up the slate. The Freeport and Sewickley veins, which are also extensively mined in this field, do not carry draw slate, altho the Freeport has several inches of "bone coal" (slatey unburnable, heavy substance) to be picked out of the middle of the vein.

New Scale Is Worse.

The new scale up for adoption is in general the same but with a number of changes almost all to the disadvantage of the miners. The differential of 1.3 cents per ton, and 8 cents per day, formerly allowed to men in mines requiring closed lamps (for safety from gas; storage battery electric lights generally used) was wiped out. This affects about 15 per cent of the Sub-District 4 membership employed in the shaft mines in the Fairmont field, Pittsburgh vein. It was also decided that "thin veins" are four feet or under instead of five, which will take .3 cents per ton away from quite a few, especially in the Grafton-Phillipi field.

These Bosses Won't Sign.

At present the New England Fuel and Transportation Co., operating two large mines at Lowsville, and Grant Town, employing together about 950 men, is still adhering to its refusal to sign the new agreement and has its mines closed tight. Several other companies, mostly small ones, have also refused to sign. There have been since the 1922 strike in a few non-union miners in the Morgantown and Clarksburg fields. Of course, all the agreements signed so far are contingent upon ratification of the scale by the convention.

Production Near Standstill.

Coal production in this region is almost at a standstill, most of the mines being entirely closed or working on a part-time schedule, there being in the Fairmont region 47 mines reported working yesterday and 232 idle. Most of the production is said to be going to the railroads: the Pittsburgh vein and Sewickley mines of Northern West Virginia furnishing an exceptionally easily crumble into slack to be blown out the smoke-stack by the forced draft before being consumed.

Wild Joy Rides With University Girls Outdoor Sport of Burns Department of Justice Stools

William J. Burns department of justice dicks whom he sent to Arizona to assist his private agency in labor spy work for the copper companies, had such wild parties with university girls that a disasterous scandal was feared, we learned from confidential Burns agency, now in the possession of the Industrial Workers of the World, and made public thru Industrial Solidarity.

Another letter, which follows, tells the federal district attorney at Phoenix, Arizona, to make discreet inquiries about one of these joy rides where three labor spies spilled out of a car with girl students and warns him against the reports getting into the hands of an agent named "Jones".

Reports On Labor Spy

Another letter, dated June 5, 1923, from George P. Pross, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the Burns Agency to William J. Burns himself, addressed as "director" again gives the lie to Burns assertion to Senator Wheeler that he severed connections with his private spy business on entering the government service. It encloses reports on the work of "investigator W. I.", alias Fred Harris, stool pigeon in the I. W. W. metal mining industry until he was expelled recently. Burns is urged to "return" to the Pacific Coast and his subordinate refers to the girl students' scandal as follows:

Joy Ride Across Border

I have received information that three Government employes went out on a wild party, taking with them three young girls from the University of Arizona, making a trip to Nogales, Mexico. It appears as tho the officials of the University of Arizona are up in arms over this affair and have been requested thru Government officials in Arizona to make a full report to Washington, D. C.

"Your Agents" In Party

As stated, when I make this trip into Arizona, I will write you a personal report, giving you names of subjects implicated, also names of people with full knowledge, as I understand some of your Department agents were connected with the party.

I have again been warned against radical reports getting into the hands of Agent in Charge, Jones, of Phoenix, Arizona.

Slimy Secretary of Labor Slips Slave Clause in Ship Bill

WASHINGTON, April 11.—Senators have promised Andrew Furuseth, president International Seaman's union of America, that they will make a fight on the senate floor to strike from the immigration bill the joker inserted at the instance of Secretary of Labor Davis, which would kill the seaman's act.

The joker permits the secretary of labor to require a bond of each alien seaman who leaves his ship in an American port. This repeals the clause in the seamen's act which permits alien seamen, employed at low wages, to quit their jobs when in American ports and to wait for a chance to ship out at American wages.

Son of Morgan Side Kick Heads Revolt Of Harvard Students

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 10.—Corliss Lamont, son of the New York (Morgan) banker and vice-president of the Harvard union here, is leading a students' protest against the action of the governing board of the union in refusing to allow radicals to speak to the students. Eugene V. Debs, William Z. Foster, and Scott Nearing are among the speakers excluded by Harvard union which tries to palm off on the students only conservative orators. Lamont and his fellows say the radicals can always speak before the Harvard Liberal club, but that does not reach enough students.

Expect Ambassador Of U. S. to Brazil To Leave for Home

RIO DE JANEIRO, April 11.—The newspaper A. Noite says it is informed from an authoritative source that a high diplomatic representative will leave Brazil definitely next Wednesday and "will not return."

Edwin Morgan, ambassador of the United States has booked passage for the United States on that date, but there is no confirmation of reports that he will not return to his post here.

OUR BOOK REVIEWS

"The Ethics of Opium," Ellen La Motte, The Century Co.

The western world, particularly America, is worried because of the increase of drug addiction. Hundreds of thousands of lives are being wrecked and made useles thru the use of dope.

Ellen La Motte makes it plain in her books, "The Ethics of Opium," that the only hope of controlling the production of the raw opium and of cocoa leaves "The output of this raw material is the root of the matter. Strike at the root, and the whole thing dries up."

Then she shows how the production of opium is made a very profitable business in the eastern colonies of the western countries. How the same dope that wrecks the lives of workers in the home countries and reduced their efficiency is used in the East to keep the natives contented and enslaved. Miss La Motte shows and then proves with tables of statistics.

Great Britain is the worst offender in this dope traffic. At home, there are excellent laws that help to prevent dope addiction but in India the opium is raised, manufactured and sold by the government. Holland, France and Japan are also strong for dope in the east.

These goverments could, by stopping production in their colonies, stop the whole dope traffic. But they don't, it pays too well.

Harding's Normalcy Defined

What is normalcy?

Comes now a description of the Harding administration

"as the most corrupt regime in the history of the country * * * * a seamy side of history for which one seeks in vain a parallel short of the intrigue of the most corrupt European courts of the 18th century."

The quoted words are from a recently published dispatch of Arthur Sears Henning, principal Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune.

GUNMEN RULE IN FORMER UNION FIELDS IN W. VA

Briar Creek Scabs Kep Like Prisoners

By TOM TIPPETT
(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Pres

OLCOTT, W. Va., April 11.— strike in West Virginia does n mean merely remaining away fro work. It carries with it simultan eously an influx of gunmen, evictio notices, and a general reign of terro in the camp. All of which happene at Olcott. This place is a coal min ing camp on Briar Creek just of Big Coal river in Kanawha county owned by the Black Band Consoli dated Coal Co.

The Briar Creek strike has no been on for two years. It began i 1922 in the national coal strik when the Black Band operators ap plied the 1917 wage scale in thei mines. The situation here is typica of many isolated streggles in thi district. Out of the original strik ers about 200 remain on the creek involving altogether nearly 1,00 people counting the women and chil dren, affected by the strike.

Company Offers 1917 Scale

This company would have bee willing to continue union recogni tion had the men accepted the 191 wage scale. The 1917 rate was 5 cents a ton for loaders and $4.30 fo daily labor. The war-time scale an the one demanded by the miners an being paid in other unionized sec tions of West Virginia is $7 a day and 77 cents a ton for cutting an loading. This company is consid ered liberal because it gave th strikers at one period 30 days' no tice to get out of company owne houses and at all times the notice allowed at least five days to mov instead of 24 hours or less.

Evictions in January

An examinaton of the eviction pa pers shows January as the tim chosen by this benevolent coal company to give their erstwhile em ployes a last opportunity to retur to the mines under the bosses' term or vacate their houses. This kin of moving does not mean into an other house, but onto the roa where the company does not ow the land. All the houses in such camp are owned by the coal opera tors for that very purpose.

January in West Virginia is rea winter; 20 below zero is not uncom mon on Briar Creek. When a coa strike is called in this state a ten colony appears immediately in th river bottoms or on some hillsid patch which a poverty stricken farm er gladly rents to the union. In winte barracks are substituted for the can vas homes as much as possible. An so it is on Briar Creek.

This article is being written in such a one-room home. The 1000 union people making the fight have live in these barracks crudely and uncom fortably for the last two years wit escape very remote. They are supported by District 17, U. M. W. A.; the strike benefits being $3.50 a week for single men, $1.50 extra for a wife and 50 cents for each child. This buys coarse, wholesome food and they do not suffer hunger. But there a no clothes and nothing else. Ver ragged and barefoot women and ch dren are not an exception but th rule. None of the many children g to school because of their rags.

Workers Kept as Prisoners

Farther up the creek are the min where strike-breakers are at wor except at one pit which the strike have successfully kept closed. Th 1917 wage scale is supposed to be paid but a worker there told me that the company pays "whatever it wants to" and always settles below the 1917 figures. Wages are paid in company money and the workers are kept in the camp like prisoners. Escape is 16 miles over the mountains on one side or via the company owned private railroad to the Baltimore & Ohio on the other. Thus the non union men are kept in the valley in slavery.

Police Nab Runaway Scabs

In the beginning of the strike 100 Negro families were brought in from the southern plantations. It can be said to their credit that all but 35 of these colored families have e caped. A few days ago the strikers assisted two Negro men down the creek but later they were captured and marched back past the barracks to the mine by a detachment of the state mounted police.

In West Virginia there are thr organizations that do this and oth business just as pernicious for th coal barons. They are the Baldwin-Felts detective agency, chartered and operating in Logan, McDowell and Mingo counties; the operators' private army of "watchmen" deputized by the state and paid for by the operators, and the regular state constabulary (mounted police). The function of these three organizations is identical.

Mounted Police Guard Mines

On Briar Creek, in the absence of the other two, the mounted police serve the operators. I walked 16 miles from Briar Creek over the public mountain trail (April 4) and did not meet or see a sign of a single mounted policeman except at a coal mine. Their presence on the highway with guns and cartridge belts in glaring array was the unmistakable sign of a non-union coal camp.

(C. H. Minner, secretary Local 4115, U. M. W. A., Brounland, W. Va., will be glad to receive castoff clothing for men, women or children of any age to help them in their struggle.—T. T.)

HOOVER'S ANTI-SOVIET PLOT EXPOSED

Today's Daily Worker Comes From Our Own Press in Our Own Building

Today's issue of the DAILY WORKER marks a great forward step. This issue of our paper was printed on our own press in our own building. Within a few days the DAILY WORKER plant will be able to print everything from a calling card to a book, magazine or newspaper, on the latest type job-presses, cylinder and rotary press, which are now part of our equipment.

The DAILY WORKER belongs to the thousands of workers whose nickels, dimes and dollars made this possible.

The DAILY WORKER editorial staff, by working day and night, kept up the standard which makes the DAILY WORKER the best workingclass newspaper in America.

The business office contracted to run the paper on its own presses within three months after the paper started on January 13. Just three months have gone by and we are not only using our own presses, but are housed in our own building at 1113 West Washington Street.

The DAILY WORKER moved into its own plant because it was assured that the workers and farmers would continue to support their first daily English language Communist newspaper. The new subscriptions are expected to go way over the ten thousand mark set for our first subscription drive.

Today's issue marks a new phase in the growth of the DAILY WORKER because it demonstrates to even the most skeptical that we are now a permanent institution. It is now three months since the DAILY WORKER was only an idea, and the workers who made the paper possible, have demonstrated that it has come to stay.

Efficiency is the new watchword of the workers. The DAILY WORKER proves that the militant working class is capable of efficient management and operation of large projects. Within three days' time the entire equipment of the DAILY WORKER was moved to our new home. A complicated modern Hoe rotary press, that prints 25,000 papers an hour, was moved across town and set up in the new building, ready to run this issue of the paper.

The DAILY WORKER is permanently established. It is founded on the support of the faithful workers and farmers of the country who are to keep their daily growing by sending in a flood of subscriptions. The DAILY WORKER belongs to the working class, and it depends for its support on the army of sub-getters that is now being built up. The new DAILY WORKER BUILDING is an evidence of the faith which is laid in the increased and continued activity of the workers in rallying to the support of their paper.

SULLIVAN IN FAREWELL TO THE STRIKERS

He Thinks Capitalist Courts Good Thing

A bitter attack on the injunction against picketing as unconstitutional and illegal by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' lawyer, Peter Sissman, had Judge "Dennie" Sullivan on the run at the last session of his court before he fled from the courageous picketers for parts unknown. His place is being taken by Judge Charles M. Foell.

Judge Sullivan tried to excuse his unjust sentences and fines by putting up a weak defense consisting of moralizing and philosophical generalities.

Protects Property.

"We must have some sort of a tribunal," said Sullivan. "We must protect"—Sullivan almost said property, but checked himself and finished up—"the people." "In Russia they have committees to interpret the laws, but judges are best, and that's why I am going to enforce the injunction."

Sullivan's court room gives the strikers a good education. They are packed into the court room by the dozen, and are treated, not as a part of the "people" who are supposed to benefit by the law, but as so many wooden figures which are moved around at the pleasure of the property owners. As Sullivan talked about protecting the people he mechanically took the thousand-dollar bonds which each "criminal" striker had to put up to keep his liberty.

Hillman to Speak.

Sidney Hillman told the DAILY WORKER that the ten thousand dollars put up by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers is only a beginning. "There will be more when it is needed," Hillman said. "The strike is important to every union man. We must all help fight the illegal injunction, especially those in the needle trades. The Amalgamated will go down the line with the Ladies' Garment Workers."

The DAILY WORKER arranged that Hillman should speak at today's strike meeting.

Nothing further has been heard from the Federation of Labor officials regarding the labor parade to be followed by a mass meeting. Members of the "Committee of 15" declare they have heard nothing from the Mayor relative to a permit. John Fitzpatrick was instructed to obtain the permit, but was out of town when called on by the DAILY WORKER.

Gompers Does Nothing.

Altho it has long been advertised that Samuel Gompers is to take definite action in aid of the garment workers, Gompers has done nothing about the strike since being in town. Gompers has been secreted in the Hotel Morrison for the greater part of the last week, engaged in mysterious conferences with some of his old pals, and studying certain phases of women in industry.

If Gompers is doing anything to help the garment strikers fight the injunction, he is keeping mighty quiet about it. At the Federation headquarters it was stated his plans are not known regarding the strike. It is not known by any of the union officials when Gompers will speak at the long heralded mass meeting, or whether he will speak at all.

The Daily Worker Unmasks U. S. Spokesman As Ally of Worst Russian Reaction

The DAILY WORKER herewith reproduces photostatic documents and gives the facts showing how Herbert Hoover, as a spokesman of The American government, aided and abetted the counter-revolutionary forces in Europe.

Hoover's unsuccessful attempt to overthrow the Workers' and Farmers' Soviet Republic of Russia resembles the dastardly role played by him in helping to put Admiral Horthy, hangman of the Hungarian working class, in power.

The DAILY WORKER is now in the midst of prosecuting a vigorous, thorogoing investigation which will completely expose the true role of the American capitalist government agents like Hebert Hoover in the struggle of the European working men for freedom from employing class oppression.

In view of Secretary of State Hughes' fraudulent allegations about the Soviet Republic of Russia, these genuine documents, for the first time made public by the DAILY WORKER, are of inestimable value in showing how the United States government itself has been doing everything in its power to overthrow the Soviet government

WASHINGTON, April 13.—"When the time comes that the truth about America's share in the war against Soviet Russia is really wanted, then I shall be able to bring witnesses who will prove that America is responsible for great material damage and loss of many lives on the Russian side. Today there are living six men, with whom I can communicate, who know all the plans made for the Yudenitch invasion. I have documents that will support their testimony."

This was the statement made to THE DAILY WORKER correspondent here by Captain James V. Martin, who commanded the Shipping Board vessel "Lake Fray" on her voyage from Rassens, near Bordeaux, France, in August, 1919, to Reval, Esthonia, with a cargo consigned from "American Relief Administration" to "Representative General Supply Committee of the Russian Armies".

Photostatic copy of a bill of lading of part of this cargo is presented herewith. It shows that 60 motor trucks, of the 2-ton Liberty type supplied to the quartermasters' corps in the American army, and some 50,000 gallons of gasoline, 150 gallons of grease, and spare truck parts, were included in this shipment.

Shattering Hoover's Denial.

Hoover denies that Martin's cargo of "food and medicines" was delivered to Yudenitch's forces. He points out that Martin sailed up the Baltic in August, and that Yudenitch did not enter Russia until October. That is just the point made by Martin—that he was decorated by Yudenitch for "the work you have rendered to the Russian North-Western Army", on September 4, and that the work involved was the early delivery of provisions and this motor transport. He says it was because Winston Churchill, the British war minister, failed to deliver the airplanes and tanks he had promised, that Yudenitch failed to capture Leningrad and to gain the aid of the Finnish army then waiting on the border to march toward Moscow.

Yudenitch waited until October in the vain hope that Churchill's British war materials would arrive. The desertion of Von der Goltz and Bermont, his Baltic German allies, threatened his rear and caused a blockade of the coast, forcing him to start on his campaign when he was unprepared for severe fighting. The Red Army rallied, and the monarahist forces were destroyed.

"It is true that I entered into negotiations to furnish airplanes to Yudenitch's army," said Martin. "I did so because the British link in the plan for the military campaign had failed, and because Gen. Goff of the British Army, who was acting in the Baltic region for the American government, according to all accounts, assured me that I ought to do so. I considered that it was necessary to get airplanes and machine guns from Germany, to carry out the policy of the American government toward Russia.

COMMUNIST, I.W.W. CLASH TO BIG CROWD

Cannon-Edward Debate Before Big Throng

Sixteen hundred men and women packed North Side Turner Hall yesterday afternoon to cheer their respective representatives, Forrest Edwards, of the I. W. W., or James Cannon, of the Workers Party, in their debate on the subject: "Resolved, That the Workers Party Must Fail to Achieve Anything of Importance for the Workers."

Before the debate began Bob Chaplin, the chairman, spoke of the coming revolutionary holiday on the first of May and pointed out that both of the groups before him were against capitalism. Partisans of both sides cheered at this and the spirit in the main was friendly until the end.

Must Serve the State.

But the debating was a real clash of ideas. Cannon, while he paid a tribute to the I. W. W. members for their courage in the class war pointed out that working class power could not be seized without taking over the forces of the state.

Edwards led off by supporting the necessity of industrial action as opposed to political action, claiming that the class struggle is in the industrial field and that the causes of the struggle arise in the workshops, where they must be dealt with in his opinion. The Workers Party leaders use too many theses, he argued.

Relies on Unions Solely.

"The capitalists own all the resources and means of wealth production and don't use them," asserted Edwards, "while the workers use the materials and do not own them. The robbery of wage labor takes place in industry; therefore, we must unite on the basis of industry, the field of the struggle."

Edwards argued that when the crisis came that the state power crumbled, the only saved institution would be the unions of workers in industry and the task of reconstructing industry would then devolve on them. Later in his remarks, Edwards mentioned that this crisis would not come until the "dim and distant future."

Dictatorship of Proletariat.

"The dictatorship of the proletariat is a necessary condition to the workers in the crisis of their struggle against capitalism," stated Edwards. "But the dictatorship cannot be organized by a political party. It must be from the union of workers in industry."

Edwards summed up his case against the Workers Party in the role of leadership in nine points, beginning with the fact that it is a political party; asserting that it is not organized on the basis of the class struggle; that its organization tactics must lead the workers farther astray; that the Workers Party revere and corrupt Marx; that they would establish a dictatorship of politicians; that it is not in the power of a political party to achieve the revolution; that the Workers Party want domination and liquidation of workers' organizations; that indulgence in the program of opportunism, like the old socialist party, is bound to fail; that slogans lead to delusion.

Cannon began with an announcement of his pride in being a "professional revolutionist" and plunged at once into a clear and forceful out-

Hoover Must Answer

The revelations of the Teapot Dome and the Daugherty investigations have overshadowed many political events of the first order. Now, that these investigations are slowing down under pressure from the biggest business interests of the country, is the time to force Congress to act on the crimes committed by other cabinet members who have to date been saved from exposure by the pressure of the former investigations.

We have especially in mind the conduct of Herbert Hoover in entering a conspiracy to overthrow the Russian Soviet Government by furnishing food and military supplies to Yudenitch in his drive against Leningrad. The dastardly maneuvers of Herbert Hoover, posing as the humanitarian relief agent of starving Europe, in fomenting counter-revolution in Hungary and Soviet Russia costing thousands of lives and hundreds of millions of dollars, deserve far more thorogoing and serious investigation than even the graft and corruption of Fall and Daugherty.

The Wheeler committee has deliberately shirked the investigation of the charges made against Hoover by Captain Martin. The evidence in the possession of Captain Martin who commanded the Shipping Board vessel "Lake Fray" bringing airplanes and tanks to Yudenitch indicts Hoover of a crime that dwarfs in rottenness and bestiality everything that Fall, Denby and Daugherty have done. The graves, known and unknown, of the Russian, American, English, and other workingmen who fell in the battles of the Russian revolution are eloquent witnesses of the policies of our capitalist government as pursued by Hoover.

Such policies will never be ended until the workingmen and farmers use all their power to put a stop to them. Mr. Wheeler and his so-called progressive heroes are running away from an examination of the bloody acts of Hoover because they fear the attacks of the reactionaries on them as "reds" and dangerous citizens. Wheeler and Brookhart will not do a thing or lift the smallest voice to show Hoover in his true light unless the pressure of the workers and farmers is so great as to compel them to do so.

These "progressives" dare not expose the Hoover "relief" policy for fear of the disclosures adducing more damaging irrefutable evidence about the class character of the American government and its policies.

Precisely for this reason, the working and farming masses must force the Wheeler committee to rip the mask of humanitarianism off Hoover by subjecting his European relief campaigns to a merciless investigation. It is high time that Hoover answers.

RUSSIA IN BLUNT TALK TO FRANCE

Resent Interference of Paris in Spy Trials

MOSCOW, April 13.—Russia today sent a sharp note to France, "rejecting indignantly" the latter's interference in the trial of anti-Soviet spies at Kief.

The Russian note was in reply to one from Premier Raymond Poincare in which the French premier urged clemency for the alleged spies on humanitarian grounds.

Chitcherin Talks Business.

Georges Chitcherin, Soviet Foreign Minister did not mince words in his reply. He declared France had committed a hostile act.

"The Soviet Government rejects indignantly the attempt of the French Government to interfere in the trial," he wrote. "This is contrary to the most elementary respect for the sovereignty of other countries.

"The French government, moreover, is well aware of the criminal work of the Kieff accused.

"Because these Kieff spies were in contact with the French intelligence service, now France attempts to protect her own spies under a mask of humanity.

"This is a hostile act. It comes in addition to other hostile acts, for example, the sanctioning by France of the annexation of Bessarabia by Roumania and prevention of Chino-Russian understanding.

"The Soviet government is surprised that the French Government disregards the feeling its deeds are creating among the Russian masses who have not forgotten their sufferings and the damage caused by French interventions.

"Now they see that the French Government, contrary to other western powers, continues its hostile policy against the Soviet union.

"The Soviet Government disregards attempts to interfere in the competency of Russian courts, but watches French acts closely.

"The Soviet Government repeatedly has declared its willingness to negotiate a Franco-Russian agreement and notes that France not only does not meet this effort, but has recently increased her hostile policy.

Soviet Rule is Friendly.

The note concludes by saying that Russia is convinced that "an overwhelming majority of the French population will force its governments towards the pathway of understanding with Soviet Russia."

May Call Hoover to Testify

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13.—Herbert Hoover may be compelled to testify as to his shipments of relief supplies to the territories controlled by Russian counter-revolutionaries, in 1919-1920, as a result of the raising of this issue by Captain Scaife in connection with the neglect of investigation of these charges by Daugherty.

Scaife brought up charges made by Captain Martin of the Shipping Board vessel Lake Fray, which carried, he says, $1,000,000 worth of food and army trucks to Reval in August, 1919, in time to hand them over to Yudenitch for his drive against Leningrad.

The Hoover organization charged Captain Martin with having tried to sell German war material to Yudenitch, and he was removed from command of his ship when he returned to England, but in 1920 the Shipping Board formally exonerated him. Martin has a decoration which Yudenitch bestowed upon him in recognition of his having delivered the supplies and trucks on time.

U. S. Senate Opens War on Coolidge

Plan to Expunge His Message from Record

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A movement to expunge from the record President Coolidge's message demanding that the Senate get back to legal procedure was started in the Senate today by Senator Reed, Missouri.

In concluding a bitter personal attack on the president, during which he characterized the message as an "insult" to the Senate, Reed announced that he would introduce a resolution expunging the message from the record.

Refuse to Halt Probe.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The senate is ready to adopt the democratic resolution refusing to halt the investigation of secretary of the treasury, Mellon, tho President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon demand it be halted.

If Mellon wants to resign he will have an opportunity to do so, senate democrats said today, as they claimed to have enough progressive-republican votes pledged to maintain their position.

More is involved than the Mellon inquiry, senators held. Senator Walsh Montana, regards the Coolidge-Mellon effort to halt the investigation of the internal revenue bureau—which involves indirectly an investigation of Secretary Mellon—as an effort to halt all the senatorial inquiries now under way.

Would Hire Heney.

For that reason the democrats and progressives are virtually unanimous in support of the resolution to give the Mellon investigators broader powers and permitting them to hire Francis J. Heney.

Senators Walsh, Robinson and other democratic leaders are determined to have the senate settle decisively whether the executive branch of the government or the legislative shall decide when and how congressional investigations are to be carried on.

Henry Ford to Quit.

DETROIT, Mich., April 13.—Henry Ford's withdrawal as the presidential nominee of the Michigan delegation to the Democratic convention will be in the hands of William A. Comstock, Democratic state committee, within 48 hours.

Contract Made With Gen. Ianoff.

"The contract was made with Maj. Gen. Ianoff, chief of supplies of the Russian North-Western Army, but was not carried out, as I received no definite answer from Special Commissioner Haynes at Helsingfors, to whom I referred the question.

"Complaint was made to the American Relief Administration and the London office of the Shipping Board, as to this contract. It is my contention that I was sent out to Reval, thru mined waters and in time of war, at the instance of the aircraft profiteering ring in America, against whom I had been fighting, and that they were anxious that I be discredited.

"I was also in the position of having delivered the shipment of trucks to Yudenitch, and that fact was embarrassing to those who gave me my orders."

Martin has offered in evidence, in his damage suit against the aircraft combine in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, a copy of a telegram from one Leach, representing the A. R. R. at Riga, addressed to that organization's London office, dated Nov. 1, 1919, reading:

> "Strongly advise in view of disclosures Cominsky and General Wall regarding conduct Master of Lake Fray that he will be relieved of command by next in line. Retained in command General Wall thinks unsafe for him to return London to give evidence".

The reference to Cominsky is obscure, but two days later another cable from Leach to London said that "German woman from Berlin carried by skipper on Cominsky reports women on board the Lake Fray all night on several occasions." etc.

But the reference to General Wall is clear. Martin shows a letter on the stationery of the Bureau of Operations, signed "General Ernest N. Wahl", under date of August 15, 1919, at Saint Nazaire, France, as follows:

"We, the undersigned hereby acknowledge that Captain James V. Martin of the Lake Fray has fully explained the conditions of our residence aboard ship while enroute to Russia. We understand that the Lake Fray has no passenger accommodations and we agree to make the best of conditions aboard ship without complaint."

Martin describes Wall as a former imperial military governor of Leningrad who was chosen as the liason officer between the Russian Whites' headquarters in Paris and the Yudenitch forces. Kolchak, Denikin, and Yudenitch all took their orders from Paris, and back of this Paris bureau were—Martin says he can prove—Herbert Hoover, Winston Churchill and the French government.

The Trials of General Wall.

"Hoover sent me word that Gen. Wahl was to travel aboard my ship to Reval," said Martin. "I asked for assurance that the Shipping Board wanted me to do this, because it was in violation of law. Hoover took it up in London and brought pressure on the Shipping Board office, so that I received official advice to take Gen. Wahl along. This cable from Leach to London shows that they were working confidentially with him, and that he advised them that it would be unsafe to let me return and testify as master of a ship, as to what I had been doing."

Somewhere in a safety deposit vault, in a city he will not name, Martin now has a stack of cablegrams, letters and other documents which he says will be produced at the proper moment to show that he was merely doing what he considered his duty as a servant of the American government when he tried to furnish airplanes and machines guns to Yudenitch for the attack on Petrograd.

He says he was intimately acquainted with the White Guard leaders, and heard from them the confirmation of statements given to him in other quarters as to the big political plot behind the Yudenitch venture.

Aid From British Labor.

British labor, in Martin's opinion, had much to do with the failure of the campaign to crush the Red Army and stamp out bolshevism in Europe. British labor raised such an outcry that Churchill dared not move the British fleet from Reval toward Leningrad as Yudenitch advanced, and Churchill dared not ship the planes and tanks he had prepared to deliver at Reval. The cautious Finns, having equipped 150,000 soldiers for a march from Leningrad to Moscow, would not stir until the British fleet arrived at Leningrad. And so the collapse came.

MOSCOW, April 13.—Roumania is reported to have declared a "state of emergency" thruout Bessarabia.

Recent annexation of Bessarabia by Roumania, with approval of the Little Entente, stirred up some indignation in Russia, which would have preferred an autonomous or Russian state there.

300 CLEVELAND STUDENTS THREATEN STRIKE AS CENSORSHIP PROTEST

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 13.—Nearly 300 members of the Case school here threaten to strike Monday as protest against the suspension of five students on the staff of "The Case Tech," the school publication.

The suspension resulted from a "scandal sheet" issued Wednesday, which pictured a member of the faculty seated with a thinly-veiled—almost nude—dancing girl.

The story, itself also prankishly faked, intimated that the highly respected professor was more interested in the "ne plus ultra" of the maiden than the fourth dimension or Einstein theory.

The suspended students are James Johnson, editor; H. H. Clarke, business manager; J. H. McDaniel, K. M. Eicher and A. W. Fritz. Petitions are being circulated calling on the students to strike Monday.

WHEELER HITS CAL COOLIDGE AS 'INCAPABLE'

Senator Says President Is Only Politician

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, leader of the senate Daugherty investigating committee, in Chcago, accused President Coolidge of being "incapable" and "looking at everything with purely a political standpoint instead of the welfare of the people of the nation."

Wheeler, referring to the senatorial investigations, said:

"The President's lack of action in all these matters has shown the country he is incapable of dealing with the situation, which demands a forceful leader that will drive from office in Washington all those who have been guilty of corruption or have taken part in the gigantic conspiracies carried on in the last few years by crooked politicians and big business.

Forgets Welfare of Many.

"The trouble with Coolidge is that he is looking at everything with a purely political standpoint instead of the welfare of the people of the nation."

Wheeler attacked former Attorney General Daugherty "as a man entirely unfitted for the office he held." He painted Daugherty as a poor man when he entered office three years ago and now as "a man dealing in Sinclair and steel stock and owning stock in the Wright-Martin Airplane Corporation."

Hits Vicious System.

Wheeler reiterated that the senate Daugherty committee should continue because "the country demands, I think, that our committee show up this vicious system that has grown up in Washington of using the department of justice as a collection agency."

Wheeler charged that "the Columbus, Ohio, gang became rich along with Harry Daugherty."

Commenting on his sub-committee hearing at Washington Court House, Ohio, from which he is returnig to Washington, Wheeler said that Mal Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general, whom they have been investigating at Washington Court House, would be "before the bar of the senate" Monday when hearings are resumed.

"If he doesn't testify we can put him in jail," Wheeler said. Wheeler will leave here for Washington.

Pinchot Refuses to Comment.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 13.—Governor Pinchot today refused to comment, when asked if he had suggested appointment of Francis J. Heney, California, as counsel to aid the senate committee investigating the books of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon.

Responsibility for causing "the most momentous political battle since the senate resolved itself into an inquisitorial body" was placed on Governor Pinchot in a story under a Washington date line, published in the Philadelphia Public Ledger today.

The story pointed out that Governor Pinchot had charged Secretary Mellon with laxity in prohibition enforcement and that shortly afterward Senator Couzens, Michigan, who has bitterly opposed Mellon, succeeded in having Heney appointed counsel for the Mellon investigating committee, which he headed.

Couzens was said to have frankly admitted that it was Governor Pinchot who had urged him to engage Heney.

Daily Worker Gets Some Bouquets From Class War Prisoner

To the DAILY WORKER: I am receiving the DAILY WORKER regularly and I very highly appreciate it. I am sure the DAILY WORKER is championing the cause of labor, and is in the fight to stay. Your paper has many able men on its staff and I believe this is the first step to make a workers' paper what it should be.

The change in our entire social system that we are all trying to bring about must be brought about thru educational channels and I am sure the DAILY WORKER will do its part in this struggle. We have been in need of just such a paper in the past. I feel confident that the workers will support it and make it a world-wide labor daily.

The Butte Daily Bulletin was the first step toward such a paper, but the workers had not reached the point at the time to see the need of such a paper. The workers now realize the need and will therefore support the DAILY WORKER.

The DAILY WORKER will reach the homes of many wage earners and farmers who have never before had a real working class paper.

Fraternally,
R. W. Minton,
San Quentin Penitentiary.

SIMONSON TALK WEDNESDAY.

The Mid-City English Branch, Workers Party, will hold an open meeting on Wednesday, April 16, at Emmett Memorial Hall, Ogden and Taylor Streets.

GERMAN PLUTES SWALLOW DAWES PLAN; OFFER OF RAILROADS MAKES THEM FORGET ROBBERY OF NATION

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BERLIN, April 13.—The German government has decided to accept the Dawes report. Delegates will soon be sent to Paris by Chancellor Marx to communicate this decision to the Allies.

A meeting of the state premiers is scheduled for today in Berlin. After this session formal announcement of the German decision will be made public.

The international financiers are pinning their hopes for European reconstruction on acceptance of the Dawes report by the French and German governing groups. The report of German acceptance has already its favorable effect on trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Small gains were scored by certain rail, steel and industrial stocks.

German Capitalists See Chance.

Opposition from German industrial and financial centers was avoided because the Dawes report provides help for the German capitalists at the expense of the workers in many ways. This has made the German capitalist leaders favorable to the acceptance of the report.

One of the great advantages accorded the German capitalists by the Dawes report is the provision for taking away the railroads from the German government, and turning them over for a very low price to private capitalist interests. Ever since the end of the war and the crushing of the German Revolution, the Thyssens, Stinnesses and other captains of German finance and industry have made efforts to grab the efficient and highly organized railway system of the country. The recommendations of the Dames commission offer them this opportunity.

Another provision of the Dawes report satisfactory to the German capitalists is the plan to terminate the French railway management in the Ruhr and other occupied regions of Germany. This measure is necessary in order to enable the German capitalists to take over the rest of the railway lines of the country and run them in an efficient centralized way which will insure the collection of the maximum receipts from the roads.

Some Revision Sought.

Tho the Marx government is ready to accept the report as it is, its emissaries to Paris will be instructed to seek some revisions to help the German capitalist groups.

Among the changes to be proposed by the German delegates are:

1. The evacuation of the Ruhr by the French and Belgian troops, and
2. Some revision in the total sum of reparations to be fixed in advance.

French Also Have Reservations.

The acceptance of the Dawes plan by the Reparations Commission was announced as unanimous. Yet it is reported in well-informed circles that Louis Barthou, representing France, made some reservations in accepting the report. Poincare's instructions have been to that effect.

These French reservations in the main are reported to be as follows:

1. The report must be completed and safeguarded by a definite system of control and guarantees.
2. Definite, specific penalties are to be agreed upon and provided for should Germany break her promises.

Commenting on this phase of the reparations controversy, Pertinax, the leading critic of the influential Echo de Paris, declared: "It is the duty of the Reparations Commission to fix the system of control; it is for the governments to decide upon the penalties."

BIG ANTI-LABOR UNION FORMED BY ST. LOUIS BOSSES

Goal Is Open Shop In Building Trades

By MARTIN A. DILLMON,
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

ST. LOUIS, April 13.—Is there to be an attempt to form a nation-wide one big union of contractors to attempt to slash wages and establish the open shop in the entire building industry? An amalgamated organization of all contractors recently was formed here to fight the building trades unions. It calls itself the Associated Building Interests of St. Louis.

In Illinois has been formed a combine patterned after St. Louis and calling itself the Four City Joint Conference Board, comprising, its boosters say, contractors and subcontractors in Granite City, Belleville, Edwardsville and Collinsville. This O. B. U. claims nearly 10 per cent membership in the four cities.

The first meeting was held at Edwardsville. The president and secretary of the St. Louis group attended and expounded the virtues of amalgamation for employers. The two groups will exchange fraternal delegates. The declaration of each of the two organizations says the lineup is for "halting the demoralizing wage demands of the unions."

The St. Louis Real Estate Exchange is fraternally represented in the local one big union of bosses. St. Louis is becoming notorious for high rents. On instance is cited where a group of flats rented in 1922 for $10 a month and now rent for $20. Tenants say less than $50 has been spent in repairs during that period, which renders it difficult to lay the blame on union labor.

Elizabeth Gurley Flynn Warns Of Fascist Menace

NEW YORK, April 13.—The Fascist menace in America is a growing movement which must be fought by workers' organizations, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn convinced her audience at the Civic Club here. The speaker described the similarity between the Fascisti, the Ku Klux and the American Legion, and said it is possible they may combine in the end. The Fascisti have two papers in New York, one each in Philadelphia, Boston and Cleveland, and are organizing in all Italian-American colonies. The U. S. government is doing nothing to curb the movement, she said.

MOSCOW, APRIL 13, — The central Union of the Russian Cooperative Organizations ('Centrosoyus') bought in the United States $410,000 worth of agricultural machinery including tractors and ploughs.

DINING GENERALS MOURN GROWTH OF PEACE SPIRIT

Also Sob Over Exposes In Washington

(By The Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, April 13.—Militarists are becoming alarmed at the spread of anti-war sentiment. In connection with the mobilization practice on the anniversary of Wilson's war message, various and sundry generals have been brought to New York to warn the country against "the menace of pacifism."

"The tide of pacifism was never higher than at this moment," Maj.-Gen. James G. Harbord told the officers of the 77th division at a dinner at the Hotel Astor. "It is significant that the prime minister of Great Britain at the moment happens to be a pro-German pacifist and that the control of congress lies in a state where there is the largest German vote, led by a man (LaFollette) whose sentiments during the war were well known and were such as to raise a question whether he would not lose his seat in the senate. It is significant that 10 per cent of the college vote went for Debs in the last election." Harbord lamented that congress was not making large enough appropriations for the military establishment.

Bewails Investigations.

"The investigations in Washington are giving the propagandists a new handle for their old arguments," admitted Brig.-Gen. William Weigel at the same dinner. "They are saying the militarist crowd and the capitalist crowd are uniting to work against the interests of the common people."

At the famous B. Y. O. B.—bring your own booze—dinner of the wartime purchase, storage and traffic division, general staff, U. S. A., Harbord spoke again. Bernard B. Baruch, chairman war industries board during the war, outined the plan he has proposed to congress for industrial mobilization and conscripting labor at army wages in the next war.

Former Assistant Secretary of War Benedict Crowell described the use of gas which will make the next international unpleasantness short and sweet.

The next day Brig. Gen. Peter E. Traub, in a characteristically heavy military manner attempted to satirize the anti-war position at the annual dinner of the American Defense Society.

BACHMUT, DON BASIN, — Since the death of Lenin 19,000 applications for membership in the Communist Party have been received in the Don Basin. Already 14,000 have been accepted. In January there were only 8,000 members in this district and 4,000 candidates.

100,0000 SHIPYARD WORKERS IN ENGLAND THE VICTIMS OF LOCKOUT

LONDON, April 13.—One hundred thousand ship yard workers today are idle as a result of a national lock-out which went into effect last midnight.

The lock-out resulted from a refusal of striking Southampton ship yard workers to accept employers' terms.

SULLIVAN IN FAREWELL TO THE STRIKERS

Smoke Him Out.

Gompers refused to state whether or not he would take any interest in the garment strike during the remainder of his stay in Chicago. When it was gently suggested to Sammy that the garment strikers' picket line was a good place to study women in industry, and he was asked whether or not he intended to side with the strikers, Gompers' only reply was a denunciation of the aid given by the DAILY WORKER to the strikers.

Gompers was a pitiful object as he sat, seemingly in the advance stages of senility, in his hotel room, surrounded by half a dozen of his fat-bellied henchmen. When asked what he had done for the strikers since coming to Chicago, Gompers could not point to one definite act in their behalf.

He kept mumbling in a way which might be excused on the grounds that his recent illness had affected him mentally. "The DAILY WORKER is trying to break up the garment strike. I have been standing by labor and will continue to defend it." But when asked for particulars, Gompers was at a loss to name anything he had done for the strike.

Minor Speaks to Strikers.

"Bob" Minor, well-known cartoonist and Workers Party member, told the strikers at a large meeting that their demands were extremely just and should be granted at once by the employers.

"The garment workers of this city have not been getting enough pay," said Minor. "Their demands for a forty-hour week and the closed shop are also very reasonable. One hundred years ago in England, they used to cut off the workers' ears and brand them with irons if they dared to join a union or go on strike. This was because the bosses in those days wanted to continue to exploit the labor of six-year-old children, making them work twelve and fourteen hours a day.

"Judge Sullivan, with his damnable injunction, would drive you back to those conditions if he could. He would cut off your ears at the demand of the employers whose tool he is, if he could. He does as much harm as he can to labor by imposing large fines and heavy jail sentences. You must laugh at the injunction and contine to defy it. It is a necessary step in the struggle of the workers for emancipation.

Famous People Have Been in Jail.

"You remember the drunken lout of a stool pigeon who met a striking mother who was suporting two children. The thug asked the striker if she wouldn't be ashamed to tell her children when they grew up that she had been in jail.

"But every famous person has been in jail. Jesus and Columbus were in jail. The only reason George Washington was not jailed was that his horse ran faster than the horse of the British sheriffs.

"You garment strikers have become famous people. Everywhere thruout the country the workers are talking about your gallant fight against the injunction. In New York and Cleveland and San Francisco and everywhere labor is rallying to support you in this fight when it is necessary. They are doing this because they realize that your fight for the right to strike for a higher standard of living is made in the interests of the entire working class.

Part of Labor Drive.

"This strike is part of the drive of the workers of the entire world to gain the political power. The workers are determined that they—who produce all wealth—must decide who shall go to jail and who shall stay out, instead of the decision being left to a corrupt judge who licks the boots of your employers.

"You must win the strike, for you hold the strategic position in the struggle of labor for world supremacy. If you lose, then it will be a setback, but if you win, the victory will help all of us. It will prove to the bosses that they cannot keep down wages by bribing the courts to issue illegal injunctions. That is why the workers in other trades are willing to help you, and why you must win even if the strike is a long one."

Does Not Sunday at Home.

Judge Sullivan was not at home Sunday to enlarge on his vacation plans. His wife, however, declared that "Sullivan was just taking the injunction cases out of accommodation." Sullivan has been very obliging to the garment bosses in handing out sentences which are unparalleled in their unjust severity. But even this has not stopped the zeal of the picketers.

"The cases against the strikers have been coming in so fast that it has been almost a physical impossibility to handle them," said Mrs. Sullivan. "The cases rightfully belong in Judge Foell's court anyhow."

Were They Slugging Pickets?

Judge (to victim of hold-up)—While you were being relieved of your valuables, did you call the police?

Victim—Yes, your honor, everything I could think of.

WESTERN RAIL WAGES ADVANCE FIVE PER CENT

30 Cents A Day More; S. P. Line Excluded

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

What price were the western railroads ready to pay for the modification of certain rules in their agreements with the conductors' and trainmen's brotherhoods. That was the question settled in the course of some 20 days of bargaining behind closed doors in Chicago which resulted in a wage increase of approximately 5 per cent. The total wage increase without deducting the economies due to changed rules will absorb less than one per cent of railroad revenue.

Still Below 1921.

This new agreement restores about half what the U. S. rail labor board took away in its 1921 wage cut decision bringing the wage rates to a level not far below the peak established by the board in 1920. In exchange the brotherhoods concede a modification in the rules governing overtime payments and the freedom of management to make certain service arrangements which it feels to be more economical. These changes in rules will reduce punitive payments made to a considerable number of employes and will somewhat reduce the number of employes needed to carry on the service.

30 Cents a Day More.

Under the new agreement the following increases become effective as of April 1, 1924: Passenger conductors and trainmen, 30 cents a day increase, or 2 mills a mile, or $9 a month; freight conductors and trainmen, 36 cents a day, 3.6 mills a mile; foremen, helpers and switchtenders in yard service, 32 cents a day.

The agreement establishes a guaranteed minimum daily wage to passenger train service employes. Effective May 1, when their monthly earnings from guarantees, mileage, overtime, and other rules do not produce the following amounts per day, they will be paid for each day's service performed as follows: conductors $7 a day, assistant conductors or ticket collectors $5.80 a day, baggage men handling both express and dynamo $5.84 a day, baggage men operating dynamo $5.50, baggage men handling express $5.50, baggage men $5.16, flagmen and brakemen $5.

Average Monthly Earnings.

The following table shows the probable monthly earnings which will result from this increase calculated on the basis of the average monthly earnings for 1923 reported to the interstate commerce commission:

	1923 average	New wage
Passenger conductors	$234	$245
Passenger trainmen	156	167
Freight conductors	228	241
Freight trainmen	169	182
Yard foremen	191	200
Yard helpers	163	172
Switch tenders	129	139

This wage agreement is similar to those already negotiated with the N. Y. Central and other eastern and southern roads. If it is finally made general thru the entire transportation system affecting all train and engine service employes in the country boost in payroll will be not more than $40,000,000. This amount could be sacrificed out of profits without reducing the return on investment by more than one-fifth of 1 per cent. And this year's profits appear to be running ahead of last year's.

Southern Pacific Not In It.

The only roads west of the Mississippi not included in the agreements are the Southern Pacific lines, the Denver & Rio Grande, the Northwestern Pacific, the Chicago & Alton, the Chicago Great Western, and the Minneapolis & St. Louis.

Agreements along similar lines with the remaining carriers both east and west should follow shortly for many managements have been marking time awaiting the result of the Chicago conference. It was known that the western roads would put up the stiffest resistance against a wage increase at this time.

The engine service men have also had their eyes on this conference gauging the attitude of the western managements by its progress. The next important move will probably come from the engineers and firemen in the western territory.

JOHNSON ANTI-FOREIGNER BILL PASSES HOUSE; CHICAGO LABOR WILL CARRY FIGHT TO SENATE

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13.—The Johnson immigration bill, aimed at radical foreign-born labor, passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 322 to 71.

Support given by Samuel Gompers and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor was one of the factors that assisted the bill to go thru. The large section of the American labor movement which is fighting the bill will mass their forces to prevent its going thru the senate.

Fight by Chicago Workers.

It was learned that a delegation is coming from the organized workers of Chicago and other cities to protest the passage of the bill which requires the registration of foreign born workers and provides for the deportation of "undesirables"—that is active unionists. The Chicago delegation will be selected by the Council for the Protection of Foreign-born Workers which has affiliated members from leading trade unions of that city.

The Johnson bill limits new arrivals from each foreign country annually to two percent of the nationals residing in America in 1890. The existing immigration bill allows three percent of those here at the time of the 1910 census.

K. K. K. Supported Bill.

The out-of-date 1890 basis was chosen in order to discriminate against the workers from eastern and southeastern Europe who have formed the immense majortiy of immigration in later decades. Thus English, favored as against, Italians, Jugo-Slavs, Czecho-Slovakians, Hungarians, Poles, etc. The hand of the Ku Klux Klan is seen in this discrimination.

Japs and the great majority of Asiatics are excluded under the section which bars aliens ineligible for citizenship.

Stiff Warning By Japan.

The Japanese government's warning, transmitted thru Ambassador Hanihara, that passage of the anti-Jap clause would "inevitably bring grave consequences," was practically ignored by the congressmen, many of whom would welcome war with Japan for the sake of the orgy of profiteering it would bring.

The issue is now coming before the Senate which is excited over the bristling language employed by the Japanese envoy.

Senator Hiram Johnson of California, is eagerly exploiting this issue and announced that he will take the floor today to reply to the ambassador and to rebuke Hughes for his mild answer to Tokyo.

Senator Shortridge, California, one of the leading advocates of the exclusion provision, boasts sufficient votes can be mustered to adopt the provision.

LABOR PRISONERS' AD REJECTED BY JEWISH 'FORWARD'

Helps Capitalists Keep Workers In Jail

Lest there be still a lingering doubt in the minds of any worker as to where the New York "Forward" belongs, the management of that paper puts all doubt to rest by its action in refusing to accept for publication an advertisement of the Third Annual International Bazaar, for Defense of Class War Prisoners, to be held April 10 thru 13 at Central Opera House, 67th Street and Third Avenue.

Copy for the advertisement which was sent accompanied by cash was accepted Monday forenoon at the office of the "Forward" and the bearer given a receipt for the money. On Tuesday when the advertisement did not appear in the columns of the "Forward" inquiry was made at its office by a representative of the National Defense Committee who was informed that all advertisements of the Defense Bazaar would be barred from the columns of the Jewish "Socialist" daily. The money accepted the day before was thereupon refunded.

For Deportees and Prisoners.

The Third Annual International Bazaar is being staged for the purpose of raising funds for its defense work by the National Defense Committee, an organization that has done yeoman service in the defense and relief of class war prisoners and deportees and which has the indorsement of many union bodies thruout the country. In fact, a number of New York unions are now in active co-operation with the National Defense Committee to make the bazaar a success. Many have donated money, material and finished goods, while hundreds of trade unionists are daily giving of their time in the Millinery Group, the Dressmakers Group and other groups engaged in turning out finished goods out of the contributed material.

Defense Integrity Not Issue.

The "Forward" in refusing the advertisement of the Bazaar does not question the integrity of the National Defense Committee. Nor has any one else ever expressed the slightest doubt as to the manner in which the work of the National Defense Committee is conducted. No question has ever been raised as to the high character of its officers. Its books are regularly audited and every cent raised has been carefully accounted for. Its books have been always open to interested organizations. In view of these facts there is only one logical conclusion for intelligent workers: THE "FORWARD" HAS, BY THIS LATEST ACT OF INFAMY EMPHATICALLY ALIGNED ITSELF WITH THE JAILERS AND OPPRESSORS OF THE WORKERS.

Mexico Ejecting Shell Oil Man For Aiding De la Huerta

(By The Federated Press)

MEXICO CITY, April 13.—The Mexican government is taking energetic steps to rid itself of all foreigners who were active in aiding the de la Huerta revolt. Arthur Roddick, superintendent-engineer of the El Aguila Co. (Eagle Oil—a Shell concern), was given ten days to clear out. Now it is discovered that Ramon Sierra Pando, a Spaniard, actively aided the revolutionary forces. He will be deported.

Thru a fairly well developed spy system the government had discovered that Eugene T. Bailey, a British subject, and John de Kay (the famous one who bought arms and ammunition for the bloody Victoriano Huerta) were implicated in a plot to furnish de la Huerta with arms to be bought from the British firm Husband Snelling Co. Documents found on Bailey prove unmistakably his aid to the rebel forces. He was arrested in Laredo and is now in a military prison. He will probably be deported.

Russians Honor Lenin By Sending Food To Germans

MOSCOW, April 13.—The workers of Moscow have given special proof of their proletarian solidarity with the workers of Germany in the manner in which they honored the memory of their beloved leader, Lenin.

Instead of buying wreaths for his grave, the workers of Sokolniki and Samoskworetzky suburbs gave 365.83 gold roubles toward the purchase of bread and flour for the starving Germans.

In Gabrolet the workers labored extra on Sunday and used their pay, which amounted to 285.52 gold roubles for the same purpose.

Numerous other workers in factories made collections in memory of Lenin and then contributed the grand totals toward the purchase of food for the German workers.

The Russian workers felt that were Lenin alive, he himself would approve of the manifestation of international working-class solidarity expressed in this manner by his followers.

Ku Klux Klan On Down Grade, Texas Elections Reveal

(By The Federated Press)

DALLAS, Texas, April 13.—Election returns from different Texas points indicate that in many places the Ku Klux Klan received severe defeats in its attempt to elect school trustees and municipal officials.

In San Antonio anti-Klan candidates won by a decisive majority, and in San Angelo the anti-Klan faction celebrated a victory. Beaumont alone elected a Klan ticket. In Houston the majority of successful candidates for the school board were anti-Klan, while in El Paso all the Klan candidates were beaten decisively.

In Dallas, as reported previously, all the Klan candidates for school board were defeated.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Harry F. Sinclair filed today in District Supreme Court a demurrer to the recent indictment charging him with contempt of the senate for refusing to answer questions before the oil investigating committee.

MEXICAN EAGLE TOILERS CLOSE UP THE WORKS

No More Oil Until The Eight-Hour Day

By E. G. WOLFE.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

MEXICO CITY, April 13.—Fifteen hundred workers of the El Aguila (Mexican Eagle—a Shell concern) Oil Co., have gone out on strike. The Tampico branch of the company has had to suspend all operations. The refineries are shut down, the department of tanks, and the docks are closed, preventing the departure of several oil boats at the El Aguila docks.

The workers want what the Mexican constitution and the constitution of the Mexican Federation of Labor entitles them to: The eight-hour day, medical attention in case of accident or illness contracted while on the job, three months' wages on discharge.

Oil President Scared.

Vice President Hutchinson of the company has dubbed these demands "usurpatory control of the business." The president of the company, Guy Stevens, is sending alarmist statements to the United States—that the workers have taken control of the oil property, that they are selling oil stored on the lands of the company, that the workers will not only possess themselves of El Aguila oil fields but of the oil fields belonging to the other companies, in fact that the workers have hoisted the red flag over the company buildings.

Workers Flag Over Factory.

All of these statements are false. Not only have the workers not taken over oil property, but they have not committed a single act of violence. On the contrary, they have organized to guard the company lands, to prevent anyone from "starting something" which later could be attributed to them. As to the red flag, it is the union rule to hoist the red and black flag (the flag of the Mexican Federation of Labor) over a factory on strike. It is a warning to all to prevent strikebreaking.

Then what is all the panic about? Is poor El Aguila afraid that it will go into bankruptcy with only $24 clear profit on every barrel of oil? Not at all. But it knows that the Mexican government is peeved over recent aid to the de la Huerta forces and it is trying to get out of the accusation in someway. El Aguila has crept back into the Oil Association, and the other companies belonging to the oil association in a spirit of perfect loyalty are trying to save their sister company.

Oil Wants U. S. Guns.

That explains the recent meeting held in New York with representatives from Standard Oil, the Sinclair Consolidated, the Texas Co., the Royal Dutch Shell, and others. They have sent a request to the U. S. state department for the protection of American interests. It is a veiled threat of American intervention should the Mexican government take any steps to punish El Aguila.

Mexican Workers Told Not To Fall For Yankee Bunk

By E. G. WOLFE,
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

MEXICO CITY, April 13.—The Obregon government is taking energetic steps to prevent the large annual exodus of Mexican workers to the United States. Unless the Mexican has a good job assured him he will find it very difficult to cross the border in the future. Too many have been fooled in the past. The regular migration begins about April, when the agricultural fields, especially the beet fields, are ready to receive them.

The labor contractors made fabulous promises to the Mexicans that of course were never carried out. The Mexicans would come to the American job and find in place of the comfortable dwelling promised them wretched huts with the most unsanitary conditions, wages much lower than had been offered them, prices in the company stores much higher, so that at the end of the season, when the Mexican was fired, he had not even enough money to go home with. Labor organizers have been sent to the border cities of Mexico, where many hundreds of Mexican workers are waiting to cross, to tell the workers what misery awaits them in the United States, to disillusion them before it is too late.

Ambassador Charles Warren, appointed by President Coolidge to the Mexican post, is a big exploiter of Mexican labor on his Michigan sugar beet fields.

PLOT TO HANG MINERS' SECRETARY IN WEST VIRGINIA HALTED BUT COAL KINGS BOAST CONVICTIONS OF FOUR

(By The Federated Press)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 13.—The non-union coal operators who have supplanted the state in prosecuting the union miners for the armed uprising against the gunmen of West Virginia in the summer of 1921 are not calling Fred Mooney, secretary District 17, United Mine Workers of America, to trial for treason and murder conspiracy at present. Failure to convict Frank Keeney, president of the miners district, who was acquitted in February is thought to be the cause of the switch in the operators' plans. Up to date six union miners have been tried in connection with the miners' armed march. One of them has been tried twice on two different indictments—treason and murder. Two have been acquitted and four convicted.

Armed March of 1921.

The trouble occurred in August, 1921, when thousands of miners and sympathizers, armed themselves and marched on McDowell, Logan and Mingo counties. This march was brot about after union miners had been killed by wholesale in these counties by the Baldwin-Felts detectives and other private gunmen that are still maintained there by the operators for that specific purpose. An industrial dispute was turning into civil war. The uprising was ended after several days' fighting in the mountains. The United States regular army disarmed the union men. The coal barons' private army remains.

Bosses Financed Persecution.

In 1922 a persecution almost peculiar to West Virginia was begun. The cry was, in the contemplation of the law, supposed to have been committed against the state. Treason was the charge in many indictments. But the state attorney general has never figured in the prosecution. It has been directed and financed openly and without apology by the coal operators. Atty. Gen. E. T. England is opposed to the mine guard system and appeared in court as a witness for the miners. No one on the operators' side of the battle has been indicted.

On the other hand several hundred union miners were hounded down and arrested.

Where John Brown Died.

The first armed march trial was held in Jefferson county at Charles Town. John Brown was tried for treason in the same building and hanged in the courtyard in 1859. In the 1922 treason trial Wm. Blizzard, a miners union official, was tried and acquitted. Walter Allen, another miner, was convicted. The Rev. Joe Wilburn and his 18-year-old son John were convicted of murder and sentenced to the Moundsville penitentiary for 11 years. An appeal was permitted in the Allen case because of the seriousness of the treason conviction. Allen was permitted freedom on $15,000 bail. He jumped his bond and is now a fugitive from what is termed justice down here.

Murder Trials Again.

In 1923 Blizzard was tried again in Greenbriar county—this time for murder. The result was ten for acquittal and two for conviction. Blizzard is free with the murder indictment still pending. In the same year District President Keeney was scheduled for trial in Jefferson county before Judge Woods who heard the first trials at Charles Town. The trial never came up. Things went wrong and the operators moved to quash.

In March, 1924, Keeney was tried in Fayette county, hotbed of non-unionism. After five weeks the miners' president was acquitted. He was tried for murder, having, according to the indictment, been an accomplice in the killing of John Gore, a deputy sheriff (mine guard) who was killed in the fighting on Blair mountain. Fred Mooney is charged with having assisted. Mooney and hundreds of other miners remain to be tried.

Last year under a separate indictment in Logan county, the seat of war, Edward Combs, a union coaldigger, was tried for murder in connection with the armed march altho he was not named in the blanket indictments that covered all other miners involved in the trouble. All attempts to get a change of venue for Combs failed and he pleaded guilty—to save his neck. He was given a life sentence at Moundsville. Combs refused to turn state's evidence for his liberty and was brought in chains to testify at Keeney's trial. He told on the witness stand at Keeney's trial, that he pleaded guilty because he knew he would have been hanged otherwise.

Preacher-Spy Not a Negro.

The Reverend Wilburn and his son went over to the state 48 hours after the pententiary doors closed on them. They both testified against Keeney and have been given their freedom altho no pardon or commutation of sentence has been granted. Old Wilburn is conducting revival meetings now in Boone county. Colored union miners here want to correct an erroneous report that Wilburn is a Negro. He is a Baptist preacher and decidedly white.

Gassed Vet Dies In Jail While Wealthy Criminal Is Freed

By MIRIAM ALLEN DE FORD
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, April 13.—When John Weller, a rich man serving time for embezzling $70,000 from the bank of which he had been cashier, lay dying in prison, the prison board by telegraphic vote set him free to die without shame in his own home.

Allan MacDonald, a penniless war veteran, gassed and wounded in France and suffering from incipient tuberculosis in consequence, has died at San Quentin prison from hemorrhages following appendicitis, traced by his physician to his war wounds.

For weeks MacDonald's mother had been trying to have his sentence commuted so that he might die at home with her, a free man. The judge who sentenced him had written to the governor asking for his release. But MacDonald's family was not rich. The boy died in the prison hospital.

MacDonald was convicted with three others of an assault case. But it is claimed that his war experience changed his way of living and brought him from student in an eastern university to bartender in a bootleg saloon.

Treat Occupational Diseases.

NEW YORK, April 13.—What is described as the first industrial clinic on occupational diseases in the United States is to be opened at Reconstruction Hospital here, State Industrial Commissioner Bernard L. Shientag announces. A similar clinic was opened some years ago in Milan, Italy. The hospital, the College of Physicians and Surgeons, and the New York department of labor will co-operate in this clinic in diagnosing and treating occupational diseases. The clinic will be open daily.

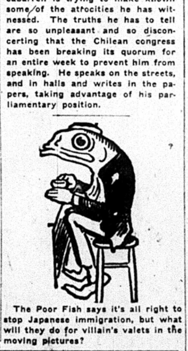
BACHMUT, DON BASIN, APRIL 13.—During February 55,000,000 poods of coal has been mined. It is more than it was expected for the month. There are now 135,000,000 poods of coal in the reserve bins.

ORGANIZING STRIKES, CHIEF JOB OF THE COMMUNIST DEPUTIES

(By The Federated Press)

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 13.—The two Communist deputies in the Chilean congress, Luis E. Recabarren and Luis Cruz spend precious little time in congress. Their principal job is to observe by turns the big strikes that are taking place in Chile against American enterprises. These powerful trusts, such as the Chile Exploitation Co., are exerting pressure on the Chilean government to use troops against the strikers.

Every time the troops take the offensive, one of the deputies rushes back to congress to make the facts known from the public tribunal, while the other leaves congress to cover the strike. Just now Crus is covering the strike and Recabarren is trying to make known some of the atrocities he has witnessed. The truths he has to tell are so unpleasant and so disconcerting that the Chilean congress has been breaking its quorum for an entire week to prevent him from speaking. He speaks on the streets, and in halls and writes in the papers, taking advantage of his parliamentary position.



The Poor Fish says it's all right to stop Japanese immigration, but what will they do for villain's valets in the moving pictures?

12,000 COAL MINERS IN ANTHRACITE FIELDS PLAN TO GO ON STRIKE TODAY

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 13.—Orders were sent out to local unions today for a general strike of 12,000 miners of the Pennsylvania Coal Company to go into effect Monday, following a meeting of the grievance committee which unanimously decided on a strike call.

The strike has been threatening for several days because of various grievances at different collieries.

PARDON JANITORS "RAILROADED" BY BOSSES' JUDGES

Big Labor Delegation Visits Governor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 13.—Governor Len Small today granted full pardons to William Quesse, president of the Chicago Flat Janitors' Union, and nine other labor leaders, convicted of conspiracy in Cook county.

"I am convinced, after giving both sides a full hearing, that to permit these convictions to stand would be a denial of the right to a fair trial before an impartial tribunal," the state executive said in anouncing his decision.

The action followed a hearing yesterday when arguments for and against pardons were heard by the Governor sitting with the Board of Pardons.

The conviction grew out of the alleged conspiracy of the union officers to extort money from owners of buildings where janitors were employed and has been considered a frame-up engineered by the employers' association.

Big Delegation.

The pardons followed the appearance at the statehouse of the largest delegation of labor men ever seen here. For over six hours the representatives of organized labor told the governor and parole board their opinion of the methods used to railroad the members of the janitors' union by the employers' organizations and representatives responsible for what was described as "a nation-wide conspiracy against the labor movement whose purpose it is to destroy or render completely ineffective existing labor unions."

It was charged that the employers and their attorneys, Edwin Raber and Dudley Taylor, were aided by the employers' association in bringing such pressure on the trial judges that the bench itself took a hand in intimidating jurors. Raber was characterized by John Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, as the lawyer who "does the things that Dudley Taylor will not do, and they must be pretty bad."

Special Prosecutors Condemned.

The hiring of special prosecutors by the state in labor cases was unsparingly condemned by the union heads, and they informed the governor that legislation would be sought to curb this evil. A detailed and astounding revelation of the efforts of the employers' association to block labor legislation and "frame" labor men was related by the delgation, every member of which had some experience of his own to relate corroborating the general charge that a bitter warfare, in which every sort of weapon was used, was waged by the employers against the unions.

A petition signed by 228,000 unionists, asking pardon for the janitors, was also presented to the governor.

Among the labor representatives present were the following:

John H. Walker, president; Al Towers, first vice-president; James G. Gonners, second vice-president; Ensil Reinbold, third vice-president; Joseph W. Norton, fourth vice-president; Thomas Kelly, fifth vice-president; M. J. Whelan, sixth vice-president; Mary McEnerney, seventh vice-president; Robert G. Fritchie, eighth vice-president, and Waldo Cross, ninth vice-president, all of the Illinois State Federation of Labor.

Ralph O'Hara, Stage Employes' International organizer.

George Buick, delegate Machinists' District Council.

Walter Krindick, Bill Posters' Local No. 1.

A. Tolp, Architectural Iron Workers' Local No. 63.

These members of the state board of pardons were present: Governor Len Small, C. H. Jenkins, director; Will Colvin, superintendent; Mount Penniwell; Sherman W. Searle, assistant superintendent; Charles P. Hitch, assistant superintendent, and C. W. Mc Call.

White House, Take Notice!

"I don't see why you are having so much trouble getting reliable servants," complained Brown.

"I'm not having any more trouble than the Washington government," retorted his wife.

SOUTH AFRICA IS DANGEROUS ZONE FOR BRIT EMPIRE

Labor-Nationalist Block For Republic

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 13.— Next to the Dawes report the fall of the Smuts cabinet is the topic of interested discussion here. It is recognized as not only of premier importance for the South African Dominion, but also for the British Empire.

The movement against Smuts has been gaining strength for sometime. The Labor forces have never forgiven his crushing of the Rand strike with aeroplane bombs and artillery and the nationalists are not satisfied with his outright imperialist attitude. They have now formed a united front for the election campaign and have good prospects of success. The foreign office officials and the London press do not attempt to disguise the seriousness of the situation from the empire standpoint.

Situation Prevailing.

It is significant that the press here refers to the Boer elements who support Smuts as against Hertzog, the nationalist candidate, as the "progressive Dutch."

The possibility of a triumph for Republicanism is undoubtedly in the minds of the people here. Sir Edgar Walton, High Commissioner for South Africa in London, questioned by the Daily Express yesterday, said:

"It is very possible that a Nationalist majority will be returned in the coming elections, and Nationalism in South Africa stands for Republicanism, altho the Nationalists are not understood to be pressing their Republican views."

The London morning newspapers, commenting on Premier Smuts's surprise announcement of Parliament's dissolution, dwell on the uncertainty of the outlook with evident uneasiness. The Times says General Smuts has a hard row to hoe, but that it is both difficult and futile to attempt to prophesy his political future at this stage.

Attitude of Press.

The Morning Post says the complications introduced into the situation by the Labor Party and certain German and other alien influences make the issue dark and doubtful.

The Daily News says that if Labor supports the Nationalists' avowed object of establishing a republic, a constitutional crisis must follow which may put South Africa into a dangerous turmoil and have awkward reactions in England and distant parts of the empire.

PRETORIA, Transvaal, April 13.— Tielman Boos, leader of the Transvaal Nationalists, commenting on the dissolution of Parliament, said he sincerely hoped the Laborites would enter a coalition Ministry if the Nationalists were successful in the elections.

The presence of Labor Ministers in such a government would satisfy the country that fascism was dead, he said.

Lowell Workers Denounce Drive On Foreign-Born

By WM. SIMONS

LOWELL, Mass., April 13.— At a mass meeting of several hundred Lowell workers held in Colonial Hall, Middle St., there was great indignation against the plot in Congress to oppress the Foreign Born Workers. The speakers were H. Sidney Bloomfield of Worcester in English, and M. Plepys of Boston in Lithuanian. The following resolution was passed:

Resolution Passed.

Whereas, the workers in the basic industries where the chief wealth of the country is produced are largely foreign born; and

Whereas, these workers altho producing the products that make possible the running of industry, and interchange of products, are subjected to the most miserable conditions and low wages; and

Whereas, there are already introduced in Congress vicious laws intended to brand aliens as criminals, by registering, fingerprinting and photographing them, thus bringing to these shores the detestable, autocratic methods in use in Kaiseristic Germany and Czaristic Russia, and

Whereas, the Government officials have openly and brazenly endorsed such measures, which aim to punish any attempt of the suffering foreign born to engage in strikes or other working class activity; therefore, be it Protest Vigorously.

Resolved: That we, the workers of Lowell, in mass meeting assembled in Colonial Hall, Middle St., March 30th, 1924, protest vigorously against the proposed laws aimed at foreign born, and be it further

Resolved: That a copy of this resolution be sent to the Mayor of Boston, to the State Governor of Massachusetts, the Congressman for Lowell, the State Senators in Washington, to the local press and to the DAILY WORKER.

Bishop Brown To Trial Next Month— Prepares Defense

GALION, Ohio, April 13.—Bishop William Montgomery Brown, who has been summoned by the President of the court of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church as a heretic, has issued a magazine which he is circulating in his defense. "Those who are against me have the power of tradition and church law behind them," says Bishop Brown, author of "Communism and Christianism." "But it is equally true that I have behind me the power of science and public opinion, which dominates all realms except the religious, and is rivalling tradition and law even in it."

Bishop Brown will defend himself against the charges in Cleveland on May 27th. Bishop Brown does not believe in a personal God and declares himself a Communist.

ITALY PLANNING BIG GRAIN TRADE WITH RUSSIANS

Huge Millings Concerns After Volga Wheat

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

MOSCOW, April 13.—Italy is quickly following her recognition of Soviet Russia with the launching of a new syndicate of milling, banking and shipping interests to mill and market Russian grain. The preliminary organization was made last week in Venice and has sent its representatives to Moscow to complete arrangements with Leonid Krassin of the Russian government.

The Italian syndicate will have to be merged into a Russo-Italian syndicate in which each country holds half the stock. The Italians contribute the cash and equipment and the Russians give the concessions.

50,000,000 Lire Back Scheme.

A Genoese group of millers, chief of them the Upper Italian Milling Company; a group of Venetian mill interests, Stucky most important; Banker Levi's Milan group, and the Trieste shipping interests, Lloyd-Triestino, are the Italians who have formed the big new combination to deal with Russia. Their capital is 50,000,000 lire, or approximately $2,250,000.

The concern expects to trade along the Don and the Volga rivers, importing the Russian grain, milling and distributing it from the Italian centers. The backers hope to find rich pickings, since they are the first large organization to attempt business seriously with the Soviet government under full diplomatic relations. English concerns that have preceded the Italian company in dealing with Russia have not had the hoped for success because they did not work under full diplomatic recognition.

Work For Italian Ships.

Italian ships that have been cluttering up the Mediterranean and Black seas for lack of employment will begin to move soon, according to the Italian reports. Those that aren't busy bringing grain down the Volga will be taking the flour to other ports. Russia meanwhile will see to it that she isn't losing anything by dealing with the Italians. Her share of the profits will be turned into equipment which will soon enable her to carry on her own industrial enterprises without the outside concession system.

AUTO WORKERS TO FARE WORSE THAN LAST YEAR

Employment Falling Off In Detroit Shops

By LELAND OLDS.

(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Employment in Detroit has passed the peak and is on the down grade, according to reports from members of the Detroit Employers' association which bear out The Federated Press prediction last month that the boom was due for a slump. Between March 15 and March 29 the number of workers employed by the 79 concerns in the association dropped from 241,263 to 238,263, a decrease of 3000. These concerns employ approximately two-thirds of the total number of industrial workers in Detroit so that the total number laid off during the fortnight must have been about 4500.

Auto Industry Slowing Up.

This reflects a slow curtailment of operations in the automobile industry. The industry is rapidly approaching the time when its serious overexpansion will glut the market and introduce seasonal operation similar to that in the bituminous coal mines. Bradstreet's weekly review says: "Automobile interests have apparently reached the peak of production and some of the largest makers are curtailing. Whether they will be able to dispose of cars now on hand as fast as expected is the problem."

Reports from motor accessory makers indicate a perceptible falling off in orders from auto manufacturers during the last few weeks. According to R. B. Prescott in a monthly analysis of the industry for the Wall Street Journal: "The industry has been operating under forced draft for nearly two years and has enjoyed some of its future business in that people who have purchased low priced new and used cars have mortgaged their future buying power, thereby eliminating themselves from the 1924 market."

Will Hit Steel Trade.

Employment in many industries will soon feel the effect of any slump in the manufacture of automobiles. The recent heavy activity in the iron and steel industry was in part due to the demand of auto makers for steel. Last year they absorbed over one-tenth of the country's steel output. On the assumption that the demand for automobiles this year would show a great increase, business men counted on a resulting demand for 3,000,000 tons of iron and steel, 75,000,000 pounds of aluminum, 110,000,000 pounds of copper, 30,000,000 square feet of glass, 20,000 tons of lead, 9,000,000 pounds of nickel, 4,000,000,000 pounds of hair and padding, 500,000,000 board feet of lumber, 130,000,000 square feet of imitation leather, 15,000,000 yards of upholstery cloth, and 100,000,000 square feet of upholstery leather.

Less Work All Around.

It is doubted whether the country can absorb more new cars than in 1923, so much of this demand may not materialize. The result will be less employment in all these industries following the present slow decline indicated by Detroit reports. All industry rests on an unstable foundation because its activity depends on constantly increasing the consumption of the people while the people's purchasing power is actually limited by low wages.

Socialist Scab On Cutlery Workers In Utica Union Fight

UTICA, New York, April 13.—The former Socialist candidate for mayor, M. Herman, now organizer of the Socialist Party, has been scabbing for some time on the strikers of the Utica Cutlery Company, who are waging a bitter struggle to establish a union. The bosses, after the strike had been successfully waged two weeks, brought two scabs from Rome, New York.

Many of the scabs quit, however, because they were paid only 64 cents an hour and allowed to work only five hours a day. Even the foreman is helping the strikers, as the working conditions are glaringly bad. Only the Socialist Herman, is unsympathetic to the workers.

When twenty-four more scabs were brought from New York the foremen voted to go out with the strikers unless the scabs were immediately discharged.

Poet's Union In Mexico.

MEXICO CITY, April 13.—A labor union of Mexico's leading dramatists, poets and novelists has applied for admission to the Mexican Federation of Labor and has been accepted. Julio Jiminez Rueda, dramatists, and Federico, novelist, head the charter members.

Protest Deportations.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Men are not "undesirable citizens" because they opposed the war, says a protest against the proposed deportation of 17 former political prisoners sent by the Protestant Episcopal Social Service commission here to Secretary of Labor Davis in Washington.

Trades Assembly Votes Contempt For Scab Berry

SCHENECTADY, New York, April 13.— The Trades Assembly of the American Federation of Labor has declared its contempt for Mr. Berry, the strikebreaking head of the Pressmen's Union. Berry, claiming to have the indorsement of the entire labor movement, for his political aspirations, wrote the Schenectady Trades Assembly asking for their support.

Instead, a motion was passed by the Labor Central Body instructing the clerk to write Mr. Berry assuring him of their contempt. This the clerk did, and his letter was approved at the next meeting of the Assembly.

CAPEK'S ROBOTS WILL PERFORM IN MILWAUKEE

Defense Council Plans For Auditorium

Negotiations have just been concluded with the Theatre Guild authorizing the Labor Defense Council to take its labor production of "R. U. R." to Milwaukee immediately after the Chicago performances.

Plans are under way looking toward the presentation of Capek's great Robot play in the huge Milwaukee Auditorium, which seats some 4,000 people. If the plans carry, the entire production, cast, "props" and scenery, will be moved to Milwaukee for one or more performances.

Requests are already coming in to the Labor Defense Council office at 166 W. Washington St., for tickets for the Chicago performances of "R. U. R.", which, according to announcement, will be given on Sunday afternoon, April 20, and Wednesday evening, April 23.

"R. U. R." is a thrilling melodrama, but is much more than that. It is a keen and powerful indictment of modern capitalistic society, and it carries with it the threat of revolution, paving the way for a new social order.

The Plot

In Capek's extraordinary play, "R. U. R." stand for "Rossum's Universal Robots". "Old Man Rossum" is a learned scientist who (about the year 1932) begins to improve on God by manufacturing artificial workpeople, for sale to business men. These Robots are able to produce more efficiently than human beings, and what is even more important, are cheaper to maintain. Use of Robots brings the cost of production way down.

Of course, by far, the greatest demand for Robots is for military purposes—and it becomes necessary to train them in the use of firearms.

A time comes when the Robots realize that they are stronger than the people; that the people are unnecessary to them.

The cry goes up of "Robots of the World Unite!" The mighty Robots overwhelm the people and take possession of the wealth of the world.

Mexican Oil Flow Speeds With Defeat Of Huertista Army

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Drilling of oil wells in Mexico is proceeding twice as rapidly as during the last three months of 1923, according to a report received here by Mexican government representatives. The fascist revolt having been disposed of, oil production is again to be increased. The figures for the last five months show that exports were reduced or stopped at the various ports in proportion to the extent of rebel control of oil territory. March production totalled 13,500,000 barrels.

The nationality of the oil companies operating in Mexico in the order of their holdings is: American, British, Dutch, French, Spanish, Italian, Norwegian, Cuban, and Mexican. The total capital invested is estimated at $360,000,000 gold, of which 60 per cent is American and 30 per cent British.

FASCISTI SEIZE SHIPS OWNED BY ITALIAN SEAMEN

Big "Garibaldi" Line Is Taken By Force

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, April 13.—The last stronghold of the Italian Co-operative Movement, the Shipping Co-operative Society "Garibaldi", owned by the Italian Seamen's Federation, is held now by the Fascisti, who have seized it by order and on behalf of the Italian ship-owners.

Mussolini's recent decree endowing the Prefects of the fifty-two Italian provinces with arbitrary power "to interfere with the private business examine the account books, seize the funds and premises of Trade-unions, Co-operative societies and other workers' organizations of any kind and description" was specially schemed to give the Fascist Government the legal instrument with which the "Garibaldi" Co-operative Society was to be snatched from the seamen's ownership and placed under the management and control of a government commissioner.

Ship-owners Feared Co-operation.

The Shipping Co-operative Society "Garibaldi", established in 1919, brought fear to the Italian ship-owners. during the past two years, by cause of its astonishingly rapid growth. Its financial solidity rested upon the enthusiasm of 64,000 stalwart members who poured, every year, millions of Lire into its treasury, in affiliation fees and other contributions, this causing, in the term of four years, an increase of capital for 60,000,000 Lire. This capital, was bound to increase into tremendous financial force in the hands of the Italian Seamen's Federations.

The Italian ship-owners' attack failed. The Co-operative had never more than one of its five big cargo-ships standing idle in a port or dock—not even during the most acute period of the shipping industry crisis—for, the crews being the owners of the ships, were always ready to put their energy and spirit of sacrifice into the fight against the millionaire ship-owners.

The capitalists resorted to political intrigue, and managed to have the support of Parliament on their side and against the seamen. In the term of two years the "Garibaldi" was subjected to investigation by three parliamentary inquiry-committees, but their findings proved to be against the ship owners and the 'Garibaldi" had its ships restored and received, in addition, reparations for financial damages.

Fascism—Bosses' Opportunity.

The coming of the Fascisti into power overturned the whole situation in favor of Labor's enemies. The Seamen's Federation and the Co-operative "Garibaldi" faced the dilemma: either be affiliated to the Fascist Corporations or be smashed. In order to evade this dilemma Captain Giulietti, secretary of the seamen's Federation and President of the Co-operative "Garibaldi" put himself and his two organizations under the patronage of D'Annunzio.

The ship-owner resolved to detach D'Annunzio from Giuletti, and, at the same time, bring pressure to bear upon Mussolini thru the "Banca Commerciale" on account of the latter's controlling power over Italian Industry, Economy and Finance.

Under this pressure Mussolini gave blanket power to the ship owners' plan to take by violence the Genoa headquarters of the Seamen's Federaton and Co-operative "Garibaldi".

Gangsters Seize Union Office.

On the 2nd of January last, some 500 hooligans hired and armed by the ship owners, took possession of the Seamen's Federation headquarters at Genoa, and proclaimed themselves the owners of the Federation and Co-operative. Most fortunately, the funds of the Federation amounting to 11,000,000 Lire, were not found by the assailants. D'Annunzio sent to Mussolini a message of protest, but the day aftter he seemed to take a more tranquil attitude, and, after a week ers. But Giulietti would not give up the fight. Thinking that they could also bribe him, the ship owners offered him unofficially 4,000,000 lire, provided he accepted to withdraw. In response to this, Giulietti published later a roll of 20,000 signatures from seamen and members of the "Garibaldi" who pledged themselves to back him in the fight against the ship owners. In this plebiscite joined the crews of all the biggest Italian liners, from the under-deck hands to the captains.

This attack against the Co-operative "Garibaldi" was taken just when the government is about to auction the State-navigation subsidized lines, and when it was known that the "Garibaldi" was prepared to participate in the auctions with an offer 10,000,000 lire below the premium of subsidy offered in competition by the government. The Co-operative "Garibaldi" was therefore, considered to be the only competitor threatening, thru its exceptionally advantageous offer, the big ship owners' ring, and that is why the "Garibaldi" has been seized on the auction's eve.

Pat McCarthy Could Not Kick Off With Cheap Detroit Gas

By SHERMAN BOWMAN.

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

DETROIT, April 13.—While city and company experts were holding a haggling session over the price Detroit should pay if it purchase the Detroit City Gas Co. plant, Pat McCarthy, a one-legged peddler living at 503 E. Columbia street here, made five bootless attempts at suicide that have a bearing on the purchase question and on the customary victimizing of the public by corporations.

After his landlady discovered him unconscious in his room at 9:30 o'clock in the evening and had him taken to the receiving hospital it was discovered that he had turned on the gas in his room 14 hours before but had awakened five times in the 14 hours and added each time a paragraph to a farewell letter. On one occasion he left his room to buy whisky.

After the 14th hour of inhaling Detroit gas he wrote: "It is now 8:30 o'clock. All the gas jets are turned on. If I wake up again I will tell you more. Goodby for this time. Please don't blame anyone for this act. Yours very truly, Pat McCarthy."

$10,000,000 Loan To Mexico.

COMMUNIST AND I. W. W. DEBATE TO LARGE CROWD

Turner Hall Packed For Cannon And Edwards

line of his position.

I. W. W. Must Join Communists.

When Cannon cried: "The I. W. W. are the natural Communists in America and I for one will not stop until we've brought them into our movement!" the hall resounded with applause. Cannon explained that the Wobblies are strong in certain migratory industries and among the most oppressed of the workers. Their revolt against capitalism is only natural, he said.

Cannon quoted the I. W. W. preamble and papers to support his contentions. He argued that they were avowed revolutionists but that they allowed the pernicious poison of liberalism to influence their writings and activities, as shown by their defense pleas.

Can't Ignore State.

Cannon pointed out that the I. W. W. cannot easily ignore the activities of the state, "the executive committee of the ruling class," as Marx says, when the state interferes with their organization to the extent of throwing them into jail for their work. He argues that the capitalist class constantly injects its poison into the workers' minds thru the press, the churches, the school system and even in labor organizations by agents and bourgeois-thinking members. Cannon demonstrated that to accomplish the revolution a crisis is necessary in which capitalism can no longer rule successfully, plus the will of class conscious workers, and that the only way this will can be effective, is under the leadership of a centralized, disciplined party.

Task of Revolutionary Party.

"The task of a revolutionary party is to go into the unions and fight against all other ideas and parties," Cannon maintained. "The workers have troubles in industry, but unfortunately they have even more troubles. The state, representing a small group of capitalists, rules by deception, trickery, and fraud, and force."

"What the hell are you going to court about!" challenged Cannon in "old-time Wobbly language." He repeatedly showed that the workers were involved in the state and therefore must fight with political as well as industrial organization.

"Educate the workers in the class struggle and in the fundamentals of economics," Cannon declared. "Organize to fight against capitalist ideas in the working class. Class conscious workers organized with a program and systematizing and co-ordinating their work will help to make the workers' revolution not prevent it," he concluded.

Several hundred dollars were taken in for the General Defense Committee and the National Defense Council—to fight for the freedom of the boys in San Quentin and Centralia and to smash the Michigan persecution and free Communists from eastern prisons. The exact amount will be announced later.

ASK FEDERATION TO ACT AGAINST PLATOON SYSTEM

Strike-Breaker School Plans Assailed

Chicago union teachers are waiting to see what action the Federation's committee on schools will recommend against the menace of the platoon system of education. The Federation of Women High School Teachers made their report against the "goose-step" system to the Chicago Federation of Labor last Sunday and the report was then turned over to the committee.

Platoon Schools Make Scabs.

"Strike-breakers are made in the schools," said Miss Lillian Herstein to the Federation of Labor Sunday, reporting for Local 3 of Women High School Teachers. "The platoon system, or Gary system, means standardization of education, which is utterly opposed to democracy."

Big business raises the cry for Americanization of the foreign workers, according to Miss Herstein, and yet when Miss Irace Abbott opened night classes thruout Illinois mine districts for the workers, the mine operators had the schools closed. The greedy operators refused to support the very action they had called for.

Makes Robots of Pupils.

That the platoon system means the transformation of individuals into numbers was clearly demonstrated by Miss Herstein. "Everybody doing the same thing at the same moment and big business blowing the whistle," is the way the teacher described the working out of the proposed plan for mechanizing Chicago schools.

HOOVER ASSAILS OIL MENACE TO CHICAGO DINERS

Its The Death Of Sport He Tells Fishermen

Herbert Hoover bewailed the oil menace at a banquet in the Hotel Morrison Saturday night.

"Oil" he declaimed, "is certainly the one menace that must be attacked at once."

Waiters who were passing in and out might have thot he was worrying about the poison in the Teapot that has killed the political future of Denby, Daugherty and some others.

But no! Perish the thot. Herb's outcry was over something less material than the looting of the naval reserves. He was crying out against the oil that kills the sport of our fisherman,—the oil that is run into river and lake from factories and kills fish and oyster beds.

Hoover was addressing the Izaak Walton league of America at its second annual convention. The audience listened with profound attention. They felt sure they were listening to a genuine authority on oil.

Trachtenberg Talks In Ohio Steel City; In Chicago, Friday

CANTON, Ohio, April 13.—Alexander Trachtenberg lectured here on the subjects, "What I saw in Russia and Germany". The lecture was listened to very attentively and the quality and variety of the questions asked after the lecture, indicated a very earnest desire on the part of the workers to ascertain the truth relative to Russia.

The collection amounted to over $25 besides admission receipts. The literature sales brought in several dollars more.

It was learned at the meeting that three comrades have been discharged from the steel mills here for holding membership in the Workers Party. Several steel trust spies were observed in the audience.

Trachtenberg In St. Louis. April 25

Alexander Trachtenberg, just back from 14 months in Russia and Central Europe, as a delegate of the Workers Party, will lecture at the Labor Lyceum, 1243 North Garrison Ave., St. Louis, Mo., Friday, April 25, at 8 p. m. The admission will be 25 cents.

Procter Called to Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—William Cooper Procter, soap manufacturer and financial backer of General Leonard Wood in the last presidential campaign, has been subpoenaed by the senate oil committee. The subpoena calls for Procter's appearance on Monday.

Procter is believed by investigators to have some information concerning the reported attempt of the late Jake Hamon to prepare for leasing the naval oil reserves during the 1920 Republican national convention.

WILKES-BARRE WORKERS FORCE RIGHT TO MEET

Att'y General Yields To Protests

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 13.—Final arrangements are now being made by the Wilkes-Barre Local of the Workers Party to hold a mass meeting in connection with the famous Teapot Dome oil scandal by the end of this month. It is expected that there will be no interference with the meeting on the part of either the police or the American Legion because of a letter sent to the Wilkes-Barre mayor by Attorney General George W. Woodruff of Pennsylvania. The letter is highly apologetic and it tells the mayor many complaining letters have been received but it emphasizes the constitutional right of citizens to meet, as follows:

"You should consider seriously the following points," says Attorney General Woodruff:

"1. That the Constitution, both of the United States and the Commonwealth prescribed the inherent right of peaceable assemblage and free speech, which I think we would take to mean the right to meet in an orderly fashion and discuss any subject desired so long as decency is observed and so long as there is no interference with the rights of property of others, and no suggestions or pleas advanced in the speaking, inciting, or tending to incite, to disorder, or harm to the liberty or property of others.

"2. That not only do the Constitutional rights of people urge non-interference with truly peaceable assemblage and non-incendiary free speech, but also urge that unnecessary interference with these inherent and Constitutional rights of the people is more likely to help along any undesirable political, social or religious teaching than as tho no interference were practiced.

"The case in point perhaps illustrates the common sense thought advanced directly above. The so-called Workers Party, and the various persons involved in the alleged interference with their liberties, have been getting a tremendous advertisement out of the treatment no matter how legal and right it may be."

German Workers Wages Reduced to Few Cents an Hour

(By F. S. R. Press Service.)

The wages of German workers are terribly low. The rate for the building workers is from 11c to 16c per hour. In the textile trades skilled male workers earn 9½ to 11c per hour.

Railwaymen earn 7c to 11c an hour. Signalmen pre-war rate was $30.80 per month now make from $11.44 to $16.50, according to the length of their service.

The average wage of the full time male workers is 9½ per hour. A man who has worked ten hours a day for six days at the rate of nine and one-half cents per hour only receives $5.50 per week and prices are higher than in England or America. Elementary school teachers receive $220 per year.

These wages, below subsistence level, of course leave nothing for unemployment times. When it is considered that millions of German workers are unemployed and on part time the necessity for the relief which the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers Germany is collecting becomes all the more apparent.

Zinoviev Reviews Main Points of Difference

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Today we continue publication of the famous report by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, made to the session of the Executive of the Communist International held on Jan. 6. Zinoviev's report deals with the main points of difference in the Russian Communist Party, clearly crystallising the discussion that has so far been published in the DAILY WORKER. In order that our readers may get a broader view of this discussion, we are publishing enlarged installments. This report is divided into seven sections. Today we publish the sixth section. It is as follows:

• • •

VI.

Special Differences of Opinion with Comrade Trotzky.

I now come to the discussion of some special differences of opinion with Comrade Trotzky.

These differences with Comrade Trotzky have given rise to much uneasiness in our ranks and are naturally equally disquieting to our comrades of the International.

The "opposition," seeing that it is defeated, insists upon its final argument. It has turned to the workers with a phrase to the following effect: "Very well, you may be right in all these things. But at least we may ask for one thing: polite treatment for Trotzky." Thus Comrade Radek, for instance, delivered a speech yesterday in Moscow, in which he declared that the Central Committee was at least 80 per cent in the right, and that unity is necessary. But the Party lacks in "politeness" towards Trotzky.

Futility of Opposition.

This is all the "opposition" has to say in the present final stage of the discussion. You see, comrades, how weak are the foundations of this "opposition."

But let us turn from the lighter side of this question, for it has another aspect as well. Trotzky is one of our most gifted comrades. You all know how much influence he possesses. I need not waste any words on this. But I must make our relations with Comrade Trotzky clear to you.

In the first place: In 1903 Comrade Trotzky was not only an express Menshevik, but he was one of those comrades who most energetically combatted Bolshevism, and already at that time the accusations which he brought against the Bolsheviki were essentially the same as he raises today.

At that time Trotzky wrote a pamphlet to the effect that whilst Lenin held the belief that he was a proletarian revolutionist, whilst he held himself to be a Marxist and proletarian revolutionist, in reality history was according him the role of leader of the petty bourgeoisie, of leader of the peasantry.

The Bolsheviki, in Trotzky's opinion, were bound to develop gradually into leaders of a peasants' party. It seems to me, comrades, that the present indictments brought by Comrade Trotzky, especially his insinuations as to the degeneration of the old guard, are a renaissance of his above-named old views, of his old idea that whilst we imagine ourselves to be proletarian revolutionists, we are in reality petty bourgeoisie.

What can he otherwise mean by "degeneration?" Degeneration must be founded on a class basis! And of whom could such a class basis consist? Only of the proletariat or the peasantry. The accusation is an implication that we are inclining towards the petty bourgeoisie.

Lenin's Stand.

From the year 1905 onwards, Trotzky was fractionless, and even worked for our press for a time. Later, during the period of the counter-revolution, he again belonged to the Mensheviki, and for ten years he aided our worst enemies.

In the year 1914, at the beginning of the great war, Trotzky was internationalist, but in spite of this he continued to combat our revolutionary internationalism, and to support the Mensheviki by aiding the Duma faction of the Menshevik Tchenidze, instead of the Bolshevist Duma faction.

This reminds me of a similar attitude adopted by Trotzky at the time of the Copenhagen International Congress in the year 1910. On the opening day of the congress the Berlin "Vorwarts" published an anonymous article declaring that Lenin and his immediate disciples were a band of criminals and scoundrels, undertaking expropriations, etc. The writer of this article was Comrade Trotzky. Such was the state of affairs before the year 19197.

In the year 1917, in about June, Trotzky joined our Party. At that time Comrade Lenin was at first opposed to his admission. When the question of Comrade Trotzky's entry into the editorial staff of the "Pravda" arose, the voting was as follows: Comrade Kameneff and I were in favor of his admission, Lenin against it.

After Trotzky had become a member of the editorial staff, Lenin observed with a smile: "You have betrayed me. Well, we shall just have to increase the staff by two workers more, in order to have a majority against you and Trotzky in any case." So little confidence had Lenin in Trotzky.

Trotzky's Incompetence.

Now, comrades, you all know what brilliant service Trotzky rendered after this, especially in the October days. Then came Brest-Litovsk. Again the pendulum swung back. Trotzky insisted on the formula of: "Neither war nor peace." Trotzky suddenly became a "left" Communist in company with Bukharin, Radek, and other comrades. What was the mistake committed by Trotzky during the Brest-Litovsk period?

That he overlooked the peasantry. He was anxious to carry on a revolutionary war at a time when the whole peasantry did not want to hear anything of war. The old army, which was a peasant army, was in a state of complete dissolution, and could not be forced to fight by any means. Despite this, Trotzky had a beautifully worked out plan of his revolutionary war in his pocket, a plan with only one fault, the fact that he had no soldiers for the revolutionary army, for these were the peasants who would not fight.

Then came the trade union question in the year 1921. What was the position of the Soviet power at that time? Insurrection in Kronstadt, risings among the peasantry in Siberia and in the Tambov government. What signalized these events? The protest made by the peasantry against the limitation of agricultural productive powers by our war communism. And what was Trotzky's recipe for helping this? Further limitation, more effective limitation!

Again he overlooked the real lever moving the interests of the peasantry, and at the same time he overlooked the demands of the working masses, still closely bound up with those of the peasants in Russia. At that time we fought a severe contest as to the role played by the working class, and its relations to the peasantry.

And now we have got into a discussion on the same subject for the third time, for Trotzky, whilst categorically insisting on the necessity of his plan, again overlooks the needs of agriculture. The basis of our economics is represented by the country, by the peasantry. This basis consists of our hundreds of millions of poods of bread.

Another bone of contention between us and Trotzky is the question of the concentration of state economics. Theoretically, the demand for increased concentration in state industry is perfectly correct. But here again matters look somewhat different viewed in a concrete political light. For instance, we possess a number of first-class large works, as the Putilov Works at Petrograd, or the Bryansk Works, which are unprofitable enterprises from the financial standpoint.

Trotzky's Solution.

What is to be done with such undertakings? Trotzky answers briefly: Close them.

But we, the majority of the Political Bureau, declare that we do not think of closing them. There are exceptional cases, in which we must grant subsidies, even this is not in accordance with the immediate interests of the state budget. The unprofitable enterprise despite its unprofitability, must be held above water by artificial means.

Why this? The reply is simple.

Because these works keep occupied 8,000 workers forming a picked troop of proletarian revolutionists. These are centers of crystallization of all. But Trotzky nervously opposses us, he categorically demands that the works be shut down, and continues to bombard us with his question of: Where is your plan? What economic system are you pursuing?

I believe, comrades, that the picture which I have so far drawn for our disagreement with Trotzky will have shown you that our differences are not of a personal nature—all assertions to the contrary are idle gossip!—but of a purely political character. The reason lies in the fact that Trotzky has learnt in a very different school to ours, for we worked together with Lenin for years.

We fully appreciate all Trotzky's brilliant qualities, and need not recount these here, but all the same he has not gone thru a Bolshevist school. Again and again he overlooks the peasantry, and is thus unable to accord due weight to the specific role played by the working class of Russia, so closely bound up with the part played by the small holders.

Need For Co-operation.

Now, comrades, we are all of the opinion that Trotzky's co-operation is an unqualified necessity for us.

We often hear it said by comrades—I heard it yesterday myself at a meeting—that: "The Central Committee has a faction after all, and that is your faction, the faction of the majority." This is pure nonsense.

In the Central Committee the proportion of the majority to the opposition is 53 to 3, in the Political Bureau 9 to 1.

Did you ever hear of such a faction? Nearly all of us were unanimously elected by the last Party conference. The "opposition" declares: Even if we gain the majority at the next Party conference, we shall still re-elect you all unanimously. The accusation that we are a faction has thus not a shadow of proof behind it.

We are reproached with maintaining especially close contact with one another, of coming into the Political Bureau with our proposals already agreed upon beforehand, and so forth. This is one of Radek's greatest hits. Radek speaks at meetings somewhat as follows: Do you know, comrades, what our Political Bureau really is? The following: Zinoviev comes to an understanding with Kamenev and Stalin.

This trio then overwhelms Bukharin, so that they have already four votes before coming into the Political Bureau. Then they only require two votes more, and they have the majority.

Is This a Faction?

What is this, if it is not a faction? Is the question then put by Radek to his astonished audience.

Comrades, you are naturally interested in the more intimate side of our disagreement as well, and an explanation of this is also due to you.

Yes, it is true that the members of the Political Bureau come to understandings with one another. But what does the Political Bureau really represent?

Above all it represents the responsible corporation of our state, the government. The Political Bureau governs the country, and this is a country comprising one sixth of the surface of the globe. To this must be added that we are still in possession of a certain amount of influence in the International, and rule in this to a certain extent. Confronted by such responsible tasks, is it possible for us to deal with every subject in a purely formal manner, to act on some such scheme as the following: 12 o'clock, meeting of Political Bureau, opening of session, reading of agenda, and voting?

This is of course absurb. We are an army staff, but a revolutionary army staff, whose members are in constant contact with one another, and maintain friendly relations to each other.

We often hear it said at meetings that the members of the Political Bureau met at Zinoviev's house, and came to an understanding there. And how were matters at the time when Lenin was still in good health? Well, at that time we met in Lenin's rooms, in his study, or at his dinner-table, and discussed all manner of questions with him, seeking to arrive at a united standpoint on contested points. Often enough this was no easy matter. In the Urquhart affair, for instance, Lenin changed his point of view three times.

At one time he was in favor of accepting the agreement, at another time opposed it. I remember that at that time he once telephoned to me: "You see how weak I have become! I have thought the matter over again, and have come to a different conclusion again. What do you say to such a lack of character?"

How is it that we did not succeed in establishing similar relations with Comrade Trotzky? The reason lies partly in Trotzky's personal character. Trotzky is an expressed individualist. This makes it impossible that he should ever form a firm faction.

Strong Indvidualist.

During the Balkan war, Trotzky once made an excursion to the Balkans. He then proceeded to Copenhagen, where he was already able to unfold an excellent plan for the reconciliation of the broad-minded and the narrow-minded Trotzky has always been wanting to reconcile the whole world, but he has never reconciled anybody.

He has wanted to form a faction, but has himself been factionless, and has never succeeded in bringing a faction together.

Why not? Simply for the reason that he is an expressed individualist. This incapacity for collective work prevents the development of any friendly relations between Trotzky and the old Bolsheviki, tho such relations are eminently desirable. To this we must add the whole of our past, comprising a period of 20 years, during which we old Bolsheviki, we Leninists, were fighting together thru thick and thin.

After Lenin fell ill, we for our part did our utmost to improve our relations with Trotzky, to come into closer contact with him.

Even after the conflict with him had begun we made two attempts, in November of last year, to come to a clear understanding with Comrade Trotzky by means of private consultation with him. All the members of the Political Bureau took part in these private consultations.

We did this in the consciousness that it was necessary to convince Comrade Trotzky that we did not dream for a moment of persecuting him, but were actuated solely by the sincere wish to co-operate with him, and to arrive at an agreement with him on contested questions. We have done our utmost to come to an understanding with Comrade Trotzky. And the result? The next day we have the same situation again, the same questions. And then there is a group of Trotzky's followers who have encouraged him to oppose the Central Committee, instead of enlightening him as to the real state of affairs in the Party.

Faulty Psychology.

Now that Lenin is not there, we can storm the Central Committee—this has been the slogan of this group. And they have really attempted the attack.

It has, however, not been quite successful either for Trotzky or Radek. It was a false speculation to assume that Lenin's absence would guarantee a victorious issue for the attack.

This is the situation, comrades. Naturally there is wide-spread disquietude, naturally we hear on all sides the question: What will happen now?

Will there be a rupture with Trotzky?

Indeed, even those comrades of the "opposition" who have changed their opinion in the course of the discussion, and are now ready to declare: "Yes, you are right, and we vote with you," are still asking: "But what is to be done about Trotzky?"

To this we reply: Of course we shall continue to co-operate with him. We have already stated this publicly in a special resolution passed by the Political Bureau, in which we declare that we cannot imagine either the Political Bureau or the Soviet government without Trotzky. But on the other hand we must state with the utmost decision:

If there are any persons who believe that we shall now swallow everything which Trotzky offers us, they are mistaken. We shall not permit ourselves to be deprived of the right of representing the Party as it really is. It must be openly stated, once for all, that we never went over to Comrade Trotzky, but that he came over to us into the Party.

No Split Feared.

This statement does not in the least alter the fact of Trotzky's admirable characteristics and capabilities. Trotzky must penetrate more deeply into the essence of our Bolshevist Party.

He has tried to show the workers that we are on the road to becoming Bernsteins, and so forth. But nobody has believed him. This proves that he has not formed a correct estimate of our Party.

Comrades, you have nothing to fear. There will be no split in the Party. Trotzky will recognize his errors, as he did in 1921. A federal Party conference will first be held, then a federal Party congress.

It need not be said that we shall do our utmost to keep Comrade Trotzky in all his influential positions, despite the momentary tension, and to give him the opportunity of working.

But we expect from you, comrades, that you fully realize the nature of our differences, that you are aware that it is no matter of trifles, but of serious political and organizatory questions. Had it been a mere question of trifles, we should have given in long ago.

McCormick Another Lame Duck

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Without waiting to learn the final figures from the Republican senatorial race in Illinois, politicians here began to refer to Medill McCormick as "our second lame duck of the Denby season." Sterling of South Dakota, was the first.

ILLINOIS G. O. P. COMMITTEE IN SMALL'S HANDS

Fiery Cross Boasts Klan Won Election

Incomplete returns indicate Gov. Len Small will hold the thirteen votes necessary to control the new Republican state committee. He captured at least five of the ten Cook County Committeeships and his downstate candidates are leading in the incomplete returns. Small's renomination may also encourage one or two committeemen of other factions to sway his way.

Walter Rosenfield has apparently won the close contest in the Rock Island district but the Small control will discourage him from being a candidate for re-appointment as chairman.

The new state committee will have charge of the republican state campaign, including Small's own candidacy.

Klan Says It Won Election

The Illinois Fiery Cross, Ku Klux Klan organ, boasts that all the candidates it endorsed won out in the Illinois primaries.

"Every candidate for state office receiving the support of the klan's membership was swept to victory," the Fiery Cross states and follows with the list of succesful candidates, headed by Governor Len Small.

Election Fraud Arrests

Election fraud charges culminated today in the detention under bond of Virgil Litsinger, charged with the theft of a ballot box in the Eighteenth Precinct. Litsinger, who is a nephew of Edward R. Litsinger of the board of review, was a precinct captain for Small.

Morris Eller, Republican committeeman in the Twentieth Ward, has also made newspaper charges against Election Commissioner Czarnecki, who he says placed non-residents, bootleggers and ex-convicts on the election board.

$17 Scale Won By Sign Painters Of Chicago Union

Scenic artists in the Chicago painters' union are now getting $17 a day on a 44-hour week under the new agreement that will run for one year expiring April 1, 1925. This is a raise of $2 a day. The scale of their helpers remains as before, $12 a day.

Sign painters in the union are getting $15 a day on a 40-hour, five-day week. This is a raise of $2 a day. Their helpers are getting $10 a day, a raise of $1.50 a day. They are also enjoying the 40-hour week.

"Our branches of the trade are about 95 per cent organized in Chicago," says Walter G. Lathrope, business agent, Local 830 (Sign, Scene and Pictorial Painters), Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhagers. "Our local has 600 members, of which 50 are the scenic artists and their assistants."

DEPORTATION OF I.W.W. POLITICALS IS BEING WITHHELD

Authorities Back Down In Avila Case

(By Defense News Service)

Deportation has been stayed for at least one of the seventeen I. W. W. ex-political prisoners who are fighting against banishment from the United States. The one is John Avila, who came here many years ago from Portugal and was sentenced to Leavenworth in 1918 by Judge Landis in the famous Chicago trial. His case will be reopened, according to a letter just received by the General Defense Committee here from W. W. Sibray, Acting Commissioners-General of Immigration at Washington, D. C.

This action in Avila's favor is looked upon as a hopeful sign with regard to all the deportation cases, in all of which the circumstances are practically the same. Sibray's letter concerning Avila says in part:

A "Desirable" Resident

"You are advised that after carefully examining the record, it appears that the man might be found to be a desirable resident. In view of the fact, it has therefore been directed that the case be reopened for the purpose of securing additional evidence as to whether he will make a law-abiding citizen and as to his actions in the past. When the desired information has been received, the case will be given further consideration."

Action in behalf of the radicals in question, whom the Department of Labor seeks to deport because they served prison terms for war-opinions, has lately been taken by labor organizations in England and by a prominent citizens in New York City.

British Labor Takes Action

United States Abassador Frank B. Kellogg of London, has received a letter from the Independent Labor Party, Mitcham Branch, Surrey, relative to the cases of seven of the former political prisoners who are British-born. These are Herbert Mahler, Joseph Oates, William Moran, Harry Lloyd, Richard Brazier, Donald Sheridan and Bert Lorton.

Citing the banishment orders, the Independent Labor Party says: "It is understood that the reasons for these deportations are political and our members desire to enter a protest against this action. It is felt that if the full facts were placed before our good friends, the American citizens, few would favor the deportation of these men, and we respectfully submit that this should be done before the order is made effective.

"The members of this Mitcham Party urge upon you, Sir, to bring this letter before your President, and to make representatives to your President and Senate with a view to securing the release of these men in question and the advancement of justice."

Scottish Workers Protest

Members of the Glasgow Trades Labour Council discussed at length these deportation cases at a recent meeting of that body. They finally voted to ask the Scottish Trade Union Congress and the British Trade Union Congress to protest to the United States government against sending the ex-politicals out of this country.

Jacob Tori, another I. W. W. member was deported to Italy on March 29. None of his friends were notified that he was being sent away, so no one was at the dock to bid him farewell. He managed, however, to send a message from the ship bearing good wishes to his fellow workers.

Italian Worker Tricked

Tori was convicted in the Sacramento trial in 1919 in connection with the war, and was sentenced to serve 10 years. His term in Leavenworth penitentiary was cut short last Christmas by President Coolidge's order of commutation, but immediately the Department of Labor instituted deportation proceedings against him. At a hearing in Leavenworth, immigration agents induced Tori to waive his right to counsel. He did not understand what he was agreeing to. When he learned the truth later he declared he had been tricked and demanded an attorney, but was told it was too late.

Coolidge and Unemployment

The textile workers of Lawrence, Massachusetts, have just made an appeal to President Coolidge for help in their present plight. So intense has been the suffering of these workers that the municipality has been compelled to advertise a loan of $120,000 with which to finance the construction of public works on which jobless textile workers might be employed.

We realize that the textile workers are up against it. We also realize that the signs indicating a similar fate befalling the workers of many other big industries are multiplying. We are especially aware of the fact that unless the workingmen of all industries soon take matters into their own hands to prevent acute suffering, a heavy wave of unemployment will overwhelm them sooner than many expect. Thus we are compelled to warn Frank H. Horton, secretary of the Finishers' and Dyers' Union that his letter to President Coolidge demanding "a proper and rigid investigation of the textile industry" to enlighten the country about the "inhumane methods that are now being instituted in the mills" is doomed to failure.

This unemployment appeal of the workingmen will fall on deaf ears. Coolidge is the spokesman of the big Boston cotton and wool interests in whose behalf the Fordney-McCumber Tariff act was put over to net these capitalists a bonus running into hundreds of millions of dollars annually. Coolidge is the stalwart champion of the reactionary interests that are now fighting tooth and nail even the most half-hearted attempts to inform the people about the conditions prevailing in American industry and government subject to the paralyzing grip of the capitalist class.

Investigation and enlightenment are the bane of Coolidge and his black tribe of financial and industrial pirates. Even when he was governor, Coolidge did not find it necessary to make the slightest pretense of helping the textile workers in their heroic struggle against the ruthless oppression of the textile barons.

Now that his whole political fate depends on the good will and purse strings of these and other big capitalist interests, Coolidge will surely give the workers a cold shoulder. With the workers, the rule that "god helps those who help themselves" is especially true.

Gompers' New Ally

Bertrand Russell, lecturing in New York recently, said that "while this country may eventually have a Labor administration as a result of such an industrial revolution as England has undergone in the past, it would not be for thirty years."

We have noticed that these liberal intellectuals from other lands are very careful not to give aid and comfort to the radical forces in a country from which they receive large lecture fees but never hesitate to bulwark the status quo policy of the reactionaries.

Bertrand Russell is one of the pet aversions of Samuel Gompers but on the labor party question in America the English intellectual and laborite lines up with the reactionary trade union official.

This tendency to support the upholders of capitalism in other nations is characteristic of the liberal intellectual who at heart is a rabid nationalist despite pacifist aberrations that are shown from time to time. The international character of the class struggle means nothing to them because they do not even acknowledge the class struggle. Bertrand Russell for instance, has just written a series of articles to prove that the believers in the class struggle hamper progress and that real international cooperation is promoted by business men.

In spite of his production of this kind of intellectual tripe Bertrand Russell is hailed as a messiah by certain sections of the lower middle-class such as the leaders of the Independent Labor Party of England whose idea of service to the workers is having something done for but not by the working class.

Thirty years to establish a labor party in the United States!

Even Communists would be tolerated and perhaps encouraged by the capitalists and Samuel Gompers if they were willing to wait thirty years for a labor party to say nothing of the dictatorship of the workers and farmers.

Hugo Stinnes

Hugo Stinnes, the mastadon of German capitalist industry, and one of the giants of international finance and manufacturing has passed away.

The writing of obituaries and eulogies we will leave to the kept press of the employing class. His death is the loss of the exploiting class of the world. The exalted editors of this ruling class are financially duty-bound to spill gallons of ink in showering praises and blessing on their dead class heroes.

To the working class of the world the death of Stinnes at this time is especially significant. It brings into sharp focus the present status of the class conflict in Germany. The death of this German industrial overlord dramatically summarizes at a stroke, as it were, for the workers of the world, history and lessons of the bitter struggles for power waged by the working class of Germany. This history and these lessons are of inestimable significance to the international proletariat.

The rise of Stinnes, the inveterate foe of the 8-hour day, the rise of an industrial and financial octopus—whose tentacles gripped the very vitals of what was once Germany was made possible only by the establishment of the undisputed rule of the German capitalist class. In the establishment of this iron dictatorship of the exploiters over the oppressed German workers and poor farmers was made possible only by the black betrayal of the proletarian masses by the German Social-Democratic Party. There is a certain sense of historical justice and ruthlessness in the passing away of the symbol of capitalist supremacy in Germany at a time when the German workers are about to be mortgaged to the international capitalist plunderers under the leadership of American financiers. The death of Stinnes comes at a moment when the party, that has enabled him to build his towering edifice as a monument to the almost unlimited power of exploitation in the hands of his class, is on the threshold of death as a decisive political factor in the storms of class war that are now brewing in Germany.

Stinnes has gone. But Stinneism is still in the saddle in Germany. The workers and poor farmers of the world should on this occasion take account of the why and wherefore of the rise of this monster in Germany at a time when the working class was ready and able to win complete political power. The passing away of Stinnes as a symbol of German monopolist capitalist supremacy indelibly impresses upon the working masses of all countries the all-important truth that in the decisive struggle between the working class and the capitalist class there are but two roads open to the proletarian masses: capitalist dictatorship with its unbearable working conditions and intolerably low wages, or the proletarian dictatorship thru the establishmment of a Soviet Republic of workers and farmers whose aim it is to reorganize industry for the benefit of those who work and not in the interest of a small call of exploiters.

Economic Basis of Imperialism

The process by which an empire is weakened thru its colonies becoming economically independent and thereby loosing the ties which bind them to the central government is well illustrated by the case of Canada.

Before the war Canada was almost wholly dependent upon Great Britain for capital used in exploiting her natural resources. A recent survey shows that the amount of British capital invested in Canada totals $1,890,000,000. Only $50,000,000 of this amount has been invested since 1914 showing that since the outbreak of the World War Canada has been receiving her capital requirements from other sources.

Canada has built an industry independent of the capitalists of the home land and the same process has been going on since 1914 in other British colonies. They are now able to supply their home markets and in addition produce a surplus for which markets must be found abroad. Instead of shipping their raw materials to England and receiving manufactured commodities in return they compete in the world markets with the finished commmodities of the mother land.

Economic independence is the foundation of political independence, and this accounts for the centrifugal tendency now apparent in the British Empire.

No amount of Empire propaganda can prevent this disintegration of British colonial imperialism, now that it has no strong economic basis.

One hundred leading citizens of Washington Courthouse, Ohio, the home town of the now extremely ex-Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty, assembled the other day and gave him a vote of confidence. Visitors to Washington Courthouse will have only themselves to blame if, after this warning, they do not leave all valuables at home.

We Communists have other things besides our modesty to commend us but we are a little awed at the statement of John M. Work in the last issue of the Socialist World that he and his type will "furnish the spirit and most of the brains for the American Labor Party" that they hope will be organized at Cleveland.

Senator Wheeler, indicted by a Montana grand jury for connection with an oil company since his election, can make the plea of the girl who turned up with an illegitimate child, that "it is only a little one."

A Year's Work of the French Communist Party - By M. MASS

THE French Communist Party held its Third Congress in Lyon from January 20 to the 24th, and there some very important questions were discussed dealing with the future development of the French revolutionary movement. For the previous few months the entire party press had been opened for discussions, criticisms and suggestion by the rank and file. The letters published in the "Humanite" showed what great interest was manifested in the debates. Many ideas were advanced to make the French party a real Communist Party of the masses.

Enormous progress has been recorded by the French party. The expulsion of the centrists headed by Frossard, Meric, and Paul Louis was balanced by the admission of such real revolutionists as Pierre Monatte, the well known former syndicalist leader, by Henri Barbusse, secretary of the "International Anciens Combattants," by Andre Marty, the leader of the Black Sea revolt, by Lucien Midol and many others. They brought with them revolutionary syndicalists and revolutionary ex-soldiers and sailors—and the party that, for more than two years had been engaged in internal struggles turned its attention ranks in the struggle for the prole- and energy towards organizing its tarian interests.

The Occupation of the Ruhr.

The French section of the Communist International was given the task of propagating open revolt among the soldiers on the Ruhr. Due to the post-war position of France as a victorious nation, and to its great economic development, she became the most imperialistic country of Europe, the hope and the refuge of all counter-revolutionists She was able to mobilize 700,000 men and send them into the Ruhr. Our answer to this was the international conference at Essen and the organization of huge mass meetings all over France and even in the Ruhr district. As a result of this Communist activity there were instituted arrests of the best elements in the Communist Party and the "Confederation Generale du Travail Unitaire." The old charge of plotting against the security of the state was the reason given.

Our party was not discouraged by these arrests and in pursuance with the United Front policy, it organized mass meetings in collaboration with the C. G. T. U. and the "Association Republicaine Anciens Combattants" thruout France, protesting against the invasion of the Ruhr and the arrest of our comrades. The pressure exerted by the French proletariat compelled the government to release these proletarian fighters, thus gaining the first victory of the year for the working class.

Great credit is due the French party for the organization of the Frankfort conference and while this conference was going on Comrades Hoellein and Peri were arrested for certain speeches in the House of the Syndicates. Again the French proletariat, led by the Communist Party, compelled the bourgeois state to free our comrades.

Revolutionary Political Action.

In its electoral campaigns the French section of the Comintern never forgot its Communist mission. On all occasions the Party used the electoral tribune for propaganda purposes, and used workers who were class war prisoners as candidates for political office, such as Marty, Badina, Midal, etc. These campaigns were truly carried on on the basis of the class struggle.

All the campaigns undertaken were successful from every point of view, especially in gaining the sympathies of the organized masses and bringing new elements into the party. Meetings were held for the defense of Matu and Nicolau, for Sacco and Vanzetti, and all class policy was utilized in campaigns in defense of the revolutionary outbreaks in Germany and in protest against the outrages of fascism. Thus the watchwords of the Comintern were brought vividly before the great masses of the French proletariat.

The Syndicalist Movement.

By actively showing the workers in the syndicates the connection between the struggles on the economic war prisoners. The United Front and political fields our comrades succeeded in clearing away the old syndicalist ideas. By drawing examples from their daily struggles they showed the syndicalists the inherent bonds between the police, army, navy, and all the other apparata of the bourgeois state with the Comite des Forges, the bosses, financiers and other exploiters. Our comrades were successful in winning over to our side the great majority of the Confederation Generale du Travail Unitaire, which is a most important victory considering the wrong interpretations of the role of the syndicates prevailing among them for the past 25 years.

Our comrades in the Confederation Generale du Travail Unitaire are the vanguard of the communist-syndicalist forces that are forced to fight at every step the disrupters, the anarcho-syndicalist faction, which altho a minority tries to cause a lot of mischief. They have succeeded in retaining the affiliation of the Confederation Generale du Travail Unitaire to the R. T. U. I. in spite of the tremendous efforts and the campaign of calumnies initiated by the agents of the so-called Syndicalist International. In the minds of the great masses our comrades are the only ones who thru their nuclei in the syndicalist movement are working with all energy towards bringing about unity between the Confederation General du Travail and the Confederation Generale du Travail Unitaire, thus restoring to the French proletariat its old fighting strength.

The Soldiers' Organizations.

Thru the efforts of our nuclei in the Association Republicaine Anciens Combattants, of which Comrade Henri Barbusse is president, they have been able to develop this body into a real fighting organization of ex-soldiers. At every call of the Communist Party for a United Front this organization was always ready, thus bringing the ex-soldiers to the defense of the revolutionary movement. On armistice day the Association Republicaine Anciens Combattants organized a parade headed by Comrade Vaillant Couturier, which marched thru the main boulevards of Paris and left the bourgeoisie in consternation. The police were sent to stop this demonstration, but found that they had to deal this time with determined ex-soldiers ready to fight for their rights. Thus the working class learned that it could parade in spite of the police.

The Sports Organizations.

The French Communist Party realizing the importance of sports as a means of developing the youth physically and realizing the danger of leaving the working class youth at the mercy of professional bourgeois sport organizations, decided to instill into workers' sports organizations the ideology of the revolutionary proletariat. After several months work in the Federation Sportive du Travail our comrades succeeded in getting this working class organization to affiliate itself with the Red Sports International. Today this organization publishes a bi-monthly paper called the "Workers' Sports" and instead of losing its members as before, is gaining new members and soon hopes to become one of the greatest sports organizations of France.

The French Communist Party can do these things because it has its members wherever workers congregate. All workers' organizations, such as the co-operatives, the locataires, etc., were penetrated and our comrades are the live forces in these bodies. They can be differentiated from the others by their enthusiasm and their devotion to the cause of the workers. In order to conduct all this work the Party developed a great press, which day by day is gaining the support of the majority of the workers.

The Communist Press.

The party press is centralized about its main organ, the "Humanite," which is read by 200,000 workers daily.

In addition to the many organs of the Federations in the provinces, which themselves have many dailies and weeklies, the party publishes: "L'Ouvriere," an organ for propaganda among women; "La Viox Paysanne," organ of propaganda among the agriculture workers; "Bulletin Communiste," the famous theoretical weekly edited by Comrade Boris Souvarin; "The Volktribune" of Metz is a German daily, and "The Humanite" in German is another daily published in Strassburg. Another "Humanite" is printed in Italian every week, and in the Polish language there is a weekly. "Le Travailleur Polonais." "The Workers' Sports," published by the Federation Sportive du Travail, and the "Vanguard" the organ of the Communist youth make up the ilst of the more important papers.

Besides the party press we have great influence over the "Clarte" thru its editor, Comrade Henri Barbusse. This is the outstanding organ of the Communist intellectuals.

With this press in hand and the efforts put forth by our comrades in the various organizations the French party can look towards the future with confidence.

Last year they have demolished a great deal of influence exerted in former times by the social-democracy and by the salutary decisions of the Lyon Congress the Party will forge the tools necessary for the destruction of the bourgeois state and the conquest of power.

Censorship, Sense and the Labor Movies . . .

By WILLIAM F. KRUSE

Every week fifty million Americans pour into 15,000 regular motion picture theaters to be stuffed with more subtly effective propaganda than is administered by all the newspapers, libraries and pulpits put together. In addition 22,000 churches, halls, schoolrooms and other public places are equipped to help along the job. The movies are today an indispensable part of the machinery of "Big Business"—with their $200,000,000 annual expenditure, they employ 300,000 people in producing, annually, 700 features, 1,500 short subjects and 500 adaptations of imported films.

Day by day the film producer talks to the largest audience ever assembled, and always with the same precise perfection—unhurried and unhindered—except by the Censor.

It is the Censor's business to keep from the people that which is not "good for them." The full import of his concern becomes clear when, upon examination, practically every regula- is calculated to preserve one of the four chief ideological props of the capitalist system: Law, religion, patriotism and morality.

All censorship is basically political, it is designed to serve those whose economic interests would be hurt by a change from the existing social order. The film is used daily to defend the "Haves," but the slightest effort to plead the cause of the "Have Nots" must run the gamut of the Censor.

This politico-economic basis is strikingly shown in the Maryland regulation against "inflammatory scenes and titles calculated to stir up • • • antagonistic relations between capital and labor." In Pennsylvania a picture of W. Z. Foster was ordered eliminated "because he had shown himself a bad actor in the steel strike," and it was allowed to remain only upon appeal. The same sort of regulations prevail in Poland, which forbids "films tending to promote emigration agitation." In Australia no pictures can be shown which would be "detrimental to the British Empire (or its allies) in a social, political or national sense." Here also is forbidden films showing "excessive shooting or indiscriminate fighting as distinct from war films," but the British go one better by even prohibiting pictures of "realistic horhors of war."

Law and Order.

The censors everywhere are extremely solicitous of respect for "law and order." The police must not be criticized. Maryland, London and other boards forbid pictures of the "third degree"—the cops can do no wrong. Ontario forbids "any picture which shows successful balking of law." Maryland forbids "doubtful characters exalted to heroes." Italy forbids films which "lessen the name and fame of public institutions and authorities, or of officers and agents of the law."

Patriotism.

"All scenes injurious to Canadian or any other race pride or patriotism, or to loyalty to the King," are forbidden in Ontario. The army and navy are props of the existing order beyond the pale of movie criticism. The State of Ohio forbids: "Scenes which ridicule or deprecate public officials, officers of the law, the U. S. army or navy or other governmental authority, or which tend to weaken the authority of the law." If a movie scenario were based upon the Teapot Dome testimony it would be "eliminated" by every censor board in the country.

Religion.

Charley Chaplin's masterpiece, "The Pilgrim," was held up in Pennsylvania because the comedian wore the garb of a minister as a means of escaping from jail. "Priests, ministers, rabbis or the recognized leaders of any religious sect" are taken under the wing of this board, and by practically every other.

Morality.

On the field of morality we find the Censor revelling in all his glory.

"Sex shall be prohibited," decrees the master of films in Montreal. "Under no circumstances is a woman to sell her virtue," says Australia. Just like that.

Neither death nor divorce shall loosen the legal double knot for legitimatizing property descent in Montreal if the Censor can help it. One of his prize regulations reads: "Fostering or showing of divorce as means of dissolving marriage bonds must not be allowed in this province, nor any suicide."

The nude is forbidden everywhere, sometimes pictures of statues welcomed in any public park result in banning a film. The morals of the movie actors are protected by the prohibitions not only of the nude, but "moreover the suggestion—usually by means of subtitles, that nudity is being portrayed before other characters in the film."

Even a Censor admits that clothes alone do not create modesty, but his regulations only add to the confusion. Maryland objects to "the improper exhibition of feminine underwear"; Montreal is death on girls in one-piece bathing suits.

Morality is not confined to matters sexual. Property acquisition is as much a question of capitalist morality as property succession, or even more so. Ohio forbids all scenes which "teach false ethics," and specifically those "productions that teach fatalism, or the futility of individual resistance to adversity." Pennsylvania forbids "themes or incidents • • • which are designed to inflame the mind to improper adventures, or to establish false standards of conduct." Who determines the standards, morals, or whatever yardstick is to be applied? Why, the politically appointed Censor, of course. Censorship boards are an inducement rather than a cure for moron movies.

The Legal Basis of Censorship.

It should be clearly understood that there is not even a theoretical 'democratic" basis for "freedom of the films," as in the case of press and speech. Legally the movies are in the same position of these other media of expression at the time of the Inquisition. The regulation of motion pictures is solely a matter of "police power" (City of Ames vs. Gerbracht, 189 N. W. 72a)—and this is a term sufficiently elastic to cover a multitude of sins.

On this basis the nincompoop mayor of Springfield, Mass., was able to bar a labor film highly praised by the National Board of Review and passed by all censhorship boards. Offered a preview before a jury of his own selection he refused. Offered a chance to judge the film personally, he again refused, saying that he would not permit it if shown the film tens times over without being able to detect any objection. Even so reactionary a sheet as the Springfield "Republican" was moved to protest.

Truth is no defense, nor is the fact that the book, painting or sculpture upon which a picture is based can be procured in any public library, park or art gallery. Ontario puts it: "Each question of costume or taste must be considered on the basis of morals"—and the censors' morals at that.

Law Not Same for All.

These regulations, despite all hypocritical pretense, are intended for no other purpose than to keep the movies from being adequately used for labor purposes. Regulations have never prevented hundreds of films from showing labor organizers as murderous, grafting brutes, while their capitalist opponents embodied all the virtues. The law against interstate shipment of prize fight films, passed to cut down Negro self-respect that might ensue from the sight of one of their race winning the highest pugilistic honors in the world, never prevented the President and many of his cabinet from attending illegal showings of such film, or, as charged, profiting from such illegal showings.

Nor did the regulations against inciting to race hatred ever successfully prevent the showing of the most villainous race poison ever screened, "The Birth of a Nation." Neither did it stop "The Eternal City," ostensibly based on Hal Caine's novel, but actually only a vehicle for rotten Fascist, anti-labor propaganda.

These regulations are swung with full force against labor pictures. In one state thirty-two "cuts" were demanded, in another state an FSR motion picture was completely banned as "harmful propaganda." In still another four reels out of six were condemned. The very name of the organization under whose auspices the picture was run was sought to be suppressed in one case.

The fear of such censorship is undoubtedly partly responsible for the weak-kneed tone of the "labor" films made prior to the entrance of the Friends of Soviet Rusia into this field. One "labor" film actually claimed as its basis Woodrow Wilson's "New Freedom."

Certain liberal elements are waging an intense battle against movie censorship on the plea that its very existence gives the lie to American democratic pretensions. We can well afford to support them in this fight—where they fail it helps show up the naked class character of our state, where they succeed it opens the gates wider for more effective pro-working class use of the film. By means of the movies hundreds of thousands of American workers have learned the truth about Soviet Russia, and more hundreds of thousands will do so thru the new films that are being made.

GRAND JURY ENTERS THE OIL DRAMA

Sinclair Indictment for Contempt Coming Up

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The grand jury here Wednesday will consider criminal cases against principals in the oil scandal; the contempt indictment against Harry F. Sinclair will come up during the week for dispositioon by the court on a demurrer and the senate committee will continue tomorrow on the trail of testimony concerning the republican national convention "oil deal" story.

This was the program of senate and legal investigators outlined today for the week.

Grand Jury at Work.

The Grand Jury was summoned to hear the evidence which prosecutors Pomerene and Roberts have drawn up against at least five men prominent in the investigation. Indicements for conspiracy to defraud the government will be sought.

The government will file an answer to the demurrer of Harry F. Sinclair, who was indicted for contempt when he refused to answer questions of the investigating committee and then attacked the constitutionality of the powers of all congressional investigating committees. A day for argument of the legal points involved will be set as soon as possible. Either way, the decision of the court goes, the question will be fought to the United States Supreme Court.

Proctor Backed Wood.

William Cooper Procter, Cincinnati soap manufacturer, and friend of Gen. Leonard Wood, has been subpoenaed as the first witness before the investigating committee tomorrow.

He furnished money for the Wood presidential campaign in 1920 and is supposed to have some information regarding the reported efforts of the late Jake Hamon to swing an oil reserve deal at the convention.

* * *

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 14.— James Sloan, for 16 years detailed by the secret service to guard the president, told the senate public lands committee that when he became the manager of the Washington branch of the brokerage house of Ungeleider & Co., of Cleveland, O., in October, 1921, his salary was set at $1000 a month. He had been drawing $9 a day, with $4 maintenance allowance, when he protected Roosevelt, Taft and Wilson.

Ungeleider was a friend of the Daugherty crowd in Ohio politics. In picking a manager for his Washington branch he did not get a trained stockbroker or investment expert. He got a man who knew everyone who went to the white house. Sloan had to be given several weeks' training at Cleveland and New York, in order that he might know how to sell stocks. But Ungeleider had met him with Harding, and knew that "Jimmy" had been employed from the morning after the nomination of Harding, to guard the candidate during the 1920 campaign and to be at his service and at the service of the Republican National committee until June 15, 1921. In other words, Sloan knew everybody who associated with Harding during the entire campaign and for several months after his inauguration.

Sloan testified that no public official dealt in stocks thru his office "except as your experts' examination of our books disclosed," and that no official traded thru his firm under any other name than the client's own.

After President Harding's death, the Ungeleider firm sold out to a New York concern, and Sloan joined the unemployed.

PINCHOT BOWS BEFORE COOLIDGE; INSURGENT DAYS ARE NOW OVER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 14.—Governor Gifford Pinchot, leading exponent of prohibition enforcement and long considered an insurgent in the ranks of rock-ribbed republicans in Pennsylvania, has made his peace with the organization.

By conceding the Republican nomination to President Calvin Coolide and relinquishing whatever thoughts of it he may have had for himself, Governor Pinchot has served to solidify the Republican Party—on dry enforcement.

Recognition that Mr. Coolidge would be the Republican choice at Cleveland in June came in an adroitly worded paragraph of a statement by the governor last night in which he acknowledged he was at the bottom of Francis J. Heney's retention by Senator Couzens as counsel to aid the senate committee investigating prohibition enforcement.

DAWES ROBBER PLAN ASSAILED IN LABOR CIRCLES

Amalgamated Secretary Joins Attack

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 14.—While Wall Street and the capitalist press are praising the report on German reparations by Banker Hell-an'-Maria Dawes, opinion in labor and liberal circles in New York is hostile to the report as a capitalist plan for the further subjection of the German working class. Tho many representatives of unions and labor banks here withhold comment until the lengthy document can be studied more fully, The Federated Press has secured the following statements:

Schlossberg Hits Dawes.

Joseph Schlossberg, secretary Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America—"From labor's point of view the whole idea of indemnity, whether called reparations or some other name is wrong and does not make for a European settlement. War was carried on by all, and an attempt such as the Dawes report to force indemnities on the loser, which is not able to pay, does not help toward a solution of the problem."

Stuart Chase, economist, Labor Bureau—"Dawes' report does not take into consideration the economic realities of the situation. It does not put sufficient pressure on France to retract her autocratic position and assist in the stabilization of Europe."

"Capitalist Plan," Says Lore

Ludwig Lore, editor Volkszeitung (Workers party)—"This is simply a capitalist plan to put the whole war burden on the German proletariat. It sets no limit to the amount Germany must pay. It is as impossible of fulfillment as the Versailles treaty."

James P. Warbasse, president, Cooperative League of America— "This seems to be less coercive in its demands upon Germany than former plans. But it is based on a false assumption, that the Germans are alone to blame for the war. No one government, much less any one people is wholly responsible. It would be better for all the countries if indemnities were discarded as a measure of international expediency. The way to peace and stabilization is recognition of joint responsibility for the war."

A Sick Senator.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Senator James Couzens has been removed to John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, "for further observation," his physicians announced today.

LENINGRAD, April 14.—The timber department of the Northwestern "Gostorg" (State Trade) has concluded a considerable deal in wood materials with Spain.

18 COMMUNIST REPRESENTATIVES ELECTED TO FINNISH PARLIAMENT

STOCKHOLM, April 14.—Eighteen Communist representatives were elected to the Finnish Parliament in the elections held on April 1 and 2.

Considering that the Communists were not allowed to take part in the elections except as local groups, and that the Communist Party has been the object of the most vicious concentrated attacks by the bourgeoisie parties and the Social-Democrats, in conjunction with the government, the Communists have made a show that has staggered the capitalist parties.

SHARP NOTE IS SENT TO MACDONALD

New Troubles for the English Money Power

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 14.—Just prior to the start of the conferences between the MacDonald government and the representatives of the Soviet government several of the leading bankers here have sent a joint note to the government setting forth terms they wish the government to have incorporated in the memorandum of agreement that is to be the basis of the Anglo-Russian treaty.

The Russian delegation has already prepared a counterclaim for damages from invasion and counter-revolution financed by previous British governments, which exceeds by several hundred million dollars the total amount of British claims.

The conference which begins today is expected to last well into July and if the opposition indicated by the joint note of the financiers continues it may last much longer as the Russian delegation says it is justified by conditions in Russia in refusing to make any further vital concessions to British capital.

The British shareholders in Russian industries are estimated at about 25,000. More than 12,000 of the stockholders have interests in six industrial companies, amalgamated under Leslie Urquhart's presidency. In addition to such mining and industrial properties a large section of the British capitalists hold bonds in the Russian national debt, which the soviets still show no intention of acknowledging.

On these main questions, as well as the details of the regulation of commercial and industrial activities and trade in the two countries, the conflict is expected to be sharp and prolonged.

Bankers Signing Note.

The memorandum, which is signed, among others, by Sir Charles S. Addis, director of the Bank of England; Frederick C. Goonenough, chairman of Barclays bank; Edward C. Grenfell, member of the firm of Morgan, Grenfell & Co.; Sir Eric Hambro, director of the Royal Exchange Assurance company; Walter Leaf, director of the Westminister bank; Reginald McKenna, former chancellor of the exchequer, and Lord Swaythling, head of the banking firm of Samuel Montague & Co., apparently was designed to influence the labor government against too many concessions to the soviet government.

MOSCOW, Russia, April 14.—Speaking at a conference in Tiflis prior to his return to Moscow, Leon Trotzky, minister of war, said Soviet Russia at present was stronger than ever.

With regard to the Roumanian question, Trotzky declared Russia would maintain a policy of waiting. The door for an amicable settlement of the situation was still partly open. He would not say, however, that there never would be war.

France, said Trotzky, was playing a foul game in supporting Roumania and Poland against Russia and in attempting to cause a break between Russia and Turkey. But, he added, Raymond Poincare, the French premier, would find that he had miscalculated.

Full Recognition.

The British prime minister explained at the beginning of the conference that the meeting was an outcome of the note sent to Foreign Minister Tchitcherin granting Soviet Russia recognition de jure. The conference, he said, was a complement of that act and in no wise altered the fact that the recogniton which had been granted was unqualified.

The liquidation of the past relationship of the two countries, the premier stated, had to be considered, as well as the peaceful relations of the future.

M. Rakovsky, replying, laid stress upon the theme of the future peace of Europe and the necessity for disarmament. He assured the British that Russia desired close financial and commercial relations with this country. All the outstanding questions, including the debt question, he said, must be settled and the old treaties revised.

MC ADOO CONVENTION PROSPECTS OOZING; DARK HORSE BEST BET

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The basis is being laid for a row at the Democratic national convention next June out of which may come the "break" that will decide the party nominee for the presidency.

Plans are in preparation for contesting some of the so-called McAdoo and Underwood delegations and throwing them to eventual dark horses when the moment comes.

It is hard to tell what candidate is to be the beneficiary. In any event there are clear indications that McAdoo and Underwood both may find themselves minus certain state delegations they were counting on, if the plans of their opponents materialize.

There is already a dispute, for instance, as to who controls the Iowa Democratic delegation. Both McAdoo and Underwood claim a majority.

The longer the Democratic preconvention campaign goes, the more apparent it becomes that nobody is going into the convention with two thirds of the delegates, or anything like that, under his control.

METHODIST LADS RAISING MERRY HELL IN DALLAS

40 Indictments Asked By Prosecutor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DALLAS, Texas, April 14.—All the evangelistic morality of Texas may not have prevented some 40 students of Southern Methodist College from taking a whirl at women and wine.

David Coffman, the United States District Attorney, has told a sad tale to the federal grand jury and asked for the indictment, under the prohibition law, of youths for "dining and dancing with women of the street."

Quart Admission Fee.

"Each guest was charged a quart of liquor as his fee of admission," exclaimed Coffman of a "wild party" at which the drinking and dancing was alleged to have been done.

"Students and women became scandalously intoxicated," continued the prosecutor, and innocent co-eds who attended scampered to their dormitories in fright and disgust."

Didn't Mind Lynching.

University authorities, who have politely restrained their emotions when the good people of Dallas and its vicinity lynched Negroes are whooping it up against the naughty students. They declare that the "wild party" was in celebration of "The Dinkey," an outlawed fraternity magazine that they charge with too free a treatment of sex.

Dr. Horace M. Whaling of the Executive Committee of the faculty, announced students who staged the party and published "The Dinkey" would be expelled.

Evidence which Coffman planned to place before the grand jury included charges that the student promoters of the party picked up auto loads of women from downtown rooming houses and hotels and brought them to the lake. Co-eds declared they were insulted by drunken students, beaten and forced to walk home unescorted.

Leaders in the party were said to be prominent athletes and fraternity men.

Klan Killed Mayor Who Quit Konklave Is Murder Theory

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., April 14.—Arthur Sission, former Mayor of Maysville, Mo., died today from bullet wounds alleged to have been inflicted March 29, by Newman Estes, during an argument over an election campaign in which the Ku Klux Klan was the most prominent issue. Sission was elected with the support of the Klan and was then accused of turning against the organization.

Employer Sings His Song.

ELBERFELD, Germany. — "The trade unions must be destroyed," was the refrain reiterated again and again in an address by Dr. Klentner, general manager of the Employers' Federation of the Rhineland.

MANY OFFERS OF AID GIVEN THE STRIKERS

Big Fund Is Provided by International

Offers of help to the striking garment workers have come from many of the large unions in the city, including the electrical workers, some of the building trades unions, the Chicago Federation of Labor, and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, it became known at yesterday's strike meeting.

The electrical workers have offered Meyer Perlstein, in charge of the strike, to tax every member one dollar apiece for the benefit of the garment strike fund.

When Perlstein returned from New York he was given the promise by representatives of the Chicago Federation that a call would be sent to every union member connected with the Federation to help the strikers financially.

Supported to Victory.

"The Executive Board at its meeting in New York appropriated $150,000 and sends word that the strike will be backed by the International until it is victoriously concluded," Meyer Perlstein announced to the strikers.

"So far, we have not used one-third that amount during the six weeks of the strike and we now have enough money to last us thru the six weeks of slack season. But the Joint Board decided that if more is needed, it will be given and that the International treasury will be at the disposal of the strikers when necessary. Besides that, many other unions have offered us financial aid."

"We feel sure that when the injunction cases are taken to a higher court they will be reversed. Sullivan's decisions are so clearly unfair, that we feel sure the higher courts will decide in our favor. We are going to take the cases to the supreme court of the United States if necessary, and hire the most able lawyers in the country."

Garment Bosses Hard Hit.

"The garment bosses are losing more money than the union is. On account of the strike they have had a very bad season and are not in shape to fill the orders that will be coming in before the beginning of the approaching season. The garment trade in New York is one hundred per cent organized, and yet the strikes there have been won on or after the eighth week. We have only been striking six weeks, and as far as the union is concerned, the strike has just begun."

One of the strikers asked Perlstein why they had not heard about the parade of the strikers which the union announced some time ago. Perlstein declared that he had not yet heard from the Mayor with regards to a permit for the parade.

REPUBLICAN SENATORS CAUCUS ABOUT JAPS, BONUS AND FINANCE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—A closed conference of senate republicans was called today in an effort to find a way out of the legislative maze enveloping the upper house.

Immigration, bonus and taxes are the chief measures under consideration and the republican leaders want to decide:

1. Whether they should attempt amendment in the pending immigration bill in open defiance of the of the suggestion of the state department.

2. Whether the bonus bill should be given the right of way over taxes in defiance of the suggestion of President Coolidge.

3. Whether compromise should be sought on the tax bill in defiance of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon's repeated championing of the Mellon plan.

The finance committee also met to decide whether to call up bonus or taxes first.

This is the first "caucus" of republicans called since the opening of this session of congress.

TRADES COUNCIL OF MILES CITY IS FOR JUNE 17

Klan Candidates Have Tough Luck.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MILES CITY, Mont., April 14.—At least two Miles City organizations will send delegates to the history-making June 17 convention and others will probably elect delegates before the time limit expires.

The local Machinists Union has made a donation to the cause. The latest organizations to affiliate with the Montana Farmer-Labor party are the Trades and Labor Council, the farmer-labor party of Custer county and the railroad Blacksmiths Union.

Atorney general Nankin, who was in Miles City recently hob-nobbing with members of the Ku Klux Klan, is a candidate for United States senator on the Teapot ticket. His nominating petition was tacked up in a local tireshop known as a Ko Koo hangout but only 12 signature were secured in four days and all of them were klansmen.

Candidates for municipal offices in Roundup, running on a klan ticket were snowed under by the anti-klan forces. Candidates endorsed by labor were elected with the exeption of one alderman. A majority of the new city council are union men. The klan candidate for mayor ran third.

Nine Miners Injured Thru Negligence Of Illinois Mine Co.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DOWELL, Ill., April 14.—Nine men were injured at Kathleen mine when the brakes of a cage failed to work. All were taken to the hospital. Thirteen men were in the cage at the time of the accident.

The DAILY WORKER correspondent's investigation shows that the company had neglected to inspect and repair the defective brakes.

BUFFALO LIBRARIANS UP IN THE AIR ABOUT THE DAILY WORKER

To the DAILY WORKER:—An interesting, tho very common comedy, is now being played at the Buffalo public library in connection with the DAILY WORKER.

As soon as the DAILY WORKER started to circulate the local Jewish branch of the Young Workers League subscribed to it as a present to the public library. As we knew beforehand that the paper would not be put up in the reading room, we decided to keep going to the newspaper room and demanding the paper.

Within a reasonable time after the subscription was made I went to the library and asked for the paper. It was not displayed in the reading room. The old lady in charge said the DAILY WORKER could not be displayed there because it was a labor paper. When our comrades ask for the paper it is denied to them by means of some lie or other.

The poor old lady in the newspaper room felt very awkward when she had to lie, but of course, it was not her fault. She had to carry out the order of Mr. Brown, the librarian, who in turn had to take care of his duty to the class which at present controls all the institutions.

Whether or not we shall succeed, we shall keep up the fight to have the DAILY WORKER up in the newspaper room.

GERMANY'S RULERS O. K. DAWES PACT

But Want to Know the Total Sum

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, April 14.—The German government today formally accepted in principle the reports of the experts' commissions on reparations. Announcement came after a meeting of the state premiers and the cabinet.

The foreing office gave out a brief statement saying:

"The German government accepts the experts' report in principle."

Premiers Go Into Session.

Settlement of the tangled reparations problem came a step nearer today as the German state premiers went into session here to discuss acceptance of the Dawes report.

At the same time German and Allied industrialists were in session at Dusseldorf to discuss a trade agreement.

It was assumed that the cabinet, after the premiers have formally confirmed the decision to accept in principle the report of the experts, will make known formally a similar decision.

Germany, however, will insist that her delegates at Paris make clear the German desire for final fixation of a definite total amount which the Reich must pay, as well as the necessity for regulations of Franco-Belgian military occupation of the Ruhr.

Big Stocks Reach New Low Levels In Uneasy Market

NEW YORK, April 14.—Professional operators took every advantage today of the discouragement to speculative sentiment resulting from further bad breaks in the stock prices at last week's close. With outside participation thoroly intimidated by Saturday's decline in the leading industrials, the bear crowd went ahead with their efforts to depress the general list and succeeded in forcing new lows for the year in Baldwin, American Can, Bethlehem and other speculative favorites.

Capitalist Solon On Booze Graft Charge: Howls About Future

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Trial of Representative Langley of Kentucky, Republican, indicted for conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws, today was set for April 28. Early hearing of Langley's case was granted by the court on the plea of the congressman's attorney that his "political future, honor and liberty are at stake."

Langley will appear at Covington tomorrow to answer an indictment brought against him there.

"Let the Graft Rest" Is New Slogan Of G. O. P. Statesmen

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Senate Republicans today rallied to the support of President Coolidge in his stand against alleged illegal investigating methods in the Senate.

A new attack on the Democratic position was opened by Senator Edge, New Jersey, who defended the President's message and denounced the Democratic "mania" for investigations as an "indefensible" effort to break down the morale of government departments.

CLARA ZETKIN FACES CHARGE OF HIGH TREASON IN GERMAN REICH

(By The Federated Press.)

BERLIN, Germany, April 14.—A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Clara Zetkin, veteran Communist leader, the minute she crosses the German border. She has been in Moscow for the past half year or more and the authorities seem to fear that she may return to take part in the election campaign. The charge against her is that of high treason.

OPEN SHOP FIGHT ON IN HISTORIC KANAWHA FIELD

6,000 Miners Strike In West Virginia

By TOM TIPPETT

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 14.—The Kanawha Coal Operators' Association, operating in the Charleston field of West Virginia, has broken up contract negotiations with District 17, United Mine Workers of America, and all hope for a settlemnt in this territory has gone glimmering.

The operators are demanding a reduction to the 1917 wage level, with the miners insisting on the continuation of last year's contract as per the Jacksonville (Fla.) agreement. The difference in the two rates of pay amount to about $1.50 per day in the wages of the mine workers.

This new strike involves 6,000 men. The operators, for the present, announce they will make no attempt to open their mines, claiming there is no market for their coal at any price. The mines affected have worked very little for the past seven months. The 1917 scale is being paid in the nonunion mines here and in nearby competing mines, with lower rates in some cases.

The other two operators' associations that make up District 17 have signed a three-year contract with the miners that renews the expiring agreement as to wages in accordance with the Jacksonville pact. Altogether there are now approximately 28,000 union miners in this district.

With all of District 29 gone open shop, District 17 is the only United Mine Workers of America organization in the state at present. The north West Virginia operators' association employs 17,000 union miners. A similar contract is in force with the Monongahela group for over 4,000 men.

The only union shop operators that refuse to sign are in the Kanawha association in the Charleston field. The miners' district office is in Charleston and has done business with this operators' group for years.

New Workers Party Branch To Give Bunco On April 17

On Thursday evening, April 17th, 8 P. M., the Irving Park English Branch of the Workers Party will give a bunco party at 4021 North Drake avenue.

This is the first affair arranged by the new Irving Park Branch, and the comrades earnestly hope that all our friends and sympathizers will attend.

The proceeds of the affair will be used for the purpose of furthering the work of our movement in this part of the city.

An admission charge of fifty cents covers everything, including refreshments.

Want Government Ships.

WASHINGTON.—Chairman O'Connor of the shipping board, grilled for many hours by Represntative Davis of Tennessee and other members of the special house committee probing the board's ruinous record, admits that the only hope of establishing an American merchant marine lies in direct government operation of government ships.

KLAN TRIES TO SHIFT BLAME FOR LILLY SHOOTING; 40 ARRESTS MADE

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., April 14.—The arrests growing out of the fatal disorders last Saturday at Lilly when members of the Ku Klux Klan shot down and killed several men, were increased to 40 today. The Klan is trying to shift the blame of the rioting onto the citizens of Lilly and 13 residents of the mining town have been incarcerated in the Cambria County jail.

OFFERS OF AID GIVEN STRIKERS

Fourteen more strikers were arrested yesterday and hailed before Judge Sullivan, who seems to enjoy the work of sentencing working girls to jail so much that he has not yet started on his long heralded vacation. The twelve arrested, who come up for trial on April 23, are Nettie Katz, Sarah Orelove, Sarah Shapiro, Ida Borkan, Fanny Batt, Mary Amato, Martha Vantur, Dora Rubin, Leah Kotofsky, Rebecca Shawl, Annie Cohn and Josephine Leone. Two more picketers arrested yesterday, Rose Samuels and Carry Peck, come before Judge Foell today.

Judge Foell is due for a busy day today. Close to forty picketers are to be tried in his court. It is predicted that the session will be a lively one as the illegality of the injunction will probably be gone into by the lawyers for the union.

Anything to Suit Bosses.

Circumstantial evidence that the employers of the garment strikers are directing the arrests for picketing, has piled up as the strike continues. It is now apparent that the police and sheriffs are making the arrests to suit the best convenience of the bosses. And the bosses are trying—unsuccessfully—to stop the picketing by having severe sentences imposed.

A good example of the fact that the courts are being used as strikebreaking institutions, that the employers have the courts under their thumb and give orders to the minions of the law, was unearthed by the DAILY WORKER. Several weeks ago the police court of Judge Samuel Trude, in the South Clark Street Station, was filled to overflowing with strikers arrested for picketing. But Judge Trude discharged many of the strikers on the ground that the charges against them were unfair. He threw many absurd and apparently framed-up charges out of court and discharged many strikers.

Injunction to the Rescue.

Suddenly the arrests were all based on the injunction. No more charges of "disorderly conduct" or "resisting an officer" came before Judge Trude. The bosses seemed to realize that they had more willing, docile servants in other quarters who would protect the interests of property against the rights of the workers. Now there are no arrests except those coming before Judge Sullivan and Judge Foell.

The bosses know that they can rely on Judge Sullivan to plaster on heavy sentences. The police court "disorderly conduct" has mysteriously vanished and all cases come before more servile lackeys.

Gompers Does Nothing.

The publicity given by officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union of their announced effort to secure the aid of Samuel Gompers for the garment strikers, has mysteriously wilted. Gompers was in Chicago for a week and in that time nothing was made public as to what he will do for the strikers. Meyer Perlstein stated to the DAILY WORKER yesterday that he has not asked Gompers to make any gesture in support of the strike.

When interviewed by the DAILY WORKER, Gompers refused to state his attitude on the strike or what he planned to do in aid of the strikers. Rumors have been flying around that Gompers was to address a mass meeting for the strikers. It was printed that officials of the Garment Union were trying to induce Gompers to come to Chicago to exert his influence for the strikers. It was pointed out that the fact of Gompers' very presence in Chicago, and his bare statement in support of the strike would result in widespread publicity in favor of the strikers.

Gompers Like Mummy.

But Gompers was in Chicago over a week and as far as can be learned, he did nothing in support of the garment strikers. Members of the Committee of Fifteen did not know whether Gompers would speak while in town. No publicity for the strikers has resulted from his visit. He has made no public statement to the press indorsing the strike. It is declared he was conferring at the Hotel Morrison on other matters which he deems more important than a mere garment strike.

Meyer Perlstein told the DAILY WORKER that so far as he knew, Gompers had done nothing in any way to aid the strikers and had not been asked to. It seems only fair to the strikers who have just determined to carry on thru the slack season if necessary, that Gompers should be made by the Garment Workers' Union to show his hand and take some definite step in favor of the garment strikers.

Up In Court Tuesday.

Those arrested Friday, and held for hearing in Judge Foel's court Tuesday were: Dora Kravitz, Minnie Rubinstein, Fannie Schwartz, Fanny Brunstein, Mollie Gruber, Sol Sabath, Yetty Goldman, Becky Loomer, Ester Karl, Mary Pall, Myra Nickels, Minnie Garshin, Libby Jason and Agnes Malott.

Many of the strikers are unable to understand why Meyer Perlstein and the union officials allow the relatives of union men to continue to act as scabs, altho they have been known for weeks. One union man who is close to the union officials and also the "Committee of 15" told the DAILY WORKER, "It's a shame Perlstein doesn't get busy and expose the union men who are allowing their relatives to scab."

This unionists' verdict is, "It would be better for Perlstein to spend a little money on getting these scabs out of the shop. It is my understanding that the 'Committee of 15' has told Perlstein that the Federation of Labor will help expose the names of the offending union men, and force the scabs out of the shops. But for some reason Perlstein is not acting in the matter. He has refused the offer of co-operation from the 'Committee of 15' and is spending all his money on expensive lawyers. It is my firm belief that if Perlstein would get these scabs out of the shop it would have a big effect on the winning of the strike. A large proportion of the scabs are closely related to union men."

MRS. ROOSEVELT SAYS LIES ABOUT RUSSIA JUST SO MUCH RUBBISH

LENINGRAD, April 14.—Conditions in Soviet Russia greatly surprised her, Mrs. Roosevelt told press correspondents at Leningrad (Petrograd) when she passed with her son, Mr. Kermit Roosevelt, and also Mr. W. H. Donald, Peking correspondent of the Manchester Guardian, who travelled with the Roosevelt party across Siberia.

"Year after year we have been reading about decay and vandalism in Russia, but now I see that all this stuff about Russia is rubbish." Mrs. Roosevelt remarked that she was greatly delighted with the cultural life she saw, the museums, etc.

Mr. Donald was indignant at the misinformation and lies disseminated about the Soviet Republics by many foreign press agents and stated that what he saw with his own eyes proved that the Soviets had beaten all records by the rapidity of their achievement.

Danish Socialists Now Have Turn On Political Fightrope

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The election to the Danish parliament April 11 resulted in a victory for the Socialist party and the Radical Left party, according to the Danish legation here. The Socialist party elected 55 representatives, gaining seven seats, and the Radical Left elected 20, gaining two seats. As the two parties together elected 75 representatives and the parliament has 149 members, the Socialists and the Radicals have a majority of one.

The Left party, which was the government party, elected only 44 members, compared to 52 in the election of 1920. The Conservative party gained one seat and now has 28. The German Slesvig party made no gain but re-elected their former representative.

KOWARDLY KLAN SENDS THREAT TO CHICAGO RADICAL

Aim Cheap "Tar" Note To Comrade Spence

The Kowardly Ku Klux Klan has just sent another anonymous letter to one of our Scotch comrades, threatening to tar and feather him if he does not cease his fight for the emancipation of the workers.

The Klan pretends to hate the Jews, the Catholics and the Negroes, but this letter, trying to stop the mouth of a class conscious worker, is to a Scotchman, who has never been in Russia, who was born in Peterhead, Aberdeenshire, Scotland. The letter is written to W. Spence, who has lived for many years in Canada, now in Chicago. He served for over five years in the Canadian army in France and has a heroic war record. But he took the phrase, "Make the world safe for democracy," seriously, and since his return to America has been active in organizing the workers to fight for better conditons.

Calls Scotchman a Jew.

In the face of his Anglo-Saxon birth, and his long war service, those property loving, working class haters—the Klan—had to call the man with a broad Scotch brogue an "ungrateful little Hebrew," and cook up a ridiculous story about his migration from Russia in the steerage, and the change of his name from Spenski to Spence. Comrade Spence says he will go on organizing the workers, that the cheap lies and tricks of the tools of big business—the Klan—will not scare him in the least.

Does "Konklave 142" of the Klan admit sending this letter, which is full of direct lies and laughable attempts at logic? To cite only one example, the Klan letter says: "Our organization is founded on Christian principles." Then it goes on to deride the race from which Jesus sprang, and threatens violence in the name of a religion which has a golden rule, and says, "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

The letter shows that the Klan is organized for no other purpose than to fight the organized workers, whether they be Scotch, as in this case, or Catholic or Negro. There is only one charge in the letter which is not childishly apparent as a lie, and that is activity in favor of the working class. The Ku Klux Klan, which, by the way, aided the Feedration of Labor officials to nominate Len Small, is anti-labor and pro-capitalist.

Here is the letter:

Take Warning.

Chicago, Illinois.

April 11, 1924.
Konklave 142.
Knights of the K. K. K. of Illinois.
W. Spence:

You have been under investigation by Klansmen members of a local Klavern who have reported to us that you have consistently villified and minimized the aims and purposes of Klan Kraft. You have, also, to our knowledge, allied yourself with an organization which has as its object the undermining of American ideals and institutions, our glorious heritage from our forefathers who fought and bled, that men might be free to enjoy liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Even the Christian Church and its Ambassadors have not escaped your slanderous tongue.

This is a crime we cannot condone as our organization is founded on Christian principles and an undying faith in the wisdom of the great architect of the Universe. When you left your native Russia with hundreds of your Jewish compatriots in the steerage of an American bound vessel, you decided for reasons best known to yourself to adopt an Anglo-Saxon name, thinking perhaps, that by so doing you would be better able to cloak your nefarious operations, but you reckoned without the Klan, which has ten million ears and as many eyes. You deluded no one but yourself, when you left your real name, of Spenski or Spencovitch at the port of embarkation. You thot perhaps, that you would be able under your assumed name to spread your accursed propaganda with a minimum of risk, but your jig is up, you ungrateful little Hebrew. In justice to America, which offers you countless opportunities to succeed in a legitimate way, and to the Most High, who has guided your footsteps to this promised land, you should get down on your knees and offer prayer and thankfulness for the many blessings and bounties which you are privileged to enjoy in this wonderful land. We hope and trust that the perusal of this missive will forever put an end to your slanderous invectives and false doctrines. Should this fail, we should like to acquaint you with the fact that large numbers of chickens are still being raised in Chicago, and we know a contractor who has an unlimited amount of tar for sale."

The letter is unsigned.

WHISKEY AND WALL STREET FEAR INTERNAL REVENUE BUREAU PROBE; COOLIDGE HAS BRAND OF FASCISM

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Whisky and Wall Street interests are equally appalled at the proposal that Francis J. Heney, nemesis of grafters and hundred-million-dollar crooks, shall direct the senate committee investigation of the internal revenue bureau, one of Secretary Mellon's units.

"Gifford Pinchot recommended the employment of Francis J. Heney, and you all know what that means," cried Jim Watson of Indiana, in indignant protest on the floor of the senate. Pinchot admits it.

"Let us into your confidence; tell us what it does mean!" urged Robinson of Arkansas, smiling wickedly at the fear written across the Hoosier's purple countenance.

"It means a sweeping investigation, a destructive investigation, into the enforcement of the prohibition law," answered Watson. "And those you know who voted for prohibition knew, and you know today, that it would take years to get a genuine enforcement. Yet the names of Heney and of Pinchot mean that all the muck that can be raked from this whole field will be raked up, and it will keep going until election day."

Watson Meat Packers.

It is true that Pinchot has been anxious to get the facts as to nonenforcement by the prohibition unit of the treasury, under Secretary Mellon, brought to light. What has happened to many thousands of cases of Mellon Overholt whisky is the subject of whispered rumor and confidential report that is not adding to Mellon's reputation as a pillar of public order.

Heney showed up Jim Watson some years ago as a secret spokesman for the Chicago meat packers. Mellon, partner in the Overholt distillery, has final charge of the entire enforcement machinery—which has been rotten to the core. Heney is the one investigator in America whose qualities and experience warrant the prediction that he will show the country why enforcement has been a farce.

But even more serious is his intention to disclose the reasons for the nation-wide propaganda conspiracy in favor of the Mellon tax bill. Mellon has failed to disclose his own financial operations as requested by Senator Couzen's committee. President Coolidge, at Mellon's command, has sent an insolent letter to the senate, reversing the position he took when Daugherty appealed to him for protection against the light. Back of Mellon and Coolidge are the banks, which do not want any rummaging among the records in the treasury by a man of Heney's courage and keenness. They have sent down to Washington that hint that a panic in the stock market might result from the announcement that the treasury was to be really investigated in the way the naval oil leases and the Daugherty crookedness was probed.

Coolidge's Modified Fascism.

A sort of modified fascism, armed with courts prepared for just such a political emergency, is what Coolidge has disclosed in this claim that the administration shall not be further brought to account by congress and the people. In Montana a Coolidge-picked judge and a hostile district attorney refuse to deliver to Senator Borah's committee the evidence upon which Senator Wheeler has been indicted.

In Ohio, a county judge who was formerly Harry Daugherty's law partner, has enjoined Wheeler and Brookhart from examining the books of Daugherty's brother's bank, in which the mysteriously acquired Wright-Martin Aircraft stock and other new wealth of the late attorney general was laid away.

And in Washington the president himself stands between Mellon and the senate, defying the authority of these elected ambassadors of the sovereign states. The speech of Jim Watson, in which he declared that never with his consent would any investigation of the prohibition unit be carried out, served notice on the country that the rule of law was out of date.

Calls Defiance "Ugly."

How ugly is the defiance by Coolidge and his political crowd of ordinary standards of decency in public service was illustrated by the vote of 30 to 45, by which the progressives and democrats managed to keep in the appropriation bill for the tariff commission the clause adopted by the house, which forbids any member of that commission from helping to decide a tariff rate on any commodity in which—as instanced by Commissioner Glassie in the sugar rate case—he or any of his family have an investment interest. The old guard, 30 of them, voted that Glassie should continue to fix the tariff on sugar, to his own family's enrichment.

Mussolini could have done it no more brazenly. The whole press gallery laughed mockingly at this "party loyalty" vote.

House Committee In Another Big Wallop At Immigration Quota

WASHINGTON, April 14.—A majority of the republican conference today voted in favor of a one per cent of the 1910 census quota for the new immigration law.

This would cut the quota limitations of the Reed bill in half and completely alter the house bill, which provided for two per cent of the 1890 census.

JAPAN AND U.S. ARE REACHING FOR HIP POCKETS

Not For Flask But For Gun

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—By enacting total exclusion of Japanese from this country and its territories, the United States would strike at Japan's ambition to possess the Hawaiian Islands, Chairman Johnson of the House immigration committee declared in a statement here today.

Johnson said that the gentlemen's agreement with Japan "humiliates this nation."

"Because the immigration bill passed by the House applies to Hawaii and every part and parcel of the United States," Johnson said, "it hurts not the pride, but the ambition of Japan."

Ambassador Hanihara, Johnson said, pointed out in his letter that Hawaii is not covered by the "gentlemen's agreement."

"Passage of the anti-Japanese measure by the American House of Representatives is a most regrettable act in view of the traditional friendship of the Pacific nations," Baron Sakatani said.

"To the United States the question involves a handful of Japanese immigrants, while to Japan it is a matter of honor and international prestige.

"We wonder why America is so firmly bent on injuring the feelings of this people who have done nothing to wound American susceptibilities?"

Wheeler Charges Daugherty Helped In Montana Frame-up

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Information reaching Senator Wheeler today from Montana convinced him that former Attorney-General Daugherty played a part in securing his indictment at Great Falls, Mont.

A confidential report to Wheeler stated that John S. Pratt, a special assistant attorney general, appeared before the grand jury at Great Falls and urged Wheeler's indictment after the first ballot failed to result in an indictment. Several ballots were required to secure the 12 votes necessary to indict, according to the report.

Wheeler is understood to have verified the report that Pratt was recently in Montana. He indicated that he would ask Chairman Borah of the committee investigating his indictment to call Pratt as a witness to ascertain on whose orders he was sent there.

SOLDIER'S BONUS BILL SEEMS SURE TO PASS SENATE

What Will Coolidge Do? Is Vets' Question

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The bonus bill, providing a twenty-year endowment insurance policy for veterans, was ordered favorably reported by the senate finance committee today so it can be rushed thru ahead of the tax bill.

The bill is practically in the same form as passed by the house.

Rushing the Bill.

The bonus bill was rushed out with amazing speed after only a brief discussion in committee.

Its chief provisions are:

Cash payments to veterans who under the bill would receive less than $50.

A twenty-year endowment life insurance policy for other veterans.

Payment made on the basis of compensation of $1 a day for home service up to $500 and $1.25 a day for overseas service up to $625.

A restriction that the first sixty days of service cannot apply on either the cash or endowment plan.

All enlisted men, women and officers up to the rank of captain in the army and marine corps and up to lieutenants in the navy, are eligible.

Loans on Insurance.

An allowance for making loans in the insurance policies after two years up to ninety per cent of the cash value of the policies.

The bill will be formally reported to the senate as soon as possible and it is expected to be passed without material change and with little discussion.

MORMON SENATOR SAYS G. O. P. WILL ACT ON BONUS

Wall Street Is Howling For Action

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Shouldering full responsibility, Republican members of the Senate finance committee today decided to give the bonus bill the right of way over the tax bill in the Senate.

Chairman Smoot anounced the bonus would be taken up Wednesday or Thursday and that the tax bill will not be considered until after the bonus is disposed of.

This will delay consideration of the tax bill for at least ten days.

In order to get action on the bonus first, the Republican members of the committee were forced to take all responsibility upon their own shoulders. The Republican conference failed to decide the question earlier in the day and most of the Democratic members of the committee refused to vote.

HOLDING MERGER CONVENTION OF 2 SHOE UNIONS

Result of Negotiations Covering Year

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., April 14.— The convention of the Shoe Workers Protective Union and the United Shoe Workers Union to frame a constitution satisfactory to both organizations, has opened here.

After negotiations covering almost a year, both organizations were ready to go into convention, the United Shoe Worker' referendum being overwhelmingly in favor of entering a convention to frame a constitution. Seventy-seven delegates gathered in the Building of the Shoe Protective Union, about thirty from the United, and the remainder from the Protective.

Amalgamation Nearing.

No delegates were present from any other shoe organization; the hope of some that at this convention there would be delegates from many other independent shoe unions proving unwarranted.

If both organizations agree on a constitution, it will mean the union, according to Secretary Treasurer Ryan of the Protective of 20,000 members in the Protective, and 6,500 in the United, making a total of 26,000.

Already the Protective is the largest in membership of the independent shoe unions, and with the increase, comes closer to the Boot and Shoe Workers' figure, from 35,000 to 40,000.

The first day, outside of welcoming speeches, was given over to the election of committees on rules and constitution. Walter Rice of the S. W. P. U., of Marblehead, was elected permanent chairman; and John Haley Salem, Mass., United Shoe Workers, vice-president. On the Constitutional Committee are Frank Buxton, Frank Ryan and George Culbert of Haverhill; John Oldham, Rochester, N. Y.; P. Turner and H. Pulmeyer of St. Louis, Mo.; Joseph P. O'Rourke of East Boston; Michael Meaghan, Salem, Mass. Speeches were made by Austin E. Gill, General Agent, and William J. Ryan, Sec.-Treas., of the S. W.-P. U.; and Thomas Lynch, Sec.-Treas., and John Oldham, Organizer, of the United. All expressed satisfaction over the step to be taken, and stated that this merger meant the hope of organizing the unorganized shoeworkers of the country. In a special interview granted to the representative of the DAILY WORKER, Ryan hailed the convention as the first step in amalgamating all the shoeworkers. He gave no further details, but the method of amalgamating the organizations will be the same as in this convention. He said that the present merger would not bring about any astonishing changes, because the industry was entering a dull period.

Few Months Needed.

The next few months would be spent getting the new organization to function. The successful completion of the merger would put heart into shoe centers that have suffered from the manufacturers' offensive- Rochester in particular. The most important change brought about at this convention would be the establishment of the organization on a national basis. (At present, the Shoe Workers' Protective Union is an organization administered by the Shoe Council, composed of delegates from the Haverhill locals, and other locals in the state of Massachusetts). Otherwise according to Ryan, the convention would mark no new departure in policy. The drawn up constitution will go out to the rank and file on a referendum and be ratified before going into effect.

There is much questioning about the planned Amalgamation Convention before May 1st, which was to convene on the call of independent shoe unions, according to the resolution unanimously adopted at the March 23rd rank and file conference in Lynn, a detailed account of which is given in the first issue (April) of the Progressive Shoe and Leather Worker.

The Haverhill rank and file delegates voted unanimously for the amalgamation convention, with the exception of Local 9, which withdrew its delegates before the March 9th meeting. The general officials at the present convention in Haverhill, the "constitutional convention" as it is called by a Haverhill newspaper, will undoubtedly oppose any attempt to have their organization participate in the planned May Convention.

The passing of the resolution is only the first step in a fight to bring about the amalgamation convention, with all independent shoe unions represented. The militants in all the shoe centers are pinning their hopes on the Progressive Shoe and Leather Worker as the unifying force in the amalgamation movement in the shoe and leather industry.

BURNS DUE TO FOLLOW DAUGHERTY; INDICTMENT OF OIL PROBE LEADER WHEELER BACKFIRES ON DETECTIVE

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of the Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—President Coolidge has hastily called upon Attorney General Stone to free him from the redhot poker he picked up when the administration's frameup indictment of Senator Wheeler created a storm of indignation from one end of the country to the other. But he moved too slowly, as usual. Wheeler summoned a telephone manager and Detective Burns to the stand, before his investigating committee, and proved:

Burns' Agents After Wheeler

1. That Burns has had three men in Montana, trying to get Wheeler, and that they testified before the grand jury.

2. That the Republican national committee has had one Blair Coan looking up "evidence" against Wheeler in Great Falls, and George B. Lockwood, secretary of the national committee, talked with Coan over the long distance telephone from party headquarters here on the day the news of the indictment was published.

3. That Burns knew of the "evidence to be used against Wheeler several weeks ago, and discussed it with Harry Daugherty, his lifelong crony, in Daugherty's apartment.

Burns' See His Friend

Burns was livid with suppressed ill-temper when Wheeler, leaning across the commitee table and challenging him to tell the facts, forced from the detective the disclosure that this was, as Wheeler had charged, just another Burns game, deliberately played after the administration had failed to stop the investigation of Daugherty's rotten handling of the department of justice. He seemed to sense his own downfall as the chief of the government secret service; he knew that the white house was trying to find a goat for the whole plot, and that Attorney General Stone had little stomach for new scandals.

But there were bigger aspects to the matter than the prospective finish of Burns' career as a public official. The senate had approved the selection of its own committee—consisting of Borah, McLean, Sterling, Swanson and Caraway—to report on the Great Falls indictment, and proposed to go ahead regardless of Coolidge's instruction to Stone to have the indictment quashed if he thought it unwarranted.

Burns In Shopmen's Strike

While scores of witnesses and dozens of lines of testimony wait their turn before Wheeler's committee investigating the department of justice, the confession of Burns as to his part in the Great Falls frameup has logically raised the question as to Burns' own misuse of power in that department. The country may soon learn why 1100 of the striking railroad shopmen were jailed, and why Daugherty and Burns found so much pleasure in prosecuting these cases from behind the protection of a gasbank of poisoned press interviews concerning "revolutionary radicals," "dangerous bolsheviks," and "dynamiters."

Burns and Heney

It is one of the ironies of fate that just at the moment when Burns has been caught red-handed, Francis J Heney comes triumphantly back to Washington, at the request of a majority of Senator Couzens' committee, to direct the investigation into the treasury department scandals. Heney gave Burns his first job as an investigator in the Oregon land fraud cases, some 18 years ago. He gave him a further chance in the San Francisco graft trials. Then Burns helped to frame Tom Mooney for the open shoppers in San Francisco, and Heney and Burns have not cooperated since. Heney is about to shake the Mellon organization and show up vast frauds in the handling of income tax returns. Mellon will probably be driven from public life.

Defense Council's Robots Have Long Trek to Pullman

Pullman is in store for a theatrical treat—a real proletarian drama, full of significance for both the workers and their explotiers.

R. U. R. will be played in Pullman on Saturday evening, April 19th, the day before its opening in Chicago. All arrangements have been made for a fully equipped production, which will be the same in every detail as the one in Chicago. Large numbers of tickets have already been sold.

For the Pullman performance, the entire R. U. R. Company (including the only genuine Workers Party Robots in existence) will be transported in a private, springless, but commodious truck, along with the scenery and props. This is a good advertising stunt, and it saves carfare.

Several Workers Party members connected with the building trades group, have lent their assistence in the building of scenery. An electrician and one or two stage hands are still needed. Volunteers will be welcomed.

DISARMAMENT TALK BECOMING COMMON IN SENATE CHAMBER

WASHINGTON, April 14.—A resolution authorizing President Coolidge to appoint a commission of five to join the league of nations commision in drawing up a land, naval and air disarmament arrangement was introduced in the senate today by senator King, Utah, democrat.

The resolution is the democratic substitute for the Pepper resolution authorizing the president to call a new disarmament conference.

Fifteen Cents Is Admission Price To Good Concert

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

In the Sunday rush of concerts and recitals one is apt to overlook many minor concerts that go on. The least expensive, but not the least interesting of these is the series of orchestra concerts given at the Art Institute by an ensemble of eight Symphony musicians directed by George Dasch.

Their program on April 13th, opened with the Weber overture to "Der Freischuetz". The composition calls for full orchestra, but, by apt substitution of a trumpet for a French horn, and vigorous use of a piano, in the loud passages, they were able to get over the romantic music in good style.

Followed a trio for two violins and viola, by Dvorak, played by the director and the violinists of the ensemble. These men constitute three-fourths of the well known Philharmonic quartet. The trio they played was good Sunday afternoon stuff, dreamy and quiet, good music on which to digest a big dinner.

The second "Spring" suite of Lee Delibes followed. Delibes wrote incomparable ballet music with a light and melodious touch. George Dasch is most fond of it, and plays it as tho he was.

The Mendelssohn "Spring Song" and Poldini's "Dolly Dances" are too well known to require comment. The concert closed with a march by Franz von Blon, who writes cheap music refined as far as possible.

These concerts occur regularly on Sunday afternoons, and cost the exorbitant sum of fifteen cents.

Chamber Commerce Man Supported By Fake Labor Paper

To The DAILY WORKER:—A paper published in Pittsburgh, styled the Labor Free Press, is without doubt the champion political juggler extant. Its columns crammed with political ads denotes the caliber of its devotion to labor. It juggles the truth. For instance, on the front page in the right hand column, it condemns a candidate because he voted against the Full Crew Bill and the Old Age Pension Bill, whilst on the same page in the right hand column, it goes out of its way to publish a lot of bunk about James T. Heffran, who is a candidate for re-election to the legislature, hoping, by covering up the truth about Heffran that he will be returned, that he may do their bidding.

Heffran is the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, an organization that is condemned by organized labor in general and the United Mine Workers in particular. Heffran voted against the full crew bill, and when the old age pension bill came to a vote, Heffran was absent, not having the courage to face the test. Yet there are paid organizers of the mine workers in conjunction with the champion political juggler, the Labor Press Press, doing all they can to fool the voters so that Heffran may be sent back to do their dirty work.

Will the coal miners, the railroad men, and other organized men vote for a man who deliberately cheats them by voting against measures for which organized labor has been fighting for the past 25 years? We believe not.

LATEST MOSCOW FILM TRIUMPH OF ART AND HUMOR

Experts Lavish Praises On Technique

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, April 14.—A new film has just been shown here which has proved, much to the surprise of many foreign correspondents, that the Communists have a keen sense of humor.

It is entitled "The adventures of Mr. West Among the Bolsheviki." The idea of the picture is simple. An American business man, Mr. West, is called to Moscow to look after the affairs of a Russo-American corporation, and has read in America horrible stories about the Bolsheviki. He brings with him a copy of an American weekly magazine which describes, with photographic illustrations, the dreadful conditions supposed to prevail in Russia.

On his arrival in Moscow he is met by an automobile from his business associates here, but a small valise containing the magazine is stolen by a member of a gang of robbers, whose chief realizes the capital that can be made from the American's idea of Russia.

He returns the valise to Mr. West, explaining that it was stolen by the Bolshevist Secret Police, who, he says "are now watching your every movement." Then he points out to the American the members of his own gang slinking around Mr. West's hotel, adding: "See, they're on your track already!"

The Plot Thickens.

He induces Mr. West to accompany him to other quarters, pointing out to him on the way "my own place, stolen by these scoundrels" (the "place" being the Museum of Natural History), and the "ruins" of the Grand Opero House and Moscow University "destroyed by criminal revolutionaries."

Once the American is in his new quarters the robber arranges a fake attack by "Bolshevist police," followed by a trial which coincides exactly with the stories published by the same widely circulated American magazine. Hairy drunken blackguards condemn to death Mr. West and the wife of the principal robber, who later tells him: "Fortunately these wretches are easily bribed. Sign a check for $1,000 and we shall be able to escape."

Rescued by Soviet Police.

Then, at the moment when the American, realizing the plot, gallantly faces overwhelming odds, the real Moscow police, who at the request of his friends have tracked him with police dogs, burst in and save his life.

The final scenes show Mr. West in an automobile, accompanied by the Chief of Police, driving thru Moscow, where he sees the Grand Opera House and the University intact, to witness a review of the Red Army, "the real Bolsheviki," marching in disciplined thousands past a reviewing stand where there are Trotzky and other revolutionary leaders.

New Technique.

Apart from its propaganda interest, the film has real importance as being the first example of the new technique in Russia. Under the direction of a young artist, Koolishef, the players follow an arbitrary plan of grouping for each scene, which gives it its full value as a pictorial composition. Still more, they are trained in rhetoric and co-ordinated in movement, so that every "high light" in the story is emphasized by the static composition effect which completes the essence of the dynamic idea. The result is extraordinary successful. The graphic art is so well concealed that the spectator gets the effect of the utmost simplicity of action.

The heroine, Mme. Khaklova, has followed the new technique to the utmost. Her very action is so cleverly synchronized and yet so entirely natural as to give an impression of novelty and spontaneity which foreign experts claim surpasses everything they have ever seen.

Judge Won't Issue Injunction Against Gay Married Man

To the DAILY WORKER: I notice in a morning newspaper that Circuit Judge Francis Wilson has refused to grant an injunction to Mrs. Katherine Brosey against her husband, who has been running around with another woman. The judge claims that the law does not provide for an emergency of a married man running around with another woman and the practice cannot be prohibited by law.

The man is no doubt a "higher up" and therefore the judge does not dare to bother him as he would a poor fish of a workingman who has been "immoral" and who does not know how to use his brains."—A READER.

"FREE CENTRALIA LOGGERS!" IS FARM-LABOR CAMPAIGN CRY AS BOSSES RAISE $55,000 FUND

(Defense News Service.)

SEATTLE, Wash., April 14.—When the gubernatorial campaign is waged in this state next autumn, it is certain that the case of the eight I. W. W. members imprisoned as the result of the Armistice Day riots in Centralia in 1919 will be a major issue. The Farmer-Labor Party of Washington has already declared itself unequivocally in favor of releasing these defendants, following the sworn admissions of six jurors that they were terrorized into convicting innocent men who defended themselves against attack by a mob.

With this case an inevitable issue in the political field, and after four years still a raw wound in the side of labor, the Federated Industries here is renewing its efforts to break the hold of the Industrial Workers of the World in the Puget Sound region, particularly in the lumber woods. It was resentment against that power of the I. W. W. in the woods which led to the carefully planned attack upon the industrialists' hall in Centralia, the killing of three members of the mob by the hall defenders, and the lynching by the mob of Wesley Everest, an I. W. W. railroad worker and volunteer soldier.

$55,000 Anti-Labor Fund.

Just how much the grip of the union is felt by the industrial kings of this region is shown in the annual report of the Federated Industries of Washington, lately issued to its members here. It reveals that the Northwest Logging Operators' Association, an interlocking body organized at Tacoma last May, raised a budget of $55,000 to carry on the first year of the concentrated fight against the I. W. W.

In this fight the allied employers are using the blacklist system, traveling speakers, moving pictures designed to show what a beautiful thing the present industrial system is and how diligence will enable the toiler to rise to heights of affluence; and "educational" literature along similar lines, which is being widely distributed among the logging camps. John H. McIntosh, manager of the Federated Industries, who signs its report, is also general manager of the logging operators' association, which combines the operators of both Washington and Oregon.

Try to Disbar Elmer Smith.

Continued activity of the Federated Industries in connection with the Centralia case is shown in this paragraph from the annual report: "During the summer disbarment proceedings were brought against Elmer Smith, the I. W. W. and radical lawyer of Centralia. * * * At the request of the attorney general's office the Federated Industries extended assistance in securing evidence for the prosecution. Thru the co-operation of Judge Reid, of the Northern Pacific, two important witnesses who chanced to be employees of that road, were released for witness duty. Your manager also journeyed to a Snohomish county logging camp to secure another important witness in this case."

Six Jurors Admit Injustice.

Elmer Smith was tried with ten I. W. W. members in 1920 for alleged conspiracy to fire on the Armistice Day parade. One defendant was dismissed by the court, one found insane, and seven were sentenced to serve from 25 to 40 years in prison, while Smith and Mike Sheehan were acquitted by the jury. Two of the six jurors who have since admitted that they convicted the seven because of the prevailing terror, declared that they acquitted Smith and Sheehan so that these two might be free to work for the release of the others; and that if they could sit again in a trial of the case they would acquit all of the men accused.

Fought Lumber Strike.

Three or more pages of the Federated Industries' annual report are devoted to the I. W. W. It asserts that the employers' organization had advance information of the I. W. W. plans for its strike in the logging industry last spring, and passed this information to those most interested. McIntosh reports that he spent six weeks in March and April holding regional meetings of employers from Bellingham down to the Columbia river, preparing them to adopt a common program as a counter-offensive in anticipation of the I. W. W. strike, which was coupled with a demand for amnesty for all war-time political prisoners.

McIntosh takes credit for suggesting the blacklist system to the logging operators, describing it thus: "An identification card system, requiring every man seeking work to sign an application card, giving names of his last two employers as references, thus in time compiling a record of all the workers, and on the information thus obtained to eliminate from the industry the chronic agitators and organizers."

Blacklist System Described.

This blacklist operates in Seattle thru the Federated Industries Labor Bureau at 95 Main street. Last July the Loggers' Information Association was consolidated with that bureau. Applications for work are being handled there at the rate of 16,000 a year.

Manhunter Dysart Is Agent.

During the last session of the state legislature the Federated Industries legislative bureau was active in defeating measures "inimical to the legitimate interests of industry." McIntosh mentions that the Long-Bell Lumber Company of Longview lent the services of Attorney Tom Fisk, and that "the lumbermen of Lewis county also loaned us the services of their agent, Judge Dysart."

Lloyd Dysart, son of George Dysart, was in command of one of the manhunting posses that searched for I. W. W. members on the night of November 11th, 1919.

"Hang the Bolshevists."

Some of the bulletins issued over the signature of George E. Russell, secretary-manager of the old association, admonished the members to "hang the bolshevists; * * * get rid of the I. W. W.'s; * * * deport about ten Russians in this community; * * * jail the radicals and deport them; * * * deport the radicals or use the rope as at Centralia."

The Federated Industries claims a membership of 3,152.

Greek Republic In Fight to Maintain Its Dictatorship

ATHENS, April 14.—Vigorous measures were instituted today to guard the new-born Greek Republic, confirmed by an overwhelming majority in Sunday's popular plebiscite.

The government announced that formal discussion regarding the change in regime is forbidden for a period of five years and that activities against republican rule will be put down without mercy.

It is forecast that the first Greek president will be elected in June, altho a date has not yet been determined definitely. Following the departure of former Premier Venizelos, ex-Minister Zamis is mentioned as a leading possibility for the post of chief executive. In some quarters, however, it is believed Venizelos may return and become a candidate.

The majority in favor of the republic in yesterday's vote was overwhelming, according to a government bulletin today. Of slightly more than 200,000 votes counted 12,000 were in favor of the new regime.

Election of the president will follow by the assembly and the senate, according to the French republican system.

Admiral Conduoriotis will retain his title as provisional president of the Greek Republic until his successor is elected.

North Side Y. W. L. Again.

This time we are announcing as our lecturer Comrade Al. Schaap, Y. W. L. Organizer for District 8, who has been active for many years in the youth movement and is well qualified to speak on his subject, "THE PROGRESS OF THE YOUNG WORKERS ORGANIZATIONS IN THE UNITED STATES." This will include the manner in which the working class youth have successfully organized to rid themselves of the yoke of capitalist exploitation and its accompanying miseries.

All who have followed the work of the youngsters will find this talk of great interest and are invited to attend our meeting held this Wednesday evening at Imperial Hall, 2409 N. Halsted St. Bring your friends, especially those who are of age to join our league and tell them that we want them in our branch to support us in our work.

Remember, we shall expect you at 8:15 p. m., so that you are in time for the opening of Comrade Schaap's talk.

French Senator for Recognition.

MOSCOW, April 14.— The Paris Post correspondent reports that the French Senator Dorset, in a lengthy article in the Gazette de La Pourse, advocates an early resumption of normal relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Stating the economic progress achieved by the latter and the stability of the Soviet Government, the writer asserts that it is high time for the French Government to take up a definite policy in the Russian question.

FISHERS' UNION HELPS TO RULE NEWFOUNDLAND

Forces Resignation Of Bribing Premier

By J. R. SMALLWOOD,
Member Newfoundland Fisherman's Union.
(For the Federated Press.)

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, April 14.—With Sir Richard A. Squires, former Newfoundland premier, proved guilty of accepting bribes from the British Empire Steel Corp. of Canada at a time when he was negotiating with them over the renewal of their mining contract with government and of receiving thousands of dollars from the department of the liquor controller for his own political purposes, there is great probability of a new general election. In this new election a big role will be played by the Fishermen's Union party, the political wing of the powerful movement founded 15 years ago by Sir William F. Coaker.

Forced Crook's Resignation.

Coaker forced the resignation of Squires from the premiership. When Coaker saw the evidence which later convicted Squires, he told Squires to resign. When Squires refused the cabinet went in a body to the governor and handed in their resignations. An hour later Squires had to do likewise. In the new ministry there are three wings: the Squires wing, without their leader; the Warren wing, hitherto nominally part of the Squires wing, and the Fishermen's party wing.

The Newfoundland government from 1919 has been a coalition consisting of the Liberal party, led by Squires, and the Fishermen's Union party, led by Coaker. In the general election of 1919, combining their forces, they swept the country and were returned to parliament with 23 out of 36 members, the remainig 13 being the Tory opposition. Out of the 23 the Union wing had 12, so that they dominated the government. This domination was not complete, because, by effecting a new combination with the Tories, Squires might have relegated the Union party to the opposition. This meant compromise.

Nationalized Fish Exports.

Under Coaker's leadership the Fishermen's party introduced and established for two years nationalization of the entire codfish export industry of Newfoundland, by which all codfish exports to Spain, Portugal, Italy, Greece, Brazil and the West Indies were controlled by the government, and sold at a price set by the minister of marine and fisheries, who was Coaker. While this was going on Squires grafted. This did not leak out until after the general election of 1923, when the coalition was returned again to the house with the same number of seats. Within two months Squires was forced to resign, as related, and now, having been found guilty by the royal commission, he faces trial before the Newfoundland supreme court.

San Quentin Class Prisoner Welcomes The Daily Worker

To the DAILY WORKER:

Here is what I think about the DAILY WORKER. As long as it does not change its policy and as long as it lives up to its principles, as it does now, I think it is very fine, and furthermore I think that it should have been printed at least twenty years ago in this country so that the workers might have had a little more knowledge of their own affairs. So I wish a long and prosperous life to the DAILY WORKER.

Yours for a better world to live in,
Raymond L. Sanches,
San Quentin Prison, No. 35891.

Hits Policy of "National Bloc."

MOSCOW, April 14.—The Paris correspondent of the Rosta News Agency reports that L'Ere Nouvelle has published a series of articles tending to prove the harmful policy of the "Bloc National". In the columns of this periodical, Mr. Armand Charpentier shows how the "Bloc" has been deceiving the French public opinion and doing all it could to prevent negotiations between France and the Union of Soviet Republics.

WORKERS PARTY OF CHICAGO IN MAY DAY CALL

Secretary Abern Invites All Workers

Martin Abern, secretary local Chicago, Workers Party of America, has sent out the following letter of invitation to the United Front May Day demonstration to all unions, co-operative societies, workers' sick and death benefit societies and working class political parties:

Dear Sirs and Brothers: You are for the 8-hour work day; you have fought for many years to attain the 8-hour day. Many unions are today again struggling against the open-shop bosses in an effort to hold or get the 8-hour day.

Did you know that May Day is the day when the great strike for the 8-hour day in America was called, and that victory for it is symbolized in May Day? Further, in 1889 at the International Labor Conference, the American delegates moved that May 1st be made an International Labor holiday, and it was so done. So, brothers, May Day is of particular interest and importance to American workers.

May Day, 1924, will be celebrated thruout the world by the workers and exploited farmers. In America, May Day must this year be a demonstration of the solidarity of the workers against the open-shoppers, injunction and exploiter's government, and a signal for the workers to organize their unions more strongly.

Against Capitalist Government.

Teapot Dome scandal has exposed the corruptness of the capitalist Republican and Democratic parties. It is hopeless for the workers to place any faith in the bosses' parties. It is paramount today that the workers and exploited farmers organize a political party of their own, a mass Farmer-Labor Party, and then aim to oust the corrupt capitalist Republican and Democratic parties from power and to replace them by a Workers' and Farmers' government.

In Chicago, we are going to celebrate May Day and try to further the campaign for the formation of a mass Farmer-Labor Party. We workers' fraternal organizations, want all unions, co-operatives, workers political bodies and any other workers' organizations to unite their forces for a successful end, we are calling a United Front May Day Conference to which we ask you to send representatives. This conference will be held Wednesday evening, 8 p. m., on April 23, 1924 at 180 West Washington street, Room 200. Be sure you send a delegate from your organization.

North Side Turner Hall.

Preliminary plans for the May Day celebration have already been made. A hall has been rented; North Side Turner Hall, 820 N. Clark street. The meeting is called for Thursday, May 1st, 1924, at 8 p. m. Speakers and program are to be arranged for by the committee.

Please let us hear from you on your action relative to the participation in the United May Day Conference and celebration.

Celebrate May Day, the Workers' day. Help organize the party of the workers and exploited farmers against the capitalist parties and capitalism.

Hoping to hear soon from you, I am,

Fraternally yours,
Workers Party, Local Chicago, W. P. of A.,
Martin Abern, City Secretary., 166 West Washington Street.

Fears for Her Money.

LARNED, Kas., April 14.—Mrs. Mary K. Eggleston, charged with plotting the deaths of two persons today, declared the accusations were part of a conspiracy to get her money.

STRANGLER AMERICA WILL "MEDIATE" FOR PEACE IN HONDURAS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The United States has assumed the role of mediater to end revolution in Honduras, it was learned at the State Department today.

Acting on the request of central American powers, the government ordered Sumner Welles, American Commissioner to the Dominican Republica, to proceed immediately to Tegucigalpa to act as mediater.

In a special communication from the department today it was said that "Welles was ordered to offer the friendly assistance of the United States government in finding a solution to bring about establishment of peace in the Honduran republic."

Welles left San Domingo Wednesday aboard the United States scout cruiser Richmond. The exact time of his arrival in Anapala, port of Honduras, is not known. He will fly by airplane from Amapala to Tegucigalpa immediately after the Richmond makes port.

When Will Papa Wood Follow Grafting Son? Washington Wonders

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13.—President Coolidge's acceptance of the resignation from the Army of Lieutenant Osborne Wood has aroused considerable comment here on the whole Philippine controversy.

Lieutenant Wood is the son of Military Governor General Leonard Wood, whose regime has precipitated the present acute discontent in the Philippines. Several months ago young Wood confessed that he cleared up no less than $800,000 by speculating in oil and other shares on the New York Exchange. This looked so shady to most observers here that his father was compelled to grant him a leave of absence for two months. But the opposition to the Wood policies in the Philippines forced the Governor General and the War Department to ask for the lieutenant's resignation.

Many Filipinos believe that the Governor General himself will be forced out next, despite the fact that the Coolidge administration is supporting him to the limit now. It has been repeatedly charged that Lieutenant Wood made this huge sum of money by allowing many Chinese coolies to be smuggled into the Philippines and by permitting free play and an open road to the gambling houses in the islands. This was done, of course, with the knowledge if not with the open permission of General Leonard Wood himself. It is said the Administration pigeonholed the Frear and Ladd resolutions for an investigation of Wood's regime in the Philippines for fear that it would disclose graft, corruption and bribery on the part of the Wood family working hand in glove with such criminal agents of the Department of Justice as the convicted agent Conley, which would be even far more black than the revelations about Jesse Smith, Mannington and Daugherty in Washington.

Dinner Pail Epics
by Bill Lloyd

As near as I can figger out, there's Russian gold all round about. And when it comes to influence, it comes in chunks both red and dense.

The daily papers like to tell that Russia is all shot to hell, that it has spavin and paresis and several new and strange diseases, that it has sprains and dislocations and should be kicked by allied nations.

But if you read along a while, you'll wonder where they got their pile. The papers tell you that they give to all the radicals that live, to liberal and to pacifist, to all progressives on the list, to fighting Bob and Foster too, to all with notions that is new, to teachers who are up to date, to all those that our papers hate.

It's quite the thing in journalism, if you would knock down any "ism," and make the people view it cold, to say it's getting Russian gold. I think it's surely a bum steer. It looks to me most awful queer, that folks to which this gold is sent have such a struggle paying rent, that folks who tap Aladdin's lamp, can hardly buy a postage stamp.

It must be I ain't red enuf to get in on this Russian stuff. In vain for gold I search my jeans when I would like a plate of beans. My cup of Java looks sky-high, when Russia's pay check goes right by. Upon the Kremlin I can't call, when I can't buy no bed at all. I'm gonta ask the Tribune scribe how I can get a Russian bribe.

CO-OPS FAIL IN TRUSTIFIED U. S., NEARING SHOWS

Economist Lays Down Some Hard Facts

By SCOTT NEARING.
(Federated Press Staff Writer.)

Consumers' co-operatives undoubtedly have their uses. They train workers in co-operative activity. They teach them the art of economic control. They save money.

But as a substitute for an organization of producers, and as a structural basis for immediate social progress, they will not qualify. Yet there are millions who now believe in the possibility. Have they a reasonable ground for their beliefs?

There are several momentous questions which the advocate of the peaceful consumers' co-operative revolution must answer.

1. The beneficiaries of the present order—the steel trust, Standard Oil, etc.—already control the coal, iron, oil and timber reserves. How can they be induced to part wtih them?

Control State Machinery.

2. These same masters of the present order also control the machinery of the state. If the co-operative associations, formed according to law, really threaten these interests, will the co-operatives not be outlawed and their property confiscated?

3. The co-operatives, according to the theory, will be the employers of all the labor— in mines, factories, stores. Will they permit it to organize? To select workers' councils to direct the works?

4. As they proceed in accumulation of property will not the co-operatives develop into defenders of the present system which protects their property and defends them in their right to direct production?

5. By what method will the transition be made from the present order? Will those who now dominate economic life voluntarily surrender their privileges?

One of the most attractive claims of those who advocate consumers' co-operation as a method of building the new society, is that their plan can be put into operation here and now. There are three reasons why this must be denied for the United States.

In the first place, the great bulk of American industry has no direct connection with the consumer. Farms produce wheat and cotton and cattle which are manufactured in their finished forms before they reach the consumer. The bulk of the manufacturing in the heavy or key industries turns out machinery that never gets to the consumer at all. Most of the coal and all of the copper and iron ore go into manufacturing and not to the consumer. Therefore, in all of these industries, an organization of producers comes a great deal closer to the actual functioning of society than an organization of consumers.

In the second place, merchandising is so highly organized in the United States that consumers' societies find it almost impossible to compete with the chain store and the department store.

American Co-operatives Meet.

Third, the margin which the American worker still enjoys above his actual needs makes him indifferent to the savings which a co-operative can promise. He prefers to invest his surplus in some business and climb the ladder of "success".

The co-operative movement has gained a firm footing in Europe. During the same period it has met with widespread failure in the United States. Perhaps these reasons account for the difference.

Workers Fired By Los Angeles Bosses Seized As Vagrants

By MAUD McCREERY
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 14—The serious unemployment in Los Angeles resulting in hundreds of men arrested for vagrancy while tramping the streets seeking work, is being aggravated by wholesale layoffs in large plants and shops.

At the time that persons desiring telephones are kept waiting eight and ten months for installations after making application and are being put off with the excuse that the company is too busy to get around to them, the telephone company has in one day laid off 305 men in the installation and trouble departments. Rumor is that 150 from the construction department are to be laid off.

The Goodyear Rubber Co. has laid off 300 men and so has the local Ford assembling plant. Layoffs are also reported in the Southern Pacific railroad shops and other plants.

Recently a committee from the chamber of commerce left on a trip east to boost Los Angeles and encourage an added influx of climate and job seekers. It is estimated that 4,000 persons arrive here daily. This is train arrivals and does not include those coming by motor and on the hoof.

NEGRO AND JEWISH GIRLS BEAT SOCIETY BELLES IN CONTEST

(By The Federated Press)

FLUSHING, L. I., April 14.—"Oh, but they are not in our set," said the society girls of the local Green Twig society, and then called off the popularity contest conducted by the society in the Flushing Evening Journal. The contest was to advertise a ball at the state armory April 25, the winner to be queen of the ball. The only "society girl" in the running was eighth, while all the leaders worked for a living. One of the leaders was a Jewess, another a Negro girl.

So interested persons went to the Journal editor and tried to bribe him to throw the election to a Green Twig candidate. When he refused, the society called off the contest.

The story has made the village the interests of the foreign-born Local business men have come to the rescue and started the contest over again with the promise that it will be free for all.

Latin-American Labor News

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)
Santo Domingo.

The first election since the United States marines occupied Santo Domingo took place under American supervision. The Party of Alliance under General Velazquez won an overwhelming victory. The party gained 90 per cent of the municipal representations and 25 of the 31 seats in the lower house of congress.

I interviewed some Domincan exiles, as to who this new president Velazquez might be, and the most merciful answer I got was, "He is a poor hapless wretch that has consented to be the instrument of Yankee imperialism in the island." The other remarks will not bear printing.

The election was conducted under supervision of the U. S. navy and the real boss of the island continues to be the American commissioner, Wells. Those of the patriot party that were not in exile or in jail did not dare go near the polls.

Argentina.

The Argentine labor movement is rallying all its forces in an attempt to block the armament program that is preparing Argentina for war with Brazil and Brazil for war with Argentina. The war and armament propaganda is being fomented by American interests who sell munitions to both sides and who realize that the power of Argentina, Brazil, and Chile now represents the only obstacle to Yankee imperialism in South America. A U. S. naval mission under Admiral Vogelsang in Brazil is reconstructing the army and navy. A similar mission is in Peru.

The Argentinian labor movement is conducting a propaganda not only against the armament competition, but also in favor of a unity of Argentina, Brazil and Chile against the real enemy, American imperialism.

Chile.

The Chilean Federation of Labor by an overwhelming vote has re-affirmed its allegiance to the Red International of Labor Unions (Moscow). It voted to publish its daily paper jointly with the Communist Party of Chile.

Peru.

The reaction in this Yankee-ridden country of Peru is still in full swing. The exile of Haya de la Torre and Velazco, leaders of the students movement has been followed by the expulsion of 26 students from the University in Trujillo, who have also been ordered to leave the city in question. Two professors resigned their posts in protest, and the workers, by a general strike, prevented the expulsion of the students from the city from being carried out.

The Argentinian student movement has protested and the Mexican movement is now considering a similar protest. More than 200 papers have thus far reprinted the story of the exile of Haya de la Torre.

Cuba.

A new revolutionary movement is brewing according to Garcia Velez, till recently minister of Cuba in Great Britain, but now in New York trying to "brew" it. The present president of Cuba, Alfredo Zayas, is a creature of the American state department, elected under supervision of the American marines and lending his name to disguise the real government of the American commissioner in the islands, General Crowder.

Painters' Strike For Dollar More In Movie Capital

LOS ANGELES, April 14.—A thousand members of the Painters and Paperhangers' District Council are on strike here for a $9 a day wage scale, an increase of a dollar a day.

There are approximately 2,200 men in the council district, which includes all of Los Angeles county, but 1,200 of these are working in shops which have granted the new scale. Six cities in the district are working under union shop conditons. Twenty-two shops in Los Angeles are standing pat as yet against the strike and have announced open shop rule. The trade is fairly well organized and the strikers are confident of victory. The $8 scale was obtained in 1920 by mutual agreement.

CANNON EDWARDS DEBATE HAILED AS AID TO CAUSE

First Free Discussion Of Big Labor Issue

To the DAILY WORKER: James P. Cannon's debate with Forrest Edwards brought into the open a discussion that has been smouldering in dark corners since the I. W. W. put their ban on Communist discussion in their papers some two and a half or three years ago. This vital issue —of the necessity of revolutionary political action by the working class —will not down, even in the I. W. W., and we hope that the open discussion that began in Turner Hall last Sunday will be continued.

The fact that Turner Hall was crowded and that large part of the audience was composed of wobblies shows that the rank and file of the class conscious workers are not wedded blindly to abstract doctrinaire concepts. The wobblies—in spite of an official anti-political stand by the organization—wanted to hear what a Communist had to say.

"Liquidate" Talk Is Bunk.

One ghost which Cannon laid bare was the idea that the Communist Party wanted to "liquidate" or "take over" the Industrial Workers of the World. Cannon is the first to agree that the I. W. W. is a strong proletarian force in a number of important industries in which the migratory workers are the dominant element. This is especially true of the lumber industry, and in several seasonal industries of California they have been such an aggressive union force that a hundred brave class war captives are now lying in San Quentin and Folsom penitentiaries. True, speaking of American industry as a whole, the Industrial Workers of the World are a decidedly minority element. Most American industries are either unorganized or in the hands of the A. F. of L. But where the I. W. W. is an active force for bettering the immediate conditions of the workers—and not a mere dual union—it has the sympathy and support of the revolutionary political movement.

Need Disciplined Party.

The Communist's message to his wobbly friends present was that mere industrial action is not sufficient for revolutionary purposes. The Russian revolution was accomplished by seizing the state and using its armed forces to repress the bourgeois counter-revolution. The German revolution failed—in spite of strong industrial organization—because of the lack of a powerful disciplined Communist party to seize power in the time of crisis.

Cannon might have added, had he not been restricted by the limitations of the subject, that the Italian syndicalists—comparatively strong, as they were—had their organization smashed by armed force—military-political direct action of the Fascisti. In the final test mere unionism went down before guns.

Folded Arms Not Sufficient.

Revolution in an industrial country requires industrial action. Industrial action is so absolutely necessary for the achievement of power by the working class that the Communist Party is devoting itself to the task of strengthening the trade unions thru amalgamation and by the developing of a revolutionary ideology in their rank and file. But the Communist Party realizes that mere unionism is insufficient, that revolutionary political action is equally vital, that the folded arm policy, tho it can stop industry in places and at times, cannot stop machine guns and flame throwers which the capitalists use to crush the working class.

In short, the Communist program is a complete revolutionary program that takes count of all the factors necessary for the conquest of power by the workers. It welcomes the opportunty to dscuss its principles with the Industrial Workers of the World and with all other valuable forces of the American labor movement.

Mellon Bill Saves Plutes $434,720,000; U. S. Facing Deficit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The Mellon plan tax bill reported to the senate slashes $434,720,000 in revenue from the present law whereas Secretary of the Treasury Mellon said it would be unsafe to cut taxes more than $320,000,000.

Senator Smoot, of Utah, estimates that the bill would yield $595,000,000 in surtaxes and normal taxes and $927,000,000 from corporation taxes. This would make the total annual income tax $1,522,000,000.

Miscellaneous internal revenue taxes would give $756,914,000 and ordinary receipts $473,177,000 more, making ordinary tax receipts about $3,247,091,000 while the budget bureau has estimated that the government needs $3,298,080,444. This leaves a deficit of $50,989,444.

THE POWER COLUMN

GREETINGS FROM OUR NEW HOME.

Let's Make It An Incentive For More Determined Work Than Ever.

Of more importance than the 10,000 new subs campaign, and like it, sure to bring more of power and strength to the militant labor movement, is the greatest news that we have at last moved into our own home. The resolution made when THE DAILY WORKER was started that it would soon have a printing plant and building of its own has been fulfilled. We hope our readers will realize the importance of this accomplishment and what it means for the advancement of the interests of the working class.

When the decision was made to spend the money raised in the DAILY WORKER campaign for a building and printing plant, rather than withhold it to meet possible deficits in the running of the DAILY WORKER, the decision was based on the belief that the militants in America after having sacrificed greatly to make the DAILY WORKER possible would work to the utmost to make it successful. For the WORKER there is only one road to success—a high circulation; thousands, tens of thousands of subscribers. Along that road the DAILY WORKER must go, impelled by the willing and strenuous work of its supporters.

First Victory Won; We Face the Second Struggle.

From the first that support was forthcoming. Thousands of subscriptions poured into THE DAILY WORKER office, tripling the circulation of the Weekly Worker. Now the second and a more difficult test is at hand—can the militants maintain the struggle, continue to work determinedly after the first excitement and stimulation has passed over? THE DAILY WORKER has spent the fund raised to make its establishment possible. The money has been spent to make the permanency of the DAILY WORKER possible. From now on the DAILY WORKER must pay its bills with the money it receives from the sale of subscriptions.

Was THE DAILY WORKER management justified in placing its faith in the continuous militant support of the class conscious workers? We say that confidence has been and will continue to be justified. What do you say?

SAY IT WITH SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Saturday was moving day and only special mail was received. For that reason the Honor Roll is smaller than usual. But one of the special letters received Saturday went a long way to make up for the others that were delayed. Comrade A. W. Haarvitt has a long record of achievement in behalf of THE DAILY WORKER but his efforts in securing renewals is a particularly good example to show others what can be done to boost THE DAILY WORKER. Comrade Harvitt's record in securing renewals from those whose subs expired in April was 1000 per cent. The subscriptions of 24 Toledo subscribers were to expire. Harvitt secured nearly renewals from 22 and 3 month renewals from the other 2. Harvitt's letters carry so much logic we just can't keep them out of print. Here's his letter:

I suppose you are wondering about the renewals and whether they are coming at all. I am arriving at the tape before the bell rings and will get the subs in before they expire.

Enclosed is a check for $180.80. This will hold the record for renewals and 2 for 3 months. I am sending in a bag of 22 yearly renewals and 2 for 3 months. For the time being I am carrying some of them on the book as they were not all able to pay. I am collecting on the installment plan. The method of proceedure brings home the bacon and you can get most of them for a year. This insures the readers getting the paper regularly and the DAILY WORKER office is saved much work and correspondence.

We are still 100 per cent and we mean to stay there. How about the other towns?

Fraternally yours, A. W. HARVITT.

Just Look At This Town If You Are Feeling Optimistic

ANDERSON, Ind., Apr. 14.—Houses are scarce in this town, it is reported to the DAILY WORKER, most of the dwellings are in the hands of real estate sharks and speculators who hold the houses off the rental market and force up prices. Everyone must buy at the a price set, irrespective of the house's real value, and many buyers find themselves so badly "stung" they forfeit their houses by default of payments.

Only 50 per cent of the workers here are employed. Factories have slackened production. At one factory 15 carpenters last winter averaged only 40 cents per hour with a nine hour day. There are many women in this factory and their wages average from 18 to 20 cents per hour. Unemployment, combined with low wages and high rentals, makes conditions critical for the workers here this spring.

Defeated Hiram Is Yapping Against Jap Immigration

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 14. — Collapse of Hiram Johnson as a "progressive" standard bearer in Michigan, Illinois and Nebraska was followed by the California senator's return here, where he addressed the senate in favor of an Asiatic exclusion amendment to the immigration bill.

His talk against the admission of Japanese to this country was made during the early afternoon, when ordinarily a talk from him would be enough to fill the press gallery. On this occasion not more than half a dozen correspondents remained to hear his views. Hiram got Daugherty to make Wm. J. Burns head of the U. S. secret service.

INSPIRING MUSIC AND SPEECHES AT FREIHEIT AFFAIR

Communist Celebration Stirs Chicago Crowd

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Ivan Steschenko, bass of the Chicago opera, won a tremendous ovation at the concert in celebration of the second year of the "Freiheit", at Orchestra Hall, last Friday evening. Steschenko is what Chaliapin was twenty years ago. Both singers have big bass voices, large in volume, perfect in quality. But where Chaliapin has dignity and reserve, Steschenko has the vigor, fire, and brilliance of youth. He appeared in Russian costume, and, again like the better-known Chaliapin, acted every song as well as singing it.

The ballad called "The Pedlars," sung in Russian to a text by Nekrassov, a reckless and swaggering song, was the one with which he captured his audience.

Volga Boatman's Song.

His singing of the almost hackneyed "Song of the Boatmen of the Volga" was quite new and different from the familiar interpretations. Where the average American conceives the tune as a slow and sobbing one. Steschenko sang quite fast and staccato, with the proud joy of a strong man, conscious of his strength, and revealing in the use of it. A unique and wonderful performance was his, and it would be hard to find anyone else capable of one like it.

Great Russian Tenor.

Ivan Dneiproff, tenor of the Russian opera, sang also. Dnieproff has been praised so often and so highly in these columns recently that further praise is unnecessary. But, when he goes to the Chicago opera next year, Polacco cannot use him too often to satisfy this writer.

Minna Ysaeva, a dramatic soprano, who started her artistic career at a sewing machine in Rothchild's shops, was the third soloist. She displayed a voice of fine quality and well-schooled, and considerable interpretative ability.

Freiheit's Proletarian Artists.

The Freiheit Singing society, proletarian artists par excellence, under the direction of Conductor Shaeffer, opened the concert with the Internationale. Other numbers were rendered to the accompaniment of the Freiheit Mandolin orchestra.

These two organizations are probably the only ones of their kind in the city of Chicago; composed exclusively of workingmen and women at each of their appearances they surprise and please the audience by the perfection of their performance and the variety of their repertoire. Their services are always donated to workingclass enterprises.

Bittelman and Dunne Speak.

Alexander Bittelman, magazine editor of the DAILY WORKER and member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, delivered a short address in Jewish, conveying the question of the Jewish Federation and dealing with the mission of the Freiheit and the party. William F. Dunne of the DAILY WORKER, delivered the greetings of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party to the Freiheit on its second anniversary and took up the collection for the support of that paper.

Comrade M. Backal, chairman of the meeting told the history and spoke of the task of the Freiheit in the future. Greetings in the form of telegrams and short speeches were received from the Freiheit offices in New York, from the T. U. E. L., Y. W. L., and several other organizations.

About 1800 people attended the concert. The affair was exceptionally well managed and reflects credit on the local management of the Freiheit and the Chicago section of the Jewish Federation.

Zinoviev Reviews Main Points of Difference

EDITOR'S NOTE:—Today we continue publication of the famous report by Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, made to the session of the Executive of the Communist International held on Jan. 6. Zinoviev's report deals with the main points of difference in the Russian Communist Party, clearly crystallizing the discussion that has so far been published in the DAILY WORKER. In order that our readers may get a broader view of this discussion, we are publishing enlarged installments. This report is divided into seven sections. Today we publish the seventh and concluding section. It is as follows:

VII.

The Proportion of Forces in the Party.

In conclusion, a few words on the proportion of forces in the Party during the discussion.

As in every struggle, a so-called buffer group has been formed in the course of the present conflict. There was a similar buffer group during our trade unoin debates in 1921. At that time the leader of the buffer group was Comrade Bukharin. Lenin, when speaking of the buffer group, remarked: If I could draw as well as Bukharin can. I should make a drawing of Bukharin with a bucket of petroleum, which he is pouring into a fire, and I should add the inscription: Buffer fire. Lenin was right. As a matter of fact the buffer fraction did not contribute to lessening the struggle, but rather to aggravate it. This is always the case. Instead of stating clearly what the conflict is about, instead of analyzing the differences, quite another course is adopted: one of the fractions is actually supported under cover of intermediation. In questions concerning the vital interests of the revolution, it is imperative to take sides decisively, and not to demand that good and bad be combined.

Central Position Upheld.

Comrade Radek is pleased at present with his role of mediator. But this is merely a move in the game on his part, and only proves the existence of a division of work in the "opposition." In reality, Radek is a Trotzkyian. His past is almost parallel, and he possesses to a certain degree the same weaknesses and the same powers as Trotzky. Radek has been able to record a certain degree of success here in Moscow in his capacity as mediator, but the majority of the Party, that majority in whose hands the fate of the Party lies, is fully aware that Radek is in reality no mediator, but an adherent of the Trotzky fraction. For instance, he declares at meetings that the Communist Central is 80 per cent in the right, but at the same time he calls upon those present to vote for the resolution of the "opposition," altho this must be 80 per cent wrong if we are 80 per cent right.

The proportion of forces in the Party is approximately 9 to 1. An attempt is made, in today's "Pravda," to give a numerical survey of the result of the discussion. I may interpose that almost the whole Party has expressed its opinion. The result is as follows: 288 organizations for us, 8 against us. These figures give only an approximate idea of actual relations. Not one of the eight oppositional organizations is an important center. All important and decisive industrial centers, possessing really compact masses of proletarians, as Petrograd, Charkov, Baku, Yekaterinburg, etc., are on our side with an overwhelming majority. Matters are somewhat different in Moscow than in other industrial centers; here the "opposition" is considerably stronger. Our opposition made the attempt to bring off a performance a la Berlin here in Moscow, but with the difference that we are here concerned with a really revisionist current. It is highly probable that in Moscow, the final proportion of forces will be such that about 20 to 25 per cent of the votes of the Party members will fall to the "opposition." I must explain to you why precisely Moscow has a comparatively powerful "opposition." First, it is to be greatly explained by the fact that we have about 20,000 students in Moscow. And then we have the war commissariat. I have already pointed out that the main center of the "opposition" is formed by the students and the war commissariat. I must, however, observe that the greater number of the Red Army soldiers naturally voted against Trotzky. But the overwhelming majority of the workers of Moscow are with the Central Committee. The relative success of the "opposition" in Moscow is further due to the fact that it has concentrated its main forces in Moscow. Here there are over 1,000 responsible functionaries, many of whom have nothing to do after office hours, and have organized themselves illegally in the Party to a slight degree, after working in an oppositional direction for half a year. Thus the slightly greater strength of the "opposition" in Moscow. The position of the Communist Central is unshaken among the Moscow proletariat.

No Split Possible.

I come now to the conclusion comrades.

It goes without saying that the International must make a careful study of the reasons for our differences. We do not think of asking the International to believe every word we say; on the contrary, it must have all the documents involved submitted to it.

I believe, comrades, that after you have accorded careful consideration to the arguments brought against us by the "opposition," you will approve of our standpoint in all essentials. That there is alarm with respect to a possible split in the Party is only natural. Well, we assure you that we do not in the least underestimate the importance of the minority around Trotzky. But nevertheless we can assure you that there will be no split in our Party, there will not even be a splitting off of any section of Party masses. We have every reason to assert that we shall succeed in liquidating the whole affair rapidly and painlessly. The more energetic and determined our fight against the errors committed by the "opposition," the more quickly will these be wiped out. No complications will arise in the Party, just as none arose in 1921.

To sum up our differences with the opposition in a few words, I again recount the five most essential points. These are as follows:

Essential Points of Difference.

1. The essential character of our Bolshevist Party.
2. The question of the formation of fractions within a party incorporating state power.
3. The relations between old and young.
4. The estimation of the part played by the peasantry, as the main question of our differences of opinion, and finally,
5. The role and character of our Party and apparatus.

These are the most essential points. I think that I have amply proved that we differ essentially from the oppositions in all these five points. If we sum up the divergence of our standpoints in these five points, we see at once that the views held by the two camps, taken on the whole, are divided from one another by a much wider chasm than that separating the Mensheviki and Bolsheviki in 1903. But matters are, however, somewhat different today, for now we are a large Party, comprising great masses of workers. These masses of workers are in a position to call to order those comrades who have drifted onto a wrong course, and to rapidly correct the errors made by these comrades. Naturally, much depends upon the attitude of the "opposition" itself. If it holds obstinately to its fundamentally wrong views on the above five points, then it is possible that such obstinacy may cause a cleft in the Party. I should like to remind you here of the pamphlet published by Lenin in 1904, dedicated to the London Party Congress held in 1903: "One Step Forwards. Two Steps Backwards," in which Lenin gave a graphic diagrammatic survey of the results of the divisions on the most important points of the agenda of the London Party Congress, showing that Martov and Axelrod inclined to the right in every question, not only in trivial matters, but in essentials. We young ones did not quite comprehend the significance of this diagram; we shrugged our shoulders, and asked one another: What is Lenin driving at? How can he take such slight differences of opinion as the basis for a whole method appeared to us somewhat artificial. But it speedily proved that Lenin was right. Comrades, were we to apply this Leninian method to our present Party conflict, and draw up a similar diagram, we should arrive at a result even more convincing than that come to by Lenin in 1904 by this analysis of the differences between Mensheviki and Bolsheviki.

False Judgments.

One more point, comrades. We beg you, before you form a final judgment, to make a thoro study of the most important documents concerned. I accentuate this, because one of our best sections, the Polish, has preferred to act otherwise. Instead of first studying the material and hearing the disputants, the Polish party hastens to favor us with a love letter, telling us not to forget how necessary it is to come to an understanding with Trotzky, if we are to avoid disastrous results. I must tell the Polish comrades candidly that if they have thought to impress us with such a love letter, they are quite on the wrong track. It may be impolite to say so, but the pious hopes expressed in the letter have not made any impression on us whatever. It would have had more effect if the letter had stated: You are wrong in this or that point, this or that must be corrected. This would have been criticism, but it would have made an impression on us.

We are fully prepared to give any Party full information at any time as to the steps we take. The parties have a right, as the International, to intervene, but not until they have examined all arguments, documents and standpoints. Where this is not done, any attempt at instructing our Party is not only lost labor, but is an actual support of Trotzky. Comrade Varsky has explained that the Polish Communists are by no means on Trotzky's side, but are opposed to him, as they are old Bolsheviki. Very good; but all the same they have lent their aid to Trotzky and Radek. Three weeks ago Comrade Radek prophesied at a local students' meeting, that the German party would in the first place declare itself to be against us, the majority, and that in the second place Comrade Varsky had promised that the Polish party would protest against the false leadership of the Comintern. One part of this prophesy has come true. The central of the Polish Communist Party, without giving us a hearing, without examining the arguments and documents, has sent us a letter which is practically an intervention in favor of Trotzky's fraction. I can only call this supporting fractionism. Comrade Varsky, we shall reply to your letter, and shall explain our standpoint to the Polish Communist workers; and I wager hundred to one that the Communist proletariat of Poland, which has fought side by side with us for twenty years, will decide in our favor, in favor of the Leninian core of the Party. It will not be the diplomacy of Radek and Varsky even aided by Valecki, which will convince the workers of the Polish party; we shall do this. Those who have committed this error should hasten to repair it, and the quicker the better.

Lies Spread.

The German comrades are equally disquieted, and are asking: What is to be the end of this affair? How will social democracy react upon it? The bourgeois press is already engaged upon a savage agitation, and is spreading the most unheard of lies abroad. This is true. Thus the French bourgeois press, for instance, has already reported splits in the Red Army, risings of the whole army against the Central Committee, and similar nonsense.

We need not tell you that disagreements in the Party are no source of pleasure to us. Truly it is no pleasure to hang about at meetings day and night, as I have to do at present. But it cannot be helped. There are times when fundamental differences of opinion in the Party have to be fought out openly, and we are now passing thru one of these periods. At the moment, this present struggle is practically over. Its product is as follows: If the minority insists on continuing the fight, its present unfavorable position will become worse from day to day. But there are many indications permitting us to hope that the greater part of the minority, including Radek, are beginning to grasp the significance of taking up arms against our Central Committee, especially with the most frivolous arguments.

Examine Evidence Carefully.

If the International is ready to help us to smooth out our quarrel, we shall heartily welcome such aid. Our federal Party conference will take place in a few days. It is very important that the executive be represented at this conference. Naturally, preliminary consultations are desirable. We are prepared to arrange these at any time. We are express Internationalists, and ready not only to hear the opinion of every section of the International but to accord every opinion the most careful considerations. But we beg you not to permit your judgment to be influenced by your sympathies, but the feeling which many of our best friends among the comrades of our brother parties express when they say that they feel equal love for both sides. But in political matters, in questions decisive for the fate of the revolution our slogan must be: Amusic Plato, sed magis amicus veritas! Plato is our friend, but the truth goes before Plato! In short: You must first examine into the true reasons of the Party crisis.

Examine fairly and conscientiously, without regard to your sympathy or friendship for this or that leading comrade of the Russian Communist Party, and you will all be on our side. We have no doubt whatever but that a thoro examination into all reasons and counter-reasons will enable you to arrive at a mature and well-considered judgment.

Finnish Branch At Worcester Holds A Big Celebration

By H. PURO.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 14.—Over 800 people attended at the opening celebrations of the new hall of The Finnish Branch here. Speakers were comrades William Marttila and Vilho Boman in Finnish and professor Arthur Calhoun from Brookwood Labor College, who was visiting in Worcester.

The program included the five-act play "Mooloch", which took all Saturday evening. Sunday afternoon the program was given by Young Workers League, consisting of a speech by Comrade Halonen, youngest member of Editorial Staff of Eteenpain, Finnish Daily, recitations, singing solos, Violin and piano solos and orchestra playing.

The main program of the evening was given Sunday evening, when Marttila and Boman spoke. A big singing chorus of the Finnish Branch inspired the audience with its revolutionary songs. Enthusiasm was very high.

Many new members joined the Workers Party.

The new building, in which the Eteenpain printing plant, business and editorial offices are housed, cost over $60,000. The financial income from celebration was over fifteen hundred dollars.

Bank's Money Missing.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 14.—Henry C. Flower, president of the Fidelity Trust Company, announced that an official statement concernig printed reports of a $600,000 discrepancy in accounts of the Fidelity National Bank and Trust Company would soon be given out.

HUDSON TUNNEL SAND HOGS REBEL AGAINST "BENDS"

Strike After 480 Cases Of Collapse

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 14.—Five hundred members of the Compressed Air Workers' Union, commonly known as sandhogs, have walked out and tied up work on the the new vehicular tunnel under the Hudson River here in protest against working conditions. Their action follows a blowout in the tunnel when 36 of their number narrowly escaped death April 3. On April 8 and 9 38 men had to be removed to the emergency hospital because of working too long under terrific air pressure. Since the work on this job began 480 cases of "the bends" have resulted.

The walkout is also a demonstration in favor of remedial legislation now before the state legislature at Albany which is not expected to pass due to opposition of the city administration and the contractors.

The scale of hours is fixed by the air pressure under which the men work. Most of the men work eight hours, but on varying shifts; six hours for pressure from 22 to 30 pounds, four between 31 and 35, three between 36 and 40 pounds, and one hour between 46 and 50 pounds. The proposed bill would cut the working day to from four to six hours. Under pressure over 35 pounds shifts would be limited to one hour.

Wages range from $7 to $8.50 a day. All the men on the job are out, but are expected to return to work following the demonstration.

Mellon Will Not Resign.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 14.—"I never considered a thought of resignation," Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, said here today, speaking on his letter to the President, which caused Mr. Coolidge to rebuke the senate for its investigation into the treasury department.

"Of course, there are circumstances under which any man would be obliged to resign, but I never intimated that I would quit," he said.

Secretary Mellon arrived here to attend a banquet of the Pittsburgh chamber of commerce held in his honor.

fear!
Are you self-conscious about the impression you make on people?
PERSONAL appearance has a lot to do with the way you feel. Clothes count, of course. But still there is one thing so many people overlook—something that at once brands them as either fastidious or careless—the teeth.
Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.
Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel—a difficult problem finally solved.
A large tube of Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents; at your druggist's.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., Saint Louis, U. S. A.

The Significance of Slemp

If men are known by the company they keep the fondness of Coolidge for C. Bascom Slemp is anything but complimentary to the president.

The best-informed Washington observers are agreed that Slemp, now secretary to the president, will be his campaign manager. He has, according to Washington dispatches, "proved himself extremely useful to the president and has impressed Mr. Coolidge by his manner of handling people and dealing with the problems of his office."

It is not only the president that has been impressed with the qualifications and attributes of Mr. Slemp. There are several millions of people who are wondering why, in the face of the disaster that overtook the Harding cabinet, due partly to the incorporation in it of doubtful characters like Daugherty, President Coolidge continues to rely on Slemp, a composite of all the vices and none of the few virtues of the capitalist camp-followers who, after the great triumph of democracy in 1920, proceeded to convert the White House and the capitol in something closely resembling the combined gambling house, brothel and bar-room known as a "honk-a-tonk" that flourished in the West up to a few years ago.

The close affinity between the puritanical spokesman of capitalism like Coolidge and underworld types like Slemp for purposes of political chicanery is, we believe, a purely American phenomenon. It is often cited by spread-eagle orators as evidence of the thoroly democratic nature of American society but it is in fact evidence of degeneracy—both of institutions and of individuals. We have mentioned before, the wholesale debauchery of the masses by an arrogant and blatant and enormously wealthy ruling class. We believe that the mere toleration of a Slemp—an admitted dealer in political offices, a buyer and seller of political favors, a dispenser of largesse furnished by the capitalist political machine to the hangers-on as the confidant of a president of the United States, the brazen flaunting of this cheap mountebank in the faces of bankrupt farmers, child slaves and low-paid workers is sufficient proof that American capitalism—and its Coolidges—is brutally callous, unbelievably corrupt, consciously cruel and ruthless.

Those who expect from such rulers tame acquiescence with the will of the American masses as expressed thru the ballot are either ignorant of history or blind to its lessons.

A Hero Quits

Second Lieutenant Osborne Wood, son of Military Governor General Leonard Wood, of the Philippine Islands, has quit. President Coolidge has accepted his resignation. As matters stand now the young hero will be spared the inconvenience of having his record in the Islands examined by a Senatorial Committee.

Osborne Wood has confessed to having cleaned up $800,000 in speculative deals in a few months. This aroused the suspicion of many observers. Coupled with the policy pursued by his father, the Military Governor General, the affair begged investigation. There are many who are convinced that young Osborne was merely a receiver for his father in reaping the rewards and payments for allowing a horde of American prospectors and concessionaires to infest the Philippines.

The swiftness with which Osborne Wood quit the United States Army and the readiness with which Coolidge accepted his resignation make one very suspicious. Why the hurry? Do Wood and Coolidge fear that Congress may get around to the Ladd and Frear resolutions demanding an investigation of the administration of General Wood in the Philippines? On the face of it this appears to be the only explanation for the precipitate flight of this member of Wood's military kitchen cabinet oppressing the Filipinos.

But we venture to say that there is an additional, immediate, reason for the hurried departure of this military man who never saw fire or smelled smoke on the battlefields. It is being openly charged in Philippines that Lieutenant Osborne Wood has cleaned up his fortune in insiduously aiding and abetting the smuggling of Chinese coolies into the Islands for employment by American business interests. Nor has the widely circulated accusation that young Wood has made a lot of money in closing his eyes to the gambling institutions flourishing under his father's regime been cleared up by the War Department.

Young Wood has quit in order to avoid facing the fire of a searching investigation. Our Puritanic President has covered up his retreat in order to hide the corruption and graft of the imperialist rule of General Wood.

The names of all informers in criminal proceedings in Kentucky must now be made public in conformity with a recent ruling of the federal court of that state.

From what we know of the turbulent population of that state we are of the opinion that one of two things will happen; there will be either a sudden decrease in the number of informations sworn out or a startling increase in the number of deaths by lead poisoning.

Industrial Unionism and War

The American labor movement has expressed itself officially more than once in opposition to conscription of labor in time of war but the preparations to militarize the industries goes on merrilly just the same.

A recent bulletin of the Eighth Army Corps Area shows that the transportation industry is in process of preparation for what is euphemistically called a "national emergency" and that the superintendents and other classes of lackeys will function in war-time just as they do in peace—as the drivers and herdsmen for the capitalists and their government.

The bulletin, issued from Fort Sam Houston, Texas, is as following:

> The Reserve Railway Battalions recently authorized by the War Department have met with very hearty approval and co-operation on the part of the railroads. In the Eighth Corps Area nearly all the officers personnel has been obtained for the three Battalions allocated to that territory, but there are still some vacancies in the various non-commissioned officer grades which are to be filled by qualified men. The following gives the necessary qualifications for the respective grades: Assistant Chief Dispatcher, Round House Foreman and Wrecking Foreman are eligible for grade of Master Sergeant; Assistant Yardmaster, Bridge Foreman, Car Repair Foreman, Track Foreman, Chief Clerks and Assistant Chief Clerks for Technical Sergeants; Chief Clerk and Assistant Chief Clerks for 1st Sergeants; Road Foreman, Yardmaster, Master Carpenters, Dispatchers, Master Blacksmiths, Inspectors, Locomotive Engineers, Station Agents, and Traveling Foreman for Staff Sergeants; Carpenters, Conductors, Crane Operators, Firemen, Station Agents, Line Foremen, Telegraphers, Mechanics, Masons, Structural Ironworkers, Airbrake Experts, Blacksmiths, Boiler-makers, Electricians, Machinists, and Clerks for Sergeants; Conductors, Crew Dispatchers, Station Agents, Airbrake men, Blacksmiths, Boiler-makers, Machinists, Car Inspectors, Carpenters, Crew Dispatchers, Painters, Wreckers, Tower men, Line men and Clerks for Corporals.
> Any patriotic railway employes who are interested and desire to become affiliated with these organizations are requested to communicate with the Officer in Charge of Organized Reserves, Eighth Corps Area, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.
> There are no obligations exacted from members of these organizations, except in case of a National Emergency. Attendance at Summer Training Camps is optional.

Aside from the interesting information that the railroad companies have given this scheme of the militarists "very hearty approval and co-operation" there is that important fact which the list discloses in naming the quality of the personnel required, i. e., that modern warfare is largely a mechanical process and cannot be fought without the aid of large masses of workers, skilled and unskilled, behind the lines.

In a great industrial nation like America it is in the power of the workers to prevent war; were the workers organized in industrial unions it would be still easier but even with their craft unions as they now exist organized labor can, if it is so minded, wreck all war plans of American imperialism.

The last adventure in behalf of the House of Morgan was successful only because the officialdom of the organized labor movement went over neck and crop to the program of mass murder launched under the guise of making the world safe for democracy by; even under their personal direction in close alliance with the department of justice and the army intelligence service—which many a labor leader joined to spy upon his own membership—there was considerable but rather muffled protest from the masses.

The railway unions alone, if determined and well-led, could stop or at least seriously cripple any war engineered by the ruling class. It is probably for this reason that a special effort is being made to make their memberships part of the capitalist war-machine.

Peace societies and detailed descriptions of the horrors of war circulated by kind-hearted persons are all very well, but the murder of the masses to extend the empires of their rulers will cease only when the labor organizations refuse first to wage war and then, when confronted with the bloodthirsty special suppressive agencies of capitalist government, use their organized might to strip the exploiters of all economic and political power.

It can be said here that the opposition in industrial unionism by all agencies of the employers and finance-capitalists springs not alone from their fear that higher wages, shorter hours, improved conditions, would cut down their profits; the more intelligent section of the capitalist class realizes that the immensely augmented knowledge of their power that this form of organization gives the workers would tend to increase the danger of a challenge to capitalist industry and government all along the line to extent of making a successful major war impossible.

War is as necessary to capitalism in its present imperialistic stage as profits and there is consequently a direct connection between the huge foreign loans of the finance-capitalists, their kind words for the supporters of craft unionism and their unrelenting warfare on all working class groups who preach and organize for industrial unionism.

The bulletin of the Eighth Area Army Corps is an unanswerable argument for industrial unionism as a political weapon.

With the revelations made by the DAILY WORKER relative to the use of relief funds by Hoover for financing a murderous war on the workers' and peasants' government of Russia we have the explanation of the attacks made by him on the Friends of Soviet Russia.

Remembering That We Are Communists

By ISRAEL AMTER

THE development of the working class movement is a zigzag course. It is not merely a fight of the workers against the capitalists and the capitalist government. The lineup is not a clear one—here workers, there capitalists. During the course of the struggle, we have workers aligned against workers. Political movements also determine that, based on their economic interests, capitalists line up against capitalists.

In Germany, there is the party of the landowners, one of the industrialists and one of finance capital. In France, industrial capital fights against finance capital; in England, finance capital and landowners against industrial capital. In the United States, finance capital fights against industrial capital, altho the interlocking of directorates in banking institutions and industrial enterprises makes the cleavage less clear.

Analysis of Various Lands.

The labor movement is even more confused. In Germany, the various labor federations adhere to different parties. In the big German Federation of Labor, the Communists and Social Democrats are fighting not only for control of the unions, but for their political orientation. The agricultural workers follow the lead of three parties, the Communist, Social Democratic and Catholic Party. Then there is the big stratum of the middle class, especially the lower middle class. These elements, according to their immediate economic situation, vacillate between the Communists, Social Democrats and some liberal party. This is typical of the petty bourgeosie, whose interests and, consequently, their psychology change with the political wind.

In the United States, history will not be different; the development is tardier owing to the economic development of the country, and the composition of the political parties will somewhat differ from that of the European political parties. The big capitalist parties, up to a short time ago, had the support of the capitalists, petty bourgeoisie, farmers and workers. Democratic illusions are powerful in America, owing to the cast that starting life "on a shoe-string" was possible here. But as these possibilities have disappeared, owing to the concentration of capital, and existences are being more definitely stratified. The workers parsed thru a levelling process during the war; many small tradesmen have been proletarized; farmers have been proletarized, as witness the increase in farm tenancy and the flight of millions of farmers from the land; capital has been concentrated.

Farmers Becoming Class Conscious.

The proletarization of the farmers and of a section of the petty bourgeoisie—professionals, teachers and small tradesmen—is one of the most remarkable phenomena in American history. The workers, on the other hand, in part, despite becoming real proletarians and no longer belonging to the "aristocracy" of labor, retain their old psychology. It is not astonishing, therefore, that the main movement for a realignment of political forces in the United States emanates from the farmers. Crushed by finance capital, robbed by the railroads, elevators and speculators; forced to sell at starvation prices and to buy industrial products at highly inflated prices; they are rebelling and their rebellion is taking on a political aspect.

The farmers are, as yet, politically conscious only in part. Among many of them, it is merely a repetition of the People's Party movement—aganist the land-sharks, banks and railroads. The class-conscious farmer part knows clearly what it wants and has learned from the history of the past movements, and particularly of the Nonpartisan League, that it can only get what it wants from a class party. They have also learned that a farmer movement alone will result in failure—it will be crushed as the Nonpartisan League was crushed. The history of Bulgaria demonstrates the same facts in Europe. Hence these farmers have united with revolutionary and radical workers in the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the many State farmer-labor parties.

The other section of the farmers, less class-conscious, but demanding that a change in political affairs be brought about, still believes in "good," "honest" leaders. When such leaders appear, who have no intention of adhering to a class party, as La Follette, Shipstead and Johnson, these farmers follow in their trail, in the futile belief that these St. Georges will be able to kill the dragons of the old big capitalist parties. Their immediate economic interests may not be so closely bound up with those of the workers—or when they actually are, they still cherish the belief that all Americans are "free citizens" and are alike at the polls; and especially that the American electors control the government.

The workers are held back by many influences. Suffering from the same illusions as the farmers and petty bourgeoisie, they are imprisoned by leaders who, because of associations, lean in two directions. Gompers, as a member of the National Civic Federation, is merely an appendage of the capitalist class and is trying again to chain the workers to the wheels of the capitalist political chariot. Johnson, Keating, Fitzpatrick, et al., whose attachments are not so strong—altho once they were exponents of a separate farmer-labor party—are ready to barter. Today they have strong leanings to the "good" candidates of a big capitalist party. But the revolutionary and progressive workers, who have seen thru the sham of the game and have learned at least part of the lessons that were pounded into their heads in the past few years, but especially since 1922, demand the formation of a class party, together with the working farmers.

Dangers of Third Party Movement.

The question before us in this article is not whether the result of the conflict of interest at the St Paul convention will be a class farmer-labor party or a third party. The problem is: What is to be our attitude toward either one of these parties? What is to be our action as Communists?

Our action must always be Communist action. We must never forget that we belong to a Communist Party, with a Communist program. Not alone are we bound by the discipline of a Communist Party, but we have to propound the principles of a Communist Party. How then shall we be able to stand for both the Workers Party and the National Farmer-Labor Party or a third party program

Two dangers confront us: In the propaganda in the shops and union meetings, at public meetings and on the street corners, we may either entirely forget the fact that we are Communists and promote the program and platform of the reform party alone; or we may remember we are Communists so strongly that we bitterly attack the reform party platform.

Both methods are wrong—altho there is far greater danger that we shall forget our own definite aims—the aims of the Workers Party—and identify ourselves completely with the reformistic policy. In our zeal to secure the co-operation of progressive trade union leaders, in the needle trades and elsewhere, there was danger at one time of our identifying ourselves completely with their plans and not disclosing the fact that we are Communists. In our great, wholesome desire to build up a great class farmer-labor party, we may easily put our soul into the movement, make its program our own and gradually swing over to reformism. This is not likely to be true of the Workers Party, which is made up of healthy proletarian elements—but it is true of single members and of large numbers of them. Owing to the difficulty of defending a new party against the big capitalist parties and of presenting our criticism of its aims and methods; and in view of our wish to demonstrate to the workers and farmers that we are earnestly endeavoring to build up the new party, some members may very easily steer into reformist channels and actually get lost to the Communist movement.

Concrete Examples of Degeneration.

This is not only theoretically possible but has actually taken place in two drastic instances in recent history. The Communist Party of Germany sent three of the best members of its Central Executive Committee into the Socialist-Communist government of Saxony. It seemed as if this government might be the starting point of the Proletarian Revolution in Germany. But these three right wing Communists completely demoralized the Communist forces of Germany. Whether the German workers were ready to fight or not, the spectacle of these three Communists carrying on propaganda and acting in such fashion that they were not to be differentiated from the left social-democrats confused the revolutionary masses, who were waiting for action. These supposedly tried Communists were really corrupted by contact with the reformists and forgot their Communist program and aims.

In Great Britain, again during the recent elections, several Communist candidates on the Labor Party ticket even refused to state that they were Communists. Their election addresses played up all the reformistic illusions that still fill the minds of the working masses. Imbued with the false idea that it is their prime duty to build up the Labor Party against the capitalist parties, and not that they must defend it and still mercilessly criticize it for the weaknesses of its program and the falsity of its methods, they adulterated the Communist propaganda. Thereby they made the whole Communist Party responsible for propaganda and acts that a Communist Party must repudiate if it does not wish to be completely discredited.

Our Duty!

Let no one think that the task is simple: To defend a party and criticize it! It is extremely difficult especially for membership that is not trained in such maneuvering. The struggle throws us into this action and the membership must be prepared for it. If the members do not retain their physiognomy, if the Workers Party does not retain its identity, both in propaganda and action as a Communist Party, it will be lost in the struggle and disintegrate.

There is the other danger that the party may forget its duty to defend and build up the new party as the only means whereby the masses of workers and working farmers will be separated from the big capitalist parties. It is an illusion to hope that the masses of the workers and working farmers will, at the present stage of the struggle in the United States, turn to the Workers Party as their political leader. But to stand aside from the struggle and from participation in the party, even a third party—under certain given conditions—means to isolate ourselves, to be totally discredited as leaders of the revolutionary working class. It means to howl into the desert with our propaganda and to find no heeding ears.

Unexperienced comrades, however, may easily turn to the other pole and attack the reformist party so vehemently, that our sincerity in supporting it may easily be questioned. We must not repeat the errors of two and three years ago, when we were inexperienced in trade union work and struck out equally hard with both fists at all trade union leaders, regardless of the fact of whether they were willing to co-operate with us or were our outspoken enemies. Our enmity went so far that comrades were ready even to attack a Communist who had been elected a trade union official, simply because he had become an official. These were powerful remnants of left Communism from which the American Communists were suffering very seriously.

There is the further danger that Communists who recognize the proletarian struggle will not be fought out in the United States congress but by entirely different methods, may not earnestly enter the election fight with proper enthusiasm. Even as Communists we must utilize even the United States congress to carry on our battle. A Liebknecht, a Cachin—the Communists in the German, Bulgarian and Italian parliaments—have been able to rally big hosts of workers and peasants to the banner of the Communist Party. They have utilized parliament as the platform to tell—not so much the capitalists—but the workers and peasants the truth of the economic and political situation. It is the foremost tribunal that the bourgeoisie furnishes us—for the revolution. Hence we we must uproot this residue of Left Communism—remembering that we are Communists.

Furthermore, the workers and farmers of the United States still believe that the United States congress will be able to help them. They must have their own party. They must elect their own men. They must themselves experience the fact that the capitalists of America will slam the doors of congress in their faces and institute a fascist dictatorship before they will hand over any power to the workers and farmers. The workers of New York and Ohio should have learned this lesson in part; but they still believe that "democracy" exists in the United States and that these two instances are faux pas. We must fight along with them, all the time pointing out the futility of this method of struggle, and by word and act showing them the right way. This is remembering that we are Communists.

Remember! We Are Communists.

There is, however, less danger of our being too Left than of being too Right. Having come out of the Left sickness, practice shows that parties swing over to the Right, owing to their lack of experience in real Communist tactics.

The Central Executive Committee and the membership must beware of these dangers. Should the deadline be crossed, enormous damage can be done. The Workers Party can be demoralized, the revolutionary workers who are now turning to us will be disgusted; the Communists, who are acting as the real ferment within the whole labor and farmer movement, will have lost their stamina and the whole movement will be set back years.

Despite these dangers, the Workers Party must enter the struggle and prove its mettle. To stand still is to forget our task. To act merely as a propaganda organization is to betray the workers and farmers who want action. This will condemn us to complete isolation—while the movement will stumble on.

Hence into the fight, all the time remembering that we are Communists!

From Wiper to Swiper In Twenty Short Years

Remarkable Story of Harry F. Sinwell's Rise From Obscurity to Wealth and Power.

By R. R. H.

This is a faithful record of SUCCESS against overwhelming odds; of a typical American tenement urchin, born of a drunkard father and a washerwoman, and reared amid squalor and adversity. It is one of the glorious "simple annals of the poor," a veracious tale of a LIFE which might well be emulated by any ambitious young American. What tho the skies were gloomy on your natal day? What tho vice and ignorance surrounded your youth? We cannot all be president, but mayhap we can all be captains of industry if we but exercise the quality of stick-to-it-iveness.

The Americana is a magazine of inspiration for the COMMON PEOPLE. We cater to the MASSES. No euphemistic furbelows to our language—no attempt to influence public opinion. We are here to preach contentment and optimism—to show that human failures deserve to fail and that those at the top reached there by sheer GRIT and DETERMINATION.

And so to our story. Harry was well known on the Bowery. He had never attended school. He was a FIGHTER. One day back in 1898 or thereabouts he walloped a young upstart who had the temerity to thumb his nose at a passing gentleman—a GOOD man who had been dispensing CHARITY to the poor. One thing Harry had been taught well. "Now, Harry," his mother would say, as she wiped the suds from her eyes, "always respect yer betters, muh son, and yuh are shure to git ahead."

The thumbed GENTLEMAN was surprised to find such GALLANTRY among the hovels of the POOR. He went to the Sinwell shack and looked long and earnestly at the family photographs. He seemed especially impressed with Harry's yellow CURLS, as a baby. He then volunteered to help the brave boy. That was just the beginning. For be it known—that gentleman was the illustrious John D. Oilyfeller! Thus the humble Harry became acquainted with ROYALTY, as it were.

Harry went to work in an oil field. His first job was to keep the machinery CLEAN. Johan D. knew what he was about. He wanted to teach Harry to be CLEAN about EVERYTHING, and Harry's subsequent career proves the wisdom of his sponsor. Harry became known as the OFFICIAL WIPER, a modest beginning it is true—but wait.

Harry wiped well. Not only that. He did MORE than he was paid for. He held Johan's horses at the door. If Mrs. O. called, he held her baby. He was always OBLIGING. He worked OVERTIME from choice. He saved his money. He was loyal to Johan's interests. To him Johan was always right. He fought for him with his FISTS on more than one occasion. He was soon PROMOTED.

He became office boy. He cleaned windows, likewise cuspidors. He made himself USEFUL. Gray-haired men, with gold-headed canes, passing him in the waiting room, were often heard to remark sagely: "That young man has a BRILLIANT future before him." And he was ALERT. He got to know the men who called there—BIG men. Sometimes he overheard illuminating conversations, thru the door. The men inside talked about SENATORS and retaining fees and such like. It is thought that Harry PROFITED all thru life from the things he OBSERVED at the office.

* * * * * * *

And so, from the foregoing narrative you will understand how Harry eventually MARRIED Johan's daughter, the same girl he had formerly held on his knee to OBLIGE Mrs. O. And it will be clear, from our detailed account, how Harry became WEALTHY. He saved his money. From a mere wiper he became a SWIPER. Who can say he did not deserve such promotion? Nay, EARN it? He worked hard, as we have seen. Above all, he was loyal to his employer's INTERESTS.

Perhaps that is why he was chosen for such a distinguished dollar-a-year position when the WAR started. And then he was PATRIOTIC, another necessary and useful VIRTUE. When our correspondent asked him if he sympathized with our country in its sublime effort to save the world for DEMOCRACY, he replied nobly: "It has my sympathy."

In leaving this GREAT man's office our correspondent could not help noticing a framed verse on the wall which Mr. Sinwell smilingly said was his life MOTTO:

"The heights by great men reached and kept
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions
slept,
Were looting oil wells in the night."

The Poor Fish says he is against child labor but that if the manufacturers have to hire adults lots of things would cost more.

CAL COOLIDGE PREPARES TO "POINT WITH PRIDE"

FALL ON JOB GOT $500,000 FOR J. HAMON

Hank Sinclair Was to Furnish the Money

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Appointment of Albert B. Fall as Secretary of the Interior was worth $500,000 to him, the late Jake Hamon told H. W. Ballard, Los Angeles oil man, Ballard testified before the Senate oil committee today.

"It was to be paid $150,000 down and the balance over a period of four years," Ballard said.

"Who was to furnish the money?" Ballard was asked.

"The man who got Teapot Dome, Harry F. Sinclair—I suppose," Ballard replied.

Ballard Went to See Jake.

Ballard told of an investigation he made in 1920 of reports that Teapot Dome would be leased.

Ballard said he had been informed he should go to see Jake Hamon about it.

"I went to Ardmore, Okla. to see Hamon in May, 1920" Ballard said. "I had a private conversation and of course, he is not here to defend himself and I hesitate to state that conversation. You realize that no matter what one may say under these circumstances he will be called a liar and scapegoat."

The committee directed him to answer and he continued as follows:

Tells of Wood's Ambitions.

"I met Mr. Hamon," he said. "General Wood had an ambition to be president. He was to get from Wood a promise to have certain men appointed.

"I told him there was a strong oil crowd in California who would help him to develop Teapot Dome if he got the leases.

"He never suggested then there was anything irregular. He said he had the money to swing the convention and that there would be a hard fight ahead."

Fall Brought Like Steer.

Ballard said he went to California after this conversation, but returned in July and saw Hamon again.

"He told me it was all off; that the interests were too strong for him. He said Harding would be elected, that the Sinclair interest had beat him to it. He said he had put it up to Wood, but Wood refused to promise him anything. He said he would be a good loser and fight to elect President Harding.

"Hamon said he thought Mr. Harding had been framed—by whom he did not say. The secretary of the Interior had been picked before the nomination.

"He told me Fall had been bought like a steer and thrown into the office."

Hamon said, according to Ballard, that $1,000,000 would be spent to swing Oklahoma for Mr. Harding.

"What did Hamon tell you he was disappointed about when he returned from the convention?" Senator Spencer, Missouri, Republican, asked.

"He said his plan to be Secretary of the Interior had failed at the convention. He wanted to get in because there was a movement on foot then to have the naval reserves taken out of the Navy Department and put them under the Interior Department."

Doesn't Think Them School Boys.

"Who was behind that movement?"

"None of you are school boys. You know that Hamon, Doheny, Sinclair and others wanted to see the reserves transferred to the Interior Department."

Senator Stanfield, Oregon, Republican, drew from the witness a statement that he had told the Hamon story to a "Mr. Sanger, who is somewhere in Texas," and F. W. Reynolds, an associate in Los Angeles.

Plan to Call Hearst.

Senator Stanfield, thereupon said he "expected to ask" that subpoenas be issued for William Randolph Hearst, publisher, and Harry Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times.

MELLON AND COOLIDGE CONFER ON HOW TO ESCAPE INVESTIGATORS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and Senator Watson, Indiana, chairman of the Internal revenue Investigating Committee, called at the White House and reviewed the whole situation with the President.

After the conference Watson said no definite conclusions were reached except that he would reply to critics of the President's action on the floor of the senate today, if the legislative situation permitted.

On returning to the senate from the White House, Watson said the President had endorsed his speech Saturday in which he said Mr. Coolidge was criticizing the internal revenue bureau investigation and no others.

He reiterated that the President had none of the other inquiries in mind when he assailed senatorial investigating methods.

CHEAPER BONUS BILL IS OFFERED BY DEMOCRATS

Cash, Not Insurance, Their Scheme

WASHINGTON, April 15.— Democrats laid their bonus plan before the Senate today, proposing an outright cash bonus, which they claim will cost only half as much as the Republican "insurance policy" bill.

Senator Curtis presented the Republican bill from the Finance Committee thus formally opening the way for action tomorrow.

His bill, which will be given the right of way in the senate, under an agreement among Republican members of the committees, provides a 20-year endowment insurance policy instead of actual money.

$1 For Each Day.

The Democrats then presented their bill, which would give $1 for every day of service after the first sixty days and in amounts up to $500.

The money for the Democratic bonus would be raised by a treasury bond issue Experts say only $1,5[illegible],000 would be necessary for the project. Republicans say their's will cost $3,[illegible],000,000.

Under the Democratic scheme, the bonds would bear five per cent interest and would be retired within sixty years with redemptions of not more than $25,000,000 yearly.

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, who drew the Democratic bill, believes there are enough votes on the Republican side to help put the cash measures over.

Wants to Please Everybody.

Copeland thinks veterans will be more pleased with a cash payment instead of an insurance policy and that the public will be better pleased because only half the sum would be spent for his bill, in comparison with the Republican bill.

The tax bill will rest upon the Senate calendar until after some bonus bill is passed. Chairman Smoot who is in charge of the bonus, believes it should be disposed of within ten days.

BOSS YIELDS TO STRIKERS IN LOOP SHOP

Federation Calls On All Unions To Aid

The courageous battle of the garment strike picketers for better working conditions was rewarded yesterday when the Colonial Frock Company, 322 West Van Buren street, met the terms of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and signed an agreement identical to that of the other shops which have settled.

At the same time Anton Johannsen told the strikers at a mass meeting that a Federation "Committee of Fifteen" will send a call to all unions in Chicago, both in and out of the Federation asking them to aid the strike morally and financially.

Mayor William E. Dever has informed John Fitzpatrick that the strikers have been denied permission to parade, since it was announced at strike headquarters. The matter of granting the permit for a parade has been hanging fire since last Thur. Fitzpatrick was told by the Mayor that the permit was denied because of the congested traffic in the loop. Permission has been granted, however, to run float thru the loop advertising the struggle of the strikers for decent living conditions.

Will Run Float Thru Loop.

"The 'Committee of 15' plan to run a large float one half of which will show working conditions in the shops before the union existed, and the other half showing the higher standard enforced by the union." Meyer Perlstein, vice-president of the I. L. G. W. U., said something definite would be announced on this latter."

The matter of getting scabs out of the shops who are related to union men was mentioned by Anton Johannsen in his speech to the strikers at yesterday's meeting "I hope we will soon be able to get these scabs exposed," Johannsen said.

15 More Pickets Seized.

Thirty one strikers who appeared yesterday morning at ten o'clock before Judge Charles Foells charged with violating the picketing injunction, were told to report at two o'clock in the afternoon and were later dismissed for the day to appear in court at ten o'clock this morning. Fifteen more garment workers were grabbed on charges of picketing yesterday. Jannie Levitt, Fanny Jacoby, Sara Wood, Sophie Rosen, and Rose Cohn are to appear before Judge Sullivan on April 23. Those who come up before Judge Foell today include the following ten picketers arrested yesterday: William Simon, Phillip Hauser, Edith Abrahm, Lonice Brzeski, Frances Jazenska, Agnes Janiszewski, Christine Schmidt, Lottie Bonchefsky, Fridie Sucht, Joe Waisbrat.

Sam Gompers Has Left Us.

Samuel Gompers seems to have left our midst. He checked out of his room No. 1114, in the Hotel Morrison, and was immediately superseded by a shoe salesman. From the best available information, Gompers was in Chicago conferring with officials of Women's organizations and with union officials relative to women in industry. A union official told the DAILY WORKER that Gompers was here acting on the decision of the Portland Convention that the American Fede-

CALL IN TROOPS IN EFFORT TO AWE COAL MINERS IN KENTUCKY FIELDS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 15.—Both the eastern and western Kentucky coal fields are in the grip of strikes with troops on duty in Bell county where the miners of the Liberty Coal & Coke Company are out.

A strike order calling out 10,000 men has been issued by Lonnie Jackson, president of District No. 23, United Mine Workers of America, which includes all the western Kentucky field.

The order followed fruitless conferences of a month to agree on a wage scale. The miners insisted on the Jacksonville scale. The operators wanted a 25 per cent reduction.

Sinclair Bought Fall Like Steer

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Former Secretary of the Interior Fall was "bought like a steer and thrown into office," to lease Teapot Dome to Harry F. Sinclair, the late Jake Hamon told H. W. Ballard, Los Angeles oil man in 1920, according to Ballard's testimony before the Senate oil committee today.

MANNINGTON, INMATE OF "K STREET" HOUSE, FIGHTS SCANDAL PROBE

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Challenging the constitutional authority of the senate to investigate former Attorney General Daugherty, Howard Mannington, once resident of the "Little Green House on K. Street," today flatly refused to appear before the investigating committee.

In a letter to the committee, delivered by his attorney, Mannington refused to testify on the ground that he could not give a fair hearing in view of charges against him made on the floor of the senate by Chairman Brookhart.

DAUGHERTY GANG SHOWN IN HUGE BOOZE SCHEME

Investigators Are Told Sensational Story

WASHINGTON, April 15.—A sensational story of a gigantic liquor withdrawal plot alleged to have been engineered by Ohio politicians at Washington, was related before the Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee today, by Cecil H. Kerns, of Columbus, a paroled federal prisoner.

Kerns named Howard Mannington, once resident of the "Little Green House on K Street," Ralph Cole, former member of Congress and Abe Ungerleider, Columbus broker and William Haley, as the men who furnished the political influence to obtain withdrawal permits.

Get All Permits Wanted.

Abe Ungerleider told him, Kerns said, that he had contributed $50,000 to the Republican campaign fund and that he had an understanding that if he gave this sum "he could get all the liquor permits he wanted or get his money back."

Kerns said the alleged liquor deal was first broached to him by H. S. Adair, president of the Consolidated Drug Company of Columbus, Ohio. Adair was interested with William Halley, he said.

"It has been brought out here that Jesse Smith was sending telegrams to Halley," Senator Wheeler interjected.

"I was referred to Abe Ungerleider about obtaining liquor permits," continued Kerns.

Ungerleider Gave $50,000.

Ungerleider told him, Kerns said, that he contributed $50,000 to the Republican campaign fund.

"He said that he had an understanding that if he contributed $50,000 he could get all the liquor permits he wanted or get his money back," said Kerns.

Kerns said that 15,000 cases of liquor had been taken from warehouses in Ohio with the approval of Prohibition Director Russell of Ohio.

"I was told that Russell was bought and paid for," he said.

Kerns said he employed John E. Todd, former law partner of Harry M. Daugherty, in 1921, because he had influence with the attorney genral. He paid Todd $500 a month during his employment. Todd, he said, went to the Department of Justice and "saw certain high officials" to get information he wanted.

Served More Than Year.

The witness said that he was convicted of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law and sentenced to two years in Atlanta penitentiary. After serving a year and three weeks he was released on a parole in February, 1924, signed by Daugherty and H. H. Votaw, superintendent of federal prisons.

"Ungerleider told me that he was in a position to get liquor out of bond and that he had power and influence at Washington," the witness continued. The liquor, Kerns said, was to be handled thru the Aramand Candy and Drug Company of Cleveland.

Kerns said he sold Ungerleider 500 barrels of liquor which he had in bond. The payment for the liquor was handled thru a man named Grossburg, who was later indicted, but escaped to Canada.

"The liquor was to be made available for the bootleg traders in Ohio," Kerns said.

Permits Cost $17 Per.

The permits for the liquor, he said, were sold to Ungerleider for $1.15 a gallon.

William Barnett of the Consolidated Drug Company informed him, Kerns said, that he could get liquor out of bond. The permits were to cost $17 a case, he said. Howard Mannington and Ralph Cole were named by Barnett as his "associates" in the liquor deal, Kerns said.

GERMANS ASK MORATORIUM, PARIS HEARS

But Bow Their Necks To World Bankers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, April 15.—The German government's surrender to Hell-and-Maria Dawes and the international bankers will be forwarded to the reparations commission in Paris without delay, the United States is informed.

German industrialists will seek to obtain slightly better terms in favor of a absolute moratorium but the acceptance note signifies surrender to the essential phases of the Dawes-Wall Street plan.

The Big Bosses Agree.

At the same time a dispatch from Dusseldorf said the Franco-Belgian industrialists had agreed to prolongation of the so-called "Micum" agreements for two months and that documents were ready for signature.

The party leaders were conferring with the government today on the form in which Germany's acceptance shall go forward to Paris and it was expected the document would be ready soon.

Minister of Justice Quits.

Meantime it was announced that minister of justice, Emminger, has tendered his resignation to Chancellor Marx owing to inner party differences, presumably not connected with the reparations question. The chancellor will accept Emminger's resignation and probably will assume the portfolio of justice himself for the time being.

The decision of the State Premiers to accept the Dawes recommendations was unanimous. Even the nationalistic leaders, Von Knilling of Bavaria and Brandenstein of Mecklinburg, accepted the majority opinion without serious argument.

Germany Wanted Absolute Moratorium.

PARIS. April 15.—Germany is surprised that the Dawes committee of experts did not recommend her an absolute moratorium, Herr Schacht, German Financial expert, is quoted as saying in an interview printed in the Echo de Paris today.

The newspaper's Berlin correspondent quotes Schacht, who has represented Germany in various negotiations here, as declaring the Dawes recommendations over-estimate Germany's capacity to pay.

Schacht's utterances may be considered as especially important, the correspondent says, because he participates in all the meetings of the German Ministerial Council.

Extend Micum Agreements.

PARIS, April 15.—Premier Poincare presiding at the cabinet meeting today, confirmed reports that the accords between the Franco-Belgians and German industrialists in the Ruhr (the Micum agreements) have been extended for two months.

MacDonald Is Satisfied.

LONDON, April 15.— The British Government is entirely satisfied with the Dawes report on German reparations, Prime Minister MacDonald said in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Great Britain will support the Dawes recommendations in their entirety, provided other parties concerned adopt a similar course, MacDonald said.

HEARST KNEW ABOUT PLOT TO STEAL TEAPOT AT G. O. P. CONVENTION

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15.—"It was generally known that there was a conspiracy at the Republican national convention to select a nominee who would lease Teapot Dome," Ballard testified, adding that he believed this was the dominant issue at the convention.

Asked if he would name three responsible citizens who would bear out his statements, Ballard named Harry Chandler, publisher of the Los Angeles Times, E. L. Doheny and "Mr. Hearst," who he said he believed would tell the committee the same story.

MINNESOTA STAR, TRAITOR TO LABOR CAN'T GET BUYER

Even Hearst Refuses To Bid On It

(By The Federated Press)

MINNEAPOLIS, April 15.—The Minnesota Star, founded as a Farmer-Labor daily in 1920, and now describing itself as "independent," failed to interest possible purchasers when the time for opening bids came in district court here. Sealed bids had been called for, but none were received.

The daily, which has been in receiver's hands on motion of a creditor paper company, was valued at $25,000 in a verbal bid for all the assets by the attorney for Thomas Van Lear, present editor, John Thompson, present business manager and A. B. Frizzell, who handles Great Northern railroad advertising. The receiver, a Minneapolis advertising man, refused to consider the offer. Another bid of $100,000, made for the same interests, carried with it the pledge to keep the paper going and pay the creditors out of the earnings. This was also rejected.

Dropped Labor Policy.

Altho the circulation of the Star has slowly climbed until it is now approaching 60,000, this has been at the expense of practically all the features that formerly distinguished it as a farmer and labor daily. Appeals to these elements to buy the paper and make it once more a militant daily organ of the producers in Minnesota and the northwest have failed. The liabilities were considered too great. With about half of the circulation of the older dailies in Minneapolis, the department stores and other firms were willing to pay the Star half the standard advertising rate. Hearst interests looking into the Star plant decided not to buy because the only chance of its becoming a going concern, in their opinion, was to make it a spirited third party organ, which they are not now willing to do.

Van Lear-Townley Fight.

Bitter quarrels between Van Lear and A. C. Townley, Nonpartisan League chieftain, who usually controls a majority of the proxies at stock-holders meetings, have marked the recent history of the daily. Van Lear in 1922 ousted the original editor, Herbert Gaston, whom he now charges with some of the responsibility for the extensive investment in plant made in 1920. Gaston has shown that Van Lear was on the board of directors at the time the important decisions were made.

What Did the Russian Communists Decide?

There is universal interest thruout the United States, among thinking workers especially, about the decisions of the Russian Communist Party growing out of its recent discussions, which have been extensively published in the DAILY WORKER.

We are, therefore, sure that there will be an extensive reading of the two resolutions on party policy, the first of which is being published on Page Five today.

The first of these is the Resolution of the Central Committee of the Central Control Commission Concerning the Party Structure. This was unanimously adopted, at the joint session of the Political Bureau of the Russian Communist Party and of the Presidium of the Central Control Commission. Turn to Page Five and read it today.

PICK HUGHES TO FRAME THE CAL PROGRAM

G. O. P. To Stand On "Record"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 15.—In selecting his running mate and writing the platform of his party this year, President Coolidge will refuse uncompromisingly to try to please the La Follette liberals or any other group outside the regular conservative republicans.

The President is understood here to have very definite ideas about both the man who will occupy the second place on the ticket and the platform on which he is to run.

To Be Born in White House.

The platform undoubtedly will be drafted at the White House, with the President and Secretary of State Hughes taking a leading part in writing it. This subject has already received general consideration so that it is well understood that the strike-breaker President wants the platform to do these things:

1. Express the party's purpose to punish all wrongdoers in official places. This will be done without in any way cringing under criticism, or accepting all the blame for conditions revealed by the scandal investigations.

Don't Like "Blocs."

2. Pledge the party to uphold "majority rule" in the conduct of the government, as distinguished from rule by coalitions or blocs. In other words, the platform will constitute an attempt to rally voters anew around the party standard and restore the broken down party system.

3. Point with pride to Republican achievements and promise a constructive program of legislation and governmental economy, providing the country will give the party a working majority in Congress.

Urge Someone "Steadfastly True."

The President wants a running mate who is a thoroly staunch party man, who has been steadfastly true to the regular wing of the party and who will not, if elected, be likely to "play with" the various blocs and groups in the Senate.

Salmon Fishers Rebel; Coastwide Strike Is Likely

(By The Federated Press)

SEATTLE, April 15.—When the ship Libby Maine signed up a non-union fisherman crew for salmon cannery work in Alaska, union sailors quit here. Efforts are being made by the packers to ignore the Alaska Fisherman's Union as well as the Sailors' Union in outfitting cannery boats for the summer season. Recently the packers announced they had reformed and were banishing objectionable features from the "hell ships." Workers find condtions worse this year than last.

* * *

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—The Alaska Fishermen's Union has called a meeting to propose an ultimatum to the Alaska Packers' Association, which, if rejected, will probably precipitate a coastwide strike. The fishermen claim that the packers have practically established a lockout by putting their ships to sea with non-union crews. There is no trouble over wages or hours, but the discussion centers around working conditions and recognition of the union.

Three Killed On Fascisti Dirigible Which Broke Away

ROME, April 15.—Three men were killed today when the newly constructed army dirigible N-1 broke from its moorings during a wind squal and was whirled away.

The men—two soldiers and a mechanician—were holding ground ropes and failed to drop in time as the big airship bounded into the air. They were carried high in the air and dashed to pieces as they fell on the hard field when unable to cling to the ropes any longer.

The skeleton crew aboard the airship finally got it under control and brought it back safely to its hangar.

FARRELL RADICAL BAITERS BEGIN TO HAUL IN HORNS

Brutal Officials Fear Result of Acts

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

FARRELL, Pa., April 15.—Prosecutor Rickard of Mercer County is making final efforts to bring the Farrell cases before the grand jury on April 21st. No stone is being left unturned by the state to railroad the defendant workers to jail.

Chief of Police Leyshock and Squire Franek, in whose court the preliminary hearings were held, have been undergoing a change in heart and are now endeavoring to crawl back into the good graces of the Farrel workers by Pilate-like washing their hands of the guilt resting on their heads.

It is alleged that Franek now tells the public that had he known at the hearings what he knows now that he would have dismissed the cases. Leyshock, the unhorsed Cossack of Farrell, whose brutal hirelings have time after time invaded workers' meetings to break them up, is also attempting to get back into the good graces of the workers. Public opinion has been aroused by the defense and these political tools of the steel barons see the handwriting on the wall and know that the voters in Farrell will clean out this nest of lickspittles at the next election.

The defense is fully determined to fight this battle thru to a successful finish and we are positive that victory will crown our efforts. There will be no let up and the defense will not be lulled to sleep by the Pilate-like statements of the Franeks and Leyshocks. A cordon of public opinion is encircling Farrell and the righteous wrath of an aroused working class is chasing out the puppets of the steel barons who too long have received their nourishment from the breasts of a working class only to trample them under their feet when their steel masters so orders.

California Bulls Sued For Raid On I. W. W. Defense

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO Cal., April 15.—Suit against the San Francisco police department for false arrest has been filed in federal court on behalf of Albin Kullberg, secretary Marine Transport Workers' union of the I. W. W. Suit was brought at the instance of the American Civil Liberties union as part of a campaign to stop what it describes as the lawless persecution of radicals in California.

At the latest raid on I. W. W. defense headquarters March 31 detectives arrested five men, including Ed Delaney, the defense secretary, and Archie Sinclair, a political prisoner at Leavenworth during and after the war. All were held for vagrancy, altho all were employed at the time.

"California is the one state in the union today where criminal prosecution of radicals for ideas and for membership in radical organizations still continues," the Civil Liberties union declares. "There are at present 97 members of the I. W. W. in San Quentin and Folsom prisons under the criminal syndicalism act, and many more in county jails awaiting for trial for the same offense, besides hundreds in jail for minor charges, as a result of the persecution of men for their opinions. None of these men have been guilty of any crime. They were sent to jail for their beliefs and their membership in the I. W. W.

Concert For German Relief.

NEW YORK CITY, April 15.—Section No. 1, Friends of Soviet Russia, affiliated with the International Workers' Aid will hold an International Concert and Dance for the benefit of the starving German workers on Saturday evening, April 26th, at the Workers' Hall, 105 Eldridge St.

The concert promises to be excellent and the committee has secured Mr. Monroe Spiegel, violinist, A. Lietner, pianist, the Ukranian Chorus, and Sam Liptzen, the famous impersonator of "Uncle Sam," will recite. The concert will be followed by dancing with music furnished by the U. D. B. B. Admission 35 cents. Affiliated organizations should endeavor to sell as many tickets in advance as possible in order to assure a success for this affair.

Russia Imposes the Sentence of Death On Five More Spies

MOSCOW, April 15.—Five persons have been sentenced to death at Odessa for espionage, it was announced here today:

The condemned spies include the famous girl leader, Neldanova, who, it was brought out at her trial, acted under instructions from the Polish War office during the Russo-Polish war.

Others sentenced include Henry Kintoff, a representative of the Polish reparation bureau, who managed to escape and is sentenced in Absentia and Komarrov, former commander of Arussian army corps.

DAILY WORKER SCORNS DETRACTORS; WILL CONTINUE AGGRESSIVE FIGHT

The DAILY WORKER—installed in its new plant—is entering the second stage of its career. The newspaper, as the following letter from McMurray, Wash., points out, has been fearless and aggressive in its attack on the powers that be. We have caught the attention of the workers, but we have been annoying the capitalists and their hangers-on, including reactionary officials of the trade unions.

As usual, they are going to attack the DAILY WORKER in their usual underhanded method. They are going to sidle-up to Workers Party members and whisper out of the corners of their crooked mouths, words meant to undermine the faith of the workers in their DAILY. They are going to say, "The DAILY WORKER is inacurate and unfair."

Can't Tone Down Paper.

But Workers Party members intend to keep their paper fearless and aggressive, and they are not going to listen to cheap detractors. They know if they took stock in these whisperings, or lost faith in their DAILY, or lost their nerve, or tried to tone the paper down to please the conservative individuals, they would be selling out to their enemy. It is such letters as this which make us want to keep the paper militant and fearless.

Likes Its Fearlessness.

To the DAILY WORKER: Am already a reader of the DAILY WORKER and consider it the greatest thing in the history of the American labor movement. Were the authorities at Washington, D. C., and elsewhere not so infernally busy right now in defending and protecting themselves and their bosses, and were it not also an election year, the DAILY WORKER would surely be suppressed. [illegible]m somewhere a wonderful new thing has come to us—fearlessness. With this weapon and the knowledge that we must win back our lost liberties if we are ever to exercise them again, the mighty expansive spirit of BROTHERHOOD is leading us on. We are on the way.

Yours for the Revolution,
S. C. GARRISON.

SEEK TO BLOCK DAVIS PLAN TO DEPORT 17 I.W.W.

Joint N. Y. Meeting Will Fight Exiling

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 15.—The deportation orders against 17 alien ex-political prisoners will be protested at a meeting arranged jointly by the American Civil Liberties Union and the New York Branch of the General Defense Committee at which the chief speakers will be David Wallerstein, Philadelphia lawyer, and Richard Brazier, one of the men slated for deportation. The meeting will be held at the Civic Club, 14 West 12th Street, New York City, on April 21.

Secretary of Labor Davis will be asked to set aside the deportation orders to permit the seventeen men to remain in this country on probation, since that is the only means left to stop execution of the orders.

All of the 17 aliens are members of the I. W. W., convicted during the war "for mere belief and expression of opinion" and are "residents of many years standing in the United States without friends, relatives or connections elsewhere," according to the Civil Liberties Union.

The deportation orders were issued by the secretary of labor in 1921 under a new amendment to the immigration act, making violation of wartime laws a deportable offense.

Co-Operation of Milk Producers.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., April 15.—A farmers' committee representing the milk producers of New England is in session here drawing up a plan for co-operative producing and distribution. After the particular plan is chosen from the many that have been put before the committee, organizers will be sent thruout the New England states to put the co-operative features in operation.

GEMS GLITTER AS D.A.R. ASSEMBLES TO FIGHT "REDS"

Will Hit Communism And La Follette

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Glittering with jewelry, 3,000 "Daughters of the American Revolution," assembled again today to reaffirm their often expressed opposition to "radicals."

President Coolidge last night assured them that the American revolution was really a "conservative movement," and he made a veiled bid for their votes next November by urging them to go to the polls and "exercise the right of franchise after fair, considerate and mature deliberation."

Attack Bob and Communism.

The resolutions committee met today to embody the President's recommendations for an uncompromising Americanism in form for approval by the Congress. Resolutions rebuking the group in Congress headed by Senator LaFollette; declaring that Communism means anarchy; declaring for impartial and drastic law enforcement and for extension of Americanization and education work will be presented.

Following the lead of Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president-general, the committee is expected to take a stand against unrestricted immigration. It will probably endorse merchant marine by ship subsidy.

Plea for League.

A note of liberalism may creep into the convention's proceedings thru Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the former secretary of state. Mrs. Lansing will make a report on foreign relations.

Because of the part her husband played in support of the League of Nations, her committee is expected to return an endorsement of some type of world organization—if not the league, at least a world court.

Henry Ford Is Still On Anxious Seat Over Muscle Shoals

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Friends of the McKenzie bill, providing for acceptance of Henry Ford's offer for Muscle Shoals, manifested little concern today over the sharp denunciation yesterday by Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, of the automobile manufacturer's proposal.

Senator Heflin, Alabama, reiterated his prediction that the McKenzie bill would be favorably reported from the agriculture committee and passed by the Senate at the present session of Congress. Heflin said there was a possibility of both the McKenzie bill and the Norris plan for government operation of the nitrate fields being reported to the Senate.

Should the committee turn down the McKenzie measure and report the Norris plan to the Senate, adherents of the Ford offer intend to offer it in the Senate as a substitute for the committee proposal.

* * *

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON. — Muscle Shoals will not be handed over to Henry Ford and his descendants for 100 years—thanks to the persistence of Senator Norris of Nebraska in resisting the organized generosity of the lobby-led majority of the house, which has for years insisted that Ford shall have the nation's biggest remainig water power as a gift.

Norris has made the fight, year after year, for government development and operation of the giant power in the Tennessee river at Muscle Shoals, and he has just been renominated by a big majority by the farmer and labor vote in Nebraska, on a government ownership platform.

The Scripps newspapers have officially flopped from pro-Ford to government ownership, on the Shoals issue, within the week. The Philadelphia North American carries a scorching editorial, analyzing the Ford proposition as the most scandalous since Teapot Dome. Progressive senators who have wobbled on the question every time Henry Ford said something true about Wall street, have finally landed on Norris' side of the argument. Senator Ladd is the one exception, and he is unlikely to be heard from henceforth in the case.

CHIEF PETTY OFFICER BRINGS WAR TO GREAT LAKES NAVAL STATION

A board of inquiry at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station today questioned witnesses to the murder last night of Daniel B. Wentworth, chief petty officer by F. W. Helmer, another chief petty officer. In a mess hall, in the presence of scores of fellow officers, Helmer fired six shots point blank at Wentworth.

WHOSE MILLIONS WILL WIN--ISSUE AT THAW'S TRIAL

Paid Alienist Denies Harry Is Batty

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, April 15.—The fight which Harry K. Thaw and his millions are waging in the city hall court room for his release from the Pennsylvania hospital for the insane is attracting the attention of thousands of eyes which have seen the Thaw millions win before. The question is whether Harry's millions—estimated at six—will be as heavy artillery as the millions of the Thaw family which are now opposing his release.

Counting heavily against the millionaire paranoic is the fact that his last period of freedom was brought to a sudden termination by his antics with the Gump lad, which led to his arrest and subsequent return to an asylum.

Scoring against him again is the fact that his former wife, Evelyn Nesbit, whose former relations with Stanford White led to his slaying the brilliant architect, is this time testifying against him and demanding his continued incarceration on the ground that she fears he will kill her.

Harry K. Thaw's intense interest in sex matters was further discussed as the trial of his sanity was resumed today.

Arthur Dickson, attorney for the committee of the Thaw estate, also opposing the release, opened the day's proceedings with resumption of cross-examination of Dr. Mills, octogenarian alienist, who testified yesterday that Thaw was sane.

The rabbits which featured yesterday afternoon's session, again were discussed. A hospital record telling of Thaw's interest in his rabbit pets and their mating was read.

Nudity and Rabbits.

Dickson also quoted from a record taken at "Kirkbride's," where Thaw has been incarcerated for seven years, telling of an attendant finding Thaw in his bedroom one morning, nude, with a rabbit on each shoulder.

Thaw was forbidden to take the rabbits to his room after this.

Harry's interest in young girls while on walks with hospital attendants also was described in the record.

Dr. Mills was asked about these reports and what he thought they indicated at the time he found Thaw sane. The alienist said he didn't change his mind.

Attack on Gump Boy.

The Gump case was dragged into the morning session. Thaw's attack upon the Kansas City boy was described to Dr. Mills by Dickson and the witness said he had ignored it in his finding Thaw sane, because it never had been a matter of court record.

It was decided that William Gray, representing Miss Nesbit, also should be permitted to cross examine Dr. Mills.

Gray also asked if the fact that Thaw had been adjudicated insane by seven different tribunals, would not affect the witness's opinion.

Beating of Girls.

The case of a certain Mrs. Merrill alleged to have procured young girls for Thaw to beat, was recited to the witness and asked if this would not cause him to reconsider. He said he didn't consider sexual perversion a sign of insanity.

Rabbit Perversion.

"Don't you consider Thaw's actions towards the rabbits indicative of sexual perversion?" Dickson asked.

"No sir, I do not."

"Was he sane or insane when he shot Stanford White?" Dickson asked. At the mention of White, whom Thaw shot to death in 1906, a light perspiration stood out on Harry's forehead and he wiped his brow and shifted uneasily in his seat. Dr. Mills said he didn't know Thaw at the time.

Factory And Firetraps.

Langley Pleads Not Guilty.

COVINGTON, Ky., April 15.—John W. Langley, Republican congressman from the Twelfth Kentucky district, pleaded not guilty in federal court here today to an indictment charging conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law.

Boss Yields To Strikers

ration of Labor should become more active in organizing women in their industries. According to this union leader, the American Federation of Labor is tired of the old policy of waiting for women to enter industry, and is now laying plans to a start an agressive campaign to organize the women.

Whereabouts A Mystery

The exact whereabouts of Sammy are not known. Some reports are that he checked out of his hotel in order to dodge publicity, and is still in Chicago. A news agency declares that Gompers is not in Chicago and has not yet returned to Washington. The Washington papers say nothing about his return to that city.

One woman's organization declares that their officials were in conference with Gompers relative to organizing the women in industry, but that nothing had been accomplished by his visit. This organization states that Gompers has left for Montreal, where he will talk about the problem of organizing women.

Sammy Mum On Strike.

While in Chicago Gompers made no public statement relative to the strike of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' strike, altho as the DAILY WORKER pointed out to him, this was a good fierd to investigate "Women in Industry." One representative of one of the large Chicago dailies was told by Gompers that he "was considering" speaking for the strikers. Gompers had plenty of opportunity to at least make a public statement supporting the strikers, but did not do it.

Johannsen Addresses Strikers.

In his speech to the strikers yesterday Anton Johannsen, of the "Committee of 15," said the injunction against striking must be met by the organized power of the workers. He showed how organized labor is respected and feared by big business and by politicians, pointing to the fact that labor had been able to cut down Crowe's majority in the election to less than 19,000.

"In Butte, Montana, during the telephone strike," said Johannsen, "the organized miners were able to have almost every Bell telephone in the city taken out and replaced by an automatic phone. A federal judge in Helena, Montana, issued an injunction against the strikers and many of them went to jail for striking. The garment strike here is only one phase of the struggle of the workers against unfair use of the courts.

"Nowadays judges and lawyers can interpret the laws to suit themselves because there are so many laws. Judges and lawyers differ as to the application of almost any law. You need a lawyer nowadays to stay out of jail, you need a lawyer to get into jail, you need a lawyer even to stay in jail. Let us hope that the struggle of the garment strikers against Judge Sullivan's injunction will help to change all that. This strike is one battle in the fight to simplify the laws and enable the workers to strike for a decent living."

BRITISH PLUTE PRESS IN RAGE AT RUSS ENVOYS

Soviet In No Hurry, Says Zinoviev.

LONDON, April 15.—While the British capitalist press is venting its rage against the Workers' Republic of Russia the envoys of that mighty power are calmly proceeding with their task of attempting to reach an economic agreement with the British government in order to facilitate business between the two countries.

Yelping Curs Licked.

American correspondents yelp in unison with the anti-Soviet cry set up by the bloated Britishers and sent only lying cables to their home papers telling of the confusion among the Russian delegation, their lack of punctuality and so forth.

The fact is that no set of foreign representatives ever appeared in the British Lion's den with a higher morale and a more respectable aggregation of man power supplied with lethal weapons to bolster it than the Soviet envoys. John Bull, despite his boasted valor, was never oblivious to the sharp end of the bayonet, and the old Russian bear that used to give him nightmares was only a poor old circus specimen compared to the lusty animal who now shakes his standards to the winds on the borders of John Bull's many colonies.

The British government is not exactly in the best position to hurl any attacks at Moscow because the workers seized their property and held it against the former highwaymen. Britain is the great international pirate, that has left a trail of blood thruout the world and is still holding that loot by force, despite the attempts of countless millions of her subjects to win back their rights, even with their heart's blood.

Zinoviev Speaks.

The Britons famed for politeness have shown themselves in this case to be common scolds whose anger over the passing of their power urges them to vent their chagrin in scurrilious attacks on the Russian envoys.

The Soviet envoys have quite a heavy bill to present to the British capitalist class. Speaking in Moscow, Zinoviev declared that there was no hurry to reach an agreement with Britain, tho the Soviet government was willing to talk concessions to concessionaires. The government would take its obligations seriously and was not in danger of being overthrown, something that could not be said for the capitalist governments of Europe.

While the Anglo-Russian conference is taking place in London, the royal family of Roumania are scouting Europe looking for a place to lay their heads. It seems they were successful in striking luck in Paris and there is a report that the generous Poincare gave them a loan of 100,000,000 francs in consideration for which it is alleged France has taken a first mortgage on Rumania. The purpose of the fund is to reorganize the Roumanian army, which was very much down at the heels lately, and the King expects to shave enough off some corner to hold off his creditors for awhile.

We Can Wait!

The Italian and Spanish dictators are quite angry with the King of Roumania because he is not accustomed to paying his bills. The royal gentleman was all ready to go to Italy and Spain for a visit recently but the two gentlemen who dictate to both countries advised the king they might hold him for cash if he showed up. The King went to France, where they still have some of Morgan's money left.

The negotiations between the Holland and the Soviet governments over the resumption of trade relations are proceeding satisfactorily. The conference will be resumed in Berlin this week. The Soviets have made de jure recognition of their government an essential condition of the resumption of commercial relations. As Zinoviev said the Soviet government is in no need to rush matters. It is strong and powerful and growing stronger while its enemies are growing weaker.

Equity Not Likely To Accept Offer Of Theatrical Bosses

NEW YORK, April 15.—The executive council of the Actors' Equity Association is considering the offer made by 27 members of the Producing Managers' Association.

The managers offer is intended to head off the strike scheduled for June 1 if the contract is not renewed May 31 when it expires.

The talk in Equity is that the managers offer won't be accepted, because it contains a loophole allowing men to pay dues into the Equity without being members of the union and subject to its rules.

Al Schaap Talks.

Al Schaap, organizer for District No. 8, of the Young Workers League, speaks tonight on "The Progress of the Young Workers' Organizations in the United States." The meeting, given by the North Side Branch of the Young Workers League, will be held in Imperial Hall, 2409 North Halsted street.

METHODIST LADS MAY BE CANNED FOR GAY PARTY

Student Paper Calls the Professors "Fossils"

DALLAS, Texas, April 15.—Wholesale expulsion of Southern Methodist University students was considered today by school authorities as they delved into details of the "wilderness dance" at Savage Lake, which celebrated publication of "The Dinkey," outlaw campus paper.

Federal officers claimed today to have additional evidence of the lake scandal on which to base their demands for prosecution by the special grand jury which reconvenes next Monday.

Several students and women who participated in the party have told their stories, federal prosecutors announced, and have agreed to appear before the grand jury.

"There were no S. M. U. girls at the party, we are sure," Dr. Horace M. Whaling, president of the university, said.

"The Dinkey" was declared an outrage by Whaling.

In its main editorial "The Dinkey" said:

"Worn Out Old Fossils."

"It is about time to tie a can to several of the old, worn out fossils who walk around our rotunda with their faces two feet long, non-progressive, pessimistic, physically and mentally dead.

"The students of S. M. U. have no desire to spend their money for the privilege of sitting in class rooms where a suit of clothes bellows out meaningless words. Give us better teachers."

Flaying the co-eds, whom it termed "painted sepulchers of abomination," "The Dinkey" said:

"We blush with shame at the attire and actions of a goodly number of our chorus girl co-eds on University Hill."

CHICAGO BISHOP FORGETS PEACE; READY FOR WAR

Camouflages Jingoism As Humanity Fervor

The question of pacifism again is engrossing the Methodist Episcopal church of Chicago, with Bishop Thomas Nicholson, of the Chicago Diocese openly opposed to the doctrine of "peace at any price."

A statement made public today in Bishop Nicholson's behalf pointed to the Bishop's active war record and declared:

Same Old Wilson Bunk.

"If unavoidable great humanitarian conflict was on, or if a great crime against civilization and humanity was committed, he should be for war as certainly as he would not be content to simply offer prayers if some villian attacked his wife. He would think it a case of muscular Christianity."

If the Christian church enters into the fight against war with the right spirit, the right teaching and the right influence, it is only a matter of time before its efforts would be crowned with success, the bishop thinks.

"As for the attitude of the Methodist Episcopal church, the bishop said no one man had a right to speak for that body but all the precedents of the past showed that the Methodist church had been unalterably loyal," the statement pointed out.

The bishop's stand was outlined on the heels of a sharp clash at a meeting of Methodist ministers on the question of pacifism.

This Preacher A Pacifist.

Rev. A. L. Meist, field secretary of the Methodist social service federation, defended the stand of the 38 theological students at Northwestern university, who, several weeks ago, signed pledges to stay out of war at any cost. Heist declared the hue and cry that followed their action simply indicated a "strong war spirit."

Several sharp exchanges occurred. Several ministers supported Reverend Heist's plea for denunciation of "My country, right or wrong." If public opinion cannot be directed against war.

Other ministers said they would join heartily in "damning war" but were ready to fight if necessary.

IN GOD'S OWN COUNTRY.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 15.—All Isaac Cooper had in his pockets when they searched him was a letter from the Jewish welfare board entitling him to one night's sleep in a flop house. Cooper choose a longer sleep—he went into a shooting gallery, said he would like to "try some target practice," and sent a bullet into his brain.

Russo-Turkish Trade Brisk.

MOSCOW, April 15.—The Russo-Turkish trade relations have become considerably more brisk lately in consequence of facilities granted to Turkish merchants and the practical settlement of a number of questions relating to trade operations.

CLASS CONSCIOUS FIGURES TELL AMAZING FATE

Who Owns Country? Ask Morgan

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

Are you one of the lucky 1,500,000 who divided up on a pot of between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000 on April 1? If not you have missed out on your share in the ownership of the country's industrial wealth and there must be some flaw in the contention of big business that banks, railways, public utilities and manufacturing establishments are owned by the people.

This big fortune distributed on April 1 was no April fool. It represents the dividend checks mailed out on that date by 402 corporations, every check good for so much cash. It includes in addition to regular monthly and quarterly payments a considerable number of extra dividends paid out of the exorbitant profits of 1923. Among the concerns making such extra payments, were Eastman Kodak, American Window Glass, Island Creek Coal, Penn Central Light & Power, Fajardo Sugar, and Pittsburgh Oil & Gas Co.

Billions in Dividends.

This great outpouring of cash to the small class in the country which lives off the labor of others calls attention to the increasing wealth which they receive each year from the profits of industry. According to the U. S. Government Department of Commerce the average monthly dividend and interest payments during 1923 amounted to $298,987,000, bringing the amount paid out during the year as a whole to the huge total of $3,587,844,000.

Never before the history of the country have the cash profits paid out to stockholders and bondholders reached so large a total. It exceeds by over $168,000,000 the former peak in 1920. It means that the actual cash payments to the owning class are running more than 100 per cent above those of the pre-war years 1913 and 1914. Total payments in 1914 amounted to $1,787,376,000.

The dividend and interest payments of 1923 would have provided for 2,500,000 families on the basis of wages now prevailing in the manufacturing establishments of the country. If one-half of the total had been set aside as a national savings fund to provide for future capital needs, the remainder would have given a wage increase of 25 per cent to 5,000,000 workers, allowing a higher standard of living to about one-fifth of the entire population.

The total cash payments to the absentee owners of the country's capital during the last ten years have amounted to approximately $27,000,000,000, enough to purchase the entire national debt with a considerable surplus besides. This huge total is only a partial reflection of the full profits of the investing class. Billions of dollars have been held in corporate surpluses and reserves to be disbursed later when income taxes have been reduced or to be divided as stock dividends.

Senators May Jail Mal Daugherty For Withholding Books

WASHINGTON, April 15. — The Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee today will decide whether to order contempt proceedings against Mal Daugherty for his refusal to produce the books of his bank for the committee. Open hearings will be suspended for the day while the committee holds an executive session.

Brookhart is of the opinion that Mal Daugherty can be ordered into custody of the sergeant at arms of the senate and held until he produces books of the Midland National Bank of Washington court house, Ohio, but other members of the committee believe that only court action, involving a long legal battle, can accomplish that end.

Wheeler also will confer with Senator Borah, chairman of the committee appointed to investigate the indictment of the Montana Senator. Borah said the investigation is not likely to get under way until the middle of the week when witnesses subpoenaed from Montana will arrive.

Textile Mills Close.

SANFORD, Me.—Six hundred more workers have been thrown on the streets jobless by the partial closing of two textile factories of the Sanford Mills here. The factories and the dye house of the company will go on three-day a week basis.

SENATE'S WAR WITH COOLIDGE IS FLAMING OUT MORE FIERCELY

WASHINGTON, April 15—Renewals of the bitter conflict between President Coolidge and the senate over the fight of investigation by senatorial committees into the doings of government departments was promised yesterday with both sides to the argument as determined as ever to enforce their views.

Senator Reed's resolution to expunge from the record the message of President Coolidge to the senate assailing the Couzens' resolution of the investigation of the internal revenue bureau as outside the bounds of local inquiry still is pending before the senate. Reed said he would demand action on the measure today.

Republican leaders were trying today to arrange a truce with democrats to prevent another day of such bitter partisan discussion as occured Saturday. They fear that the senate will get into such a mean temper over this question, if allowed to go on debating it, that little legislation will be passed before the time for the political conventions in June.

Democrats regarded the President's letter as a challenge. They intended to insist on a report this week from the expenses committee on the Jones resolution empowering the Couzens' committee to investigate the internal revenue bureau and to hire Francis J. Heney with government money instead of privately, out of the purse of senator Couzens, as at first arranged.

Anti-Fascisti Organizer Starts On National Tour

NEW YORK CITY.—Leonardo Frisina, national organizer for the Anti-Fascist Alliance of North America, has started on a long speaking tour toward the Western States in behalf of the alliance.

Due to the recent general election in Italy, the alliance has renewed its activities among the Italian workers in the United States and will keep up the agitation against the introduction or the formation of black shirt groups here.

Frisina is scheduled to speak in several important cities, among which are Rochester and Buffalo, N. Y.; Erie, Pa.; Cleveland, Ohio; Detroit, Mich.; Milwaukee, Wis., and Chicago.

He will then proceed toward the West thru the states of Indiana, Missouri, Kansas and Colorado.

"The outcome of the general election in Italy," Frisina said, "is such as to give new impetus to the most pessimisitic among the rank and file of our organization. It shows once more that the spirit of a class conscious proletariat cannot be killed even by the murderous weapons of the black-shirted criminals."

Studebaker Plutes Expect to Split A 10 Percent Dividend

SOUTH BEND, Ind., April 15.—Wall Street's Drive on Studebaker corporaton stock will not affect the ten percent dividend on common stock, president A. R. Esrkine announced.

"Profits considerably exceed dividend requirements and promise to do so thruout the year" he said, adding:

"Even with twenty per cent restriction on business which now appears probable I can take an optomistic view of the automobile business and predict that when the year is over records of the industry will compare favorably with results shown by steel, railroads and other big industries."

Studebaker plants here and at Detroit are working full time, according to Erskine, and each will be required to turn out 14,000 for April and May to meet the demand.

Lewis Back In Kansas to "Settle" Another Coal Strike

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 15.—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, conferred today, with miners and operators in wage scale negotiations here in an effort to reach an agreement to settle the strike of 35,000 men in the southwestern district.

COAL BARONS LAY OFF 11 MEN; EIGHT THOUSAND MINERS STRIKE

LANSFORD, Pa., April 15.—More than 7,500 miners of the Lehigh Coal & Navigation Company struck unexpectedly today in sympathy with 400 men at the Lansford No. 5 colliery, who have been on strike since Friday because eleven men were laid off there.

The strike closes all the company's collieries in the Panther Creek field—between Mauch Chunk and Tamaqua. District officials of the United Mine Workers will arrange a conference at once, it was said.

JAP CLAUSE MAY FORCE VETOING OF IMMIGRATION BILL

International Trouble Is Feared By Cal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Veto of the immigration bill, recall of Ambassador Hanihara of Japan and probable diplomatic complications were among the possibilities discussed here today following the senate's angry gesture regarding the exclusion clauses of the pending immigration measure.

The senate's vote yesterday, abrogating the gentlemen's agreement, which up to this time has served as the method of regulating Japanese immigration into this country, clearly foreshadowed adoption of a drastic exclusion provision.

While Congress is very angry at Japan's protest, thru Hanihara, against the exclusion provision, President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes feel themselves in an embarrassing position. At Japan's daring to interfere with legislation on a domestic question, pending before Congress, but they are concerned about the diplomatic consequences of Congress' anger.

Cal May Veto Bill.

It therefore has been suggested that Mr. Coolidge will veto the immigration bill when it comes to him carrying the exclusion clause. But the present temper of Congress is such that a veto will be overridden.

When the Shortridge amendment, which is similar to the exclusion provision carried in the bill passed by the house, has been voted on, the troublesome quota provision will be settled. Senate Republicans in conference agreed on one per cent of the census of 1910 as the basis. If this is carried the difference between the house bill, which provides for two per cent on the census of 1890, must be reconciled in conference.

Chicago Labor Protests.

Progressive forces of the labor movement are uniting against the "selective" immigration proposals. The Chicago Council for the Protection of Foreign Born and similar councils are expected to send delegations here to oppose the plans to register European workers. Vigorous opposition is offered by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and numerous influential bodies of organized labor.

Woman Faces Jail For Using Charlie's Name Too Freely

NEW YORK, April 15.—Mrs. Myrtle Bowman Hayes, charged with forging the endorsement of Charles M. Schwab, steel magnate and now on trial before Judge George F. McIntyre in general sessions for forgery in the second degree, he today withdrew her plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to attempted forgery in the third degree.

Her plea of guilty was accepted by Judge McIntyre, who stated that under no circumstances would he permit the defendant to withdraw it.

Mrs. Hayes was held in $10,000 bail, pending investigation of her case by the judge, who announced he would pronounce sentence two weeks from today.

Under a plea of guilty of attempted forgery in the third degree, defendant is liable to a sentence of one year and six months or greater.

Siberian Farmers Are Buying Tractors From Government

MOSCOW, April 15.—The Technical branch of the Government Business Department is receiving many orders for tractors from Siberia, Turkestan, Kubania, Samara state and others. The tractors and sets (including plough etc.) are sold by the government to the peasant on easy payments. Last year they sold at $2,300.

The Technical Branch bought abroad 1,500,000 rubles worth of agricultural machinery and intends to spend 1,000,000 more. Part of the goods has been delivered and is being distributed among the peasants of the different states.

The Fight of the Lady Barbers.

SEATTLE, April 15.—A curious jurisdictional tangle has embroiled Seattle workers with the throwing out of the Lady Barbers' shop card in the Solidarity barber shop in the lumber workers' section of the city. A card issued by the Barber Workers' Industrial Union of the I. W. W. has replaced the other union card. The Lady Barbers themselves are not recognized by the American Federation of Labor, and their admittance to the Seattle Central Labor Council here was one of the reasons for the threatened revocation of the charter last year.

"Indict Wheeler!" Yelps Daugherty's Former Assistant

GREAT FALLS, Mont., April 15.—John S. Pratt, special assistant attorney general, argued the case of Senator B. K. Wheeler before the Federal Grand Jury which indicted Wheeler, according to members of the Grand Jury.

PLUMBERS' CHIEF PLAYS SCAB ROLE IN PHILADELPHIA

Orders Men Back Under The Union Scale

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, April 15.—Plumbers Union Local No. 123 of this city, several weeks ago went on strike in order to enforce a new wage scale of $1.25 an hour instead of the old rate of $1.15. The strike was declared in full agreement with the Union rules and with the full knowledge and approval of the General Executive Board.

The strike was practically won when the President, Cofield, of the International Union interfered and proposed that the strikers give up everything they won during the strike and return to work at the old rate. The rank and file of the local at a well attended meeting refused to accept this proposition, knowing that complete victory is in sight.

Cofield, Scab Herder.

Mr. Cofield then ruled that he will supply the shops with sufficient men to replace those who refused to liquidate the strike and proceeded to "reorganize" the local in a most autocratic and unbrotherly way. The local appealed the actions of President Cofield to the general Executive Board. The appeal gives an illuminating picture of the struggles the rank and file must carry on not only against their bosses but also against the heads of their own union. The appeal to the members of the G. E. B. follows:

Among the points emphasized in the appeal are: That the General Office promised "full moral support," tho no financial aid; That President Cofield, after a conference with the strike committee and two of the big plumbing bosses, namely the W. G. Cornell Co. and the Cronin Co. at which Cofield ordered the bosses to remove non-union men from the job.

Men Reject Scab Rate.

The bosses failed to do this and Cofield did not insist on it. Instead the bosses offered to take the men back at the $1.15 wage with the promise that August 1 they might grant $1.25 This offer was rejected by a large majority of the members but Cofield asked them to return to work anyhow at the $1.15 rate, saying they would be able to get $1.25 by July 1.

The workers refused this, pointing out that some 100 members of the local were then working at the $1.25 scale in other shops. Furthermore the local voted that anyone returning at the lower rate would be considered "unfair."

Business Agent, Scab Herder.

When the local business agent admitted he was trying to get men to go on the unfair jobs he was suspended. The business agent tho, thru a frame-up arranged with the secretary and one of the trustees of the bricklayers' union from whom the building is rented, read a notice ordering the premises to be vacated at once. But he waited until the meeting had adjournd to read this notice. Late that night, March 7, the business agent and some other officers removed the books and the charter. Three days later, however, the bricklayers' local denounced the removal order and denied that it was official.

At the next meeting of the plumbers' local, March 17, Cofield boldly ordered the men back to work at the $1.15 scale. The strike is still on, pending appeal to the Executive Board.

Italian Goods to Russia

LENINGRAD, April 15.—The number of offers received from Italian firms, in connection with the formal recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics by Italy, is steadily growing. Numerous offers of textile goods and automobiles have been lately received from Palermo, Genoa, Milan. The Italian newspaper Eoo has sent a request to the North-Western Chamber of Commerce (Leningrad) to furnish it with regular information about the Russian markets, particularly the leather market.

FERRIS AROUSED WHEN FORD WINS DEMOCRATIC VOTE

Says Cal's Man Has No Busines in Primary.

By SHERMAN BOWMAN

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15.—Sen. Woodridge N. Ferris, of Michigan, sage of the Ferris Institute at Big Rapids and old fashioned Democrat, is aroused because his party has suffered the strange reproach of having Henry Ford, a supporter of Coolidge for President, named the Democratic favorite son of Ferris' own state.

Senator Ferris has been a Democrat longer than most men have lived. He was a candidate in the Michigan primaries, just held, for the Democratic nomination for president. But someone placed Ford's name on the ballot.

Ford had previously shown his indifference to any candidacy of his own by declaring publicly in an interview that he would support Coolidge in the election next fall. But, even under those circumstances and without any Ford campaign, the Michigan voters gave Ford a majority of nearly 3,000. Only about 13,000 Democratic votes were cast.

"It was asinine to put his name on the ballot in the first place without ascertaining first whether he was a Democrat or a Republican."

Sen. Ferris said indignantly in his Senatorial offices here

"The party is now in the pretty position of going into the convention with an indorsement for a Republican. If the spirit of the primary is followed, the delegation will have to give Ford one vote. But it is a bad situation in that he must be given even one vote, since he has declared for President Coolidge."

"Polikushka" Will Be Presented April 22nd at Boston

BOSTON, Mass., April 15.—To supply the popular demand, of the great film of the Moscow Art Theatre, "Polikushka," will be presented at Boston Symphony Hall for one performance only, on Tuesday night, April 22. The Boston papers have been unanimous in their high praise of this film.

Ivan Moskvin, one of the star actors of the Moscow Art Theatre, who plays the title role, creates a character of superb pathos, swayed by elemental desires, but also by elemental loyalty.

"The acting of Ivan Moskvin in superb, as vivid and searching a pantomine as one could ask," says the Boston Transcript. "It is true to human nature, it is rich in folk background, it is a monument to the perversity and blind mischance which often seems to thwart humanity. The Moscow Art Theatre as actors have endowed it with abounding theatrical life and vigor."

The film has played in the principle cities to full houses and amid the universal acclaim of the critics.

French Inventor Boasts of Deadly Electric War Ray

PARIS, April 15.—The most formidable war machine ever germinated in the mind of man, has been stored in the French war office since the end of the world struggle, Jules Rateau says in an article in the Journal today.

The secret, according to Rateau was discovered accidentally by a French inventor late in the war and consists in a method of utilizing infra-red electrical rays called "The Singing Arc," as a destructive electrical force of terrible capacity.

If the war had lasted a few months longer, Rateau says, the ray would have demonstrated that France's sea, air and land frontiers can be made impassable.

Longshoremen Can't Settle.

NEW ORLEANS.—The New Orleans Steamship Association refuses to enter negotiations with the striking longshoremen. The unions involved had made a written request that they be employed on the employers' own terms. Twelve hundred strikebreakers are employed on the independent lines against 800 union men by the U. S. Shipping Board. The vessel agents recently made the statement that if the union would depose Harry Keegan as president, overtures would be received. The men followed the request of their masters and are now in a worse conditon than before.

SENATE LAND ROBBERS THROWN INTO TURMOIL BY RED HOT LETTER

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Another row in the senate land frauds investigation threatened to end the session of the committee yesterday.

The storm broke when James R. Page, Kansas City, attorney, acting as committee "prosecutor," read a letter from John J. Morton, publisher of Atliaxco, Texas, making grave charges against land companies in the lower Rio Grande valley.

Gerge A. Hill, Jr., of Houston, attorney for R. B. Creager, republican national committeeman for Texas and head of one of the land companies under investigation, leaped to his feet and demanded that the letter be stricken from the record.

Old Man Lodge Calamity Howls At Jap Menace

WASHINGTON, April 15—Definitely aligning himself against Secretary of State Hughes and the administration on the question of Japanese exclusion, senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared in the senate that if the United States yields to Japans' Protest against exclusion legislation, it will cease to be a sovereign nation.

"We should let the whole world know that the United States and the United States alone is to state who can come into this country," Lodge said.

POVERTY BRINGS LUNACY, DEATH, TO FARMHOUSE

Wife Loses Mind And Slays Daughter

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WHEATON, Ill., April 15.—As a result of the small returns brought in for crops last year, due to market control by speculators, a farm wife here is in the state insane asylum, her little daughter is dead, and her three other children are critically injured. Mrs. Sven Carlson and her husband owned a farm near Batavia. But the farmers could get little money for their crops. Things got so bad that Carlson, like the other farmers, was selling his crops for less money than he paid out in freight and hauling charges.

Carlson had to rent the farm and moved to Wheaton. Mrs. Carlson, according to her husband, began to brood over her troubles, as thousands of farmers thruout the country have been doing. The bankrupt condition of the farmers preyed on her mind, and she became mentally unbalanced.

Friday night Carlson came in from the evening chores. He found his wife standing over their daughter Doris. The despondent woman had attacked her children and endeavored to take her own life. Carlson declares that the lot of a farmer these days is indeed an unhappy one.

April 27th Children's Day.

NEW YORK, April 15.—At the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Junior Section of the Young Workers' League of New York it was decided to devote Sunday afternoon, April 27th, to a celebration of Children's Day—the function of this celebration to be the commemoration of the formation of a Communist children's organization in New York and the establishment of closer relations between the children's and the adult movement of this city.

A mass meeting has been arranged for the occasion at Webster Hall, 11th street and 3rd avenue, New York city. An appropriate program has been arranged for the occasion, including prominent speakers and a very good entertainment with children's talent, consisting, in part, of group dancing, a boxing match, tableaux, a playlet, etc.

The workers are urged not to make any arrangements for that afternoon and attend in full force, thereby helping the children to make their first undertaking a real success. There is nothing more encouraging to the children than success in their undertakings.

Hits Wavering of Swedes.

MOSCOW, April 15.—The Swedish press is very much disappointed with the wavering policy of the Government in the matter of the restoration of normal relations with Russia. Several papers remark that the Izvestia, official Moscow organ, is right when it warns Sweden that the Soviet Republics will naturally have to discontinue placing orders in Sweden, as the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics has no juridical basis for business in that country.

LABOR DEFENSE COUNCIL PLEDGES AID TO MOONEY

Congratulates London Workers For Stand

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 15.—American labor has not forgotten Tom Mooney. All over the country a new campaign is gathering headway to force the governor of California to release him from the prison cell in which he languishes, a victim of one of the most brazen frame-ups in the foul history of capitalist assaults.

Writing to H. D. Carmichael, secretary of the London Trades Council which has pledged its support to the campaign to save Mooney, the Labor Defense Council declares:

Behind the Campaign.

"Your letter of March 20 is bound to strike a note of response in every real labor organization in this country. As for the Labor Defense Council, we hasten to assure you that we ar ewholeheartedly in sympathy with your high purpose. The Labor Defense Council must be counted as a determined supporter in the renewed campaign to free Mooney.

"The Mooney case is one of the most important that this country has ever known. Altho every important witness against his has long since confessed to perjury, Mooney is still in jail. He will remain there unless the workers force his release.

Proletarian Solidarity.

"Tha tthe first impulse in the new Mooney campaign came from London is significant of the close bonds which unite the workers of England with those of the United States. It is a tribute to your sense of proletarian solidarity.

"We recall that the Mooney case was first brought to the attention of wide masses of American people thru an appeal sent out from Soviet Russia. The workers of this country have not forgotten it, and they will not soon forget the fine step which you now take."

The Crisis In The British Mining Industry

By A. J. COOK.

(Editor's Note: When this article was published in the Labor Monthly, London, issue of April, 1924, the author was a member of the Executive Committee of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, from South Wales. A Chicago Tribune dispatch from London, under date of April 10th, reports that Cook was elected as Secretary of the Miners' Federation to succeed Frank Hodges, well-known as a reactionary and one of those principally responsible for "Black Friday" in 1921, when the Triple Alliance broke down and the miners were defeated. Cook is quoted in an interview as saying:

> "I'm still a Red, with all that that means. I take my election as Secretary by the miners as an expression of a desire for a militant, agressive policy. As the miners well know, I stand for a real live national and international miners' organization."

Under these circumstances this article, which gives the issues and background of the great impending battle in the coal mining industry of Great Britain, takes on especial significance.)

In 1921, after one of the greatest struggles in the history of Trade Unionism, the miners were defeated. For four months they displayed a spirit of solidarity unequalled in any movement. The Triple Alliance failed to function. As a result of the defeat terms were forced on the men that produced conditions of poverty and slavery. Our "Mighty Organization," the pride of the Trade Union Movement, was shattered. The coal owners true to tradition imposed such tyrannous conditions that despondency spread like a disease, infecting most of the leaders as well as the men. The suffering of the men became intolerable. Some of the old leaders, having very little knowledge of national or international economics, and believing the masters would yield to a human appeal, pinned their faith in an appeal to the coal owners begging for fair-play and fair conditions.

For over two years numerous meetings with the masters and Cabinet Ministers took place, but the appeal for a living wage fell on dead ears. Accidents have increased at an alarming rate since resumption of work after the 1921 lock-out. (See the Report of the Government Inspector of Mines.) Safety was neglected—low wages and increased accidents go together.

In South Wales and Lancashire, aggressive action was suggested—the rank and file had reached the limit of endurance. Realizing that the principles of the 1921 profit-sharing agreement exploited the miners and failed to give them a living wage, the rank and file demanded the agreement be ended. "We are starving while working, just as well starve without work," say the miners. An industry that cannot provide a living wage for its workers should close down; "private ownership has failed."

For over two years the leaders pleaded, but every suggestion was met with a negative reply. The owners would not listen to reason.

No other course was open but to give notice to terminate the agreement. A ballot was taken and the rank and file in every district declared that the Agreement must go. On January 17, three months' notice was handed to the employers. For several weeks even then our case was ignored, but the spirit of revolt spread. The successful struggle of the railwaymen and dockers put new life in our men.

The Executive Committee of the M. F. G. B. prepared for action and demanded that the owners should state their proposals. What a change!—suddenly, owners, Government and public became alarmed. At last attention was drawn to our conditions. On March 6 the same men, who for two years treated us with contempt, were now prepared to consider our case. Organized might had compelled the owners to move. It is a lesson that we shall not forget. Terms were offered that meant a small improvement in our conditions, but did not bring us anywhere near 1914 conditions, taking into consideration the increase of the cost of living. On March 13, the adjourned conference met and considered the proposals; it reassembled on the 14th and unanimously rejected the terms of the owners.

Having forty-nine mining members in the House of Commons, it was decided some time ago to introduce a Minimum Wage Bill to bring the miners' wages up to a living standard. Every attempt possible to obstruct the introduction of the Minimum Wage Bill was made by the owners. They approached their Liberal and Tory friends, and succeeded in making the Government take the private members' time, hoping to stop the Bill going forward, but to their surprise the Government agreed to accept the Bill as their own measure thus making it a Government Bill. In one week both a political and an industrial crisis arose. The miners are determined, come what may, to secure a living wage and some clear understandable agreement to govern wages and conditions in the future.

The great Miners' Federation has been re-organized ready for the fight.

KLAN SHOOTING CONSPIRACY AT LILLY EXPOSED

Arranged in Advance to Put Out Lights.

The Daily Worker has just received the true story of the Klan riots in Lilly, Pa., from a coal miner who witnessed the massacre. He writes:

"It was a put up affair thought out beforehand by the Klan. The Klansmen made arrangements to have the electric street lights extinguished the night of the demonstration. A group of boys—not men, as the newspapers report—got a fire hose to play on the Klansmen, as boys will, and the Klansmen wrenched the firehose from the boys and turned it, not on the boys, but on the people watching the parade. One Klansman yelled "Fire" and a volley of bullets rained on the defenseless crowd.

"The citizens were unarmed and were unprepared for trouble. The Klansmen were injured by their own members because they wore civilian clothes in order to act as guards. In this way they were undistinguishable from the rest of the crowd.

"Along the main line of the Pennsylvania Railroad there were found by citizens of Lilly, nearly a hundred revolvers which were thrown out of the special train by the Klansmen.

There are about ten Klansmen who live in Lilly, but the miners would not let them demonstrate. The massacre was perpetrated by Klansmen from Johnston and Altoona, each about 25 miles from Lilly on the Pennsylvania railroad.

Oklahoma To Have Bona Fide Farmer-Labor Party Soon

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., April 15.—A Farmer-Labor party convention to be held in Oklahoma City May 9 and 10, will form a new party, distinct from the Farmer-Labor Progressive league which indorsed candidates and adopted a platform at El Reno. The league is a political organization within the Democratic party. The Farmer-Labor party is to be a new political party.

The Farmer-Labor party meets two deficiencies of the league. It provides for the placing of La Follette electors on the presidential ballot and provides a set of state candidates should league candidates be beaten in the Democratic primary.

It is necessary to procure 5000 signatures to petitions in order to place a Farmer-Labor party in the field. Once in the field there need be no primary contest. One vote for the Farmer-Labor ticket at the primary will assure it a position on the ballot for November.

The proposed platform includes public ownership government banking, public control of all natural resources, restoration of civil liberties, abolition of injunctions in labor disputes, retention and development by the government ownership of a super-power system to connect into one system all public electric power projects.

Australian Labor Calls For United Political Front

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 15.—The Labor council of New South Wales has issued a manifesto calling for the linking up of all working class political parties with the Australian Labor party in order to secure a united working class front.

"We realize," says the manifesto, "that the day when all working class parties are accepted into the Labor party will be a historic day. The need of a united working class is apparent to all.

"The council realizes that only a united working class can secure a workers' government. 'Only a workers' government can take the necessary steps for dealing with the immediate problems of the workers."

Had Too Many Relatives.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 15.—"Too many relations" was the explanation given by bank examiners today for the downfall of John M. Moore, bank president accused of having defalcated $600,000 from the Fidelity National Bank and Trust Company.

J. BALTRUSAITIS, NEW POLITICAL, FRAMED BY DICK

Civil Liberties Union Shows Up Injustice

NEW YORK, April 15.—An application for the pardon of another political prisoner who has just been sent to Leavenworth under the war-time Espionage Act will be made this week by the American Civil Liberties Union thru its Washington representative on the ground that he goes to prison for a war-time offence "six years after the Armistice, three years after the suspension of the Espionage Act, and three months after the release of the last of the federal political prisoners by order of President Coolidge."

The Military Again

The prisoner is Joseph Baltrusaitis of St. Louis, Mo., who was sent to Leavenworth on March 12th, after months of delay of the case in the courts, on a charge of attempting "to cause disloyalty in the military forces of the United States" by distributing a Communist leaflet.

The Civil Liberties Union, in a statement on the case, styles it "one of the most flagrant and inexcusable political prosecutions on record." The statement reads:

"This case of Baltrusaitis is a striking injustice, not only because he has gone to prison so long after the war under a law long since suspended, but particularly because his prosecution was wholly inexcusable. The undisputed facts are:

"Interfering With Recruiting

"1. He was charged with interfering with the recruiting and enlistment of soldiers in November, 1920, when soldiers were no longer being recruited.

"2. The only charge was handing to a detective who visited him at his place of business some copies of a Communist leaflet entitled "Proletarian Revolution or Wage Slavery."

"3. The leaflet made no reference whatever to the war or military service. It voiced the usual Communist political ideas.

"4. He was sentenced to two years in prison on Oct. 24, 1921, on an indictment brought on May 3, 1921, after the Espionage Act had been suspended.

Six Years After Armistice

"5. He went to prison on March 12th last, six years after the Armistice, three years after the suspension of the Espionage Act, and three months after the release of the last of the federal political prisoners by order of President Coolidge."

It is expected that President Coolidge will act favorably and promptly on the application for pardon filed by the Civil Liberties Union on behalf of Baltrusaitis, in order to accord him the same treatment as to other prisoners convicted for belief and opinion.

The Civil Liberties Union also points out that there is another wartime case on appeal in the United States Supreme Court which may result in twelve more persons being sent to prison for expressions of opinion against the war. This case involves twelve socialists from Cincinnati indicted in 1917 for opposing the draft act. It is planned to file pardon applications on their behalf in case the Supreme Court affirms the conviction.

WESTERN PENNSY KLANSMEN FAIL IN TERROR TACTICS

Miners Are Wise To Robed Hypocrites

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

Flying the flag in front and placing a Bible inside of every school in the Chartiers Valley section of Washington County, Pa., is the answer of the Ku Klux Klan to the organization of the workers and their wives and children by the Workers Party, the Y. W. L. and its Junior section. These "Knights of the Nightie," whose pretense at being sanctimonious, and who seriously believe that they are keeping their identities concealed, are known for what they really are to those who comprise the populaton in that section of Western Pennsylvania.

A certain miner of Houston, Pa., puts the case right when he says: "I'll bet half of them are afraid to let their wives know that they belong to the Klan, because of the dual lives they live, while the other half belong to it, so as to provide an excuse to their wives when they are out trying to worm their way into the confidence of the vamps and flappers they meet, while innocent wifie thinks they are saving America from destruction at the hands of the Reds." Another one says: "Why, I know them so well that I could tell their hides in a tanyard." Yet these budding "Kleagle and Wizard" hounds, who wait until darkness comes to put on their robes and "step on the gas" to get to some hillside, there to burn their fiery crosses, think that nobody is aware of their membership in the organization that was founded, or at least revived, by a white slaver.

Company Tools Unite.

All elements, not necessarily klansmen, but who are opposed to organized labor, are united in their efforts to break up the Party and Y. W. L. branches in that section. They have even gone so far as to have a constable, better known as "Seldom Sober Rathbone," go to the homes of some of our foreign language miners, threatening them with jail or placing their children in an institution for incorrigible children, if they refused to drop their membership in the Workers Party and compel the children to quit the Junior section.

The answer to these efforts on the part of the klan and its wiling dupes is—more organization. The party of the workers is in this section to stay, and neither its petty small business men nor the industrial lords above them, with the aid of the "two by four" constables, are going to scare the workers of Washington County into submission to them any longer.

F. F.-L. P. Meet Scheduled.

On April 27th they are to hold a convention of the County Federated Farmer-Labor Party, and the chances are that Constable Rathbone will be looking for his first real work in many moons after the next election. The Washington County Federated Farmer-Labor Party is planning to care for a big crowd that day, and indications are that the representatives of the rank and file will be out in large numbers. The convention will be held in Canonsburg and much is expected in the form of constructive action.

Labor Fakers Getting Bounced from Fat Jobs By "Friend of Labor"

(By The Federated Press)

SAN FRANCISCO.—Mayor Rolph, for 16 years ruler of San Francisco, holds cards in half a dozen labor unions. But under his mayoralty union labor has gradually lost every appointive office in the city except two—Wm. P. McCabe of the fire commision, and Timothy A. Reardon, who has just been demoted by Acting Mayor McLeran (Rolph being on a trip to investigate the labor governments of the Antipodes) from president to mere member of the board of public works. As soon as Rolph returns a committee from organized labor will wait on him and inquire as to this state of affairs. The mayor replaced the late George Tracy, who long represented labor on the civil service commission, by an attorney; and named a contractor to succeed Paul Scharrenburg, secretary California State Feedration of Labor, on the city planning commission.

La Follette and Frazier.

PLENTYWOOD, Mont., April 15.—Senator La Follette for president and Senator Frazier of North Dakota for vice president will head the Montana Farmer-Labor party ticket on the presidential primary election in Montana May 27. Delegates will also be elected by the party voters for the national convention of the Farmer-Labor movement at St. Paul June 17 when La Follette is expected to be nominated for president.

The Miles City Trades & Labor assembly and two locals of the Bear Creek United Mine Workers affiliated with the party in the past week.

Boycott California Fruit Or Hoof-Mouth Plague May Get You

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 15.—Nature is aiding the I. W. W. boycott of California products. Dr. J. Edward Carlyle, an authority on the hoof and mouth epidemic, states: "The people of the United States are in grave danger of contracting the hoof and mouth disease by eating California fruits. Dust from the pastures and grazing fields of infected animals blows onto the fruit and can be carried out of the state. California-made clothing might also catch this same dust and it is possible to contract hoof and mouth disease from it."

The I. W. W. boycott is maintained because the state sends men to prison for 1 to 14 years for nothing more than membership in the I. W. W.

New York for Al Smith.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 15.—The name of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York will be formally presented to the national Democratic convention in New York next June as New York's choice for the Democratic nomination for President.

AMALGAMATED BANK CELEBRATES FIRST BIRTHDAY

Millions Now In Labor Banks of N. Y.

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 15.—A tenfold gain in assets within one year is the record of the Amalgamated Bank of New York, announced for its first birthday celebration, today. In the 12 months its deposits in the 4 per cent interest department have grown to $1,600,000. The assets which began at $300,000 are now $3,000,000. This success it attributes to the fact that profits amounting to more than a certain rate of interest are to be divided among the depositors.

Organizing Co-Op. Companies.

Added to its many other activities, which extend from transporting foreign exchange to helping its customers build houses, the bank announces it is developing a plan for organizing co-operative ice and coal companies. Vice President Held, a city alderman, has charge of this plan. The bank, as the first institution to send money for customers to Russia, had to convince the conservative state banking department of the safety of such a service. Now 325 banks thruout the country use the Amalgamated to transport money to Europe. To Russia alone it transmitted $2,340,948 in nine months.

Authorization for the bank was given by the fifth biennial convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union. The Amalgamated Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago was opened April 1, 1923, and the New York bank a year later. Three other labor banks, folowing the Amalgamated example, have been opened in New York within a year. The resources of the four combined have mounted to over $12,000,000.

Twenty Labor Banks.

There are reported to be 20 labor banks in the country, with surplus and deposits of over $40,000,000. The development of labor banking, in which the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has been the pioneer and largest single factor, has taken place within the last three years.

Perhaps There May Be Some Hope For Even the Filipinos

MANILLA, April 15. — Harold Holdsworth, Ex-mayor of Wakefield, England and prominent in English politics who is now in Manilla with world tourists is quoted by the local papers as saying: "If Great Britain has already pledged to the world to grant selfgovernment to Egypt in 1923; make India autonomous; eventually transform South Africa into a republic; place Australia in a position to look out for herself; permit Canada to govern herself and loosen the tie to bind her to her colonies as soon as they are fit for self-government, may not the world also expect from America to grant to the Filipinos the independence for which they have been craving all these years".

He further asserted that the British policy with regard to English colonies has always been liberal. As a result of this policy the nations or colonies once fighting against England, he said, are now staunch adherents and supporters of the British Empire.

Hamon Had No Money Scruples.

WASHINGTON.—E. J. Costello of Chicago, former managing editor of The Federated Press, testified before the oil probe committee here that he was told by Jake Hamon, on the morning before Harding's nomination, that Harding and Coolidge would be chosen and that Fall would be in the cabinet. Hamon said that he would "get something pretty good, probably a place in the cabinet."

Costello served as publicity man for Hamon in 1906-7, when Hamon was Republican state chairman in Oklahoma. He described Hamon as the type of politician who had no scruple as to the use of money.

Government Light Plant.

WASHINGTON.—By unanimous vote the Senate had adopted Senator Norris' bill appropriating $45,000,000 for the construction of a hydro-electric power plant at the Great Falls of the Potomac, ten miles above the city, in order that the federal government may furnish electric light and power to the District of Columbia at cost.

Russian Communists Make Their Position Clear

Resolution of the Central Committee of the Central Control Commission concerning the Party Structure.

(Adopted unanimously at the joint session of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee and of the Presidium of the Central Control Commission held on December 5th, 1923, in accordance with the decisions of the Plenary October Session of the Central Committee and the Central Control Commission.

I. The Party During the New Ecnomic Policy.

(a). The New Economic Policy, which has caused a growth of the productive forces, has proved itself to be a necessary stage on the long protracted transition road from capitalism to socialism. It has contributed to the revival of national economics in general and of the state industry, the state commerce and of the co-operatives in particular. We have witnessed a gradual increase in the rate of wages, a return of qualified proletarians to the towns, a raising of the level of culture among the broad proletarian masses and in particular, the formation of new ranks of proletarian and peasant intellectuals, thanks to the systematic instructions imparted to the workers and peasants in the higher educational establishments.

(b). The Twelfth Congress of the Party, while taking note of the revival of the economic life of the country has, at the same time already pointed out the necessity of estimating every stage of the economic development from the point of view of socialist construction. The dictatorship of the proletariat, which cannot be consolidated and developed without an increase in the material prosperity, could not even have maintained itself, if this increase in material prosperity had created a preponderance of private capital over state capital.

Economic Co-Ordination Necessary.

The extraordinary difficulties with which the economics of the country are meeting at the present moment, are mainly expressed in the fact that the products of our state industry do not find a sufficient market. If during the last year the disposal of our products has met with ever-increasing difficulties, this to a very great extent is attributable to the extraordinarily high cost of production, to the exceedingly high trading expenses and, in addition, to the unjustifiable methods of an exaggerated computation of prices at the expense of the consumer. The underlying causes of these difficulties are the disparity and the lack of co-ordination of the various elements in the state economics, both between themselves individually and between themselves as a whole and the market, the irrational or insufficiently rational establishment of industrial and commercial undertakings and the conduct of their operations, in particular the inability, of our still bureaucratic commercial and co-operative organizations to reach the rural markets.

The central task remains, as heretofore, the linking up of the state industry with the peasants' agriculture, i. e., in the first place the establishment of proper proportions between the productivity of our state industry on the one hand and the requirements and extent of our mainly rural market on the other. This task can be carried out to the extent to which the linking up of the various factors and elements of the state industry between themselves is appropriately and systematically accomplished.

In view of the foregoing the whole Party must arrive at the conclusion that the continued economic revival, which will enable us to overcome the existing crisis within the more or less near future, will serve the cause of socialist construction only insofar as we learn to co-ordinate the elements of the state economics in their relation to each other and to the market generally.

Danger of Degeneration.

From this there arises the unique importance of the "Gosplan" of the economic staff of the socialist state and of all the organizations for carrying out planned economics in the provinces. It is necessary to secure effectually for them the position indicated by the resolution of the Twelfth Congress.

The measures adopted in recent times in order to reduce the prices of manufactured goods and to promote the export of grain, have already led to a certain recovery in the trade turnover and to an increase in the price of grain. The struggle against the fundamental causes of the market crisis demands, however, from the Party a complicated and systematic work for carrying out the measures indicated by the Twelfth Congress regarding the concentration of industry, appropriate organization of the apparatus of trade and industry, the promotion of agriculture, the raising of its technical level and its adaption to the struggle on the world market by various means, among these being the extension of agricultural credit, etc. These tasks are confronting the Party in all their full extent and in the most pressing manner. There is no doubt that the Party will concentrate all its forces in order to carry them out effectively.

(c) The objective contradictions presented by the actual stage of the transitory period and which result from the simultaneous existence of the most varied economic forms, from the prevailing market relations, from the necessity for the state institutions to employ capitalistic forms and methods of work, from the necessity or relying for support upon a staff which is still a stranger to the proletariat, etc.—these contradictions find their expression in a whole series of negative tendencies, the fight against which must be placed on the order of the day. Among these tendencies there may be mentioned: striking anomalies in the material situation of Party members, determined by their varying functions and the so-called "wasteful expenditures"; the growth of connections with bourgeois elements and the ideological influence of the latter; the narrowing of the intellectual horizon by officialdom, which must be distinguished from the necessary specialization and, arising therefrom, the weakening of the connections between the Communists working in various spheres; the danger of a loss of the perspectives of socialist construction as a whole and of the world revolution; the danger, already indicated by the congress, of a "New Economic Policy" degeneration on the part of a portion of the functionaries who, owing to the nature of their activity, come most into contact with bourgeois elements; the process of bureaucratizing which is to be noted in the Party apparatus and, arising therefrom, the threatening danger of the Party losing contact with the masses.

2. Party and Working Masses.

The confidence of the proletarian masses in the Party has increased. This finds its expression in the Soviet elections, in the collapse of the Menshevist and Social Revolutionary parties and in the formation of a body of non-party workers who are actively supporting the Party. At the same time the active Communist workers, who of course should form the connecting link between the Party and the non-party masses, are almost entirely absorbed in administrative and economic work and thereby unavoidably lose contact with the work of production. The fundamental task, therefore, in this connection is the recruiting of new party members from the ranks of workers at the bench. It is the task of the Party organizations to devote special attention to this type of Party worker, to do everything possible in order to prevent their being divorced from the work of production, to help them raise the cultural level and use every means to render easier the possibility for them to take effective part in all Party affairs. The work of enlarging the proletarian mainstay of the Party must, in the next months, be one of the most important tasks of all Party organizations. The initiative of certain organizations which have already developed their activities in this direction must be supported by all industrial organizations of our Party. The Party must render easier the influx of new elements of industrial workers into the Party organizations and their promotion from candidates to Party members. In the same way it is necessary to give increased attention to the work among the growing proletarian youth.

Regarding the peasantry, among whom proletarian and semi-proletarian strata are again appearing, it is necessary to improve by every means the qualitative composition of the nuclei, to direct their work into the channel of cultural and political activity, in particular to intensify their work of helping to spread a knowledge of scientific agricultural methods, and also their work in the co-operative field, in the organization of agricultural credits, etc. Along with this the village proletariat (especially the committees of landless peasants in the Ukraine) must be given every support, and the proletarian elements must be drawn into our Party organizations as well as into the All-Russian Confederation of Agricultural and Forest Workers.

Intelligenzia Favor Soviets.

Among the intelligenzia, as the result of general causes as well as of the improvement of their position in our country while at the same time the middle classes in Germany are being pauperized, there is to be noted a general swing of opinion in favor of the Soviet power. Of especial importance is this turn of opinion among the rural teachers and among the instructors in agriculture, who can be considered as being one of the most important connecting links between town and country. This turn of opinion among broad strata of the intelligenzia in favor of the Soviet power, while being in itself an outstanding positive phenomenon, can, however, also have consequences of a negative character, as it increases the danger of the Communists being ideologically surrounded.

The struggle for the ideological purity of our Party against petty bourgeois and "Smjenoehov" (an organized movement among intellectuals, especially emigrants, in favor of the Soviet power as being the upholder of the independence of Russia) obsurantism is, therefore, an equally important task of the Party.

3. Party and Workers' Democracy.

The negative phenomena of the last month in the life of the working class on the whole, as well as within the Party involve the unescapable conclusion that the interests of the Party in regard to its struggle against New Economic Policy influence, as well as regarding its fighting capacity in all spheres of work, demand a serious change in the policy of the Party in the sense of a real and systematic carrying out of the principles of workers' democracy. In view of this the October Joint Session of the Plenums of the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee have decided as follows:

"The Plenums of the Central Committee and of the Central Control Committee entirely approve the policy in the direction of democracy which was recently adopted by the political bureau, and they also approve of the intensification of the struggle against 'wasteful expenditures' and against the disintegrating influence of the New Economic Policy upon certain elements of the Party, as proposed by the political bureau."

Workers' democracy means liberty of frank discussion of the most important questions of the Party life by all members and that all leading Party functionaries and commissions be elected by those bodies immediately under them. It does not, however, include the liberty of forming fraction groups, which are extremely dangerous for a governing party since they continually threaten to split and disintegrate the government and the state apparatus as a whole.

It is obvious that within a party, which represents a voluntary union of people on a definite basis of ideals and practice, there can be no toleration of the formation of groups, the ideological content of which is directed against the party as a whole and against the dictatorship of the proletariat, as for instance, the "Rabotshaya Pravda" (Workers' Truth) and the "Rabotshaya Gruppa" (Workers' Group).

Workers' Democracy.

'Only a constant, vital ideological life can maintain the Party in that condition in which it had arrived at before and during the revolution, with a continual and critical study of its past, with the correction of its mistakes and with the collective discussion of the most important questions. It is only these methods which can give effective guarantees against occasional divergences of opinion resulting in the formation of fraction groups with all the consequences mentioned above.

In order to avert this the leading Party organs must lend an ear to the voice of the masses of the Party, and must not regard every kind of criticism as an indication of the formation of fractions, and thereby drive conscious and disciplined Party members into aloofness and create in them a spirit of fraction forming.

In no circumstances can the Party be regarded as a mere institution or an office, but at the same time it cannot be considered a debating society for every tendency. The Tenth Congress laid down the principles of workers' democracy, but the same Tenth Congress, and afterwards the Eleventh and Twelfth Congresses, also laid down a series of limitations as to the exercise of these principles of proletarian democracy: Forbidding of fractions (see resolution of the Tenth Congress "On Party Unity" and the corresponding resolution of the Eleventh Congress); the purging of the Party; the limitation of admission to Party membership of non-proletarian elements: the laying down of certain lengths of membership as necessary qualifications for holding certain offices in the Party; the confirmation of the secretaries by the superior Party authority (see Party statute). In view of the unavoidableness of maintaining under the New Economic Policy certain limitations in the future also, there must at the same time, based on the experience already acquired, particularly by the inferior organizations, be a re-examination of the fitness of some of these limitations, for instance, of the right of the superior authorities to confirm secretaries. In no circumstances can the right of confirming secretaries be converted into a right of practically appointing them.

4. Immediate Measures for Realizing Workers' Democracy.

In order to prevent the line of the Party from being diverted, in order to realize effectually the workers' democracy and in order to secure for the entire mass of the Party members the possibility of systematically influencing the direction of the whole Party policy, the following measures must in the first place be realized:

(a) Strict observation of the eligibility of functionaries, with the limitations mentioned above; it shall be regarded as inadmissible to impose such functionaries against the will of an organization; in particular, there must be a strict observation of the eligibility of secretaries to nuclei.

(b) It shall be obligatory to submit all essential questions of Party policy, so far as exceptional circumstances shall not render this impossible, for discussion by the Party nuclei and by the Party masses as a whole; the number of party discussion clubs shall be extended; unjustifiable appeal shall not be made to "Party discipline" in the event of it being the right and the duty of the members of the Party to discuss questions in which they are interested and to adopt decisions regarding them.

(c) Attention must be paid to the task of pushing forward new functionaries from the rank and file, in the first place from among the workers.

(d) Special attention must be paid to enabling a body of comrades, who are in close contact with the masses of the Party, to acquire a proper conception of the policy of the Party.

(e) Delivering accounts and reports by the Party organs to the bodies by whom they are elected and to the broad Party mass.

(f) Increase in the educational work of the Party, at the same time carefully avoiding by all means all bureaucratic tendencies, among the entire Party mass as well as among the Communist Youth Leagues and the women in particular.

(g) Attention must be paid to the mutual exchange of experience of the functionaries in the various fields of work; compulsory conferences shall be periodically convened by the Central Committee, as well as by the provincial gouvernement and district committees, to be attended by the responsible functionaries in all fields of work.

(h) The information of the Party members shall be increased by means of the press and by visits to the various localities by members of the Central Committee, the Central Control Committee, the Provincial and Gouvernement Committees and by members of the collegium of the Commissariats.

(i) In the periodical press the columns devoted to Party life must be increased.

(j) At the next Party congress there must be submitted a proposal regarding the convocation of gouvernemental and All-Russian Party conferences twice a year.

In order to secure the effective carrying out of all the measures mentioned above regarding the realization of workers' democracy, there must be a passing from words to deeds by proposing to the lowest nuclei, to the district area and gouvernement Party conferences, to systematically renew the Party apparatus from the bottom upwards at the regular Party elections, by pushing forward for the responsible posts such functionaries as are able effectually to ensure democracy within the Party.

5. On the Control Commissions.

(a) The most important tasks for the improvement of the Party apparatus have already been put before the Party. This work needs much time in order to yield effective and perceptible results. The basic condition for successful work on the part of the Control Commission and of the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection, regarding the improvement and purification of the state apparatus, is that they be supported by the whole Party and by its organizations, and that the working masses be drawn into this work. There must be the closest connection between the Control Commissions and the corresponding Party committees; every means must be used to increase the interest of the public opinion of the Party and of the working masses for the activity of the Control Commissions and of the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection.

(b) The experience of the last months has shown that, besides the Central Control Commissions, questions of the state apparatus must also be dealt with by the local gouvernemental and provincial Control Commissions, and that the problem of the extension of the functions of the subordinate Control Commissions must, therefore, receive attention.

(c) Among the means for attracting the working masses to the study and to the improvement of the state apparatus, there may be included auxiliary nuclei in the shops and in the state institutions—these nuclei to be set up by the Control Commission and by the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection along with the trade unions. The Party nuclei in the shops must be closely connected with the auxiliary nuclei to the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection and supervise their work thru the shop committees.

Fight Bureaucratism.

(d) A particularly important task of the Control Commissions at the present moment, is the fight against the bureaucratic perversion of the Party apparatus and of the Party practice, and to render accountable those Party functionaries who hinder a realization of the principle of workers' democracy in the practice of the Party organizations (restricting the liberty of expression at Party gatherings, arbitrary limiting of eligibility and the like).

(e) Of especial importance at the present juncture is the fight of the Control Commissions against the so-called "wasteful expenditures" in the state apparatus and on the part of certain of its officials. The demoralizing influence of the negative aspects of the New Economic Policy upon members of our Party, and in particular upon certain responsible functionaries, must be energetically counteracted by the entire Party.

(f) There must be a more careful employment of the extreme Party disciplinary measures (expulsion from the Party). The greatest leniency must be accorded to industrial workers at the bench, and the most drastic measures (expulsion from the Party) must here only be employed where the circumstances render it unavoidable, i. e., where all other means at the disposal of the Party have been exhausted.

Finally, those who have been previously expelled from the Party, in particular industrial workers, must be accorded really comradelike treatment when they express a desire to re-enter the Party and when in such cases there is good reason for believing that they will properly fulfill the demands of the Party laid upon them.

6. Party Organization and Work in the Economic Sphere.

One of the greatest and most valuable of our advantages is that we have within the ranks of our Party, collaborators in all spheres of economic work, from the simplest proletarians at the bench right up to its most responsible administrators. All these functionaries must, and by a proper arrangement of the work they can contribute their extraordinarily, many-sided collective economic experience towards the creation of a real Party management of the work in the economic sphere. Workers in the economic sphere must be accorded in their work a sufficient degree of independence and initiative, together with the full support of the Party. The systematic leadership by the Party must not by any means permit hair-splitting discussions over every casual and secondary matter.

For this purpose it is necessary to bring the Communist nuclei into contact with production; accounts and reports must be regularly given by the Communist workers in the economic spheres; the reports must be discussed as regards their essentials; it is necessary to arrange regular meetings of the Communists in the nuclei of those shops which, taken together, form an economic unity, (for instance, a trust), and also Party—economic conferences; the representatives of the nuclei are obliged to deliver reports to their respective nuclei regarding these conferences. It is necessary to disseminate much more systematically the experiences and the suggestions of the lowest nuclei.

7. The Work Among the Masses and the Attracting of the Masses Into Practical Constructive Work.

The work of attracting the masses into practical construction must be intensified, particularly in view of the danger of the state apparatus being alienated from the masses. For this reason the duty of delivering reports and accounts imposed on workers in the economic sphere must be extended so as to include delivering the same to the masses (General meetings of workers and of their delegates, conferences of non-party workers and peasants and the like).

Special attention must be also paid to bringing trade unions into contact with production. The influence of the trade unions in the selection and promotion of new candidates for economic positions, and in the control of the work of economic organs must be increased (of very great importance also is the control regarding the punctual payment of wages and in a proper manner, etc.); the trade unions must convene conferences dealing with the question of production by units (Trusts), attended by representatives of the shop committees and of the administrators of the undertakings; the trade unions must render reports on their work in the trade union press, which must be improved and rendered more efficient.

Every means must be employed to increase the efficiency of the institution of workers' reports to the press, carefully preserving it from all bureaucracy and officialdom. The Party and the Soviet periodical press must give the greatest and most considerate heed to the demands and proposals emanating from the masses.

In the elections to the workers' and peasants' councils, attention must be paid to the candidature of new elements, selecting, besides party workers, active non-party workers also, and to drawing the latter into active work (Work of the departments of the local Soviets, meetings of the departments and of the executive committees with the representatives of the workers and peasants and of the auxiliary nuclei to the Workers' and Peasants' Inspection, etc.).

To extend the practice of the holding of large-scale conferences of non-party workers and peasants; to facilitate the growth of all kinds of voluntary, self-governing organizations: cultural and educational, sports and the like; in particular those which touch the family and social life of the working masses (communal kitchens, etc.) securing for them the possibility of a proper development.

The practice of holding open meetings of the nuclei must be extended, and, based on the experience of these open meetings, there must be selected bodies of those non-party workers and peasants who are to become active helpers of our Party.

Ready for Scrap Heap

The fact that capitalism has outlived its usefulness as a system of production and exchange and has become a fetter upon social progress is evidenced by the persistently recurring contradictions which are inherent in the present productive order and which bring in their wake untold misery and suffering for the great mass of the population.

When industry reaches the stage of over-production, there inevitably follows unemployment and under-consumption. In other words, when the working class produces plenty of goods of consumption, increasing numbers of workingmen are thrown out of work and the working class as a whole, because it does not receive the full value of its produce, is unable to buy back what it has produced itself, and its living standards are lowered. Under capitalism over-production and under-consumption are synonymous.

The great mass of the farming population is subject to the same misfortune and difficulties. The more the farmers produce, the greater the liklihood of their having their economic condition degraded today. For instance, the fortune of the farmers today depends on their producing a smaller crop of wheat, corn, or barley. The department of agriculture, in its attempt to show that the outlook for the farming class is hopeful, has been deliberately spreading false propaganda to the effect that these crops will be smaller during the coming year. Wallace sees his hopes for the farmers in wretched crops and not in bountiful ones.

It certainly is an unassailable indictment of a system of production and exchange to have its great industrial and rural producing masses be driven into starvation and suffering because of its efficiency of workmanship or on account of the bountifulness of the crops produced. The menace to the farmers' welfare today lies in the fact that the Pacific Northwestern wheat producing states show signs of a considerable improvement in this year's crop. And Kansas and Oklahoma are likewise showing signs of an abandoned winter acreage far smaller than estimated by the department of agriculture. Only ordinarily good weather will bring in these states a crop far in excess of the estimates of the department of agriculture.

Worse than that. Today capitalism stifles the development of agricultural efficiency. The farmers fear to produce more because they know that an overflow market means ruin to them. It is said that if the farmers of the State of Iowa would use select seed they could raise on the same acreage as last year, with no extra overhead charges, 848,000,000 bushels of corn. Some time ago Wisconsin farmers developed a strain of barley which in less than a year produced an increased crop of 25 per cent per acre over the seed of ordinary variety.

When an industrial system reaches a stage under which a bountiful crop and efficient production become a curse, it is high time that that industrial system be discarded to the scrap heap of history.

Lodge Fell For Fall

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, comes from Boston.

"The home of the bean and the cod;
Where the Dodges speak only to the Cabots
And the Cabots speak only to God."

He represents the bluest of American blue blood and has been commended warmly by literary journals for holding high the lamp of culture in the senate. Of course, he has never trafficked with the vulgar politicians who are looked upon with horror in the Back Bay district, but he was so intrigued by the rugged honesty of Albert Fall, sometime secretary of the interior, that he wrote the following letter to Herbert Wells of the Indian Rights Association in reply to one hinting that the honest Albert was plundering the wards of Uncle Sam:

> In my opinion he (Fall) is exceptionally fitted to be secretary of the interior, as it is now generally understood that he will be appointed to that post * * * Senator Fall is a thoroly upright and high-minded man, and is utterly incapable of using his office for his own financial interest, which I regret to say is implied by some of the expressions of your letter.

It is said that now, when the name of Fall is mentioned in the exclusive Back Bay district, a cold and clammy silence ensues that lasts for days and days.

The moral of this is that the capitalist system is a united front of all parasitic elements against the working class in which a cultured Lodge and an ignorant Fall are welcome just as long as they serve the real masters—the industrial and financial lords.

California Protects Labor

The speech made by Senator Shortbridge on the question of Japanese immigration doubtless will please the jingoes and alarm the pacifists but despite the provocative character of the remarks made by the senator from California Japan will not go to war with us to settle the question of the admission of her citizens to our sacred soil. On the question of the Philippines or the repayment of the recent loan by the House of Morgan that is something else again.

"Are we going to back down before the threats of Japan?" hoarsely shouted the senator from the state that is filling its prisons with members of the I. W. W. for mere affiliation with the organization and that keeps Tom Mooney confined despite unquestioned proof of his innocence. The same California ruling class that brought in Japanese to compete with the white workers and thereby lower wages is today yelling for their exclusion and expulsion.

The trouble began when the lowly Japanese worker boarded his scanty wages and proceeded to buy up some of the land that was cheap before California became the paradise of real estate sharks. Japanese syndicates were formed and now thousands of acres are owned and cultivated by the little yellow men. Japanese labor on the Pacific coast competes with white labor chiefly on the farms; to this landlords have no objection but when the Japs acquire property then the 100 per cent American blood of the native sons begins to boil and they immediately clamor for the support of their state and national government.

The conflict between two groups of capitalists is disguised by urging restrictive legislation for the "protecti[illegible] of labor." On behalf of the dozens of members of our class who are in California prisons for their working class activities we invite any deluded worker to make a pilgrimage to Sunny California and see for himself just what this protection amounts to.

What About Borah?

Where is Senator Borah and his committee for investigating Soviet Russia these days when proof of the murderous activities of Secretary of Commerce Hoover, directed against the Soviet government, is at hand in the shape of documents furnished by Captain Martin showing beyond doubt that relief funds were expended to bolster up the counter-revolutionary offensive headed by Yudenitch?

It is the Borah committee that has been charged with the task of delving into all phases of the relations of the United States government with Soviet Russia but it is significant that with the opening up of other investigations that might lead to the same point the Borah committee adjourned its sessions.

The position of Borah on this matter is quite clear. He has been a kindly counsellor of President Coolidge altho some of his remarks have been somewhat pointed; he has, however, devoted most of his energy to urging that the republican party clean house so that it can better fool the masses and he feels that if and when LaFollette bolts upon his shoulders will fall the faded but welcome mantle of progressivism within the republican party.

Yesterday the DAILY WORKER urged that the workers and farmers demand of Senators Wheeler and Brookhart a complete exposure of the Hoover atrocities; we do not withdraw that demand but in addition to that we feel that Senator Borah, because of his previous experience with Russian affairs, is peculiarly fitted to explore further the obscene iniquities of the Hoover attempt to drown in blood, by use of money appropriated for the relief of starving women and children, the only workers' and farmers' government in the world.

Another S. P. Confession

Not even the proponents of the Dawes plan deny that its purpose is to prevent the complete breakdown of capitalism in Europe. It is therefore of sweet significance to find that Algernon Lee, well-known socialist and director of the Rand school—a socialist party institution—also recognizes this and approves of it. Mr. Lee, with one gloved hand resting lightly on his cane, said to the correspondent of the Federated Press:

> I fear the evil has gone too far to be cured without more sweeping measures. The plan seems to constitute a slight step beyond the impossible Versailles treaty. If such action had been taken a year or two earlier it would give more hope that Europe may be saved from a general breakdown.

So after all the fierce denials of the socialists we find that the Communists were right when they said that the socialists were interested primarily in saving capitalism. Oh, well.

A New York lawyer talked a couple of burglars out of $4,000 while they were robbing his house the other day. Once more the value of technical training has been demonstrated.

The Greek populace chased their king and voted for a republic by an enormous majority on April 14. Dispatches today announce that martial law has been proclaimed. Score one more for democracy.

Brigadier-General Dawes, House of Morgan reparations expert, visited Mussolini in Rome and doubtless will return to inform his minute men of the very latest mode in blackshirts.

There Are Two Sides To Every Story

By ROSE PASTOR STOKES.

Walking with a bourgeois acquaintance I met on Greenwich Avenue the other morning, I suddenly halted before a mountainous pile on the curbstone.

"What is it?" asked by companion.

"Look!" I replied, pointing at the pile.

Wretched chests of drawers, an ancient ruined sofa and a kitchen table, at the bottom; an old iron bedstead at the side, buttressed by a broken-down sewing-machine and a wooden wash-tub and, piled on top, an indiscriminate lot of stuff, utensils, bedding, the rags that were once undergarments, dishes, oil quilts, hats, shoes, baskets, chairs.

The previous night, snow had fallen heavily, in the early morning, rain had come down in torrents. It was still raining. The streets were slushy, the gutters, eddying streams.

Out On the Street.

The pile of wretchedness accumulated by some worker's family thru years of bitter struggle with poverty, did not escape the storm. To the remotest fissure in the chests of drawers at the bottom, the rain and the snow had penetrated. The damp wind would come and crack the things of wood. The soggy wool and cotton would take on a deeper misery—perhaps be rendered entirely useless. Rust, disintegration—this mountain of tragic poverty was not a stranger to these; yesterday, and would be less a stranger to these, tomorrow.

"An eviction," remarked my companion, somewhat sadly. "Come, let's go."

We started; but, again I stopped.

"No," I said, "let's find out what's happened. It's incredible that any human being should be put out on a day like this, in such a storm."

"Oh, come on," she urged, "they probably deserve it. You can't tell. There are two sides to every story. You Communists are so one-sided, you never see anything but the workers' side."

I bade my companion a good-morning and returned alone.

The little stationery shop, upon which the pile cast a giant shadow—this should be a good place to get my questions answered. I walked in.

A squat woman behind a counter, busy turning a penny—perhaps busier dreaming of a day when she would own a big store with half dozen behind her counters slaving for her—was annoyed at an unprofitable interruption.

One Side of Story.

These busy-bodies who come to ask questions about matters that are no concern of theirs! Well, if I wanted to know, it was the janitor and his wife. Rent? No, it wasn't a question of rent. What then? Why, they were a pair of drunks . . . drank all the time, that's what it was . . . never saw them sober . . . they lived in that nice room in the basement . . . free; only had to do janitor's work for the building, that's all. Can't keep drunken janitors in a respectable house. Where are they? God knows! Drinking somewhere, she guessed. Maybe, arrested and sent to jail . . . serves them right, if they were! They belong in the workhouse, anyway. Their stuff? It'll rot and mould? Well, people in the work-house don't need furniture! (Laughter at her neat little joke!) If they don't turn up the dump will take it all. . . .

I felt relieved that the bourgeoisie did not come with me. I could not have borne her "I told-you-so!" look. To all my arguments that society should take care of its sick, that a habitual drunkard is a sick man and should receive treatment, she would have replied: "It serves people right. Those who have no ambition deserve no better at anybody's hands."

The Other Side.

The following night, I met Mrs. B., a close friend of the X——es, at a club where liberal people gather. Mrs. B. is a "liberal" of a sort. Her friends, the X——es, are very conservative people with an extreme income.

Mrs. B., whom I had not seen in years, sat down to chat and, a little, she chatted about the X——es.

"Poor Mrs. X! She had to board up her mansion, put her servants into the country house and take Mr. X to the Blank Sanatorium where he may have to stay for an indefinite period. Yes, he always drank heavily, you know. The doctors warned them. But alcoholism brought him finally to this. She's taken a cottage in order to be near him, to see him just as often as the regulations will permit . . . It almost broke her heart . . she has just had her entire house redecorated and was planning a social season in town. . . . You should have seen her! She looked almost as much a wreck as he, himself. . . . It's tragic . . . what alcoholism will do to people! . . ."

Now I wished that my bourgeoise of the morning before were with me! . . . Yes, there are two sides to every story.

Our Left Wing Press - By William Z. Foster

While we are rightfully pointing out the weaknesses of the present trade union movement, the class colaboration policy of the reactionary leaders, the bankruptcy of the socialist party and its complete surrender to Gompers and company, we must pay more attention to the ever-growing number of left wing groups and left wing press.

The latest addition to the left wing press, is the Progressive Shoe and Leather Worker, thus the militants have seven monthly and semi-monthly papers representing national left wing committees in the Building, Clothing, Leather, Metal, Mining, Printing and Railroad industries. This is the militant rank and file's answer to the Gompers, Lewis, Johnston, Berry class collaboration policy.

The launching of the Progressive Shoe and Leather Worker is a real achievement, when one considers the terrific chaotic condition of the Leather industry, and the inroads that the secessionist movement had made there. That its first issue should deal almost exclusively with amalgamation is natural and can very well be understood. For years the burning question was dualism versus amalgamation, and now we see the end of the dualistic program and the gradual merging of the unions into one organization covering the entire industry, nothing is more natural than to see the Progressive Shoe and Leather Worker lay emphasis on the question of amalgamation.

Michael T. Berry in his article giving a short and concise history of the shoe and leather workers' efforts to organize and how they had tried the craft form of unionism from 1857 until the present, showing how miserably it had failed to cement labors' forces, the dire necessity for amalgamation and drawing the further lesson. "The way out of the trouble lies in a united front on both the political and industrial fields, the battle must be fought out on lines forcibly determined by all the factors of the class struggle and not on lines of class collaboration."

Amalgamation is only the means and not the end in itself. With the solidifying of the ranks of the workers in the shoe and leather industry on the industrial field, must come the united front of the exploited workers and farmers on the political field, the understanding of the revolutionary significance of the present agitation for the united front of labor, and the relationship of immediate demands to the revolutionary struggle.

We greet the Progressive Shoe and Leather Worker as another link in the left wing chain that is binding the militants together in the struggle against Imperialism on the one hand, and reaction within the ranks of labor on the other. We greet you as the class conscious expression of the shoe and leather workers. You are the seventh nail in the coffin of reaction. On with the work.

POST WAR ITALY

Reviewed by ELLA G. WOLFE

"Rome or Death", by Carleton Beals, New York, The Century Co., $250. A discussion of the rise, development and political victory of Fascism in Italy.

In view of recent revolutionary developments in Germany, Spain and Mexico, developments, directly or indirectly influenced by the Fascisti movement of Italy, Rome or Death by Carleton Beals is of very special interest to us.

Beals lived in Italy during the rise and development of the Fascisti movement and its conquest of political power. He is an extremely careful student and his book is richly documented in the conditions and causes for the events that made possible a Fascist victory. The author has the magic gift of making history read like romance. In a stimulating, rapidly moving, brilliant style he discuses the parts played by Nationalism plus syndicalism; international revolutionary socialism; and clericalism during the post war period. With a few graphic strokes of his pen he gives us the reasons for the impossibility of a thoroly industrialized Italy. He says, "Italy is an exaggerated pushcart. She has no important natural resources, no iron, no coal, no petroleum, no cotton—her one industrial asset—water power in Lombardy and Central Italy." With the same vividness he compares the power of the Italian petty bourgeosie before and after the great war.

Necessary to Read.

He paints us a tensely stirring picture of the atavistic violence of the fascisti movement which worshipped the motto: "Hit first and find out afterward," and under this motto destroyed labor headquarters and labor papers, pillaged and burned Socialist co-operatives, murdered league officials and labor organizers. Therefore when the author declares, "It (The Fascisti movement) has never been, except in certain limited districts and for short periods a White Guard in the service of the reactionaries and profiteers," he is making a generalization completely contradicted by all the facts he himself advances and by all the testimonies of leading Fascisti that he quotes. From the character of their numerous punitive expeditions and of their programs formulated from time to time, the reader is left assured that the Fascisti movement, if not completely dominated, at least was financed by Italian Reaction and permitted itself to be guided by it in the destruction of the Socialist and Labor movement of Italy.

Excepting the above statement the whole book is a veritable mine of authentic information such as every worker who wishes to take part actively and intelligently in the American Labor Movement, can ill afford to miss. For altho the events are laid in Italy, they contain the same elements that are fuond in the struggle between revolution and reactiono the world over.

Co-operatives In Italy.

The second part of the book deals with the agrarian struggle. "Land! That has been the key to Italian prosperity and politics since long before the time of the Gracchi." "Italy's future lies in her soil." In this connection we find telling statistics on the super-concentration of land, especially in Sicily, on the evils of absentee landlordism; also an interesting picture of the universally hated Gabelloti (the agrarian middle-man and the slave-driver of the peasants).

As a background for the development of Agrarian Fascism we are treated to a careful and excellent study of the rise of the Co-operative Movement in Italy. Says the author: "The Italian co-operatives have been among the most happy expressions of voluntary associations in the world. They are much more extensive and thoroly organized than the old "artels" of the Russian self-governing co-operatives; they are more democratic than the grain banks of Portugal and Spain; and they are of more social significance than the Rochdale stores in England. Co-operatives are an integral part of every labor and peasant organization. The first thing a new sindacato thinks of doing is to establish a co-operative purchasing and selling society."

Rise of Labor Fascism.

The third part of "Rome or Death" deals with the rise of labor Fascism and the author indicates that the immediate effect of the success of labor Fascism was the disruption of the Italian labor movement.

Then follow the causes for the decline of the Socialist party; the clarification of the Fascist program, including Italy's foreign policy in the Mediterranean under the slogan of "The Mediterranean for the Mediterranean peoples;" the economic program for reconstruction characterized by such planks as the return of railroads, post and telegram system to private ownership, the settlement of industrial disputes by mixed organizations of labor and capital; the denial of the right to strike in the public service, etc.

Part four begins by sketching, in a masterly way, the magnetic Mussolini, the Breaker of Ballot Boxes, as the author picturesquely calls him, and ends by a vivid narrative of the romantic march on Rome by the Fascisti, and ends by a vivid narrative of the romantic march on Rome by the Fascisti.

Decay of Political Democracy.

The last part of the book discusses in detail the dictatorship of the Italian Fascist State. This is Carleton Beal's summary of Fascism: "Fascism has created the New Italy in an old, very old Europe—an Italy caught up in the vicious circle of isolated policy, depleted resources, financial bankruptcy, and expanding militarism; an Italy strangely imbued with a hierarchal spirit of Prussian sun-worship—yet lacking the temperamental restraint and lacking both the organizing ability and the industrial skill successfully to carry out a policy of aggrandizement; an Italy, which in spite of all logic, intends sooner or later to batter on the closed gates of the Mediterranean. This is the New Italy, which only yesterday weltered in corruption, disorganization, and chaos, which today has found a new faith in the "right of the strong." For fascism is backed by good bayonets, and fascism is a new weight flung in the balance of European politics: Some day, somehow, the eclectic, hazy, mystic idealism of fascism may be salvaged. But at present the new Italy marks one more milestone upon the road toward the general decay of political democracy in Europe.

The Poor Fish says he feels sorry for the peasants of Bessarabia but if they start to fight for their freedom they will only disturb the peaceful rule of the Roumanian nobles.

Czerwonsky's Violin Renders Beautiful "Carnival Of Life"

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Richard Czerwonky, well-known as a violinist and teacher of the violin revealed himself as a composer and conductor, at the third concert of the Bush Conservatory orchestra at Orchestra Hall last Tuesday night. He produced for the first time two modern sketches and the symphonic poem "A Carnival of Life." The sketches are light and beautiful works, full of daring and unusual harmonies, while the poem is a more serious composition, with many new and original orchestral effects.

There were three soloists, all students of Bush Conservatory. Madge Geiss played the first Liszt piano concerto, which formed an interesting comparison with the same composer's symphonic poem "Les Preludes" which ended the program. The early Liszt of the concerto is brilliant, at times all but bombastic. The later Liszt of the symphonic poem is philosophic, the deep and speculative thinker.

Agnes Knoflickova, one of Czerwonky's pupils, played the first movement of a concerto for violin by Vieutemps, a brilliant work, but a bit boresome in its heavenly length.

Josephine Decker, contralto, sang the aria "O Don Fatale" from Verdi's opera "Don Carlos".

Czerwonky as a conductor lives up to his reputation as one of the finest of violinists. His orchestra is made up partly of students, partly of professional musicians, and the effects they produce under Czerwonky's leadership rank high in symphonic performances.

The next concert of the Bush Conservatory orchestra will be given in Orchestra Hall, on May 20.

FUTILE WAR OF REACTION ON JUNE 17th

Sharp Reply to Organ of Railroaders

Editor's Note—This is the first of a series of weekly press statements that will be issued by the National Arrangements Committee of the Farmer-Labor Progressive Convention to be held in St. Paul, Minn., June 17th. The DAILY WORKER will publish these statements in full and urges that they be brought up at all workers' and farmers' gatherings in order to secure their fullest co-operation with the June 17th Convention. The first statement is as follows:

* * *

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 16.—A weekly paper published in Washington, D. C., and known as "Labor" and owned by the sixteen standard railroad organizations is going out of its way to assail the Farmer-Labor-Progressive Convention, to be held in St. Paul, Minnesota, June 17.

In the issue of March 29th, and April 5th, vicious attacks were made on the proposed national Third Party Convention. In an editorial in the issue of the latter date, a specific injunction is given to stay away from the Convention on the grounds that it is fostered and will be controlled by "Communists".

The spirit of the articles against the June 17th Convention shows very clearly that the author does not believe in the things he says. It is evidently an attempt to bring failure to the Third party Convention in order that the July 4th Convention may control the situation.

Genuine Farmer-Labor Convention.

The Convention on June 17th, is expressly a Farmer-Labor Progressive Convention for the purpose of nominating candidates for President and Vice-President on a national Third party ticket. There is no contingency nor uncertainty connected with the purpose of the gathering.

Invitations and credentials have been sent out to over fifty thousand

Ford Muscle Shoals Plan Strikes Snag In Senate Chamber

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The battle over disposition of the Muscle Shoals nitrate and power project reopened today in the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Supporters of Henry Ford's offer face an apparent majority against them.

The committee has a number of other proposals. Among these are the Morris plan for government ownership and operation and a tentative proposition presented by Senator Wadsworth of New York for lease of the project by the government to a group of New York bankers.

Good Time to Get Sick.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 16—Physicians were in constant attendance today upon John M. Moore, who was ousted as president of the Fidelity National Bank and Trust Company, after a shortage of $600,000 was found in his accounts. Relatives said Moore's condition was serious and that he has been unconscious constantly since the shortage was discovered last Friday.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT SURRENDER TO DAWES PLAN REACHES PARIS

PARIS, April 16.—The German government in a note to the Reparations Commission today accepting the Dawes report strikingly designated it as not merely a basis for negotiations but "as a basis for a swift solution of the reparations problem."

The not, which was remarkably brief, gave assurance of Germany's willingness to co-operate in the execution of the reparations experts' project.

JAP EXCLUSION MENACES PEACE, DECLARE BRITISH

Tokio Minister Adds Voice To Warning

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The Senate today deaffirmed its decision to include a Japanese exclusion provision in the pending immigration bill by a vote of 71 to 4.

Senators Sterling, Colt, Warren, Wyoming and McLean, Connecticut, all Republicans, voted against the provision. The record vote was taken on the plea of Sterling and Colt that they were absent during the oral voting yesterday.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 16.— The British Press today sees in adoption of the Japanese exclusion amendment to the immigration bill by the Congress in Washington "Grave danger" to peace in the Pacific.

The Daily News ridicules the allegation that Ambassador Hanihara's note to Secretary Hughes, urging against adoption of the amendment, constitutes a "threat" to American sovereignty and insists that the Senate's action on the amendment demonstrates "a dangerous spirit of enmity" towards Japan.

The American Senate should go slow, the newspaper says, and "consider the note for what it is—an explanation—and think carefully of the dangers toward peace which lurk in intolerance."

"Affects Friendship," Say Japs.

TOKIO, April 16.—Fear that passage of Japanese exclusion by the United States "will undoubtedly" affect "that spirit of friendship and esteem in which we have been happy to regard you," was expressed today by Baron Mitsui, Japanese Foreign Minister, in an interview with American Press representatives.

WASHINGTON, April 16.— Congress has served notice on the administration of its determination to exclude Japanese from the United States. Exclusionists boast that President Coolidge will not dare to veto the bill.

It's Crime To Try To Die in French Aviation Corps

PARIS, April 16.—Sergeant Troyes, mechanic in the French aviation corps, attempted suicide in an airplane and wound up in jail, facing a court-martial.

Troyes, who knew little about flying, entered a plane planning to go aloft and end it all with a nose dive. He merely succeeded in taxi-ing his plane into a fence, wrecking it.

He was arrested and must stand trial for damaging government property.

What Did the Russian Communists Decide?

There is universal interest thruout the United States, among thinking workers especially, about the decisions of the Russian Communist Party growing out of its recent discussions, which have been extensively published in the DAILY WORKER.

We are, therefore, sure that there will be an extensive reading of the two resolutions on party policy, the second of which is being published on Page Five today.

The first of these was the Resolution of the Central Committee of the Central Control Commission Concerning the Party Structure. This was unanimously adopted, at the joint session of the Political Bureau of the Russian Communist Party and of the Presidium of the Central Control Commission.

The second deals with the Immediate Tasks of the Economic Policy. Turn to Page Five today and read it.

Workers Score Victories In Garment War

N. Y. TYPOS MUST FACE NEW FIGHT

Printers League in Defi to Job Printers

By H. M. WICKS
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 16.—The New York Times carries a story to the effect that the Printers' League the Closed Shop Branch of the Employing Printers' Association, has served an "ultimatum on Leon H. Rouse, president of Typographical Union No. 6, calling for the negotiation of a definite arbitration agreement."

This action, according to the Times, was taken at the suggestion of the National Publishers' Association, "representing the leading magazines of the country."

Unless an arbitration agreement, making arbitrable all demands of the publishers is accepted the vain threat is made to move a number of big magazines away from New York. The demand is further made that the agreement run for two years.

Follows Newspaper Fiasco.

This move of the Printers' League follows close upon the miserable capitulation of the officers and scale committee of "Big Six," to the newspaper publishers. In the newspaper scale negotiations the position of the rank and file was weakened by both their local president and also by Acting President Charles P. Howard of the International Typographical Union, who had solemnly promised the membership that the Executive Council would back them up in the newspaper scale and then helped Rouse impose gag rule upon the membership while forcing them to swallow the publishers' proposition. The servile demeanor of the local scale committee and of Acting President Howard in accepting the publishers' proposition on the newspapers, encouraged the employers in the job branch to also assail the union. In less than a week's time after the acceptance of the infamous newspaper scale the job bosses fired the first broadside.

The job scale expires in October, but the employers realize that there is a serious unemployment situation in the industry right now and are determined to force a show-down if possible. After the complete back-down by Rouse and the local scale committee in the newspaper controversy the job printers feel that the morale of the union is shattered and that they can force a long-term arbitration agreement upon the demoralized officials.

Reaping the Whirlwind.

The nincompoop president of Big Six and his insipid scale committee have sown the wind of cowardice and impotency in the newspaper fight, they now reap the whirlwind of a challenge from the employing printers in the job line. They have proved by their bungling of the newspaper scale that they cannot be relied upon in a struggle.

The membership, however, are determined that Rouse shall not be permitted to lead "Big Six" into another disaster, and are preparing to change the laws of the local union in order to deprive him of his power to appoint committees. They are determined that a competent scale committee that has the intelligence and the guts to fight be elected to handle the controversy in the job end of the industry.

Tho the officials did yield to the publishers in the newspaper scale fight, this defeat will not be permitted to become a prelude to the complete route of all the forces. The compositors are facing a stiff fight and knowledge of this fact impels them to greater vigilance. Confidence in Rouse, who is now serving his ninth year as president of Big Six, has been destroyed. Acting President Charles P. Howard, who is a candidate for president of the I. T. U. has shown himself as worse than incompetent. Hence the membership realizes that it must take matters into its own hands and fight for the elementary demands of civilized existence, otherwise the employers in combination with inferior and stupid officials will

STRIKERS DEMAND REINSTATEMENT OF LEFT WINGERS

Instruct Delegates To Garment Convention.

Delegates elected to represent Local 100, the striking dressmakers of Chicago, at the coming convention of the International Ladies Garment Workers in Boston, May 5, were instructed by the local to demand that the International take back the expelled left wing members into the union. They were also instructed to demand that the International continue the present strike to a successful conclusion.

The three progressives elected, Oscar Simons, Frieda Reicher and Mary Rienabel received twice as many votes as the highest votes polled for the conservative candidates, none of whom were elected.

Left Wingers Best Strikers.

Vice-President Meyer Peristein urged that delegates to the convention go uninstructed. But the strikers overwhelmed this suggestion because they declared the expelled left wingers and the present progressive members were the most active and useful workers in the present strike.

The meeting which elected the delegates met in Schoenhoffen Hall, Division Street and Milwaukee Avenue. The meeting also went on record for an organization campaign among the makers of children's dresses, who are not now well organized.

Eject Policemen.

Two policemen were ejected from the hall after a violent protest at their presence at a strictly union meeting. A little later a police sergeant also put in an appearance. After telling him what they thought of him and protesting against the city going to such lengths to annoy the strikers, the dressmakers made the sergeant leave the hall.

10,000 Kentucky Coal Miners Strike For Higher Wages

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 16.—Ten thousand miners today struck for more wages in the western Kentucky field and at nearly ninety pits the only workers were crews on duty to protect property and machinery from damage that might result from suspension of operations.

About 4,000 union miners continued work, having a contract that holds until next April.

National guardsmen are on guard for the operators at Straight Creek, in Bell county.

Engineers-Firemen Negotiate

Over 45,000 members of the Brotherhood of Locomotives Engineers and of the Brotherhood of Enginemen and Firemen will be affected by negotiations to be started next week with the Western railway managements. The negotiations are to be similar to those consumated last week whereby the conductors, brakemen and switchmen received a five per cent raise in wages.

MORE BOSSES IN SURRENDER TO STRIKERS

Farce Of Injunction Trial Continues.

With two more shops surrendering to the striking ladies' garment workers yesterday girl pickets walked into Judge Charles M. Foell's court room with a consciousness of strength.

The total number of bosses who have been compelled to yield to the union's 40-hour demand is now listed at 81 and the truth is becoming more and more evident that "injunctions don't sew dresses."

Frame-up Methods.

Court was again disgraced by frame-up activities of two professional thugs—Sergeant Patrick Collins, attached to State's Attorney Crowe's office and "investigator" Patrick Moran, a garment boss stool pigeon.

Both had learned their testimony by heart, and in appearing before the first 13 of the 31 pickets now on trial before Judge Foell, repeated in a sing song the same testimony for each defendant.

Witness Admits Boss Pays Him.

Patrick Moran, the first witness for the Chicago Dress Manufacturer's Association, altho a slightly better liar than Collins, soon found himself floundering in difficulties. Cross-examination by Attorney Peter Sissman developed that Moran is a hired tool of the dress manufacturers. He was reluctant to tell who paid him for his strikebreaking activity. Finally, however, he admitted. "I receive my pay from the Mitchell Brothers Dress and Waist Company, at 367 West Adams Street."

"Do you work for them?" asked Sissman. "No, I work for the Association, 14 members of which are complainants in this case." He said he did not know the name of the association, altho he has been working for it since March 8.

Detective Is Fussed.

Collins, who followed Moran on the stand, seemed disconcerted by the fact that he had to leave the room while Moran was testifying, by the ruling of Judge Foell, and did not know what Moran had said.

Two more shops have settled, it is announced at strike headquarters. The Pierce Dress Manufacturing Company at 334 South Market Street and the Cohen Brothers shop 322 West Van Buren have signed the union agreement. Striking employees from these two shops and from the Colonial Dress Company go back to work today.

Altho Moran had said Collins was with him when he served injunction writs on the thirteen strikers, Collins "could not recall" what Moran had said to them.

Moran testified that each of the defendants refused to take the injunc-

TWO SPECIMENS OF THE CLASS WORKERS CARRY ON THEIR BACKS

An American Prince

PHILADELPHIA, April 16.—Representatives of old Pennsylvania families will pack the city hall court room tomorrow morning when Harry K. Thaw takes the stand in his fight to return to the society career that has been so constantly interrupted since he shot America's most brilliant architect 19 years ago.

Much sympathy for the scion of the multi-millionaire Pittsburgh family is expressed by members of the 400 who attended the sanity hearings today. His friends argue that such eccentricities as rabbit-chewing and whipping of girls are nobody else's business.

Indignation is freely expressed in the best circles of Philadelphia against the vulgar comments heard in cafes and hotel lobbies regarding the way of life of the wealthy Pennsylvanians. Thaw has many supporters, not so much because of what he is but what he represents.

A British Prince

PARIS, April 16.—The Prince of Wales continues his nightly invasion of high society and has selected two Americans to assist him. They are Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bate of Chicago. Bate is attached to the United States unofficial reparations delegation.

With Parisians flocking from dancing place to dancing place last night, the prince explored the Montmarte district with Mr. and Mrs. Bate. Later the party danced at Kiley's dancing place, a rendezvous established here by Gerald Kiley, ex-football star of the University of Wisconsin.

While dancing last night the prince inadvertently started a new step which has been named "Prince de Wales Trot." Owing to a slight eccentricity the prince while dancing has an oscillative right knee. Dancers soon attempted to follow the step.

The prince rode for the first time yesterday. He was a guest of Baron de Rothschild at a deer hunt in Chantilly Forest.

COURTS ARE TERRIRLY FUSSED ABOUT CANARY; HOW ABOUT WORKERS?

SAN FRANCISCO, Apr. 16.—Legal Counsel has been appointed by the Probate Court here to see that Louis Crepaux's canary bird gets enough to eat for the rest of its life.

Crepaux's will was admitted to probate yesterday and his savings amounting to $24,500 were left to Miss Sophie Barrows of Los Angeles and his canary bird to Miss Grace Hotson of Oakland.

A clause in the will provided that the bird was to be endowed, so superior Judge Graham allowed $20 until the estate shall be settled and appointed Joseph Derham attorney for the public administrator to keep liquid funds on hands to provide a full seed cup so long as the bird shall live.

MILLIONAIRE TO DEFEND SANITY ON STAND TODAY

Thaw Facing Ex-Wife, Evelyn Nesbit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 16.—Harry K. Thaw, the man whose millions once more have mustered a brilliant array of legal and medical talent to prove him sane and win him freedom, was advised by his counsel to be ready for the big test—his own appearance on the witness stand.

His only hope lies in his millions. If Harry K. Thaw were a poor man his rabbit-biting, girl-beating manias would doom him to confinement to the end of his days.

Foolish Looking Plutocrat.

Radicals in the courtroom took a good look at Thaw, this portly and rather foolish looking representative of the plutocratic class, for whom hundreds of workers are laboring in the industries in which his wealth is invested.

Climax of the Thaw sanity trial—cross-examination of Harry by attorneys for the Thaw estate and for Evelyn Nesbit, who are blocking his move for freedom—is not expected to be reached until tomorrow morning.

Sex Perversion Is Issue.

The list of lay witnesses for Thaw was practically exhausted, yesterday. A score went on in rapid succession to swear him sane.

All admitted they had avoided, in their talks with Thaw, mention of the slaying of Stanford White, the Gump case, the accusation of sexual perversion that have been made against Harry. It is such subjects as there that Thaw will have to consider under the biting cross-examination of "Billy" Gray, counsel representing Evelyn Nesbit and her boy, Russell, for whom she claims her share of the Thaw estate.

Cross examination of Dr. Wilson, pro-Thaw witness, delved into Thaw's whole life, his infancy when he suffered from insomnia, the St. Vitus dance of his childhood, his killing of White and his practice of flagellation.

Dr. Wilson was pressed to say what he thought might happen if Thaw were released.

Beating of Girls.

"Did you ask him about beating young girls—one of them so severely that when he was thru the pieces of her shirt waist had to be picked out of her flesh?"

"No."

"Did you ask him about the Gump matter?"

"Yes, but he evaded the question."

(Thaw's alleged assault upon the girls occurred as long ago as 1904.)

The witness said he thought there was no truth in this charge.

7 Insane In Family.

Gray demanded that the doctor assume that there were seven instances of insanity in Thaw's family in giving his opinion on his sanity.

Gray forced the witness to admit that he had interviewed no one but Thaw himself in determining him sane.

SPLIT N. Y. GRAFT WITH JESS SMITH

Means Tells Story to Daugherty Committee

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Jess Smith "split" $200,000 obtained from New York bootleggers for whisky permits with former Attorney General Daugherty, Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent, today told the Senate Daugherty investigating committee that Smith had informed him.

The bootleggers were demanding return of the money, Means said and Smith told him that he could not return it because he had split it with Daugherty.

Everybody Knew It.

"Everybody knew that Jess Smith and Manington were splitting with the attorney-general on liquor withdrawals. Everybody knew that Jess Smith and Manington were working with Daugherty to get whisky permits," Means said.

Means said he had turned over between $200,000 and $225,000 to Smith in all at various times.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon entered into an agreement with a man named Shelton to get permits for "the Green River Whisky people," Means charged.

Means was put on the stand after the committee completed examination of George W. Storck, department of justice accountant, who testified about alleged irregularities in sales of seized German property by the alien property custodian both in this country and in the Philippines.

Blackmail, Not Indictments.

Means said Jesse Smith told him that "they" were not going to indict former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer and Francis J. Garvan, alien property custodian, for their action in selling the Bosch Magneto Company properties, but intended to blackmail them "to force them to do the things they wanted to control democratic votes in congress."

Means also said that William J. Burns had told him that he had advised Daugherty not to try to indict Senator Wheeler, of Montana, tho Daugherty gave out a statement saying that he knew nothing about the indictment before it was returned.

Storck Tells of Irregularities.

Alleged irregularities in the sale of German property seized in the Philippines during the war by the alien property custodian were related to the senate Daugherty committee today by George W. Storck, department of justice accountant.

Seized property was sold at ridiculous low prices, some times to receivers appointed by the custodian to administer them, Storck said. On one occasion President Wilson intervened to set aside a sale in which Francis Burton Harrison, then governor-general of the Philippine Islands, acted as agent, Storck testified.

Storck said that despite his repeated reports to the justice department no attention was paid to the alleged irregularities and no prosecutions have ever been brought.

Charges that the private secretary of Governor Harrison proposed to German prisoners interned in the islands that they could be released if they would agree to sell their property were also made by Storck.

No Prosecutions Started.

Storck testifies that Kern paid Joseph F. Guffey of Pittsburgh, former democratic national committeeman, $10,000 in 1920 with the understanding that this was to aid in the withdrawal of liquor from bonded warehouses. He said his investigation showed that the deal fell thru because "the change of policy" of the prohibition officials.

Stork in answer to questions by senator Wheeler, said that his records of investigation of the Bosch case

CITE MANINGTON, MAL DAUGHERTY FOR CONTEMPT

May Be Committed to "Common Jail"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The Senate Daugherty investigating committee has decided to hale Mal Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general, and Howard Mannington, occupant of the "little green house on K street," before the bar of the Senate for contempt.

Foregoing the course followed by the case of Harry F. Sinclair, who was indicted by a grand jury for his refusal to answer questions of the oil committee, the Brookhart committee intends to bring them directly before the Senate to answer for their alleged contempt, Mal Daugherty for his refusal to produce the books of his bank and Mannington for refusing to appear in answer to a subpoena.

May Resort to Habeas Corpus.

If adjudged guilty by the Senate, they may be committed to a "common jail" until they consent to testify. They may resort to habeas corpus proceedings, however, and appeal to the Supreme Court. Their only escape would be to claim immunity on the ground that their testimony might incriminate them.

Page Mannington in Vain.

Howard Mannington, once resident of the "little green house on K street," was "paged" in vain today by the Senate committee investigating former Attorney General Daugherty when the hearings were resumed.

Mannington, yesterday thru his attorney, challenged the constitutional authority of the committee to continue its investigation and flatly refused to respond to the subpoena issued for him.

"Before we proceed," said Chairman Brookhart, "I want to inquire if Howard Mannington is present—the same Howard Mannington who wanted to testify when he was in Paris?"

Brookhart Notes Absence.

After a pause Brookhart said that Mannington's absence would be noted. Wheeler asked ex-Senator Chamberlain, counsel for Daughetry, "what has become of the promise of Paul Howland to produce Mannington?"

"We said that he would be here at the proper time, but did not promise to produce him," said Chamberlain.

Brookhart remarked that Manington was standing in the back of the room yesterday when his counsel said he was not present.

Indicted in New York.

Wheeler asked Chamberlain to ascertain from the Department of Justice if Mannington had been indicted in New York in a liquor case before he went to Europe and what disposition, if any, has been made of the case.

"We also want to know if any attempt has been made to take him into custody," said Senator Moses, New Hampshire.

George W. Stork, accountant of the Department of Justice, then took the stand to wind up his testimony regarding his investigation of the sale of the Bosch Magneto Company to Martin F. Kern, a German citizen, by the alien property custodian during the administration of A. Mitchell Palmer.

Stokes Battle Again.

Judge W. M. Cook of the criminal court today set April 23, for hearing the motion to quash the indictments against W. E. D. Stokes, New York millionaire, and five others, charged with conspiring to defame the character of the millionaire's wife.

CLEVELAND OUTFIT, WITH SOCIALISTS, STILL GREASED WITH McADOO OIL, REFUSE STAND ON LA FOLLETTE

By LAURENCE TODD.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Discussion of reports from every quarter of the country, showing that great masses of the voters are ready to support an independent and responsibly progressive political movement in this year's presidential campaign, was the chief business accomplished by the national committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, just concluded here.

No declaration of program was drafted, nor was the candidacy of LaFollette definitely endorsed. Democratic members of the gathering felt that McAdoo should not be eliminated from consideration until after the democratic national convention had named its man and adopted its platform. Another meeting on May 25 was ordered, in preparation for the convention to be held in Cleveland on July 4.

There were present William H. Johnston of the Machinists, chairman; James P. Noonan of the Electrical Workers, Morris Hillquit of the Socialist Party, V. C. Vladeck of the Jewish Daily Forward Association, John M. Baer, Edward Keating, Basil M. Manly, Judge Edward Jeffers of Michigan, President R. T. Wood of the Missouri Federation of Labor, Benjamin C. Marsh, Oscar Ameringer, T. N. Pierson as alternate for Manion of the Railway Telegraphers, R. A. Haste for D. C. Dorman of Montana, Arthur Lovell for Robertson of the Locomotive Firemen, and Finson for Fljosdal of the Maintenance of Way Employes, together with the editors of most of the journals of the railway labor unions.

Significant of the drift of opinion was the presence of a delegation from the Woman's Committee for Political Action, which was invited to select a representative as a member of the national committee. This Woman's Committee announces its program as follows:

1. Public control and conservation of natural resources, secured by taxation of all land values.
2. Public ownership with democratic control of all means of communication and transportation.
3. Public control of the nation's money and credit.
4. Abolition of all political patronage.
5. Governmental revenue to be raised not by tariffs but (a) taxes on large incomes and inheritances; (b) taxes on land values; (c) profits on government banking; (d) savings from reduction of armament.
6. Restoration of civil rights and guarantee to all citizens of full economic, legal and political rights, including (a) right of childhood to natural development; (b) right of workers to organize; (c) right of minorities to proportional representation.
7. Legislation to prevent courts from nullifying acts of legislatures, and to correct other judicial abuses.
8. Progressive reduction of armament by international agreement, judicial settlement of disputes, and a democratically controlled world organization.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Zona Gale, Julia Marlowe Sothern, Harriet Stanton Blatch, Elizabeth Gilman, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Fremont Older, Jessie Hughan and Mrs. Charles Edward Russell are among the women connected with this committee, of which Mrs. Sally H. Burch is chairman and Miss Isabelle Kendig is secretary. Mrs. Victor L. Berger, Miss Kendig and Mrs. D. J. Meserole constituted the delegation which offered co-operation to the C. P. P. A.

REPORT SHOWS U. S. INDUSTRY IN UNHEALTHY STATE

Coal Mining Hits New Low Level.

By LELAND OLDS

Federated Press Industrial Editor.

Unemployment still prevails in many parts of the country, according to the March industrial survey of the United States department of labor. The report which generally leans toward optimism shows that the employment situation is spotty with industrial activity far from healthy.

Reports showing considerable unemployment came particularly from New England and the southern states while in middle Atlantic and middle western states the activity of the iron and steel industry tended to absorb the surplus labor.

In New England two major industries, shoes and textiles, were still operating far below normal. Surplus workers were unable to secure work in other lines. The only state in this section reporting good employment was Connecticut in which the open shop metal trades predominate.

New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania reported fairly good employment due to iron and steel. Increased activity in building and road building was also reported.

Middle western states reported employment improvement during March. Indiana, however, noted a considerable surplus of common labor. Minnesota expected outdoor work to absorb unemployed skilled workers during the next 30 days. Kansas reported part-time in railroad shops, oil fields, machine shops and cement brick plants. Both North and South Dakota indicated a considerable surplus of labor.

Unemployment, particularly in the coal fields, was noted in West Virginia and across the line in Kentucky. Tennessee hoped the tremendous building program in prospect would relieve unemployment.

In Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, and Georgia employment is fairly good with some curtailment in the textile industry.

Arkansas reported a surplus of unskilled labor with reduced operations in the lumber mills. Oklahoma reported a large surplus of labor in practically all lines.

Pacific coast states indicated considerable unemployment with the prospect that production might improve.

Hurrah For The Daily Worker.

COOLIDGE AND PURITY IS NEW G. O. P. SLOGAN

Teapot Oil Thieves Ask 4 Years More

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The real "keynote" of the Republican campaign has now been sounded.

With a great deal of skill Secretary of State Hughes, the third keynoter thus far tried out, announced last night in his speech to New York Republicans that the keynote is—Calvin Coolidge.

Weeks ago it was predicted that the campaign would be centered around Mr. Coolidge. Senator Pepper made an offer in his recent keynote effort to say what Hughes said last night, but Hughes put it much stronger.

Hughes carefully built up a case for the administration. He laid particular emphasis on the works of the administration in its eexcutive departments. The studious avoidance of any reference to the record of Congress—except the observation that if it had not been for obstructionists the tax reduction program would have gone thru ere this—was one of the cleverest features of Hughes' "keynote."

It is Coolidge upon whom the country must depend, he said in effect, for carrying out the program which Harding began. It is the character of Coolidge which is offered to the nation as an earnest of leadership and of constructive achevement.

Ducks Teapot Scandal.

Hughes' treatment of the current scandals also skillfully emphasized this Coolidge note. The President, Hughes solemnly said, is prosecuting without favor or fear, and is determined on purity of government.

The keynoter summed it all up in one of his closing paragraphs when he said Mr. Coolidge is his own platform; that no other is needed.

New York Typos Must Face New Fight With Bosses

beat down the standard of living of the New York printers, already far below that of most skilled trades in this city today.

Will Fight Arbitration.

Owing to the incessant hammering of the militants in the union against arbitration that bedraggled instrument of the employers is in pronounced disfavor at present and the rank and file are in favor of going out on the streets rather than submit to an arbitration clause.

The rank and file are convinced that there is no such thing as fair arbitration, that no man can be found who is neutral as between capital and labor, and that invariably the arbitrator favors the employer. In other words they are beginning to become class conscious, to realize that the interests of capital and labor are not identical in spite of the heavy residue of reactionary officialdom that weighs upon the typographical union today.

They are determined that the job scale negotiations do not end in the same disastrous manner as the newspaper scale and will teach the employers that in spite of the fact that they lost a skirmish thru the treachery of their officials, they will not lose the war against the greed of the owners of job printing establishments.

More Bosses In Surrender To The Garment Strikers

tion writs, "but let them fall to the sidewalk, shrugging their shoulders and walking away."

Collins testimony was that the first striker had "Taken the writ and torn it up." He saw he had made a slip, and testified for the other that "he did not recall what the strikers did when Moran handed them the writ."

13 In Comtempt Case

The 13 who are charged by the two thugs with "picketing and walking up and down on the sidewalk" are Mary Gastina, Minnie Garshin, Mary Nischt, Katherine O'Connor, Elizabeth Grusling, Samuel Natesky, William Elash, Moris Sher, Morris Sudin, Marya Czajkowska, Helen Wiese, Fay Silkoff and Fabian Tipshus.

When asked by the prosecutor whether he had ever seen Sam Natesky in front of 237 South Market Street, Collins said, "Yes, many times." But he seemed at a loss to pick him out from among the 13. Finally the prosecutor came to Collin's assistance and said "there he is, the fourth one from the end."

Professional Witnesses.

That is the kind of identification and testimony which the manufacturers seem to be relying on. The witnesses all seem to be professional dicks or strikebreakers, in the employ of the bosses or else assigned to strike duty by the county.

When asked to identify Morris Sher, Collins said, "I know him, I have arrested him several times for blocking the sidewalk."

Negro Girls In Fight.

Today's strike meeting was addressed by Koop, who made a plea for organization, both politically and industrially to fight the injunction against picketing. "I am glad to see Negro girls here," said George Koop. "No race or creed or religion should stand in the way of the strikers sticking together. There is only one thing you must remember. You are all workers. The rich are getting richer and the poor poorer."

The speaker pointed out how the bosses, when they are forced to yield higher wages, make it up by charging the workers more for the goods they sell. "There is only one thing to do and that is take the example of Soviet Russia and change the system entirely. The system was changed there from production for profit to production for use. The same thing will be accomplished by the organized workers of Italy, England and Germany and France, and the garment strike here is helping to change the system in America."

Prepare For Strike Float.

Carpenters and decorators were being consulted yesterday by members of the "Committee of 15" relative to the construction of floats for the demonstration which is planned for the strikers. The demonstration against the injunction is to wind up with a mass meeting at the Garrick Theatre.

"We are considering running a float," said Meyer Perlstein. "We want first to find out what the expense will be."

Agnes Nestor told the DAILY WORKER that it was her understanding that at the last meeting of the "Committee of 15" plans were discussed of running floats. Very little mentioned, she said, about parading.

WEST VIRGINIA GOVERNMENT ASSIST COAL OPERATORS IN SHOOTING UP MINERS' UNION

By TOM TIPPETT.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 16.—The state of West Virginia and its code of laws are utilized by the coal companies in their opposition to the United Mine Workers of America exactly as a conjurer employs his magic art to fool his audience. A conjurer doesn't bother to explain how his pigeons are turned into rabbits—it's his trick. Neither do the coal operators here take the trouble to explain when a state law is a piece of paper or when it is actually a law. The transformation is also their trick. In either case no one is fooled, the difference being that one performance produces laughter, the other misery.

Gunmen Are Legalized.

The operators show works this way: He no longer has an argument against the union; he can't keep his slaves contented with words, so he uses force. A law permits him to employ watchmen to watch his property. There is in America a peculiar breed of brute known as gunman and from this anti-social crop the operators recruit their watchmen. An obliging sheriff deputizes and turns them loose with a club and a gun to terrorize the workers who may be thinking of a union. They are now deputy sheriffs of the state but the coal operators pay their wages. In Logan county alone there are 460 of such watchmen.

Operators Pay Deputies Wages.

The notorious Don Chaffin, who is still sheriff there, recently testified in court at an armed-march trial, that there was a fund in the bank on which he drew to pay these deputies. He swore he "did not know who put the money in the bank." The operators, however, admitted they pay the money and said on the stand that in 1921 in that county it had cost them $65,000. There is an assessment placed by the operators' association against every ton of coal mined to pay for this.

These mine guards have murdered hundreds of union miners and none of them have ever been molested by the law. That's what the armed uprising was about in 1921.

Traitor Freed.

Other departments of the law are equally magical in the operators' hands. After Rev. Joe E. Wilburn and his son, John, who were convicted in connection with the armed march, turned state's evidence, they were immediately given their freedom. No pardon or commutation was necessary. The prison doors opened by magic. Not only for the Wilburns, but for all criminals whom old man Wilburn could get to join his conspiracy of betrayal.

Bert Seachrist, who was serving a five-year sentence for shooting both eyes out of a man with a shotgun, joined Wilburn and walked out of jail, as did Julius Whitlock, an arson convict. These persons together with the Wilburns testified against Frank Keeney, miner's district president.

Witnesses In Chains.

At the same trial the miners had called men from prison to testify in their behalf. While the operators' prisoner-witnesses were put up at the best hotel and given absolute liberty those on the miners' side of the fence were locked in jail and fetched back and forth to court in chains. Again the black magic in operation.

The Wilburns were out long before the Keeney trial. The miners' counsel introduced in court a hotel bill of $148 for Wilburn, paid by J. A. Scott to the Holley hotel at Charleston long before the trial and when Wilburn was supposed in jail. Scott "works up evidence" for the operators, to the tune of $6000 per year and expenses—so he testified in court. Old man Wilburn is holding revival meetings now in Boone county. All of the freed convicts have been deputized by Don Chaffin.

State Foots Bills.

All of this is rather costly to the operators, it will be supposed, but at the last meeting of the West Virginia legislature the operators were reimbursed out of the state treasury.

"But what about the thousands of dollars you have spent defending the workers' side of the house? Is the state going to pay that back to you?" I asked Fred Mooney, district secretary of the Mine Workers, who was telling me the story.

Everybody roared with laughter. That's a silly question in West Virginia.

DAUGHERTY GOT SHARE IN GRAFT

were complete but the attorney general has never pressed the suit.

"How much could the government recover in that case?"

"At least $1,000,000."

"And on the old hickory case?"

"I am on record as saying $5,000,000."

"And no prosecutions have been started in either case?"

"No."

Asked if he thought that John W. H. Crim, former assistant attorney general, "in earnest" in the prosecution of war fraud cases, Storck replied emphatically "he certainly was."

"But he was blocked," he continued. "Every time Crim would get a case worked up, the case would be taken out of his hands."

Too Raw Even for Wilson.

Storck then testified that the property of a German tobacco compnay in the Philippines was sold by the alien property custodian, with Francis Burton Harrison, former Governor General of the islands acting as agent, to a group at such a "raw price" that president Wilson ordered the sale set aside. He said that later the same group bid in his property for an even lower price.

The books of the alien custodian show a loss of $449,000 on the sale, Storck said.

As Storck continued to reel off alleged crooked deals in alien property in the Philippines, Senator Jones, Washington, asked where he gots his facts.

"All from the records of the alien property custodian," said Storck.

Storck said that Fred Berry, confidential secretary to former Governor General Harrison went to a German internment camp in 1918 and told the prisoners they could be released if they would agree to sell their property. He said a clique, led by a Philippine Bank, organized a system of "second sales" of the German property which resulted in high frauds.

Germans Were Blackmailed

There were so many embezzlements in the bank, Storck said, that he advised Crim that it was unsafe to keep the alien trusts there. He said that Archibald Harrison, brother of the Governor General was interested in the bank.

Storck said that scores of Germans in the Philippines were forced to sign on the dotted line" and sell their property to the Philippine clique in order to get out of internment camps.

"In other words, they were blackmailed," said Wheeler.

"Yes".

HIGHER LEARNING GETTING A SHOCK AT DALLAS, TEX.

Woman Dean Appalled At Spooning Story

DALLAS, Texas, April 16.—Co-education was on the defensive at Southern Methodist University today.

Girl students sought revenge for attacks upon them in the "Dinkey," an outlaw fraternity magazine, as federal and university officials investigated a "Wilderness" party staged by the editors in celebration of issuance of the publication.

Commenting on an editorial which said the co-eds were "painted sepulchers of abomination," Margaret Tilly, leading co-ed, said:

"It's an insult—and every bit untrue.

Bad, Booze-Drinking Boys.

"The 'Dinkey' was published by a gang of booze-drinking reprobates who don't rate a look from a decent co-ed.

"When they threw their party out at Savage Lake they picked their dates off the streets because they knew that university women wouldn't go with them.

"We have positive evidence that not a single co-ed attended the affair."

"It's disgraceful—the boys should be prosecuted!" Mrs. S. J. Hay, dean of women, declared of the "Dinkey."

"It was gross libel. There is no punishment severe enough for the boys who published that nasty sheet—they should be prosecuted."

"The Most Awful Thing."

'Some of the girls may be thoughtless—and risk their dignities by attending parties unchaperoned—but they are all good Christian girls. The 'Dinkey' was the most awful thing I ever read. I had trouble reading it, it was so shocking. So many of our best girls were brazenly insulted," Mrs. Hay stated.

Mrs. Hay denied there was any promiscuous "boodling" (synonym for spooning) at S. M. U. The "Dinkey" charged co-eds took part in "boodling contests" wherein they made the rounds of the men on the party and then voted on the "champion boodler,"

Butte Trades Council Prints Weekly Organ, The Labor Bulletin

BUTTE, Mont., April 16.—Following the suspension of the Butte Bulletin, during the strenuous days of the war and after, the only daily working-class paper between Chicago and Seattle, the Silver Bow Trades and Labor Council has begun publishing The Labor Bulletin as its weekly organ. By unanimous vote the Council authorized the committee to use the Council's funds to get out the paper.

The subscription price of the new paper is $2 per year.

Japan Certainly Is Busy.

LONDON, April 16.—Since signing of the Washington limitation of armament treaties Great Britain has started construction on one submarine, while Japan has begun work on six light cruisers, 17 destroyers and 13 submarines, Parliamentary Secretary Ammon said during the session of the House of Commons today.

217,000 BASEBALL FANS ON JOB; THRONG PARKS OF THE MAJOR LEAGUES

NEW YORK, April 16.—With a total attendance of more than 217,000 at the eight opening games of the Major League season, baseball started to live up to the pre-season "bigger and better" predictions.

New York with 45,000, Cincinnati with 35,747 and Detroit with 34,000 topped the list while Philadelphia was in the hole with a rather meager 10,000.

The total attendance in the National League ran to approximately 105,000 while the American League topped it with 112,000.

Perhaps the biggest feature of the day was the shut-out pitched for Washington against the Athletics by Walter Johnson. Starting his eighteenth season in the Major Leagues, Johnson let the Athletics down without a run and with only four hits and he struck out eight batters.

Another Story By a Young Russian

You have read "A WEEK," by Iury Libedinsky, and you were thrilled by it as you have rarely been thrilled by a book before, because you found in it an apotheosis of the greatest of all revolutions. It thrilled you for many reasons, and rightly so, for it is a great book. Now the DAILY WORKER will offer you another story by a young Russian, but a story which is different in many ways, altho it is also about Russia after the November revolution. Iury Libedinsky, in his style follows the path laid out by the older masters. He is more or less a disciple of writers who preceded him, such as Checkov or Gorky. Of course, he cannot help showing the influences of the modernist currents, but by and large his method is not new, but follows in trodden paths. Of course, his materials are new, but his style is not, at least not as new as that of the great young Russian writer, Boris Pilniak. We are going to try an experiment. We are going to offer you a story written written by a futurist, for that is what Boris Pilniak is, but an honest futurist, without anything of the charlatan in him, nor anything of the exotic for the sake of being exotic. Pilniak has a terrible seriousness in his writings, he is not a dilletante by any means, but he is a futurist, a modernist, perhaps the last word in futurism. And we are are going to see whether you like his work. Don't forget that he is a great writer, that Leon Trotzky considered him the greatest of the young writers of Soviet Russia. The DAILY WORKER has published a long article about him, by the eminent French critic, Victor Serge. So that he is not a second-rater. But he is very different from Libedinsky, and we should like you to tell us your reaction to these two writers, which one appeals more to you and why, or does Pilniak appeal to you at all? For one thing, the book "A Week" gains a great deal over the work of Pilniak because Libedinsky has a much greater understanding of the proletarian revolution than Pilniak. Pilniak feels the force of the Russian revolution, but it does not resolve itself into simple terms in his mind. The revolution is rather a mystery to him, but he is swept by the tremendous energy of it and he gives forth the impact of it in his work. To Libedinsky, the revolution is crystal clear and he speaks of it in such simple terms that everyone can see it. To Pilniak the revolution is bewildering, chaotic, a whirl of strange forces clashing in a vast turmoil which he cannot always understand, but which he can always feel. Libedinsky understands the essence of the revolution, but he misses its overtones. Pilniak gives the overtones. Pilniak is more of the artist than Libedinsky, he is a greater fashioner of language, his style is richer, more gorgeous, more varied, more fantastic, going over from stark realism to grotesque, and then to the highest reaches of poetic fantasy, attaining to subtleties, which Libedinsky's style cannot attain. But of course, he sacrifices the simplicity of Libedinsky, and simplicity always has a universal appeal, not simplicity carried to the point of banality, but the crystal clear simplicity of the great masters of all times.

However, we should like the readers of our paper to judge for themselves. We will shortly begin the publication of the story "At the Doors" by Boris Pilniak, in a splendid translation from the Russian. The translation is by Louis Lozowick, artist and literary critic, about whom we have already written and who is giving his full co-operation to the DAILY WORKER, supplying us with invaluable material.

Watch for the first installment of this story in Saturday's magazine section of the DAILY WORKER. It is much shorter than "A Week", in fact it is a short story, whereas "A Week" is a novel. When you have read "At the Doors" by Boris Pilniak, write to the DAILY WORKER and tell us what you think of it. We want to know how working people react to this sort of writing. Is it true that the younger writers make no appeal to workers? We should like to know.

NO GRAFT IN RED RUSSIA, TRIAL SHOWS

Prompt Dismissal Of Krassnostchekov Cited

Editor's Note—Under the title, "The Party on the Alert," the Pravda, official publication of the Russian Communist Party, printed the following article on the Krassnostchekov trial. Krassnostchekov, it will be remembered, who was a lawyer in Chicago under the name of A. Strollar Tobinson, earned a high place in the Russian government by his devotion to Red Russia. He was convicted, however, of misapplying funds for the private use of his family, and dismissed from the Communist Party.

* * *

By H. GERISH.

"The affair Alexander Krassnostchokov" has come to an end.

It was HIS affair, as without him there would have been no other defendants.

It was HIS affair because of all the defendants he alone was a member of the Russian Communist Party.

This trial has brought to the surface the perils of NEP (New Economic Policy). Capitalism does not make use now of frontal attacks. It uses imperceptible permeation. It does not destroy physically, but politically and morally former revolutionaries who are not struck down in open struggle, but are gradually and imperceptibly corrupted by NEP "culture" until they become the dregs of the population.

Cause of Deterioration.

With the liquidation of the outer fronts some of us embarked on a too rapid demobilization. We demobilized on our inner front and lost a certain amount of our revolutionary energy and watchfulness. In fact, some of us lost some of our former strength. Some of us forgot that the struggle with the capitalist world in its present form demands that we should be inwardly very strong and on the alert, even more so than at the time when capitalism was sending its armed forces against us.

When the party sends stern revolutionaries (who have shown their stamina and sternness in the midst of the revolutionary struggle) to responsible economic posts, the capitalist world approaches them in an outwardly conciliatory and even "aesthetic" manner. Seemingly, there is no necessity to be on the alert when nothing more serious is contemplated than a visit to some cabaret or music hall. And where is the danger when a near relative in whose business capacity the responsible communist has great faith, asks the latter to give him a certain amount of backing in some business matters?

In practice, this kind of indulgence and concessions are frequently the beginning of a rapid deterioration of the responsible communist which might bring him to the dock.

Nipped in the Bud.

There is one side to the Krassnostchekov affair which should be emphasized: he was exposed almost at the beginning of his deterioration, as shown by the data of his first criminal acts. This is also shown by the comparatively small financial damage done by him to the Soviet Republic (the losses do not exceed 40,000 roubles). Taking into consideration that A. Krassnostchokov was in a position to manipulate millions of roubles, one could have thought at the beginning of the trial that Krassnostchekov's shameful betrayal of the confidence of the Russian Communist Party would involve the Soviet Republic in enormous monetary losses.

The communist nuclei in all our institutions must develop a maximum of activity. By their control they must nip in the bud all suspicious transactions. They must, in conjunction with the central and local control committees, see to it that criminal elements be eliminated before they are able to do much harm. We must bear in mind that such types as Krassnostchokov can become a blot on our party if they are not immediately placed in the dock.

Krassnostchokov has escaped the supreme penalty. But the sentence passed on him has KILLED him politically.

Our Soviet appratus is not yet in working order, and our party nuclei are not yet active enough to remedy the shortcomings of the Soviet apparatus.

No Large Steals Possible.

But even now we can say that nothing of the nature of the American oil scandal is possible in our Republic.

We show no mercy to deteriorated communists, but expel them from our ranks and sentence them to political and civil extinction.

The sentence in the Krassnostchokov affair has confirmed this once more.

It depends on the party, on all its members and on all workers to whom the Soviet Power is dear, to make the purging process rapid and thoro.

No Sunday Movies.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 16.—By a majority of 23 voters, of Auburn, 12 miles south of here, it was decided that the village could get along without Sunday movies. The proposition was voted on in connection with the village election.

SCENES IN FAMOUS RUSSIAN TRIAL

Sentenced to six years in the penitentiary, M. Krasnotschekov finds that grafting brings immediate punishment in the Soviet state.

The defendant's crime was the misappropriation of 40,060 rubles, which he handled thru his connection with an important federal bank. The fact that he was a member of the Russian Communist Party and had rendered useful service during the revolutionary period as president of the Far-Eastern Republic, did not prevent prompt punishment when he betrayed the workers by dishonest handling of their funds.

The picture above is the Krasnotschekov trial scene in Moscow. The defendant is shown by (X) and his attorney, Tschienoff, by (XX). The picture below it shows Krasnotschekov, right, and his counsel, left, with Krilenko, prosecutor, in center.

KANSAS BOSSES ATTEMPT TO SPLIT LABOR WITH KLAN

Probe Shows Kluxers Aid Employers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOPEKA, Kan., April 16.—The employers association of this state is trying to use the Ku Klux Klan to split the forces of organized labor it has been disclosed by a quiet investigation conducted by labor organizations.

The labor officials are beginning to fear that trouble is in store for labor on this score. Wherever the klan enters labor organizations there is bound to be trouble, it is said, because of the racial and religious differences in labor's ranks. There is a large element of foreign born, it is well known among the miners, particularly, and among some of the railroad shopmen. The entrance of the klan in some of the labor centers has been marked by dissensions and divisions among laboring men there.

Employers Organize Opposition.

The Employers' Association, which organization changed its name a year of two ago to that of Associated Industries, is regarded by laboring men as the center of opposition maintains the biggest and strongest lobby that exists in the Kansas legislature. It has opposed every step that has been taken in behalf of laboring men and women. It bitterly opposed the minimum hour law for working women and has tried time and time again to repeal the bill in legislative sessions. It has opposed and vigorously fought the laundry and factory inspection laws and regulations. It did not oppose the industrial court bill except that feature of the measure which provided "teeth" against the employers as well as against labor. It has tried to defeat labor laws in courts as well as in the legislature.

Bosses and Klan.

Now, it is pointed out, there is a connection between the klan and the Employers' Association. John S. Dean, well-known Topeka lawyer, is attorney for the Association. Mr. Dean also is head counsel for the Ku Klux Klan in its fight to retain its legal standing in the state. Dean, as attorney, and Harry Sharp, as secretary of the Employers' Association, are the "pillars" of that organization. They have campaigned the state together in the interest of the association. The association maintains permanent headquarters in Topeka and has a working force every day in the year. Labor looks upon it as the one big factor in the state that constantly menaces labor interests.

Labor Broke With Klan.

In large cities of Texas and in other states of the South, where the klan is older and stronger than in Kansas, there has come an open break between the klan and organized labor. Those who have studied the situation in Kansas express the belief that trouble is certain to follow in this state.

Those who are interested in labor's welfare point out that if the Employers' Association should desire to disrupt organized labor it could find no more effective and certain method than of introducing a racial and religious conflict within its ranks.

Telephone Girls In Melbourne Win The 34-Hour Week

(By The Federated Press)

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 16.—Telephone girls in the Australian government service have received an increase ranging from $45 to $120 per annum, according to grade. Hours have been reduced to 34 per week. Formerly the hours ranged from 37 to 46 per week.

In granting the award the federal arbitrator agreed that, generally, the work of the operators was underpaid, and that the value and amount of work had increased since the last award was made.

SPOKANE R. R. CLERKS ENDORSE F.-L. CONVENTION

Want Class Party Of Workers-Farmers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPOKANE, Wash., April 16.—Not all of the organizations of the Railroad Brotherhoods in the United States are for the conference for Progressive Political Action. This is indicated by the following resolution adopted by Spokane Lodge No. 252, of Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, at a recent meeting.

We, the members of Spokane Lodge 252, declare that the industrial workers and exploited farmers must be represented in the Presidential campaign of 1924, by a Farmer-Labor Party, with a program representing the class interests of the industrial workers and farmers.

We, therefore, declare our support of the convention to be held on May 30th in St. Paul, Minnesota, for the formation of such a party. We are opposed to delaying the convention until after the conventions of the old parties as we are now convinced that neither the candidates nor the programs of either the republican or democratic parties are of any importance in deciding the question whether the farmers and industrial workers shall organize a mass party which will fight their political battles.

We instruct that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the organization committee in charge of the work of calling the May 30th convention and be published in the labor press. Adopted by Spokane Lodge No. 252, B. R. C. of A., this 18th day of March.

JAMES S. PEELE,
Chairman.
O. A. SWARTZ,
Secretary.

(All organizations which supported the May 30th conference are now lined up for the June 17th conference.)

Chinese Dockers Win Strike Against Housing Shortage

(By The Federated Press)

HONGKONG, April 16.—Two thousand Kowloon dock workers struck near here against the demolition of their homes to make way for dockyard extensions. The men claimed the house shortage in Kowloon, Hongkong's dockyard port, was so acute they would be homeless if their dwellings were razed. The municipal council intervened.

BOSSES' COURT SCORES HEAVILY FOR ITS OWNERS

Unique Decision In West Virginia.

(By The Federated Press)

A man's home is not his castle if it is owned by the company for which he works, according to a recent decision of the West Virginia supreme court which appears to reverse one of the oldest legal safeguards to the common man. With the decision as precedent employers may rapidly develop a situation in which the majority of workers occupy their homes only on sufferance.

The court finds the "man's home his castle" theory indefensible in a case where the house is an essential part of the company's plant. In such a case he is not even a tenant unless it be on sufferance and he may be summarily ejected as a trespasser the day he voluntarily quits working for the company.

Laws Protect Rich.

This decision was handed down in the case of Wat Angel, a coal miner, vs. Black Band Consolidated Coal Co. of Kanawha county. Angel's family and possesions were thrown out of his house in winter weather and remained only partially covered in the open for four days with considerable damage to the goods. Because Angel had voluntarily quit working for the company in order to protest against injustice the court decided that the company was justified in its course of action.

Lawyers regarded the case as a test case. They say that the "rule of property" established by the court will be invaluable as a weapon of employers in future federal court proceedings. It is expected to have a widespread effect on the mining industry.

Captain C. B. Avis who represented the company holds that he has won a basic decision in law that will rob the union miners of one of their most effective weapons heretofore used in curtailing the production of coal during strikes. He says: "It also simplifies the procedure of counsel for mine owners applying for injunctions against striking miners who threaten to curtail production by remaining in the houses of the company and thus preventing the company from bringing in willing workers. By the ruling that such a striker is a trespasser it is a virtual decision that the trespassor is also a violater of a federal injunction which restrains him from trespassing and he is therefore in contempt of federal court as well as being without any rights in the premises in the state courts."

What It Means.

As a result of this West Virginia supreme court decision, if it is allowed to stand, any corporation which chooses to make the living quarters of its employees a part of the company plant, simply deducting the rent from their wages, can make them both trespassers and in contempt of court if they continue to live in their homes one day after they strike in protest against what they consider unjust conditions of employment. A worker's decision to strike will involve a decision to move out of his home or to face forcible ejection and a sentence for violating an injunction.

STRONG WAVE OF ANTI-MILITARISM SWEEPS NORWAY

Norwegian Youth Fights Conscript Service

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KRISTIANA, Norway, March 30.—(By Mail)— The Norwegian Left Young Communist League, The Social Anarchistic Society of Norway, and the Norwegian Syndicalist Federation have sent a joint call to the Norwegian Youth of military age, to refuse military service.

They have the support of the Norwegian Workers Party and request the support of all union men in their demand for the abolishment of the military work and the dissolution of the class army; they also request a boycott against military transports and manufacture of war supplies. They claim that the only object in keeping an army is to use it against the "internal enemy," to crush down labor every time it rises in fight for its reasonable demands.

Several editors of papers have been indicted for publishing articles about the military strike. The first case, against Olsen-Hagen, editor of "Late Mai" in Stavanger, was tried March 22nd, and resulted in a judgment of six months' jail sentence and deprivation of citizen's rights for ten years. Appeal was taken.

An anti-military meeting was called by Stavanger Workers Party and Stavanger Young Communist League the same evening, with a crowded hall passed a resolution calling the verdict distinct class judgment and an attack on the general freedom of speech and thought. The executive committee of Rogaland County also passed a strong protest against the verdict.

Immense Protest Meetings.

March 26th, an anti-military meeting called by Kristiania Workers Party and the local of the Young Communist League, broke the record for meetings held at the hall of the Kristiania Federation of Labor in its 54 years' existence. The large hall was packed and three overflow meetings arranged. The military strike parole was called the liberating word, the action that cuts thru talk and theories. The meeting expressed "its full co-operation with the work of the young league for a boycott of military work by the working class, (military strike) and sees in the desperate prosecution instituted by the authorities' proof that this is the line they fear." Oscar Torp, chairman of the Workers Party, said: "The army is mobilized against the workers and to protect the strikebreakers. Strikebreakers are the dreg of society for whom we all have contempt."

A state that uses military to protect strikebreakers must be broken up. An institution like the army, that is used for protection of strikebreakers, must be destroyed.—Strikebreakers must be made outlaws.—We shall place our army, our organizations, against the class army. We will not not quit the fight until the military establishment lies thrown and tied by the force with which we shall march forward."

Fighting The Military.

Haakon Meyer, president of the young league, emphasized that the army is a class army. "At the time of the general strike organized workers were sent home as not reliable. Safe companies have been formed. The working class must fight this army.

"The strikebreaker is considered a shameless person. We will create the same sentiment against those who protect the strikebreakers. In our position towards the military we are not satisfied to only refuse.—We must be willing to and prepare ourselves to take up the battles that will come, also the military. And we shall win so that we on our own foundation can establish our own dictatorship." The overflow meeting called: Down with the military. Forward to direct action!

March 27th, the police indicted the following members of the Young Communist League of Norway, on account of anti-military actions: Thorbjorn Dahl, Henry W. Kristiansen, Birger Madsen, Jorgen Vogt, Edw. Sjolande, Carsten Aasebo, Bj. Lindahn, Arthur Arneson, Harold Olsen and Eugene Olaussen.

Radical Argentine Students Kick Out Fossilized Teachers

BUENOS AIRES, April 16.—The students' movement in Argentina which is powerful enough to have expelled all objectionable old fogey professors after a two-year fight also enjoys the right to name professors and control academic freedom. It has just founded the first students' daily on the continent.

The students of Latin-America have many powerful weeklies all with socialistic or communistic trend. Altho they are probably younger than United States university students, they take an active part in the political life of their nations, leading them on new paths. There is less of the callow mental immaturity observable in the American fraternity, petting-party, professional-athletics type of student.

JAKE HAMON'S WIDOW JOINS CROWD THAT FLOUTS OIL PROBERS

Mrs. Georgia Hamon Rohrer, widow of the late Jake Hamon, slain Oklahoma politician and oil millionaire, today defied the senate oil investigating committee to force her to testify.

When John L. Oros, deputy U. S. marshal located Mrs. Rohrer after ten days' search, and by a ruse served a forthwith subpoena, Mrs. Rohrer indignantly declared:

"The former Attorney General didn't pay any attention to their old forthwith subpoenaes and I'm just as independent as he ever was. The senators down there are acting like a lot of school boys."

Mrs. Rohrer was found at the Allied Arts Club, and Oros gained entrance by posing as a lover of arts.

"What nerve," exclaimed Mrs. Rohrer.

"Well, I'm not going," she declared.

"I've always been a good democrat and Jake never told me any of his republican secrets. And as for the papers the committee wants, well, they were burned up months and months ago."

Assails Bill Making Immigrants Furnish Military Records

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Representative Berger of Milwaukee made a losing fight, in committee of the whole house during debate on the immigration bill, against the clause compelling the alien to bring with his application for entry into this country a complete dossier of his military, criminal or other record.

"It is an axiom of civilized nations," he said, "to consider a person honest and innocent until the contrary is proven. According to the proposition before us, the immigrant is supposed to have a prison record. The great bulk of the immigration of the past 100 years was honest. It was nothing like the immigration of the seventeenth century, when every immigrant to certain parts of the American colonies had a prison record, because Great Britain used large sections of her possessions as penal colonies. We know from history that in those days English judges used to deport Anglo-Saxon criminals instead of hanging them. Pickpockets, thieves and prostitutes were sent to these shores in that way. Many of the criminals became successful citizens, and some descendants even Revolutionary sires, I suppose.

"But I cannot see why we should ask questions of that kind of the present immigration. Moreover, under the provisions of this bill the burden of proof is put upon the immigrant. Is it any business of ours what the military record of an immigrant was in Bulgaria, or Russia, or France, or Germany? Suppose he had no military record at all; that might make him a very desirable immigrant."

Filipinos Strike For 8-Hour Day In Hawaiian Fields

HONOLULU, April 16.—Seven thousand Filipinos in the Hawaiian sugar plantations are on strike for the eight-hour day and a $2 scale. They were working from 10 to 12 hours daily for $1. The Nat. Conference of Land Workers of the Philipines has promised financial aid for their brothers in Hawaii and funds are being dispatched. Hawaiin police were called out immediately after the strike to terrorize the Filipinos who have concentrated in towns near the plantations, having been forced to leave the camps by the sugar magnates.

BITTEREST DRIVE AGAINST MINERS IN W. VA. HISTORY

Union Loses Most Of Its Membership

By TOM TIPPETT
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., April 16.—West Virginia coal operators are seizing an opportune time to try to crush that part of the United Mine Workers of America that remains in this state. The general depression, everywhere prevalent in the industry, has brought the miners near starvation and since 1921 the union's vitality has been sapped in courts because of the armed march of that year.

The operators have continued on all sides a relentless campaign of violence with their armed guards. They have also at their beck and call the armed forces of the state and on top of all Judge McClinic issues injunctions as the operators direct. But as the injunction abuse in other parts of the country, in West Virginia it stands in a class alone for viciousness. The West Virginia union is slowly slipping into the hand.

29,000 Unionists Left.

There are still approximately 29,000 members in District 17, U. M. W. A., but District 29 (New River field) has been completely lost. At its highest peak, 1918-22, the union claimed a membership of about 65,000 in both districts in the state. After the war membership began to fall and the 1922 national strike considerably weakened the union membership. District 29 with 9,000 members was lost then and in District 17 there are thousands now striking, living in tents, where they have been since the national strike called two years ago.

Tent Colonies Like Ulcers.

These tents colonies, crowded with ragged women, children and numerous babies, can be seen like ulcers on the mountain sides or in the river bottoms now in the full bloom with spring flowers. They are located all along Big and Little Coal rivers, Cabin creek, Briar creek, Paint creek, and all thru the Kanawha valley district of which Charleston is the center. The territory is the old established union field. The strikers are isolated and are against companies that refused the 1922 settlement. Their mines, meanwhile, have operated with strikebreakers with the 1917 wage scale in effect.

This April the entire Kanawha Operators' Association demanded a reduction to the 1917 figures. It was refused by the miners who want the continuation of the 1922 scale (Jacksonville, Fla., settlement). A strike affecting the entire Charleston field has been on since April 1. Other operators' associations in the state have signed the Jacksonville settlement. The settled fields take in about 17,000 men.

45,000 Get Strike Relief.

The district office estimates 45,000 as the number on strike relief. That includes the women and children. The benefits are $3.50 for men, $1.50 for a wife and 50 cents for each child, per week. This is paid by the membership of District 17. There have been some donations from the international union and some assistance, especially food and clothing, from other sources.

There are in the state a little over 197,000 men employed in and around the mines, according to the state department of mines; 888 coal companies operate between them 1381 mines that ship by rail. They produced in 1922 70,888,203 gross tons of coal. The total value of this product was $180,764,917.65, the report says, and on another page shows that the average weekly wage paid the miners who produced it was $20.07. That was in 1922.

The 1921 report shows that depression had already hit the industry. There were 9,873,401 fewer tons of coal mined in 1922 than in 1921. And of course less wages for the miners. Since 1922, conditions in the industry have got worse. Fred Mooney, secretary of the West Virginia miners, says work has never been so scarce and miners' conditions so bad as at present.

Nevertheless the union miners grin and say they are going to win. That sentiment is everywhere. From the district office to the meanest tent colony. It is the indefatigable spirit of unionism in West Virginia.

POLICE REFUSE TO SCAB IN BIG NORWAY STRIKE

Say Transport Work Is Not Police Work

Kristiania, March 29—(By Mail.)—The ironworkers' strike has now lasted 21 weeks, that of the longshoremen 10 weeks and the general lockout five weeks. Both sides seem to have settled down to a fight to the finish. An immense outdoor demonstration took place March 17, when 15,000 marched under red flags and sang "The International."

During the longshoremen's strike some policemen on duty in Kristiania had been ordered to do different kinds of work, which only could be classed as longshoremen's work. The executive committee of the policemen's union as an answer sent the following circular letter to the members:

"In accordance with resolutions passed, the committee hereby emphasizes that in case of wage conflicts such as the longshoremen's strike police officers must act with the greatest care and discretion and abstain from everything which might be construed as taking sides. A lowering of the wages of workingmen will lead to the same result for functionaries. In self-interest one should therefore act with caution.

Refuse Challenge to Strikers.

"Transport work is not police work. Such work done by the police will act as a challenge to the strikers and may easily cause riots.

"Remember that the function of the police is to preserve order and peace and that one must not do anything which may provoke disorder. It is the duty of a policeman at all times to be neutral and impartial in his service."

One reason for the circular might be traced back to the general lockout of 1921. The police at that time made itself so unpopular with the strikers that the suggestion was made that the representatives of labor in the city council should vote against wages and increase of wages of police functionaries. The circular aimed to avoid similar sentiment during the present strike.

Big Wave of Protest.

The immediate result was that 10 of the 12 members of the executive committee were discharged, the other two given a warning, resigned as members of the policemen's union. The union at two meetings requested the reinstatement of the discharged men. Policemen's unions in other cities passed similar resolutions.

A large meeting of city employes voted a strong protest to the Storting and government. The Storting had a lengthy debate on the question, and it was referred to the department of justice. "Norsk Politiblad" concludes an article with: "Shall it be necessary to strike a blow, it will be one of sufficient force."

FUTILE WAR OF REACTION

local labor unions, farmer organizations, progressive, professional and business organizations and to minority political parties. It is aimed to get representation direct from the rank and file and to test out the sentiment of the people for fundamental changes in the operation of government. It is planned to have the voice of millions of voters reflected at the Convention.

In deciding the organizations that are eligible to send delegates no one has been excluded which is willing to subscribe to the five fundamental planks, namely:

(a) Government Ownership of Railroads.

(b) Public Ownership of Natural Resources.

(c) Control of money and Credits by the People thru Government and co-operative Banks.

(d) Restoration of civil rights guaranteed by the Constitution.

(e) Abolition of the use of injunction in Labor Disputes and other judicial abuses.

Coalition of Progressives.

This Convention is to be a coalition of all progressive elements which will agree to the platform and will join in backing a single set of candidates running on such platform. No inquiry has been made into the philosophic views of the groups participating. It is entirely a question of joining wholeheartedly in promoting a Third party movement in the campaign of 1924.

There will no doubt, be Communists as there will be other schools of thought represented at the Convention, but they will represent such a small fraction that even if they so desired, they would make no impression on the great mass of farmers and workers who are interested in practical legislative measures and not in visionary doctrines.

The editor of "Labor" should know that the Farmer-Labor movements of the Northwest are the only progressive political movements of any consequence in America. Nowhere else will the forces represented by this newspaper called "Labor" be able to make an impression except in the Northwest and particularly in Minnesota.

The organized political movements of the progressives in the Northwest have demonstrated their ability to accomplish things in practical politics and they do not need any guidance from newspapers influenced by Washington politicians.

The June 17th Convention has been sponsored by the Farmer-Labor movement of Minnesota, which is not Communist and is in charge of a committee of arrangements which is not controlled by the Communists.

Over eighteen different organizations from all parts of the nation, none of which are Communist have joined in this call for the Convention of June 17th. Already thousands of responses have been received from the call and local and state organizations are signifying their intention to send delegates. From present indications there will be between five and ten thousand delegates and visitors at the Convention. It will be impossible for any one group to control these proceedings and the leaders in Minnesota and the Northwest have sufficient practical political experience to defeat any attempt at the capture of the Convention by any element.

Convention Has Definite Purpose.

It will be called for a certain well defined purpose; to adopt a platform and make nominations, and arrange to conduct a national campaign. It is not intended to organize a party. This will come as a matter of course with the close of a successful campaign which will without doubt, go a long way if not succeed in electing Senator La Follette as President.

The evident purpose of this Washington newspaper in assailing the Farmer-Labor Convention of June 17th, is to boost the July 4th endorsing Convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action. These two Conventions are entirely different and should not interfere with one another. The Cleveland Convention of July 4th, will be composed of representatives from State and Central bodies and from international organizations, economic and political and will not represent the rank and file of voters. It is not a Third party nominating Convention, it is to be an endorsing Convention and may O. K. a Coolidge or a McAdoo.

It is this difference that the St. Paul Convention is an avowed Third party affair of the rank and file to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President while the Cleveland Convention is an endorsing event, composed of high officials out of touch with the voters and may simply approve the acts of one of the old parties.

Reactionaries Assail June 17th.

It is intimated that reactionaries are back of the June 17th Convention. This is an infamous slander befitting a less reputable organ than the official mouthpiece of the progressive railroad unions.

The June 17th Convention was planned six months before the Cleveland Convention, and the conference for progressive political action was given every opportunity to co-operate. The editorial in question says the Cleveland Convention will safeguard the people's interest.

From the way some of the railroad brotherhood leaders are boosting McAdoo and in view of the fact that Mr. Keating, Manager of Labor, is a retired democratic politician, it would be foolish indeed for the Progressive Farmer-Labor supporters to trust their political destiny to the men who will dominate the Cleveland Convention of July 4th.

The Farmer-Labor progressives of the Northwest are going forward with the June 17th Convention and proclaim to the progressive voters of America that a Third party ticket will be in the field and a campaign will be carried on to elect the candidates nominated.

We do not advise anyone to stay away from the Cleveland Convention for we think that real progressives are able to estimate the importance of that gathering, but we do invite representation from every labor, farmer and progressive organization in America to attend the June 17th Convention and help initiate a movement that will emancipate the wealth producing classes of America.

16 Crime Charges Facing McDonald, Shop Strikers'-Foe

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 16.—Alva McDonald, U. S. marshal for Oklahoma, now defending himself against charges in Washington, is the officer responsible for the "civil war" communiques that flashed over the Associated Press wires from Shawnee, Okla., during the 1922 shopmen's strike. He charged the shopmen with burning bridges and firing volleys into the property of the Rock Island railroad and various bombing operations, one being an explosion that blew a hole in the front porch of a strikebreaker. His imagination was also active otherwise.

McDonald, a friend of Daugherty, now faces 16 charges including allegations that he has been intoxicated on duty, a visitor of disorderly resorts, a passer of bad checks, and that he shot Al Spencer, train bandit, without justification. McDonald says the charges are baseless and are inspired by a government secret Agent in Oklahoma and the Bartlesville chief of police. He admits that he drinks but denies intoxication. He admits visiting disorderly houses in El Paso and Juarez, Mexico, but explains that he was looking for train robbers.

TRACHTENBERG TELLS POWER OF RUSSIAN UNIONS

All Labor Laws Must Get Their Sanction

By ANDREW OVERGAARD

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 16.—A very successful meeting, attended by hundreds of trade unionists and their friends in this city Sunday afternoon, was addressed by Alexander Trachtenberg, who recently returned from Russia.

The Cleveland workers were interested to learn the truth about the labor unions in Russia, as they have recently read so many attacks in the Jewish Daily Forwards and other yellow sheets.

The speaker gave a very interesting explanation of the devlopments and structure of the Russian unions. Most interesting was his description of the conditon of the members of the unions or the Russian working class, which of course proved that the charges by Gompers and Co. are nothing but plain lies. No labor laws are enacted without the sanction of the trade unions. On all important committees in Russia also sits trade union representatives.

The speaker dwelt at length on the cultural work of the trade unions and how the government, or rather the industry, must stand the expenses of maintaining union headquarters, etc.

Imagine American steel workers in Gary having the office of the shop committee next to Elbert T. Gary. There are 95 per cent of the workers organized in Russia on a voluntary basis, and the unions are the real power behind the Soviet Government, declared the speaker. They are working with the government for the establishment of complete Communism in Russia.

Trachtenberg Talk On Russia, Friday, Must Not Be Missed

Alexander Trachtenberg, who speaks Friday, April 18, at 8 p. m. in North Side Turner Hall, 820 North Clark St., will use material gathered thru 14 months of study of the Communist movement of Russia and Europe. Comrade Trachtenberg has done much research work in the field of the history of working class movements.

Comrade Trachtenberg will tell the latest news of the Russian situation, and will give the effects of the recognitions of foreign countries of the Soviet Government. The German Communist movement of recent years will also be touched on.

Steel Company Spy Exposes Himself To Workers of Canton

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CANTON, Ohio, April 16.—An industrial spy using the name of "Jack O'Brien," has appeared here.

He showed up in Cleveland at C. E. Ruthenberg's meeting last Sunday and introduced himself to Ruthenberg as a farmer-laborite from Canton, but he is actually a member of the private police force of the United States Alloy Steel Corporation here.

At the Trachtenberg meeting here this same "O'Brien" introduced himself to Trachtenberg as "president of International Steel Workers Union." Three workers have been discharged from the steel mill here in the past week for being members of the Workers Party of America.

When the DAILY WORKER started this "O'Brien" wrote in and said how much he liked it and what he was doing for it; the militants here have written the DAILY WORKER for copies containing this letter.

It is hoped that the publication of this new item will put the workers of Canton on their guard against this stool.

Russian Health And German Misery, In New Motion Picture

Russia and Germany—a Tale of Two Republics, is a new motion picture now being exhibited in aid of relief for German workers. It shows Germany in the throes of a life and death struggle and Russia going along on the way of peace and reconstruction. In Russia streets are being repaved and buildings are going up.

In Germany troops with steel helmets march. The workers retreat reluctantly; the misery is unbearable; children are dying of hunger and disease. Against the beautiful setting of old German cities, hunger is making its ravages among the suffering population. And yet tremendous forces are grappling with each other.

This picture is released by the Committee for International Workers' Aid, 32 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

GARY, Ind., April 16.—Five persons, three of them policemen, were shot here today as the result of a quarrel between two Mexicans, over a love affair. Joseph Bosquis and Francisco Jaciner, the Mexicans, may die.

RUSSELL WANTS LIBERALS TO SAVE EUROPE FROM U. S.

Assails U. S. Finance; Soft-Pedals Labor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 16.—Bertrand Russell, British pacifist, picks American liberals for the task of saving Europe by preventing the growth of American financial imperialism. He made his appeal to the liberals at a dinner given in his honor by the League for Industrial Democracy and the Penguin Club and attended by several senators and representatives.

Russell's appeal was not addressed to the labor movement, and he did not tell the assembled liberals what force they should employ powerful enough to defeat the financial giants whose aggressions he was deploring.

Attacks Dawes Report.

However, the liberal gentry, some of whom have looked kindly on the Dawes report, heard that Wall street plan severely assailed. Russell particularly emphasized the point that the Dawes plan provides for an American financier as umpire in the determination of all disputes as to the application of the scheme of collections against Germany.

Russell said that the accident of the date of German elections coming ahead of the date for the French elections, this year, might result in turning the European scale from peace to war once more—since a great increase in the reactionary strength in the German Reichstag would lead to a strengthening of the reaction in France. "Speaking for a minute as a patriotic Briton," he whimsically remarked that if America were to summon France to pay the interest on her American debt, she would have to "stop building airplanes with which to destroy London," or she would have to admit bankruptcy.

Russia Not Controlled.

He pointed out that American finance is steadily gaining mastery of the destiny of the world, since all other nations except Russia and China—"whose agricultural populations are willing to endure famines occasionally as the price of independence of the international money lenders"—must borrow to rebuild and maintain their industrial civilization. American finance is subject only to control by the American people, and finance in general constitutes the active government of the world. If war is to return, on a scale which may wipe out both sides, due to the use of disease germs as weapons, no power remaining in Europe can cope with it. But America, by preventing the lending of credit to warmakers, can enforce peace. The responsibility of the liberal movement in America is to prevent the growth of financial imperialism here, which will encourage the slaughter or extinction of the peoples of Europe.

California's Papers Pretty Rotten, Its University Admits

(By The Federated Press)

BERKELEY, Calif., April 16.—Discovered—what's the matter with California. Prof. George S. Turnbull, school of journalism, University of California, announces that this state is second in the United States for its high percentage of brass check newspaper readers. Fifty-three percent of the citizens of California buy a brass check daily—only 1 percent behind Massachusetts, which sent Calvin Colidge to the Presidency and leads the country for devourers of the capitalist press. California is first in the nation, however, among readers of the commercialized magazines.

But They Chose the Dollars.

WASHINGTON, April 16.— "The choice between oil and dollars has to be made," a statement issued today at the White House by the Presidential Commission on oil reserves recently appointed by President Coolidge declared.

The statement, which outlines the full policy of conservation to be followed by the commission, was issued immediately following a meeting between President Coolidge and the members of the commission, Dr. George Otis Smith, director of the geological survey, Chairman; Admiral Hilary P. Jones, of the General Board of the Navy, and R. D. Bush of San Francisco.

Pennsy Plans Financiering.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The Pennsylvania Railroad today applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to issue $20,100,000 of 5 per cent equipment trust certificates, proceeds to be used to finance the purchase of 8,000 box cars, 3,000 automobile cars and 1,000 stock cars.

Immediate Communist Tasks Under Russia's Economic Policy

Resolution of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party on "The Immediate Tasks of the Economic Policy."

(Adopted by the Political Bureau on December 24, 1923, in execution of the decision taken by the Plenums of the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee on October 25. This resolution has to be submitted for final confirmation by the Plenum of the Central Committee.

The Party, when solving the immediate questions of economic policy, must take as a basis the fundamental task for the given historical period, i. e., the realization of the alliance between proletariat and peasantry, the linking up of town and country, and of the nationalized industry and the peasant economy.

Only the correct solution of the questions which arise in regard to the relations between the working class and the peasants, can permanently strengthen the economic basis of the dictatorship of the proletariat and preserve it from any kind of wavering.

Twelfth Congress.

The Twelfth Congress of the Party, in its resolution on the organization of industry, has laid particular stress upon the fact that the place of development of our state industry meets with certain objective hindrances, which are determined by the state of the peasant economy, and that the exact adaptation of the entire economic policy to the level of development of the peasant economy forms the most important task, an incorrect solution of which would unavoidably bring disastrous consequences, not only in the economic, but also in the political sphere. Only a radical change in the present political and economic structure of the industrial countries of Europe, could perceptibly lessen the immediate dependence of the state industry upon the situation of the peasant economy and create the conditions necessary for a quicker transition to a regime of socialist economy.

The resolution of the Twelfth Congress states:

"Agriculture, altho with us it is still on a low technical level, has a preponderating importance for the whole economics of the Soviet power. . . . Our Party must not for a moment forget, nor fail to lose sight of the preponderating importance of the peasants' economy, when meditating any action . . . Not only the neglect, but also the lack of sufficient attention to this circumstance would be fraught with innumerable dangers, both in the economic and the purely political sphere, as it would inevitably undermine and weaken that alliance between the proletariat and the peasantry, that confidence of the peasantry in the proletariat which, with the given historical transition period, form the most principal supports of the dictatorship of the proletariat, and the maintenance and strengthening of which alliance and confidence, form the fundamental condition for the stability of the Soviet power and, as a consequence, the fundamental task of the Party."

Peasant Economy.

These systematic instructions of the Party have, up-to the present, not been thoroly carried out in the practice of our economic organs. It was far from being properly understood, that the necessity for setting up the most thoro interchange between town and village formed the principal motive for the transition to the New Economic Policy, and that under the New Economic Policy the supplying of the peasantry with the products of the state industry forms the principal economic task.

The present economic difficulties (lack of market) are to a considerable extent to be attributed to the insufficient heed given by the Party to these indications regarding the role and the significance of the peasants' economy and the peculiarities, resulting from the task of realizing the dictatorship of the proletariat in a country with a predominating peasant population. The task of the Party, in the future must consist of systematically and carefully carrying out the above policy in regard to the relations between town and village, and not allowing itself to be diverted in an economically and politically injurious manner in the direction of an under-estimation of the significance of the peasant economy in the general economic structure of the country.

Resulting from the lack of coordination between the tempo of the reconstruction of the peasants' economy on the one hand, and the state industry on the other, in the conditions of the free exchange of goods, there arose the phenomena of the present crisis. This crisis is characterized by the disparity between the extraordinarily high prices for industrial products and the low prices for agricultural products. The industry, which had grown upon the basis of the town market, which is able to pay higher prices, could not at the moment of the realization of the harvest sell its goods to the mass consumer having a lower purchasing power—the peasantry. On the other hand the peasantry did not find a sufficiently wide home and foreign market for a profitable sale of its grain, as a result of which there followed the low prices of the latter.

Reason for Crisis.

To the sharpening of the market crisis there contributed: the insufficient development of the commercial relations, the policy of high prices adopted by the syndicates, the weak development of money economy, the existence of two kinds of valuta, from which the peasantry suffered most owing to the depreciation of the Soviet paper roubles.

As a result of the steady work, the last year has yielded undoubted successes in the sphere of the reconstruction of industry and transport, and shows a greater quantity of goods manufactured by the state industry than ever before during the Soviet rule. On the other hand, the peasantry undoubtedly has enlarged its area of land under cultivation, has to a certain extent raised the level of its economy, has increased the production of special cultures, and, thanks to the substitution of the greater part of tax in kind by money taxes, it had at its disposal a greater surplus of grain, altho the harvest was poorer than that of the last year.

The present crisis, therefore, can by no means be compared with those crises resulting from lack of goods and from lack of grain, which confronted the country in the years 1919, 1920 and 1921. The fundamental elements of the national economy as a whole (the quantity of coal, naphtha, metals, cotton produced and of the grain remaining in the hands of the peasantry, etc.), have undoubtedly increased. The crisis arose as a result of the disparity between these particular branches of the national economy, and in the first place, as a result of our state industry and trade being incapable of finding their way to the peasant mass market.

I. Agriculture.

The smallness of the rural market and the small purchasing power possessed by the peasantry, as well as the high cost of production of urban industry, are the result of the long period of the imperialist and civil wars. The sinking of the prices for agricultural products, is a world phenomenon which, in the capitalist countries, as for instance in America, has led to the sheer destruction (burning) of huge quantities of grain in order to bring about an artificial increase of prices.

The urban and industrial population of the Soviet Union does not constitute a sufficient market for the peasant economy. There can be an increase in the prices of the grain produced by the peasants, in the first place by capturing the foreign markets. Already in the year 1922, this circumstance was taken into account by the Party, which laid down the necessity of developing by every means the export of agricultural products. In that year there was exported 40 million poods of grain, while in 1923 it was decided, as the most important task of the economic policy, to increase the export of grain to 250 million pood.

Party Action.

In order to ensure the success of the peasant grain producers in their struggle for the foreign markets, it is necessary to adapt agriculture to the conditions of these markets. The Party has called attention to the necessity of helping the peasantry to raise the technical level of their economy, to introduce more intensive cultivation, to increase the amount of their floating capital, and to renew their live stock, implements, etc.

In the first place there must be an improvement in the organization of the state purchases and export of grain, a reduction of the expenses connected therewith, and the greatest possible reduction of the role and of the income of any kind of middlemen or dealers in the grain trade.

The Soviet power must and can also aid the peasantry by increasing their floating capital by means of: (a) organization of cheap agricultural credits (organization of an agricultural bank); (b) the placing at the disposal of the peasantry, under very favorable terms of credit, of tools and agricultural machinery; (c) support of the village co-operatives and the like. In all its measures regarding the peasantry the Party must have regard to the necessity of helping by every means the poorest and middle strata of the peasantry, in particular the co-operative farming bodies, in order to save them from being pushed out by the great peasants.

The peasants' economy is the fundamental basis for the reconstruction of industry, and, as a consequence, for the growth of the working class, as the peasants' market is the principal market for industrial products. The peasants' economy, on the other hand, is the principal supplier of raw materials for our industry. For this reason, the greatest possible support must be granted to the peasants' economy, not only in the general interests of the Soviet power, but in the interests of the most rapid development of industry itself.

II. State Industry.

Only the development of the nationalized heavy industry can create an unshakable foundation for the proletarian dictatorship. In view of this fact, the Twelfth Party Congress gave precise instructions as to the measures which must be adopted and systematically carried out by the Party, in order to strengthen and to develop our state industry.

The state industry has, in the last twelve months, shown a considerable development, it has increased its output and improved the quality of its goods, whereby the production has steadily increased from month to month without any sudden spurt of decline.

The tempo of the development of the state heavy industry in the past year has somewhat exceeded that of agriculture and of small- and home industry. (If one takes the whole production of heavy industry one sees that, compared with the year 1921, it has nearly doubled. The total quantity of the state industry has risen to 35 per cent of the pre-war quantity.)

In particular the successes obtained in the sphere of the fuel economy furnish the possibility of a further reconstruction of the remaining branches of industry. Transport is in a condition so as to meet, without special difficulties, all the demands of the national economy. Along with this there must be recorded a series of successes obtained in the organization of production in the factories and works and in the organization of industry as a whole.

High Prices.

The present crisis has, however, revealed also in this sphere a number of unhealthy symptoms, the eradication of which forms one of the most urgent tasks of the Party.

In their eagerness to make good the losses sustained by industry in the first year of the New Economic Policy, several economic organs have incorrectly carried out the instruction of the Twelfth Congress regarding the necessity of striving to place industry on a profitable basis and have increased the prices to a level which could only be paid by those having the greatest purchasing power. The high prices of the goods collided with the low purchasing power of the mass peasant market. The goods remained unsold, and not only failed to yield the expected profits to the industry, but as a result its undertakings were threatened by insolvency and a shutting down of production.

The syndicates, which were set up in the struggle for the domination of the market and for the fixing of uniform prices, were the immediate promoters of this policy of high prices. This policy was the undoubted result of the improper use of the monopoly of several branches of industry with an insufficient development of regulating organs.

The socialist accumulation is a fundamental and decisive factor for the fate of the proletarian dictatorship under the New Economic Policy. It is, however, a mistake from the point of view of socialist construction; if in the prices of the goods there are included, besides the cost of production and the necessary minimum of profit, the expenses for such a rapid reconstruction and augmentation of the foundation capital, as are obviously, at the present time, beyond the power of the great mass of the population of the country. It will be much more necessary in the future to co-ordinate the policy as to prices with the most important peasant markets and to co-ordinate the tempo of the development of industry more strictly than heretofore with the general growth in the capacity of the peasant market.

Mass Consumer.

During the year 1923, of the total quantity of the production of the state industry, seven-tenths were sold to consumers in the towns, while only three-tenths went to meet the needs of peasant consumers. This proves that our industry is far from being capable of reaching the peasant mass consumers.

The level of prices attained by industrial products in the last year, is to be attributed not only to objective causes, but also to a considerable extent, to defective organization and to the lack of economizing with regard to additional expenses, which is absolutely necessary to the reconstruction of the economy of the Soviet republics. In order to arrive at a reduction of prices, the attention of industry must be directed to reducing the cost of production, by means of improving and augmenting the production and the greatest possible reduction of the additional expenses, and also to the improvement and cheapening of its trade apparatus.

In connection with this it is necessary to revise the existing syndicates and only allow those to remain, the existence of which is proved to be economically justified. Only by a strict carrying out of the policy of adaptation to the mass market, of the reduction of the cost of production and of the augmentation of production of articles for mass consumption, will the state industry be in a position to compete successfully with private capital in regard to meeting the demands of the mass consumer—the peasant and the worker.

While in every way adapting the state nationalized industry to meet the demands of the mass consumer, the Party will, at the same time, continue to recognize the necessity of helping to a certain extent the small industry, which does not need any great expense for its reconstruction nor require any special stocks of raw materials, fuel or food, and can render a certain amount of help to the peasant economy and can raise the level of its productive forces, thereby increasing the amount of the total turnover of goods for the whole country.

Concentration of Industry.

An indispensable element for the improvement of the organization of our industry in its concentration. We have received as a heritage from the old economic regime, a great number of undertakings which had been set up without regard to any general economic plan and to that structure of economic life which we have today. These undertakings lie as a dead weight on the state budget. The expenses of their maintenance, while they are only partially or even fully occupied, unavoidably enter into the price of the products and thereby help to swell them. But the Party must not for a moment forget that here, more than in any other sphere, commercial and fiscal considerations must be subservient to political considerations, i. e., as to the preservation of the political power of the working class. In those cases where the shutting down of any undertakings would strike a blow at the political forces of the proletariat, and scatter its best elements, the drastic carrying out of the policy of concentration would be an unpardonable political error.

In the preceding period the Party devoted its efforts to strengthening and increasing the production of coal (Don basin) and of naphtha (Baku) as, unless industry were provided with fuel, there could be no talk of strengthening of other branches of industry. The success now obtained with regard to the production of fuel renders it possible and necessary now to concentrate the attention of the Party on the metallurgical industry. The metallurgical industry must in the next period be given the first place and receive from the state a far greater measure of all round help, in particular, financial, than in the last year.

III. Wages and Trade Unions.

The economic difficulties which arose in the autumn were accompanied by wage fluctuations and have also given rise to a number of defects in regard to regularity of payment, as well as to the method of payment. In the beginning of August the Political Bureau and in September the Plenum of the Central Committee adopted several resolutions which aimed at preserving the wages from depreciation and increasing them among those groups of the proletariat which were backward in this respect (for instance, the railway workers).

The Party is of the opinion that the situation of industry and of the state economy is such as to permit the abolition of the payment of wages in such a form as involves in practice their reduction (inferior food substitutes, payment in notes of a large denomination, etc.), and also warrants the adoption of a series of decisive measures directed against the irregular payment of wages. The Party demands that all the economic organs should in the future combat these defects, and insists upon the regular payment of wages being the first duty of the economic organs.

The improvement of industry and of transport, which is due to the heroic efforts of the forces of the working class, must find its expression in an improvement of the situation of the workers. The trade union organs must direct their permanent attention to securing, that these two lines—that of economic improvement and that of the improvement of the welfare of the working class—shall show a certain measure of congruity.

Role of Unions.

The process of the reconstruction of our industry is unavoidably accompanied by an increase in the number of the proletariat, by its consolidation, by the raising of its material and cultural level. There results from this the particularly urgent task of the trade unions of devoting themselves far more than hitherto to the organization and leadership of industry.

Special care must be given by the trade unions to the selection of the organizers promoted from among the working classes who are capable of occupying positions as leaders of the state industry. The Party, the trade unions and the economic organs must for this purpose take upon themselves the task of preparing groups of such leaders from among the ranks of the workers by means of special schools and also by means of drawing wide masses into the discussion on the economic situation and on the current work of the industrial undertakings, at which representatives of the economic organs, trade unions, of the Party and of the non-party workers of industry are to be regularly held. Conferences of the different branches are to come together, in order to discuss the current questions concerning the productive life, in order to arrive at conclusions based on the data furnished by the reports, and to provide possibilities of exchange of experience. These conferences must enable the trade unions to study carefully and to control the management of the undertakings and to help by every means the economic organs in the improvement of the economy, in the fight against bad management and all avoidable additional expenditure, etc.

IV. Foreign Trade.

The monopoly of foreign trade forms one of the fundamental elements of the entire economic policy of the Party. The monopoly of foreign trade has fully justified itself, in particular under the conditions of the New Economic Policy, as a weapon of defense against the country being stripped of its wealth by foreign and native capitalists, as well as a means of socialist accumulation.

It was only by preserving in its entirety the system of the monopoly of foreign trade, that we were able to attain to an active trade balance and to concentrate the income resulting from foreign trade into the hands of the state.

It is by hindering with all means the loss to the country resulting from the payment of imported goods which could be produced in the country itself, that the monopoly of foreign trade makes it possible to organize a planned import of those goods which are indispensable for the development of our industry and the peasant economy. The monopoly of the foreign trade must also in the future be preserved in its entirety as the most important element of the economic policy of the Party, especially in the period of the New Economic Policy.

(To be concluded tomorrow.)

British Navy Plans To Seize Dutch Oil, Australians Charge

(By The Federated Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 16.—That the militarists and imperialists of Britain, unless checked by the British Labor government, intend to seize the Dutch oil supplies in the East Indies, is the charge made by the Australian Worker, the leading labor journal in Australia.

Says the Worker:

"The next world war, unless it can be prevented, will be an oil war. Up to date the imperialists of Britain have been outmaneuvered in the fight to secure domination in the oil world. Now they have awakened to the fact that Singapore dominates what is generally known to be one of the richest oil regions in the world—the East Indies.

"If the imperialists of Britain succeed in their efforts, these oil fields sooner or later are going to be seized in the name of British patriotism. And a naval base at Singapore would provide an admirable jumping-off place when the gong sounded.

"The seizure of the East Indian oil fields is the real purpose behind the Singapore scheme. If the British Labor government turns it down, and halts the mad rush for oil supremacy, there will be no world war in the near future. There is peace in the far east and in the Pacific, and that peace will continue as long as the British imperialists are prevented from having their way in that part of the globe."

Two Views of The State

The state exists primarily to safeguard the fundamental rights of all the people. There will always be conflicting human rights within the state which must be adjusted. Such adjustments will require that the strong help bear the burdens of the weak.

The above gem of thought is the product of the brain of Governor Sweet of Colorado, quoted approvingly by the Locomotive Engineers Journal, and is typical of the line of reasoning followed by class collaborationists in all climes. It is the most dangerous untruth ever foisted upon the working class and if believed by them will inevitably strip them of all power of resistance to the insistent demands of the rulingclass.

History shows that the state came into existence to protect the interests of a privileged class and from its embryonic form to the complex mechanicism it has become today its function has been not to "safeguard the rights of all the people" but to safeguard the rights of a minority class of slave-holders or landlords or capitalists. The adjustments are made, not on the basis of the strong bearing the burdens of the weak but by the possessors of power enforcing their rule upon the weaker and less well organized group.

The slave state, the feudal state, the capitalist state, are all forms of government produced by the clash of historical forces and mark certain epochs in which a particular form of production obtained. Not one of these forms of governments have ever considered the rights of human beings as such—as a matter of fact no such rights exist—but only the rights of the rulingclass.

Whenever the suppressed majority has discovered the fiction of impartial government in previous periods they have overthrown that form of government and set up a new one having, apparently at least, a broader base.

The capitalist system came into being thru this process and its mantle of impartiality is being rent and torn in many places today. Thru the openings the working class is getting glimpses of its real character as a class institution.

This is the cause of great worry not only to big capitalists but to the lower strata of business and professional men among whom are some of the type called liberal. They are quite valuable to the capitalists in that they serve to disguise the real nature of the capitalist state and make it harder for the workers to arrive at the correct conclusion concerning its class nature.

No entry of this type of individual into positions of power in capitalist government has made any changes in the function of the state but in most countries it seems to be a necessary part of the process of disillusioning the working class.

In America the Communists alone understand this and it is with no illusions concerning the treacherous nature of the believers in the state as an agency of justice and conciliation that they support these temporary rebels against the big capitalists and financiers in movements such as the Farmer-Labor party where are found also large masses of workers and farmers who by their position as members of the working class can and will carry on a struggle for a workers' and farmers' government that will be no more impartial than any other state power but will openly protect the interest of the working masses against the former rulers.

Our Quivering Progressives

Reports emanating from Washington indicate a further retreat and surrender by the so-called progressive senators of republican and democratic stripe. After a conference with the new Attorney General Stone, such self-styled energetic insurgents as Wheeler and Brookhart are reported to have expressed "satisfaction and kind words for the successor to Harry M. Daugherty."

This news does surprise us. We have for some time watched the antics of the Borahs, the Wheelers, the Brookharts and the LaFollettes in turning their backs at the decisive moment on the very proposals they have initiated themselves. As a spokesman for the class interests of the small owners, Senator Borah championed the cause of Soviet Russian recognition until he felt that further pressure in this direction on his part might "embarass" the Coolidge Administration, the mouthpiece of the biggest financial and industrial interests of the country. Hence, the Borah committee on Russian relations was allowed, by Borah himself, to die thru atrophy.

Wheeler and Brookhart, as spokesmen of practically the same economic class interests, are following precisely the same policy of wretched retreat pursued by Borah and so characteristic of their class in all decisive class conflicts. Their present hesitation and wavering in the investigation of the department of justice are only the prelude to a complete cessation of the investigation of the department of justice. Brookhart and Wheeler have steadfastly refused to make public the criminal activities of the Burns Detective Agency and the department of justice against the workers and the Hoover campaign for Yudenitch for fear of being branded "reds" and Communists by the big business interests. The present signs of curtailing the entire investigation naturally follow from this policy of cringing before the mailed fist of the powerful financial interests.

The so-called progressives dominating the investigation of the department of justice have centered their attack on prohibition scandals. This is the weakest possible line of attack that these self-labelled insurgents could have chosen. The first reply of the average man on the street towards this attack on the Daugherty regime is to blame prohibition and not the department of justice. The policy about to be assumed by Wheeler and Brookhart of trusting the new Morgan attorney-general in the investigation of his department is simply a continuation of the whole plan of the progressives to avoid sharp conflicts with the big capitalist interests at moments of decision.

For the working and farming classes of the country the cringing exhibition of the quivering progressives in Washington is an object lesson of extreme importance.

More Mussolinis

The usual calm and dispassionate Wall Street Journal has managed to work itself up to a pitch of excitement and irritation over what it charges to be a deliberate misrepresentation or an unfortunate misunderstanding of a recent article in its columns by Guy Walker calling for an American Mussolini.

It so happens that the DAILY WORKER was one of the few newspapers that took up this challenge of the reactionary capitalist interests and flung it back in their teeth with an admonition to the workers and poor farmers to get on the job and teach the exploiters their long overdue and much-deserved lesson.

In its heated reply the noted oracle of American finance and industrial capital denies that Walker's article could honestly have been construed for an appeal for a march of American Blackshirts on Washington. It is not our task to employ a seismograph to measure the tremors of Fascisti intentions in the brain of Mr. Walker who, judging from the character of his book, "The Things That Are Caesar's," is afflicted with a marked tendency towards brain-storms. When Mr. Walker declared, "Surely there is somewhere in America a Mussolini to lead the American Blackshirts to Washington," we assumed he meant business.

But now the conclusion of the poignant defense of the Wall Street Journal is even more enlightening and important. This celebrated organ of the biggest capitalists goes Mr. Walker leagues better. Since the Wall Street Journal is internationally recognized as an authorized spokesman for the business interests, we assume that it also means business when it says in its reply to the attack on Walker: "By all means give us forty-eight Mussolinis, and let us pray that we have in Washington a forty-ninth now leading the people in the direction of sanity and savings."

This is plain talk from a source that is not accustomed to mincing words. It is an appeal to the hired gangster and black elements of the capitalist class to be ready to leap at the throats of the workers and poor farmers as the Fascisti have done in Spain, Italy and Germany. The American working masses believe that to be forewarned is to be forearmed.

Pinchot's Progressivism

Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, another idol of the "progressives" has shaken hands with President Coolidge and in the interest of harmony within the republican party has put the sacred ikon of progressivism back in the cabinet until a greater emergency arises.

It is upon a rather weak foundation that the progressive reputation of Governor Gifford Pinchot rests. He is a survival of the Bull Moose movement and has been carrying on the Roosevelt tradition—whatever that is.

In Pennsylvania he is for a strict enforcement of the prohibition law but if there is any wetter territory than his home state, it lies outside the territorial confines of the United States; encourages the militarization of police forces ostensibly for this reason so he has not abolished the state constabulary. He poses as a friend of labor but Jacob Dolla, steel striker, has been in jail since 1919—railroaded on framed-up evidence—and Israel Blankenstein of the Workers Party is serving a long sentence for violation of the criminal syndicalism law. Pinchot has vigorously denounced the persecution of individuals for their political beliefs and labor activities but these workers are still in jail.

The liberal doctrine has no place for the class struggle but by keeping carefully away from issues that really matter the Pinchot type admits its hostility to the working class movement.

No May Day celebration will be complete in the United States without the distribution of a bundle of this year's May Day issue of the DAILY WORKER. Will you make your May Day celebration complete?

LESSONS OF THE DOCK STRIKE

By GEORGE HARD

The partial victory of the British dockers presents new problems in the struggle of Transport Workers. Instead of a more definite victory, apparently within the grasp of the dockers, the guaranteed weekly wage was relinquished for another "enquiry." Also instead of using the marvelous solidarity of the dockers to achieve the full benefit they have received—and will receive a probable shilling on June 2nd. However, we do not under-estimate the value of this fight to the whole trade union movement. Its stimulating effect should surpass all previous victories. It has turned the defensive action into an offensive fight. The dockers have won from this point of view and will win a complete victory if they prepare to use direct action on a greater scale on June 2nd.

Government and Strike.

We cannot pass without comment upon the pressure used by the Labor Government to end the strike quickly. It also needs to be pointed out that the terms of settlement were urged and inspired by the Minister of Labor; and that Ramsay MacDonald made appeals for remembrance of the Labor Government. As Ernest Bevin said when urging acceptance at the Minister of Labor: "In fact it has been urged upon all the Labor Movement that one of the difficulties we had to count against was the embarrassing position of the Labor Government in the first hours of its task. We have been appealed to by our friends to be careful as to the use of the Industrial machine, but all the time the employers forced us on towards strike action." He stated further "The advent of a Labor Government not only imposes its responsibilities and advantages but it imposes its handicaps as well" Speaking of the terms of settlement Bevin said "the employers came down from the July position to June 2nd., which was originally suggested by the Minister of Labor."

It is clear that both the Government and the Unions' Negotiating Committee were thinking in terms of an immediate settlement instead of how to extend the fight and win the full demands. The Government being faced with the responsibility of distributing the mail and foodstuffs approached the position from a purely capitalistic point of view.

There was no mention of commandeering the docks and giving over the administration to the unions and immediately granting the demands for two pence a day. Neither did they consider that food supplies should only go to the workers and thru the co-operative society. The union officials did not think it was necessary to demand that the forces at the command of the Government should be used to win the full demands of the strikers, and therefore, to be used against the capitalists. Of course, some workers will think these are opinions of extremists. But this will have to be done some time by a workers' Government; so why not at the first opportunity?

The most important demand of the dockers—the guaranteed week—is a bigger problem to the bosses than granting the two pence. They want to maintain a surplus supply of labor around the dock gates and offices. They care not how we exist so long as we are there when they need us. And it is because of this that they have consistently refused to put into operation the recommendations of the Shaw Report of January, 1920. The Report signed by a majority says:—"The court is of the opinion that the time has arrived when the industry out of which the payment of wages will come must also bear a charge in respect to maintenance of unemployed casuals."

Verbose Report.

They give in the report a reason for this decision as follows:—"The Court is of opinion that labor frequently or constantly under-employed is injurious to the interests of the workers, the ports, and the public, and that it is discreditable to society. It undermines security and it is apt to undermine all self respect upon the workers part. It is only among those who have sunk very far, and whom the system itself may have demoralized that it can be accepted as a working substitute for steady and assured employment." Now the "Court" will "sit" again and unless we as dockers and transport workers present a united front, we shall hear again how we are apt to lose all "self-respect" without any results arising out of the enquiry.

We will only have lost this strike if we ignore the obvious. More and more men were involved the longer the strike lasted. 10,000 carmen were out in London alone—a purely sympathetic strike—and varying numbers at all other ports. They refused to blackleg. With few exceptions thruout the Transport industry men were forced to strike.

The railway Engineer who refused to haul first-class passengers' luggage from Southampton to London must be congratulated. But if the seamen had not done dockers' work by landing the luggage the clerical staffs would have had no chance to scab and there would not have been any immediate effect on the Engineer.

The reports of ships being diverted to continental ports after having arrived would have never appeared if lock-gates had remained closed against them, and tug-boat-men had presented their demands also and struck nationally. The reason for these serious incidents is because we are still too much divided with too many unions. That there is room only for one union in one industry is proven conclusively.

All the unions organizing waterside workers outside the union that is strong enough to make the only national settlement recognized, should immediately face the fact and relinquish or return to membership in the most powerful union. This applies especially to Railwaymen, Dockers and Seamen.

International Outlook.

As for road Transport 200 or more agreements must be scrapped and a natonal basis established for all future negotiations. We are aware of the many grades, but as in other industries the grades can be classified nationally no matter how many there are or how varied the conditions. This must be done before national pressure can be brought to bear upon the employers who are all organized nationally.

Not only must we learn from the dock strike that all transport workers must be in a departmentalized industrial union. It has been demonstrated that not only must the British workers abandon their insul outlook but the whole of the contine tal proletariat must begin to reas internationally.

The Postmaster General, a co miner, Vernon Hartshorn, told in Pa liament, when questioned as to ma transfers, how he had made arrang ments to convey the mail to Marse les and meet the very boat that coul not receive them because of determ ined dockers on picket duty at Ti bury Docks, London.

This proves that our Union move ment must not only be one natio ally, but also internationally. Here i a case where British Union railwa men would be expected to land the mails at a channel port; scabs woul be got to load them; and union se men would be expected to continu work and loyally take the mails t France, which would enable French Union railwaymen to land them a Marseilles, and good British Unio Seamen again would help to keep th P and O Line running while the dock ers of Great Britain were fighting th same shipowners and trying to dis establish themselves from povert and the demoralizing system of casua labor, which afflicts all who would b consciously or unconsciously helpin the enemy. So we must have a Unit ed International of all Transpor Workers based upon the principles o the R. I. L. U.

Thruout the British Isles, and als in every other country the militant must organize. Think of the advan tages of a directing policy if we had had in every port a unit of the National Transport Workers' Solidarity Committee during the dock dispute. Instead of those who were dissatisfied with the termination of the strike having varying points of view, all would have had a national understanding and only one policy put forward in every port.

To enforce demands on June 2nd, and to hurry up the inquiry into the guaranteed week, also to get a favorable decision granting full maintenance, let's organize a local T. W. S. C. upon a permanent basis. Prepare to not only get more wages, etc., but on with the abolition of capitalism and the establishment of an industrial and political administration by the workers.

A LIBERAL'S HOPE

Two Book Reviews
By ESTHER LOWELL

The Education of Ernest Wilmerding ($2.00).
The Valley of Enna and Other Poems and Modern Plays ($2.50).
By Edward Chichester Wentworth.
(Covici-McGee Co.)

Coue's flare flashed thru this country and was forgotten, leaving its devotees as much in the dark as ever. But it must have been during the brightest period of the French Barnum's influence that Edward Chichester Wentworth wrote his autobiographical novel "The Education of Ernest Wilmerding."

In the Epilogue of the book Ernest is at his century mark, 1959, and reviews the changes society has gone thru before achieving the near-millenium of that year. He recalls how the people of America got wise to psychology as a result of the war propaganda of 1914 which turned a peaceful nation to warring. "And so, when things got a little nearer to the breaking point the slogan went out from mouth to mouth: 'Every day in every way we are a little nearer the revolution,' and in this way multitudes commenced to believe it as a possibility."

Why on earth hasn't Mr. Wentworth started his endless chain of "Every day in Every way," or perhaps he has and a lot of us are still missing links.

Usual Liberal Hokum.

Mr. Wentworth has the usual Liberal hope in the sole regenerating influence of ideas. He looks for a quiet change in human nature; human selfishness wearing itself out. He is the idealist, opposed to the materialist who argues that physical conditions, economic and industrial, control thought. The materialist tells the idealist that human nature will not change until the material conditions determining it are different.

In the play "The Growing Dawn," included in the volume of verse, Mr. Wentworth has one of his characters divide society into the one per cent against the ninety and nine. The latter is composed of four groups: the patricians, "noble army of social millionares;" the bourgeois, "selfmade people;" the proletariat; and the "straggling and struggling hoi polloi, the unskilled and uncivilized army of derelicts." The one per cent is "indivisible, and therefore a compelling force that will slowly but surely assert itself." The one per centers, no doubt, are the Mencken-Nathan-Hecht-Bodenheim-Jack Jones-Wentworth et al. crowd who preen their feathers in print as the intelligenzia of the country. Some of the gang conceal their idealism more ingenuously than Mr. Wentworth with sarcastic cynicism.

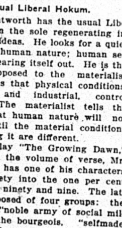
Haymarket Riot.

Anyone interested in the spiritual life of a young man will find the "Education of Ernest Wilmerding" the record of an adolescent idealist's growth. The part of the book that holds anything for the rest of us is the section dealing with the Haymarket riots of 1886 here in Chicago. Mr. Wentworth draws a graphic and fairly accurate picture of the events. But for that matter, Floyd Dell has excellent factual account in volume 2 of "Chicago: Its History and Its Builders" (1912, S. J. Clarke Publishing Co.) in the chapter: "Socialism and Americanism in Chicago."

The poetry of Mr. Wentworth pleads guilty to that fault, described (I believe) by Max Eastman in "The Enjoyment of Poetry:" of genuine emotion expressed in ordinary words. The very essence of poetry is the peculiarly apt selection of sounds which convey the meaning.—When the oldest phrases are used to voice the emotion, no matter how strong and sincere the feeling is, no poem is born. "Shedding tears", no matter how copiously, does not reveal the poignancy of regret or grief.

"The Spirit of the Lower North Side" is the other play in the volume of verse. It brings together numerous well-known characters, including Jim Larkin, the "Sirfesser," and some of the Dill Picklers, each selling forth his vision.

Mr. Wentworth has well chosen the name "Ernest" for his mirrored self. He is tolerant and generously sympathetic (with the slightly superior attitude those qualities imply) and would never fail to fight for our civil liberties. If his writing does not have the ring of common speech, it is because Mr. Wentworth has lived in the world of music and art and culture and has seen life thru others' vsion. His sincere devotion to idealism is evident in his support of hopeful young artistic ventures in Chicago.



The Poor Fish says he can't understand why so many working people are for the recognition of Soviet Russia when everyone knows that the Soviets have no respect for property rights.

A BRITISH EXPOSURE OF AMERICAN OPPRESSION.

Bloody American Capitalism, Its Murder of Labour; By Joe Walker. With foreword by W. T. Colyer. The Socialist and Labour Press. Reformers' Bookshop, 103 Kirkgate, Bradford, and from Author. Price, Sixpence.

This booklet should receive a wide circulation among British workers. It presents a picture of conditions in the United States, which, if they were not thoroly authenticated, would hardly be credited by readers in Great Britain. The pamphlet is a collection of articles contributed by the author to the Yorkshire Factory Times, and contains vivid accounts of the violent attacks made, by the armed forces of the United States and by private armies of gunmen, upon the workers.

Mr. Walker goes as far back as the historical conflict of Couer d'Alene and Calumet. He gives us short, but detailed narratives illustrational of the complete subordination of the American judiciary to the plans of the capitalists.

The material is drawn from various sources, all of which are acknowledged by the compiler. At the present time, with Mooney and Billings still in prison, and with hundreds of working men in the penitentiaries of California, and other states, convicted under the infamous Criminal Syndicalist Acts, it is well that we should have the opportunity for this comprehensive view of the workings of the Iron Heel in the "free republic" of the United States.

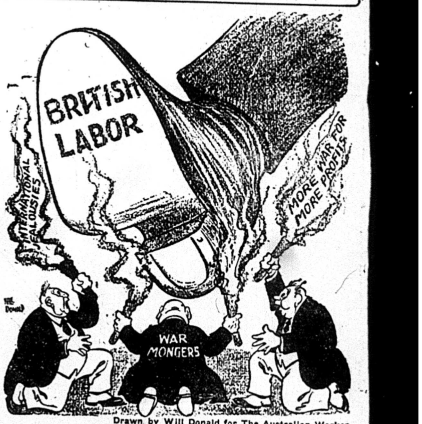
Will It Take the Step?



Drawn by Will Donald for The Australian Worker.

One Leisure Hour

From early morning to noon the factory is a hive of industry. Each whirring machine has an overalled attendant. Everyone is busy. The eagle-eyed foreman sees to that.

A sharp order from him is enough; no dreamers are tolerated here. Every worker attends his machine so closely that he begins to look like a part of it.

Then the drab-clad machine men brighten up. Some glance at watches, others whistle. It is nearing the meal hour; for one hour they can be their own master—free to study something brighter than the machines.

After their meal, which occupies a quarter of their hour, they settle down to a well-earned rest. Some get together and discuss the latest news, others select a seat, preferably under a window, where the light can shine on their papers and books.

The long rows of glistening machines look strangely quiet—dead and useless without the guiding hand of man. The place is so still that one can even hear the birds outside—a rare change from the harsh sound of machinery.

Then a long, shrilll whistle pierces the silence. The machines are started. The workers' brief respite is over. —W. R., in the London Daily Herald.

75,000 COAL MINERS STRIKE IN EIGHT STATES

Halt Kentucky Troop Rule

(Special to the Daily Worker)

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 17.—State troops cannot be used in evicting striking miners from the premises of the Liberty Coal and Coke Company in Bell County where the miners made it necessary that troops be sent.

Attorney General Frank E. Daugherty gave this opinion to Adjutant General Kehoe in answer to General Kehoe's inquiry as to whether the troops would be within their legal rights in arresting miners as tresspassers and removing their belongings. Kehoe held that lawlessness and disorder had been brought about by strikers who have violated the terms of their leases on their homes. Daugherty stated that the company had its legal remedies to evict tenants and that it was no part of the troops' duties to do this.

Efforts to arbitrate the strike in eastern Kentucky have failed but comparative quiet prevails there now. In western Kentucky the strike of 10,000 miners has been without incident and both sides seem resigned to a waiting attitude.

RUSS ENVOYS WORRY BRIT DIPLOMATS

English Press Changes Tone On Delegation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, April 17.—The patronizing and at times insulting tone of the London press towards the Soviet Russian delegation at first adopted has given way to one of surprise supplemented by worry as it becomes apparent that the Russians are far less concerned with trade agreements than they are with political questions.

Rakovsky has made it quite clear in the conferences held so far that he does not intend to enter into any discussions dealing with concessions, loans, etc., until all political questions have been settled.

Falling Down Off High Horse.

The reputation of Premier MacDonald has suffered somewhat in the interchange of opinions with the Russian representatives. The entire British press—Tory and Liberal—at the beginning of the negotiations urged MacDonald to adopt a firm tone; this he did, but it seems that the Soviet delegation is just as conscious that Great Britain needs markets as the British diplomats are that Russia wants a loan.

It is being remarked here that the criticism of the MacDonald government and the Independent Labor Party leadership of the British Labor Party by the Third International has not ceased since the negotiations opened, and if anything has become more frank and uncompromising.

From various members of the Russian delegation it has become known that the Soviet government has decided, since the Italian agreement, to make no trade arrangements until a favorable settlement of all political questions has been effected.

The attitude of the Russians is obviously that they are not, in the person of Premier MacDonald, dealing with the representative of British labor, but with the head of a government of a capitalist state.

Russians Polite.

DUKE, BROKE, HAWKS COUNTRY TO HIGHEST BIDDER FOR CASH

PARIS, April 17.—An entire nation, with 65,000 people, a river "full of excellent fish," a history that goes back to the days of Wallenstein, castles, forests and royal chateaux, was offered for the auction block here today.

It is the little principality of Sagan, situated between Silesia and Bradenburg and covering about 300 miles of territory rich in historic German legends.

The offer is made by the Duke of Talleyrand de Perigord, husband of Anna Gould, "serene highness" of the independent principality.

The only qualifications are that the duke retain the title of "serene highness" of Sagan, and that the price shall be fixed by the duke's minister of finance.

The duke, in making public his astounding offer today, described his country with all the matter of fact frankness of an auctioneer's catalog.

TRACHTENBERG TALKS TONIGHT ON REVOLUTION

Speaks In Turner Hall On Russia-Germany.

Fresh from a successful tour of eastern and middle western cities, Alexander Trachtenberg will talk to Chicago workers at North Side Turner Hall, 820 North Clark street, at 8 P. M. today.

Trachtenberg's message will be about "What I Saw in Soviet Russia and Germany." He will tell about the workers' government in Soviet Russia and capitalist rule, starvation and the rising tide of revolution in Germany.

Tells of Russian Unions.

No class conscious worker can afford to miss this Trachtenberg lecture. It will be packed with vital information about the revolutionary international movement. Trachtenberg will tell of the part the Russian labor unions play in the management of industry and will give detailed pictures of the way the Communist Party is handling the problems of administration. For Germany he will give us valuable facts about the great German unions and the growth of Communist influence there, and he will tell of the waning of the old socialist party of Germany and the growth of the revolutionary political movement. German Fascism's ugly fangs will be bared also.

Spent 14 Months in Europe.

Alexander Trachtenberg spent 14 months in Europe, studying the revolutionary movement. He has come to Chicago to give the workers here the benefit of the knowledge he has gained. What is happening in Europe has a powerful bearing on the revolutionary movement in America. Turner Hall will be filled tonight.

BOSSES BEG IN VAIN FOR SCAB LABOR

More Twaddle From Injunction Judge.

While Judge Foell was doing his best to intimidate the strikers against picketing in the trial of the garment pickets now going on in his court, the weakened members of the dress manufacturers' association were hurrying around to the homes of the strikers promising them anything if they will return to work under non-union conditions.

Strikers have told the DAILY WORKER that J. Reinhardt and one of the Hyman brothers, both large employers and both members of the association, visited the pickets and told them they cannot get scabs to fill the strikers places. Reinhardt was one of the employers who testified against the strikers before Judge Foell yesterday.

Fred Can't Get Scabs

One of the largest shops in the association took steps to settle with the union, as it could get no scabs. The Association brought pressure to bear against this employer and sent him about twenty scabs, but they were so incompetent that the manufacturer dismissed them.

Cross examination of, Patrick Collins yesterday brought out that altho he is a police sergeant, he takes orders from sergeant O'Malley of state's attorney Crowe's office. He admitted he had also taken orders from the garment bosses. "When they make complaints to me, I try to give them service," said Collins. He admitted frequently visiting the employers to find out what they wanted.

Lawyer, Liar And Forger

Affidavits filed by the complainants against the strikers developed to have been changed by Mr. Hyde, lawyer for the garment bosses. The affidavit given to Peter Sissman, lawyer for the strikers, stated that Patrick Collins had served affidavits on the thirteen defendants enjoining them against picketing. But the official complaining affidavit presented to the court had the name of Patrick Moran as the man stated to have served injunction writs on the strikers.

Sissman discovered the discrepancy, and it was necessary to have the records changed. The strikers denied having been served with injunction writs by Moran or Collins or any one eles.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 17.—Horse back riders between dusk and dawn should equip their steeds with tail lights, H. F. Meyer, sued for $10,000 as the result of a collision between his automobile and a horse ridden by Col. Joseph G. Miller, in a park here.

Meyers' answer to the damage suit today contended a horse was a vehicle, and since Col. Miller had failed to provide either himself or his horse with a tail light, the suit should be dismissed.

HEAVY FIGHTING THREATENED IN MINE CONFLICT

Coal Barons Preparing To Use Scabs

HARLAN, Ky., April 17.—Trouble was smouldering here today with 3,000 miners idle and the largest mine threatening to bring in non-union workers.

There was nothing definite to indicate when strike breakers will be brought in, but it is understood labor brokers in the north are hiring the men and are arranging to ship them to the Kentucky coal fields this week or next. Both sides are settling down for a long strike.

Ford Competitors Offer Inducements For Muscle Shoals

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Ten million dollars will be spent in research work at Muscle Shoals if that project is awarded the Hocker-Atterbury-White syndicate, Elon Hooker, one of the group, told the Senate agricultural committee today.

Hooker also emphasized, in answers to questions, that the corporation organized to run Muscle Shoals would have no connection with the Hooker concern that runs an electrochemical plant at Niagara Falls and of which he is president.

MINE STRIKES SWEEP LAND; 75,000 GO OUT

Hardest Coal Fight Since 1922

The strike of 10,000 miners in western Kentucky brings the total striking miners in the United States and Canada to 75,000, according to figures compiled by the Research Department of the Workers Party.

The 75,000 miners are striking in fields where the operators refused to accept the Jacksonville agreement. States affected include Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, Kansas, Arkansas, Texas, Missouri, Oklahoma and the Canadian provinces.

Winning this great fight is vital to the United Mine Workers of America. If the operators are beaten the tide of the open shop campaign in the coal fields will have been turned.

GUNMEN RULE KENTUCKY

By TOM TIPPETT.

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

ASHLAND, Ky., April 17.—The non-union coal operators in Kentucky maintain a private army to fight the miners' union in exactly the same fashion as the more notorious coal barons of West Virginia.

A trip up Big Sandy river (Ky.) where the non-union mines are located in nowise differs from a visit to Tug river in Mingo county, W. Va., across the state line. The same "watchman" law is written into the Kentucky statute, permitting a legally constituted watchman to become an armed thug bent on killing union organizers. The mine guard system is pie for the operators here also because Kentucky is only partly unionized.

The miners' union has divided Kentucky into three organization districts. District 23 with offices at Central City takes in the western portion of the state. This field borders Indiana and Illinois and is largely organized. The union has been established in that section for many years.

District 30 Is Open Shop.

District 30 with offices at Ashland covers the northeast and eastern parts of the state. The union has never been recognized here and all the mines are run according to the "dictates of the operators' conscience" as one of the operators put it to me. There are about 26,000 miners in this section which is called the Big Sandy field. Organization of the union has been going steadily on for the past three years. There are 7000 or 8000 members of the union here but they meet in secret and have no contract with the operators. To have one's union affiliations or sympathies known is to be fired at once and dumped out of company property. Wages run from $4 to $5.50 a day. This territory joins coal fields in Ohio

Greek Militarists Seek To Involve Albania In Trouble

ATHENS, April 17.—Two more American tourists have been killed near Tirana, Albania, according to an unconfirmed report reecived by the Ministry of War here today.

The report does not give the names, merely reporting an attack on the tourists by a band of 15 highwaymen and stating that two Americans were killed.

Albanians are very anxious, the message adds, fearing grave consequences from this second attack.

Rome sources, which ordinarily are well informed on Albanian affairs, do not report any additional attacks on Americans, and it may be the Greek advices are merely a confusion of the murders of the American De Long and Coleman on the Tirana-Scutari highway two weeks ago last Sunday.

GRAFTERS LOOT SCHOOL FUNDS; CHILDREN HAVE NO SCHOOL

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 17.—Federal Judge Louis Fitzhenry has named James J. Graham of this city, receiver for building material purchased for a $150,000 school building in Edwardsville.

Graham's appointment followed filing of an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against John L. Schwager, Edwardsville contractor, who contracted to build the school and then abandoned the job shortly after work was started.

The petition was filed by building material companies from whom the material was secured. The receiver is expected to sell the material to a contractor who will complete the job.

Federal Employes' Union Loses 3,000 Customs' Workers

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 17.—Three thousand workers in the U. S. customs service in various ports, or about 40 per cent of the employes, have resigned from National Federation of Federal Employes' union, American Federation of Labor, according to Pres. George Connell, branch K, local 4 (New York). Branch K recently withdrew in a body from the union because of the alleged act of National President Steward in helping kill the congressional appropriation bill giving customs inspectors pay increases. The inspectors, who get from $4 to $6 a day, must now wait, perhaps for years, until the pending reclassification process produces a raise.

The National Federation of Federal Employes covers most of the organized workers in government services except the postoffice. Connell says the average wage for customs workers is only $1500, and that many have been driven out of the service by poverty.

White Snobs Fail To Eject Negro From Dormitory

NEW YORK, April 17.—The attempt by the Furnald Hall Committee at Columbia University to bring about the removal from Furnall Hall of Frederick W. Wells, colored resident law student, failed when the Residence Hall Committee, composed of the university authorities, met and rejected the request.

Dean Hawkes declared that the refusal of the request ends the matter. However three detectives assigned to Furnell Hall following the burning of the Fiery Cross Symbol of white Kristianity were still on duty last night.

Actors' Strike Looms Big in New York City; May Be Called June 1

NEW YORK, April 17.—An actor's strike June 1 seemed probable today as officials of the Actor's Equity Association announced that "peace" conferences with the operating managers had been terminated.

The two factions failed to agree over recognition to be given the Equity Association.

Fire in Missouri Shops.

FORT SCOTT, Kans., April 17.—Fire caused $30,000 loss in the Missouri Pacific shops here last night. A blacksmith shop, tin shop, storage building and machine shop were destroyed. About 300 men were employed in the departments affected by fire.

Belleville, Ill., April 17.—Mike Miletish is the first man in jail here to admit his business was violating the prohibition laws.

The jailer asked him his business. "I am a moonshiner," Mike replied.

United Jazz Front.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Composers of symphonies and writers of jazz music raised their voices in harmony today in opposition to the Dill radio bill before the Senate patents committee.

OPEN TRIAL OF WHEELER AT CAPITOL

First Witness Denies Giving Retainer

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Gordon Campbell of Montana, today denied before the senate committee investigating the indictment of Senator Wheeler, Montana, that Wheeler had ever appeared before the interior department for him in the capacity of paid attorney.

Campbell was indicted with Wheeler at Great Falls, Mont. The indictments charged that Wheeler had illegally accepted a retainer from Campbell to represent him before the department in connection with oil drilling permits.

Favorable to Wheeler.

Campbell said he had no business with the department in January or February, 1923, when Wheeler was alleged to have received the retainers. He said that Wheeler had "repeatedly" told him he could not appear before any departments for him.

No One Under Charges.

Investigation of the indictment of Senator Wheeler, Montana, got under way today with former Representative Tom Stout of Montana on the witness stand.

At the outset Senator Sterling, South Dakota, suggested that all witnesses waive immunity before testifying, but Chairman Borah said that none of them are under charges and that it was unnecessary.

Borah read into the record the statute which Wheeler was accused of violating. It provides that no government official shall accept fees for representing clients before government departments.

At his own request Senator Wheeler, Montana, went "on trial" today before a committee of his colleagues in the Senate.

Wheeler wants the cloud of the indictment returned against him by a federal grand jury in Great Falls, Mont., removed so that he can continue the investigation of former Attorney General Daugherty without his own fitness as a senator being questioned.

Quits as Daugherty Prosecutor.

For the time being Wheeler will give up his duties as prosecutor of the Daugherty investigation to attend his own "trial." The Daugherty investigation will continue, however, with Chairman Brookhart taking over the task of examining witnesses.

Gordon Campbell, Montana oil man, from whom Wheeler is accused of accepting a retainer to secure oil leases after becoming senator, probably will be the first witness today, Chairman Borah announced.

Call "D. of J." Sleuth.

Blair Coan, who was subpoenaed as an agent of the Department of Justice, altho W. J. Burns, director of the bureau of investigation, denied his connection with the department, will also be on hand. Wheeler charged that Coan was employed by George B. Lockwood, secretary of the Republican national committee, to investigate his record in Montana.

Other witnesses are former Representative Tom Stout of Montana and James Baldwin, Wheeler's law partner, who arrived yesterday in response to subpoenas.

Senator McNary, Oregon, will sit on the committee today in the place of Senator McLean, Connecticut, who resigned because of the press of other work.

Booth Testifies for Wheeler.

Edwin L. Booth, former solicitor of the interior department, today told the Senate Committee investigating the indictment of Senator Wheeler of Montana, that Wheeler had never solicited any aid for Gordon Campbell, with whom he was indicted, at the Interior Department.

Booth said that Wheeler had called on him to ask advice on how to help Campbell, who was said to be in difficulties.

RUSSIA USING REVOLUTIONARY MOVIES AS EDUCATOR; GREAT RED NOVEL, "A WEEK", FILMED

By GERTRUDE HAESSLER.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)
(First of two articles)

MOSCOW, April 17.—Movie rights to "A Week," the novel of revolutionary Russia, by Libedinsky, have been obtained in Russia by Proletkino, the proletarian movie producer organization. The author is writing the scenario and will direct the production. This is the immediate task of Proletkino in actual film production.

Proletkino is a great organization for bringing the masses in contact with each other thru the motion picture," explains Director Valenius. "Our main purpose is to fight the psychological effect of the bourgeoise films and to finally replace them with our own productions."

Bourgeois films are still allowed in Russia because of the movie hunger from which Russia is suffering. "Using every available source—our own productions, the films of the private producers in Russia who work under proletarian censorship, and the least harmful of the bourgeois films from other countries—we can supply only about one-tenth of the demand in Russia," he says. "Until we can produce enough proletarian films we are forced to allow bourgeois films so long as they are not actually counter-revolutionary."

Some of the foreign films are cleverly altered to serve the purpose of proletarian propaganda. Proletkino is not concerned with this aspect of supplying films. The only foreign films it handles are scenic and educational. Its work in production consists in filming historic events, such as the Lenin funeral, current events, demonstrations, etc.

It has also branched out into the profitable story field, having produced two very popular story films to date. One of them is Combrig, which depicts the daily life of the Red Army, and contains propaganda against the influence of the priests and ecclesiastical marriage (but not against religion and civil marriage) and contains plenty of comedy.

One of the faults of the present Russian productions is that the films are too depressing and have too little comic or frivolous relief. Combrig has tried to overcome this. Mass action in Combrig was supplied by 3000 soldiers of the Red Army, who volunteered their services and asked in return that the film be lent them free of charge for three days. They got it for three weeks.

The Combrig film is now in America, where attempts are being made to permit exhibition.

The other story film produced by Proletkino, which has proved its popularity is The Fight for the Ultimatum. The Ultimatum is the name of a factory which was the bone of contention between the revolutionary workers and the White counter-revolutionists. The Communist party figures in the film on the side of the workers. The film is exciting and contains a good deal of the detective element.

The technique in both films is imperfect and amateurish. Proletkino has only meager materials and equipment, and has inexperienced operators and actors. A training school for actors has been started.

Workers Own Movie Company.

Proletkino is financed by sales of stock and by profits from films. The stockholders are workers' organizations—trade unions, local soviets, locals of the Young Communist league and of the Communist party, and some of the internationals. The government has no connection with Proletkino.

It has branches in Baku and Vladivostok, and agents in every large city in the Russian realm, doing propaganda work for Proletkino by means of literature, lectures, and the traveling movie, which goes from village to village accompanied by its own dynamo, for in many places there is no electricity.

Broadway Strike Continues Despite Pickets' Arrests

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 17.—Despite interference by the police and courts 500 workers are continuing their strike against the ten Broadway jazz joints owned by Sam Salvin and James E. Thompson.

Three union members have been jailed for ten days, charged with assault. One picket got five days and another was given six months on probation. M. Maley, charged with attacking Chef LaGrange of the Palais Royal cafe, proved that he was at home during the alleged attack and that he was not a striker. But because he was a union member Magistrate Simpson sent Maley's case to special sessions.

The men are members of the Amalgamated Food Workers, Hotel and Restaurant Workers' branch, an industrial union. The issue is union recognition. The union has maintained a 100 per cent organization in the struck places for several years. Strikebreakers are provided by the so-called Manhattan Waiters' Association, described by its officers as "not a union but a social organization composed entirely of Americans."

BONUS BILL HELD UP BY DIVISION IN G. O. P. RANKS

Insurgents May Vote For Democrat Plan

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Insurgent republicans in the Senate today planned to unite with the democrats to modify the republican "insurance policy" bonus bill.

Confidence was felt that they would enable the democrats to put over a cash option plan so that veterans may choose between a 20-year endowment life insurance policy or immediate money. This situation developed as the republicans today prepared to bring up their bonus bill for action and Democrats sought to rally support within their own ranks to put over their plan.

Anti-Bonusites May Bolt.

The only hitch that democratic leaders fear is that anti-bonus senators on their side of the chamber will bolt party ranks in an effort to keep any bonus bill from being enacted.

At least five democrats and perhaps more, may vote against both plans. If too many desert the bonus situation may be tied in a knot and progressives with their balance of power may be helpless.

But should the democratic substitute fail, progressives will vote for the republican bill rather than fail to enact any bill at all.

Passage of Bill Delayed.

This state of affairs has brought about an entire change in the legislative program. It is now seen that the bonus cannot be passed "in three days" as leaders hoped. The fight may last more than a week and all the time the tax bill will be waiting impatiently on the Senate calendar. Two appropriation bills also remain to be disposed of.

CZECHO-SLOVAK OPPOSITION PRESS IS THROTTLED

Graft Exposures Irritate Socialist Rulers

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, April 17.—The Social-Democratic government has now put on the statute books a law which abrogates the freedom of the press and other privileges of which this nation, whose constitution is modeled on that of the United States, formerly boasted.

The measure just passed compels editors to disclose the sources of all information published if the government so requires.

The passage of this law is creating much popular resentment, as it was introduced in Parliament following disclosures of graft by high officials as sensational as the Teapot Dome and other scandals in the United States. The revelations were made by opposition papers, chiefly Communist ,and showed great corruption in practically every government department.

President Masyrak, who was noted for his championship of free press and free speech under the Austrian government, made no protest whatever against the present law, which gives the government complete control of the press at a time when the Franco-Czecho-Slovakian alliance is arousing much hostility among the workers and peasants and almost all their organizations have opposed.

Mine Strikes Sweep the Land; 75,000 Are Out and West Virginia. Even with the low wages the miners are idle. There are 70 big producing operations shut down completely.

The Cumberland mountains separate the coal mines in southeastern Kentucky from the other districts and the union mines there are taken into District 19 (Tennessee) with offices at Knoxville. This district is recognized and has joint contracts with the operators.

None of these districts has yet secured an agreement for 1924. A tentative agreement, that carried with it a reduction in wages, was made between the district officials and the operators. Its final acceptance was blocked by the international union and District 23 is now on strike.

10,000 Kentucky Miners Strike.

Approximately 10,000 union miners employed at 50 mines obeyed District President Lonnie Jackson's strike call. These mines had been working pending a settlement since the old contract expired March 31.

The miners held out for a three-year contract with the present wage scale, as per the Jacksonville (Fla.) agreement. The operators demanded a reduction to the 19.. scale. The international union intervened to prevent acceptance of a wage reduction.

This field borders unionized territory in Indiana and Illinois where the Jacksonville agreement has been signed.

culties, but that he never discussed official business in any way.

Booth said he lived in Montana for 37 years and had known Senator Wheeler for nearly 20 years.

In March, 1923, Booth said, Wheeler came to his office in the Interior Department and after "visiting" awhile, said that he had been prosecuting a law suit for Campbell, and that Campbell's property was in "bad shape."

Booth said he asked Wheeler for the claim numbers, but Wheeler did not know them.

Booth said he then suggested Campbell come to Washington and Wheeler asked if he (Booth) would help the oil man.

"I said I would," Booth continued.

"Did Senator Wheeler ever solicit aid regarding the assignment of any of these cases before the Interior Department?" asked Borah.

"No."

The committee then adjourned, subject to the call of the chairman.

Russ Worry British

success has rewarded the efforts of the Britishers to get a hard and fast agreement on questions of trade in which Great Britain, in view of the widespread unemployment, is vitally interested pending the settlement of the debts, territorial boundaries, etc.

MacDonald Against Sympathetic Strikes.

Premier MacDonald, in the course of an interview published here, comes out emphatically against sympathetic strikes and deplores the recent militant action of various trade unions. He says; speaking of the critical industrial situation and his views on the matter:

"Some recent developments and methods, however, seem in practice and result to be those of mischievous syndicalist communism. Far from helping the worker or his trade union, they are likely to involve the one in misery and the other in disaster. One strike like that which took place at the Wembley exhibition does the working class movement more harm and inflicts on the wage earner more misery than can well be described. In the Wembley case the blunder was soon rectified, but influences were revealed that must be watched.

All my life I have been opposed to the sympathetic strike. It has no practical value; it is simply beating the air. It has one sure result—a bitter and blinding reaction. It looks so heroically effective in the heat of battle and it is so subversive. Once the poor miners always had to be in it; now it is the transport men.

"I know what I am speaking about when I say that as the result of some recent occurences the code of law which has protected the workingmen's organizations for generations has been in greater jeopardy than I have ever seen it in before.

The interview, combined with the very lukewarm attitude of the cabinet towards the unions involved in the recent strikes is expected to arouse a storm of protest and widen the breach between the official labor party heads and the trade union organizations.

Beg in Vain for Scabs

a liar. "Moran is a liar," said Fay Silkoff in her testimony, "He never gave me a copy of the injunction." The other defendants also denied that Moran had talked to them.

Patrick Colins had some difficulty in explaining to the court why he arrested Morris Sher. "What was he doing when you arrested him," asked Sissman. "Why he was pointing his finger at somebody".

"And you arrested him just for pointing his finger?"

"Well I thought may be he was blocking the sidewalk," answered the servant of the state's attorney's office.

Strikebreaking Judge

Judge Foell made it evident in court yesterday that altho he may be a more cultured man than the brusque Denny, he is going to do all in his power to hamper the strike of the garment girls for decent conditions.

Repeatedly by questioning the girls Foell tried to show that the strike was a "conspiracy" between the picketers and the union officials. "Who told you to go on the picket line?" asked Judge Foell of every defendant so far called. When they replied they had gone out on their own volition, Judge Foell said, "Your punishment for violating the injunction will be more severe if you take the full responsibility."

Vapid Injunction Twaddle.

"I don't believe it when you say you didn't undestand what the injunction was," Judge Foell told Mary Gastina. "You'd better tell me who told you to go out picketing. I am trying to find out who is using you as a tool, I believe you deliberately violated the injunction and the amount of the responsibility you take will determine the amount of your punishment."

The six defendants heard today were Fay Silkoff, Mary Gastina, Minnie Garshin, Mary Nischt, Helen Wiese, and Katherine O'Connor. The cases of Elizabeth Grusling, Samuel Natesky, William Elash, Morris Sher, Morris Surin, Marya Czajkowska, and Fabian Tipshus will be taken up today.

Four more picketers were arrested yesterday. They were Bernice Nowakowski, Sophie Moss, Stasie Pilichoski, and Emma Goldberg.

A Manufacturers' Judge.

Judge Foell showed that he is not going to do anything which will injure the dress manufacturers in this strike. He is doing his best to keep the girls off the picket line. Every defendant was forced to promise that from now on they will keep off the picket line. In spite of Judge Foell and the Dress Manufacturers Association the picket line is holding firm. The strikers declare they will not be scared by any prostitutes of the employers because they know they are struggling for a higher standard of living. The answers of the defendants to the "Injunction Judge" showed that the wages they have been receiving are too low for a decent standard of living to be maintained. "I earned twenty dollars a week before the strike," said Fay Silkoff, in answer to Judge Foell. Two other defendants said they earned $25 a week. But it was not brought out in court that the dress making trade is exceedingly seasonal, and hence the girls find it impossible to exist on non-union wages.

Members of the Committee of 15 said they "are still considering hiring a float." They "are not sure whether or not they will run a float at all on account of the expense."

Gompers' Aid Fizzled.

No more has been heard about Samuel Gompers and the aid he was supposed to be going to give the strikers some time ago. Committee of 15 members said yesterday that they did not believe Gompers would do anything about the strike here. Up to now the sum total of his assistance to the strikers has been—Nothing. Not even a statement to the press.

ALBERTA MINERS BATTLING PRESS AND COAL BARONS

District Union Officials Backed By Members.

By JOHN GIFFORD.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

DRUMHELLER, Alta., Canada, April 17.—On April 1st, the miners of Alberta and eastern British Columbia came out on strike to maintain their present wage scale and are putting up a solid front to the coal operators and the capitalistic press of the country. The constitution of the union providing for a referendum on the strike issue, a vote was taken and resulted in an unanimous vote in favor of a cessation of work to strike against a wage cut.

The press of the country, in a rage at the miners in coming out on strike, and not doing their share in getting the country back to normalcy. The press of this western country is insistent that the miners be more reasonable, and the country, especially the miners, would derive much benefit from a wage reduction. At present the boss has a very convenient weapon to use, with the large influx of immigrants from Europe, and the operators have intimated that they will flood the mines with incoming immigrants, if the miners do not take a cut.

The mines being worked with cheap labor, will result in an affair of the Herrin type, as the vote of the miners on the strike issue indicates that they will not tolerate any violation of their union principles, and if any violence takes place, the blame will rest wholely on the operators and the press. The miners are intending to throw their whole might and strength into this fight as the operators have consistently abused the late agreement in numerous ways and it was not possible for any progressive member of the union to put forward any move for the benefit of the workers without being discriminated, and the agreement being of such a nature, that a militant member of the union had absolutely no redress.

It is this one feature of the late agreement that the miners are determined to remedy, and are staking their all on this fight, altho the mines in this district have worked barely a hundred days, in the last year. However the mines have received much encouragement by a large number of non-union mines coming out in support, and it is expected that before many days that the entire non-union field will come out in sympathy with the union miners and line up with the organization. It is this that the operators were banking on, as they figured that the non-union mines would take care of the summer needs of the consumer, and would be the means of breaking the strike.

The officials of the district were fully aware of this situation, and the strike being called the district officers acted immediately, and went out on the job and proceeded to clean up the non-union fields. The most hopeful thing in this strike is that the rank and file are all solid for the action of the officials, there being no internal dissension in the ranks, and with everybody realising that the only enemy is the boss, victory for the miners is assured.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 17.—E. H. Dunnigan, of the U. S. Labor department, arrived in St. Louis, for the purpose of settling the painters' strike.

After calling a conference of the Masters' painters' association, and the conference committee of the strikers, the former refused to yield to the compromise figure suggested by him, of $1.37 per hour, which is equivalent to $10.96 per day. The strikers originally were demanding $12 per day.

Bosses Disgust Dunnigan.

Becoming disgusted with the attitude of the bosses, Dunnigan demanded of them the reason for calling this conference, if they were unwilling to make any effort at arbitration. The bosses are holding out for a $10 day with no agreement, aiming at the destruction of the union.

Upon request by the strikers' committee, for their reasons in not wishing to sign any agreement with the union, they answered that as members of the recently formed building trades association, it was incumbent upon them to meet this obligation.

The Building Trades Association is endeavoring to have all agreements with unions expire effecting any of its members, intending ultimately at the establishment of open shop conditions in St. Louis, as far as the Building Trades industry is concerned.

Another conference was arranged for Saturday morning. At this conference the bosses were more demure, candidly stating that as far as they were concerned, their stand of the previous day was final. The bosses also stated that the strikers were not justified in demanding an increase, as the painting season is much longer than any other craft, subsequently earning more money than the men employed in the other crafts of the building industry. This was given the lie by the strikers' committee, which displayed conclusive evidence to the contrary.

Bosses Getting Desperate.

The desperation of the bosses is supported by the fact that they are instigating acts of violence and indulging in vandalism. This was reported to the mass meeting of the striking painters by brother Eisenring.

Private dicks are being employed to mar fresh paint, trying to lay the blame on the painters, making also the impression that the services of the sleuths were necessary. Yesterday morning when the painters went to the Labor Temple, they found the steps marred with tar, Eisenring said.

The striking painters are more determined than ever to win the strike. The cheap propaganda of the bosses intimating that the strikers were weakening, was vehemently denied by all the men on strike.

The support being given to the Master painters, by the bosses of the other trades and even the board of Education continues in backing up the bosses by refraining to have any painting done until the strike is smashed, demonstrates fully that the bosses have amalgamation. Real estate men and other members of the association have discontinued all work, where union men were employed.

The concensus of opinion on the part of a great many militant strikers, is that were all the building trades affiliated in prererence to the present antiquated structure of the labor movement, based on craft, the strikers would be able to withstand more effectively the attacks from the bosses who are amalgamated.

Employers' Trade Schoool A Failure, Australians Find

By W. FRANCIS AHERN

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., April 17.—Trade schools maintained by building employers in New South Wales to teach bricklaying and other crafts in a hurry are drawing official disaproval.

Hundreds of half-baked men have been turned on the building trade market, with the result that much faulty work is being done. This was predicted by the unions.

In an official statement regarding these "graduates" the president of the New South Wales board of trade said that the conditions of training were very unsatisfactory. He added that in the opinion of the board the bricklayers' trade could not be acquired in 12 weeks and that at least two years' apprenticeship was necessary.

Let Him Come.

WASHINGTON, April 17.— Repre- Butler, once Populist senator from North Carolina, and for many years past a lawyer here for business interests, has started on a western political trip. His associates say he is going out for the Republican national committee to "break up this third party movement."

Daugherty's Advice

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 17.—Gaston Means, for a time one of the right hand men of William J. Burns, and prominent in the make-up of the Burns International Detective Agency, told the Wheeler committee of senate investigators that Daugherty, while attorney general of the United States, had told him to take his orders from Jesse Smith and "not to let his right hand know what his left hand was doing."

ILLINOIS FACTORY JOBS DECREASE BY 3.6 PER CENT

Autos, Clothing and Building Affected

By LELAND OLDS,

Federated Press Industrial Editor.

Employment in Illinois factories during March was 3.6 per cent below March, 1923, according to the monthly report of the Illinois department of labor. March, which is normally a month of seasonal expansion failed to register any gain as compared with February. A sharp reduction in weekly earnings was also reported due to extensive part-time operation.

The report contrasts last years' booming labor market, in which shortage of workers was the dominant note with the present situation. In March, 1923, the state free employment agencies were asked to supply 25,640 workers while this March less than half that number were called for.

Autos, Clothing, Fall Off.

The list of industries which have failed to show the usual seasonal expansion includes building, manufacture of automobiles, automobile accessories and clothing. The curtailment in these industries is affecting others indirectly because diminished for goods.

Improvement in the weather is expected to increase employment on building and road construction altho the building construction cleared thru municipal building offices in the principal cities of the state since November 1 is below that of a year ago—$130,000,000 worth instead of $135,000,000.

Slight Gain In Steel.

Thirty-three of the 54 industries covered by the report indicated expansion while 21 curtailed operations. The most substantial gain was reported by the large iron and steel employers who added 4 per cent to their working forces. Oil refiners reported considerable gains and manufactures of knit goods added nearly 10 per cent to the number on their peyrolls. On the other hand employment in the men's clothing industry declined 5.4 per cent, in women's clothing 7.3 per cent and at the stockyards 6.2 per cent.

The average weekly earnings of all factory workers amounted to $27.61, a decrease of 75 cents compared with February. These earnings are still $1.78 (6½ per cent) above those of March, 1923. The range of men's wages was from $20.69 to $44.78 with an average of $30.10, that of women from $10.97 to $27.64 with an average of $17.68.

Summarizing the situation the report says: "Unless there is an abrupt change in the underlying industrial situation it appears that not a few farm hands who were attracted to the cities by expanding industry will soon be returning to the farm. The farmer should have less cause to complain of an inadequate supply than one year ago.

Trachtenberg Tells Ohio Workers About Russia And Germany

WARREN, Ohio, April 17.—Alexander Trachtenberg's meeting here was worth hearing. The Russian government is so powerful, he said, that there is no chance what-so-ever to overthrow it.

They are now succeeding in organizing all industries, he said. Unskilled workers have been trained and Russia's industries are able to export goods to other countries.

Industries provide funds for a Social Insurance, which takes care of workers who are unemployed and sick and gives medical help for those who need it.

Every worker has a chance to have a 2 weeks rest. He is then taken to a Rest Home, where he can rest perfectly without financial troubles on his mind, etc.

Bosses' Judge Aids With Injunction Against Retail Clerks' Union

An injunction preventing the International Protective Association Retail Clerks, Local 195 from picketing was issued today by Judge Charles M. Foell, upon application of Assey Brothers Cloak House. According to the injunction, and to the judge granting it, a strike is no longer an attempt of underpaid workers to secure economic justice but is some sort of a conspiracy.

The injunction granted by Foell, who is now trying the garment strikers on a similar picketing injunction, if enforced, prevents the strikers retail clerks from picketing, from striking, from talking to scabs, or from in any way obeying the instructions of their union which the injunction construes as "A conspiracy to ruin business."

The injunction states that the retail clerks "were advised by their union to call a general strike, and formed a union for that purpose." Oscar Nelson appeared for the retail clerks union.

The Assey Brothers have two stores which are unfair to organized labor, one known as the Liberty cloak and Suit House at 1235 Halsted St. and the other at 1325 Halsted St. The Retail Clerks Union has been picketing these two stores vigorously.

Ole Hanson Is Now Flim-flamming Folks In Oakland, Calif.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 17.— The Oakland Chamber of Commerce has given a luncheon in honor of a new and distinguished resident of the city —none other than the famous Ole Hanson, who entertained his hosts with the well-worn story of how he put down the great Seattle R-r-revolution.

Hanson will follow in the steps of Mr. George F. Babbitt and occupy himself as a realtor in Oakland. It is understood, however, that as a sideline he will be used in criminal syndcalism cases to supplement the efforts of professional stool pigeons like Coutts, Townsend and Dimond.

Ole has just come from Los Angeles, where he wore out his welcome in three short years. His big real estate operations there went flat at the end—too many other sharks in the business.

One of his greatest failures was his Washington state attempt, several years ago, to unload a lot of worthless logged-off land on returned soldiers whom he expected to pay his annual installments for the privilege of pulling out stumps.

N. Y. Lawmakers Stewed To Gills, Can't Answer Roll

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 17.—Many New York legislators were too drunk to answer their names on the roll calls during the closing session at Albany, Mrs. Anna Kross told her fellow members of the Women's Democratic club here. Drunkenness and rowdyism were the reason, she said, for the defeat of many reform and labor bills and prevented over 500 bills from being reported out of committee.

"The whole situation there all night was so disgusting that I came away heartsick," Mrs. Kross told her audience at the Hotel Commodore: "It is a disgrace to American government. We women have got to band together and declare that no man shall go back to the legislature thru our votes who has not enough self-respect to stay sober."

Among the bills killed by these same solons was one providing for prohibition enforcement.

Framing an Alibi

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The Senate Investigation of the Internal Revenue Bureau was "aimed" at Secretary Mellon to "break him down because he was a principal figure in framing the Tax Reduction Bill," Senator Lodge, Massachusetts, republican floor leader, charged in the senate yesterday.

Ku Klux Rules Missouri Democratic Convention

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 16.—After a spectacular battle lasting until dawn today the democratic Missouri state convention here voted down a platform plank denouncing the Ku Klux Klan.

During discussion of the anti-Klan declaration the speakers platform was filled with dozens of delegates milling about seeking recognition of the chair. Personal encounters were narrowly avoided during the bitter debate. Hoots and cat calls sounded constantly from the floor of the convention.

When the resolution was declared defeated by a viva voce vote accusations were hurled against Frank H. Farris, chairman of the state committee, that he had ordered Chairman R. E. Culver not to allow a record vote be taken.

BRIT TROOPS HALT RHINELAND PRESS OF COMMUNISTS

Protest to MacDonald Has No Effect

(Special to The Daily Worker)

COLONGE, Germany, March 21.—(By Mail, Delayed in Transmission) The Communist daily here, The Socialist Republic, has been supressed by the British occupation authorities. The first period of suppression was for a period of ten days and the last for three months.

The reason given for the suppression was the following editorial entitled "MacDonald Protects White Guard Spies.":

At the request of the Pope, MacDonald has turned to the Soviet Government with an appeal for the imprisoned Catholic priests. These priests are in prison as white Guards and Polish spies. This is ground enough for MacDonald as a Social Democrat to intervene on their behalf.

Why does not MacDonald's sympathetic heart urge him to intercede on behalf of the thousands of political prisoners in Italy and Germany? It is because the interests of the British bourgeoisie are closely linked with German and Italian reaction? Besides, Ebert is MacDonald's friend.

What would MacDonald say if the Soviet Government were to request him to amnesty the champions of national freedom of Ireland and India, who are languishing in British jails? Would he not rage at such "Bolshevik propaganda?"

The editor of the suppressed paper has written the following letter to the Communist Party of Great Britain and the British Communist Party has protested to Premier MacDonald receiving in reply a letter from his secretary stating that the premier was "obliged for information."

• • •

LETTER OF EDITOR

COLONGE, March 21, 1924.

Dear Comrades:

Here is another example of how British generals protect the Social Democrat MacDonald from Communist criticism.

To-day I was ordered before the British local Commandant, who informed me that our paper would be suppressed for ten days from March 25. No ground was given. The Commandant further declared that the Sozialistische Republik would be suppressed for three months on account of the enclosed article. Criticism of the Social Democrat MacDonald is an insult to the British Government and a danger to the British occupation.

The ten days' suppression is deliberately intended to prevent our voice reaching the miners in the Ruhr miners' struggle, which begins on April 1. The three months' suppression is intended to make us powerless in the electoral campaign. The British military authorities are trying to use the three volumes of ordinances of the Inter-allied High Commission against the Communists, so that the effect of the "state of emergency" shall be left even without the suppression of the Communist Party, altho they could not succeed in securing the suppression of the Party.

Captain Welton informed me some weeks ago that the British authorities wished for a victory of the centre parties in the coming elections, the Social-Democrats and the clerical "Zentrum," and were doing everything to make such a victory possible.

With Communist Greetings, S. FAHL, Editor, Die Sozialistische Republik.

All protests to the MacDonald government have brought no results and the paper is still forced to come out as an illegal organ.

The attitude of the british Occupation Authorities towards the German workingclass has not changed for the better since the MacDonald government has been in power and if anything they are harsher in their treatment of strikes and demonstrations.

Chicago Music Fans Again Hear World's Greatest Pianist

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Beethoven's seventh symphony occupied most of the first part of the Chicago Symphony orchestra concert at Orchestra Hall last Friday and Saturday. There is scarcely another symphonic work in the whole range of musical literature which has so much beautiful melody to the square inch of score as this one. Richard Wagner called it the "apotheosis of the dance, the dance deified." Surely no more graceful and appealing dance tunes ever found their way into symphonic literature.

Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, Chicago pianist, played the Moskowski concerto with the orchestra. The Moskowski concerto was first heard in Chicago in 1907, when Mrs. Zeisler played it with the Chicago orchestra. Since then much has changed. Mrs. Zeisler added triumphs to her already successful career, until now she is known as the foremost woman pianist of America. The Chicago orchestra established itself, and now the firmest founded symphony orchestra in America. Moskowski lost his luck, and is spending his last days in sickness and poverty.

Mere Technic.

The concerto alone remains unchanged, and this is almost as great a shame as that its illustrious composer should be forced to live as he does. It stacks up as about the worst composition heard this season of symphony brilliance. It does so, but there is no music in the process, only endless, tuneless, musically worthless technical display. There is a good beer garden tune in the lost movement, but that is soon lost in the general confusion of foolish noise.

This in no way disparages Mrs. Zeisler's ability. She played six encores in the brilliant style that has won her reputation. Her performance of Fritz Kreisler's "Leibesfreud" had a Viennese spirit and dash second only to the interpretation of the composer.

Edward Elgar's overture, "Cockraigne," a work descriptive of London, opened the program. It is a light and tuneful gentleman's London, that does not compare with Williams' London symphony.

A work played for the first time in America was Perinello's tone poem, "The Dying Swan." It is good water music, in the French impressionist style, but somewhat hurt by an oversentimental title.

Islam and Christianity will share most of next week's symphony program, the next to the last of the season. Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Scherezade" suite, four tone poems based on the Arabian Nights, will be played, and three excerpts from Wagner's "Parsifal." Beethoven's second "Leonore" overture and Ernest Schelling's bloody tone poem, "A Victory Ball," will round out the program.

More Democracy Is Berger's Cure For Teapot Government

WASHINGTON, April 17.—A movement to re-write the Constitution and revise the present form of government was started today by Representative Victor Berger, Wisconsin Socialist, who introduced in the House a resolution which would authorize Congress to call a convention for the purpose.

"The present Constitution makes our form of government a monarchy," Berger said. The president has power equal to two-thirds of Congress. The cabinet is not dependent upon the will of Congress as in the British form of government.

"The Senate, fashioned after the British House of Lords, continues to serve long after the institution it imitated has fallen into disuse," Berger said. "In it a voter from the State of Rhode Island counts for as much as ten voters from the State of New York."

Judges, appointed for life, over-rule the laws of Congress and the people now are victims of "a judicial oligarchy" Berger said.

Demand Removal Of Troops From Kentucky Mines

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 17.—On the ground that the mere presence of troops is alone a form of intimidation in industrial disputes the American Civil Liberties union here has appealed to Governor Wm. J. Fields to withdraw state troops from the struck Liberty Coal & Coke Co. mines in Bell county, Ky. Two companies of national guardsmen were ordered out "to protect" mine property on April 5, tho the strike was being conducted peacefully.

ANOTHER BIG FEATURE OF THE DAILY WORKER

What is behind the present strained relations between the Japanese and American governments? What is all this talk of "grave consequences" being hurled at Washington by Tokio?

The DAILY WORKER will answer these and many other questions in a series of articles beginning today by Jay Lovestone on the growth and significance of American imperialism.

These articles are the result of a thoro investigation of the policy of aggrandizement pursued by the American imperialists and their capitalist governments in the Far East, in Europe, in Africa, and against the Latin-American Republics. The series will be up to the minute in information gathered from the most authoritative sources available.

If you want to know whom, why, where, when and how the bosses and their government have been and are oppressing and exploiting in the colonies and various spheres of influence now in the grip of our ruling class, follow up the whole series of startling revelations completely discloced for the first time by the DAILY WORKER.

The menace of American militarism, the dangers of new imperialist wars, and what the American working class and poor farmers can and must do to save themselves from another world conflagration will be brought home in these articles.

The series is a distinct beat for the DAILY WORKER. The question of imperialism is a most vital one affecting the fundamental interests of every worokingman and exploited farmer in this country. JURY AWARDS HEAVY DAMAGES LANDLORD VICTIM

Heatless Apartment Was Cause of Death

A rude shock was dealt apartment house owners yesterday by a jury which returned a verdict of $10,000 for Mrs. Helen F. Bornholdt, who charged that her husband died from pneumonia contracted in a heatless apartment. Many apartment house owners are rallying around the defendant, and an appeal will be made from the decision for fear that numerous suits will be started if the award is allowed to go uncontested.

Mrs. Bornholdt charged that her husband took cold and contracted pneumonia because her landlords, S. T. Butler and Laura McIntosh, failed to supply sufficient heat, despite repeated appeals.

"We were forced to wear sweaters and overcoats to keep from freezing," Mrs. Bornholdt testified.

Physicians were called, some testifying that pneumonia could be contracted quicker in overheated than in underheated apartments, while others testified the opposite. The jury returned its verdict within an hour for the full amount of the suit. This is the first time in the history of the state that such an award has been made.

Teachers Admit Guilt But Judge Punishes Striking Pupils' Parents

Bernard Weil, 1756 West Roosevelt road, father of Bernice Weil, a pupil whose punishment started the trouble, and Mrs. Rose Speez, 1921 Taylor street, were each fined $100 as a result of the recent school strike, but later Judge McKinley suspended sentence and placed both on probation for six months.

In Corner for Hour and Half.

Bernice Weil, 12 years old, was the principal witness for the defense of her father and Mrs. Speez. She testified that Mrs. Margaret Royce, a sewing teacher at the school, had made her stand in a corner an hour and a half for tardiness.

Miss Mary E. Tobin, principal of the school, admitted that Mrs. Royce's practice in punishing tardy pupils was bad, and that she had been reprimanded for it.

The judge agreed that Mrs. Royce deserved a reprimand when Bernice testified that she had attempted to explain to the teacher she was late because she had been helping her sick mother.

Framed Charges—Secret Sessions.

Then Attorney William Micon, representing Weil, got into action and told the judge he would file formal charges against Miss Tobin and Mrs. Royce before the board of education.

"So far," he said, "the investigation the trustees said they have made of the Cregier school row has been in the secret, star-chamber sessions for which the board is famous. Now I am going to bring it out into the open."

Handing Out Another Job.

WASHINGTON, April 17.— Marion sentative William J. Graham, Illinois, was suggested to President Coolidge today by Representative Longworth, Ohio, republican leader of the house, for appointment as successor to the late Judge Smythe of the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

For Better Days In Paris

PARIS, April 17.—A divorce was granted to Mrs. Laura Beatrice Merriam Curtis from James Freeman Curtis, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury. She was granted the custody of the children.

THE DAILY WORKER MUST GET MOST OF ITS NEWS FROM ITS READERS IF IT IS TO BE A REAL WORKERS PAPER

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

The DAILY WORKER is operating with the smallest staff that, with possibly one exception, ever got out a daily paper in the United States. It wants to carry all the news of labor unions, co-operative societies, shop and job news, news of all workingclass activities, that it can crowd into its six pages.

It has not and it cannot afford to have paid correspondents nor does it consider that this is the proper method of getting the news of everything that affects and interests the workers and farmers.

It believes that the right method is for workers and farmers themselves to furnish news to a workingclass paper and it, therefore, proposes to do all it can to inform its readers so that they can give the DAILY WORKER what it needs to become a real expression of the most intelligent and militant section of the workers and farmers of the United States.

WHAT NEWS IS.

In the first place, to be able to furnish news it is necessary to know what it is. Every day in every district where there are workers and bosses, farmers and bankers, unions and employers' organizations—in other words, wherever the class struggle rages, from the smallest hamlet to the largest city—something happens that will interest workers in other sections and from which they can draw a lesson—if they know about it.. Workingclass news is the multiplied experience of the workingclass—its collective record of struggle. Whether or not you think certain incidents are of news value—send them in.

Gives us news of strikes; of elections in unions, co-operative societies and workers' sick and death benefit organizations; of concerts and entertainments for workingclass enterprises; of elections in cities, counties and states and the issues involved; of accidents in mines, on railways, in factories and mines when workers are injured or killed; of the activities of employers' associations against the workers; if some speaker attacks the workers and their organizations, tell us what he said and what the circumstances were.

Give the news of the death or illness of workers whose activities have been of value to the workers' movement; of campaigns designed to strengthen the grip of the capitalists on the schools; of the stopping of meetings of workers; of the increase in the price of food and clothing and increases in rents; of wage-cuts or increases and how they came about; of working conditions in your industry, trade or locality; of petty tyrannies inflicted on workers by foremen and superintendents; of blacklisting and unemployment.

HOW TO WRITE NEWS?

BE BRIEF. The DAILY WORKER has but six pages.

Follow the first rule of newswriting—get into the first paragraph, if possible these five things—WHAT—WHERE—WHO—WHEN—WHY.

Give just enough local color for the proper background.

Send in the story as soon as the news occurs.

If you furnish the facts the editors will be able to make any editorial comment necessary. That is one of the things editors are for.

Use a typewriter if it is humanly possible. If you cannot use a typewriter, write plainly with lots of space between the lines. If you are in doubt as to how much space to leave start, by leaving what you think is too much and then make the space twice as wide.

Space is necessary between lines so that editors can make necessary corrections or insertions without having to re-write the whole story. Re-writing takes time.

Number your pages if there is more than one.

LETTERS TO THE PAPER.

Make a distinction between letters to the DAILY WORKER giving your views on various subjects and news stories. Letters from readers will be printed in a special department. See to it that you do not combine a news story and an article. The editors may have to dig out the news story at the expense of much time and trouble and then be unable to publish your letter. The DAILY WORKER wants expression from its readers but the same rule applies—BE BRIEF.

200 to 300 word letters are best and in no case should they exceed 500 words. They must all be edited and it takes time that cannot be spared to wade thru a half-dozen pages of hand-written manuscript.

If your letter deals with the acts or utterances of some individual do not be abusive for the sake of abuse. It does not strengthen your case. This rule does not apply to capitalists and workingclass traitors but even when dealing with them do not trust to abuse to replace argument.

FINAL SUGGESTIONS.

When a news story you have sent in is printed read it carefully and see what corrections have been made and try not to make the same mistakes again. You may be sure that any changes that have been made were necessary; editors do not make changes in copy or re-write it for the fun of the thing; they are too busy.

If these few things are followed by our readers the DAILY WORKER will be able to cover the whole field of the worker and farmer movement in the United States at slight expense and its news will have the additional value of being the actual history of the class struggle as it develops day by day, compiled by those who are in the first line of that struggle.

When the DAILY WORKER becomes that kind of a paper it will not need to worry about support because it will be as much a part of the revolutionary movement as are the workers and farmers who compose it.

Start today to be a correspondent of the DAILY WORKER and a historian of the class struggle in the United States.

What Did the Russian Communists Decide?

There is universal interest thruout the United States, among thinking workers especially, about the decisions of the Russian Communist Party growing out of its recent discussions, which have been extensively published in the DAILY WORKER.

We are, therefore, sure that there will be an extensive reading of the two resolutions on party policy, the second of which is being concluded on Page Five today.

The first of these was the Resolution of the Central Committee of the Central Control Commission Concerning the Party Structure. This was unanimously adopted, at the joint session of the Political Bureau of the Russian Communist Party and of the Presidium of the Central Control Commission.

The second deals with the Immediate Tasks of the Economic Policy. Turn to Page Five today and read it.

Free Philippines! Labor And Liberal Organizations Cry

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 17.—Complete independence for the Philippines effective as soon as civil and military representatives of the United States can be withdrawn is demanded in a resolution to congress signed by representatives of labor and liberal organizations of the country. Part of the appeal, initiated by the American Civil Liberties unnon, follows:

"On several occasions since 1899 the government of the United States speaking thru the president and congress has specifically pledged itself to grant Philippine independence as soon as a stable government is established in the islands. The practically unanimous demand for independence by the Philippine people shows their own estimate of their ability to conduct their affairs. But quite irrespective of their competence for self-government, we would urge their right to independence."

Among the signers of the resolution are James H. Maurer, President Penn. Federation of Labor; Wm. J. Johnston, President Int. Assn. of Machinists; Frederick C. Howe, former U. S. immigration commissioner at New York; Edward T. Devine, member recent U. S. coal commision; Moorfield Story, former president Bar Association, and the following churchmen: Bishop Paul Jones, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, John Haynes Holmes, Father John A. Ryan, and Harry F. Ward.

Round World Flight Halted For Week Pending Engine Repairs

WASHINGTON, April 17.— A new motor for the plane Seattle, flagship of the round-the-world flight, is on its way to Alaska, the War Department said today.

The flight will be delayed, a week or more until the engine is installed and other repairs made to the Seattle, which was forced down on the Alaskan coast.

Latest advices to the Department from Major Martin, commander of the squadron, who, with his mechanic, was lost for 24 hours in the Alaskan wastes, are that he is none the worse for his night of exposure.

Brief dispatches from Lieutenant Smith, second in command, indicated Martin's trouble was due to faulty lubrication.

Ford's Pike County Miners Not Allowed To Join The Union

(By The Federated Press)

ASHLAND, Ky., April 17.— Henry Ford has mines in Pike county, Ky., adjoining Mingo county, W. Va. His coal is taken across the Tug river and loaded on the West Virginia side and hauled 80 miles on the Chesapeake & Ohio railway to Ironton, where it is transferred to Ford's own railroad that commences there. In Harland county near the Tennessee line there are other Ford mines. The operations are at present small, about seven openings in all, employing approximately 300 men.

Ford's men are not permitted to join the union and at present they are not getting steady work, neither do they receive the union scale, altho they come nearer to it than at any other non-union operations here.

"Cal" Thinks Time Is Ripe For Him To Say Something

WASHINGTON, April 17.—President Coolidge intends to make a plain, unfrilled statement of the issues of the presidential campaign as he sees them, when he addresses newspaper editors in New York next week.

It is desirable, in Mr. Coolidge's opinion, that the public be always informed as to what it may expect from him and his administration providing they are returned to power. He has clear ideas of the issues, and both he and his advisers agree that there is no reason why the President should not at once take a definite stand upon them.

Japanese Premier Minimizes Effect Of Exclusion Vote

TOKIO, April 17.— Friendship between Japan and the United States will remain unbroken altho the record may be "impaired" by the passage of the Japanese exclusion measure by Congress, Premier Kiyoura of Japan, declared today.

He indicated that the letter of Ambassador Hanihara, which created such a sensation in the United States may have been interpreted in a way not intended by Japan and pointed out that it was written in a "language foreign to us."

Get Rubber Payroll.

AKRON, Ohio, April 17.— Three bandits held up payroll messengers of the American Hard Rubber Company today and escaped with a $17,000 payroll. Three shots were fired. The bandits fled in an automobile, heading toward Canton, with police in close pursuit.

THE POWER COLUMN

Many Changes in Leadership as Live Wires Struggle to Put Their City in Front.

More than ever The Power Column is being enabled to live up to its name as the column which sets forth the activities of those who are giving the power to the DAILY WORKER. The week ending on April 16 has been particularly encouraging. Subs continue to pour in. Locals which got away to good starts are showing their sticking ability by keep up the good work and in other localities where the big campaign did not at first show much activity there is now being manifested an ardent attempt to give evidence of militant determination in the DAILY WORKER behalf.

Warren, Ohio Shares the Lead.

After a merry chase Warren, Ohio, has been able to overcome the lead assumed early in the campaign by Miles City, Mont. The latter added only one sub to its roster while Warren increased its list by four. Both are being pushed by Superior, Wis., which made the best record for the week with 21 new subs added. Newark, N. J., took a rapid climb from far down in the scale to fourth place while several other cities have made speedy headway and are threatening to pass any who let down the pace.

New York and Philadelphia Climb.

Among the week's records are those made by New York and Philadelphia. The latter gained a few notches on Brooklyn in the race between the larger cities while the former has retrived in part its poor start and has now passed Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Boston. Toledo, Ohio, a banner DAILY WORKER town, and renowned for its success in making the DAILY WORKER grow is also forging to the front and is duplicating its fine record made in securing subscriptions when the DAILY WORKER was first established and in maintaining the circulation intact by securing 100 per cent of the renewals on expiring subs.

Prize Banners to Be Given Winning Cities.

John Mihelic, of Kansas City, comes across with a good suggestion that the DAILY WORKER give a banner to the city which makes the best record during the campaign. We'll go you one better, John. Two banners will be given, one to the city having a quota less than 100 which makes the best percentage and one to the city of the more than 100 class whose final percentage is the highest when the campaign ends on June 15. With almost two more months to go before the campaign ends it will be a wonder if civil war does not break out between the ambitious banner seekers. Hop to it! The DAILY WORKER will furnish plenty of ammunition in the way of trial sub cards and the premium cards.

Stuff Ballot Boxes For McCormick In Dawes' Home Town

(By The Federated Press)

EVANSTON, Ill., April 17.— Forty more votes were recorded for Senator Medill McCormick, defeated Newberry senator, than were actually cast in the entire precinct for McCormick and Deneen, it was revealed when the official canvass of Evanston, General Dawes' home town, began after the April 8 primaries. Evanston is also the main garrison town of Dawes' "minute men of the constitution," an organization that would imitate in spirit the ballot smashing tactics of Dictator Mussolini of Italy.

It was shown in the official returns that Precinct 2, 6th ward, had cast 261 votes altogether. Deneen was credited with 98 of these votes in both the unofficial and the official report. But the precinct officers had given McCormick not only the 163 votes to which he was entitled but 138 more that could not be accounted for when the ballots were rechecked. This ballot stuffing in Dawes' bailiwick is the most serious irregularity in the senatorial race so far discovered.

The minute men have not yet mobilized to defend the constitution against McCormick's friends.

Immediate Communist Tasks Under Russia's Economic Policy

Resolution of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party on "The Immediate Tasks of the Economic Policy."

(Adopted by the Political Bureau on December 24, 1923, in execution of the decision taken by the Plenums of the Central Committee and the Central Control Committee on October 25. This resolution has to be submitted for final confirmation by the Plenum of the Central Committee.

* * *

(Concluded from yesterday.)

V. Home Trade and Co-operatives.

Under the New Economic Policy, the organization of commerce has a unique importance becouse, by means of the commercial apparatus, there must be the closest linking up of the nationalized industry with the peasant market. Every strengthening of the co-operative and of the state commerce and every enlargement of the field of their activity imply an enlargement of the sphere of the socialist economy. Every weakening of the positions of the co-operatives and of the state commerce and every strengthening of the positions of the private middle-man, dealer and merchant imply an enlargement of the sphere of domination of the bourgeois capitalist conditions. The support, therefore, of the co-operatives and the development of the state commerce, the winning by them of positions from the private commercial capitalists on the basis of competition, the economic employment of this capital gained by them, form the most important tasks of the economic policy of the Party.

In the meantime the crisis has shown that the co-operatives and the state commerce are not up to those tasks which confront them: the tasks of establishing an immediate connection between the state industry and the mass consumers.

The insufficient flexibility and the specialization of the organs, the unweildiness and the bureaucratism of the commercial apparatus, the high rate of the additional expenses, the incapability of reaching the mass market, the insufficient adaptability to the needs of the scattered many millioned peasantry—all these demands from the Party a steadfast work for eliminating these defects resulting from the crisis. The problems of commerce confront the Party in all their immensity.

VI. Private Capital.

The problem of the relation between state and private capital forms, at the present time, the most important problem in the sphere of economics, and it is decisive for the relation between the class forces of the proletariat, based on the nationalized industry, and the new bourgeoisie based on the elementary play of free competition. By establishing the basis for the New Economic Policy, which has fully justified itself and requires no revision leading practically to a return of war Communism, the Party has not only permitted private capital to accumulate a certain amount of capital resources derived from commerce, but it has also handed over for partial exploitation by private capital a part of the means of production at its disposal (concessions, leases, etc.).. In this latter sphere the participation of private capital is both absolutely and relatively negligible. The comparatively more important role of private capital in commerce is due to its greater adaptability to the retail trade and to the supplying of the needs of the scattered customers in the village.

The state capital cannot take upon itself the rapid establishment of immediate connections with the whole 100 million mass of scattered productive peasantry, but also in this sphere the growth of private capital must be kept within certain limits by means of strengthening the economic role of the co-operatives and of the state commerce and by means of an adoption to the needs and conditions of trade in the village.

Help Co-Operatives.

One of the principal pre-conditions for the strengthening of our positions against private capital must be the fixing of reasonable prices. The Soviet rule having concentrated in its hands the principal mass of products which are needed by the village, must become capable of ensuring that the state organizations and co-operatives sell more cheaply than the private dealer. We must render the mass consumer — worker and peasant — aware of the superiority of the co-operative and state trade of those organizations based on private capital. The co-operative organizations are destined to play the chief role in trade organization, especially in that of the retail trade. A number of measures must, therefore, be adopted which will render the co-operatives an effective weapon for elimination of private trade capital (state subsidies to co-operatives, in particular, to the workers' co-operatives; transference of the co-operatives to the principle of voluntary membership; the greatest attention must be devoted to enlarging the network of co-operative organizations and to strengthening the lowest co-operative nuclei; the realization of their right to enter into immediate commercial relations with the state industry; drastic reduction of additional expenses; greatest possible reduction of intermediary channels, thru which the goods are passed on to the consumer, and the like).

Along with this, in order to render subordinate the activity of private capital to the general economic policy of the Soviet power, a number of further measures must be adopted for regulating the prices of the principal articles of mass consumption. On the other hand the control over accumulation on the part of private capital must be reached by measures of taxation. There must be a drastic taxation of luxuries and an intensification of the struggle against predatory speculators.

The Party has resolutely abandoned the policy of grain requisition and the system of rationing the food supply to the working population. By allowing the peasants freely to dispose of the results of their labor, the Party has thereby permitted to a certain degree the participation of private capital in the exchange of goods and has no reason for abandoning this policy. But the Party must systematically work for strengthening its position in this sphere also, by a tenacious and unwearied struggle for the complete domination of the peasant mass market.

VII. Financial Policy.

An extraordinarily important gain for the realization of the principal tasks of our economic policy, was obtained in the last year by the introducing a stable valuta—of the chervonetz, and by making it the fundamental valuta of the country (out of 350 millions representing the total amount of money in circulation in the country, the chervonetz already comprises 270 millions, i. e. about four-fifths).

The introduction of the chervonetz and its maintenance as a stable valuta were only possible as a result of the progressive increase of our entire economy and prove the correctness of our policy of economic reconstruction.

The circulation of the chervonetz forms, at the present time, one of the most essential aids for the development of our economy. The growth of the state industry mentioned above during the last year would not have been possible without the chervonetz. On the basis of the circulation of the chervonetz, credits have been and are being granted to trade, industry and agriculture. The granting of bank credits to industry and trade has reached a considerable degree of development. These credits have formed a fund for conducting operations, without which the systematic development of industry and of the entire national economy would be impossible. Basing itself on these credits, industry has for the first time been able to develop its production without any set-backs, and was also able to accumulate considerable stocks of goods in anticipation of the harvest.

Production Efficiency.

The strict accounting, the correct calculation of the cost of production and the introduction of a proper system of bookkeeping in our factories and works, trusts, syndicates and trade organizations, have only become possible, thanks to the stability of the chervonetz, and their perpetuation and improvement in the future will only be possible by its help.

The further policy of our Party must consist of preserving the stability of the chervonetz, and of perfecting the currency reform. The interests of the broad masses demand the perfecting of the currency reform, i. e. the substitution of a stable valuta for the sinking Soviet notes. The perfecting of the currency reform must become one of the principal tasks of the Soviet power in the next period.

The successful accomplishment of this task implies an improvement in the position of the peasant economy, a raising of the material position of the working class, and of the working strata of the population in general, and the recovery of our economy as a whole.

The successful carrying out of the currency reform, is only possible by reducing as much as possible the budget deficit and by strict economy on the part of all economic organs. The struggle against wasteful expenditure of any kind therefore constitutes an essential economic requirement.

As regards the state budget, considerable gains have to be recorded. The normal resources of revenue have increased. The note press is playing an increasingly less important role as a means of covering expenditure. In the future, every effort must be directed towards increasing the pecuniary resources of the state without increasing the burden of taxation on the working strata of the population, by increasing the yield of profit derived from the state lands and undertakings.

Budgets.

At the same time there is an undoubted improvement in the preparation of the budget estimates themselves. For some years past the Soviet power has been striving at the creation of a real budget. But it was only in the last year that any considerable improvements were attained in this direction. We have for the first time, budget estimates which correspond to the true state of affairs, and which to a greater extent than hitherto permit one to foresee and to calculate in regard to the state administration and economy.

The introduction of the chervonetz has, of itself, considerably facilitated the possibility of proper accounting, and consequently also of a systematic control over economy as a whole, as well as over single undertakings. The improvement and perfection of the budget plans have constituted the next step. But it is only by improving and perfecting the currency reform, that it will be possible, on the basis of a stable currency unit, to formulate effective financial plans for industry and trade, to conduct a correct calculation and to organize a reliable system of recording and accounting.

The currency reform must therefore form one of the essential prerequisites for the necessary increasing of the co-ordination between the various parts of the national economy, and it will for the first time provide a real basis for the effective systematic control of economy.

VIII. On the Necessity of increasing the Basis of Planned Economy.

It would be a fundamental mistake to assume that, with the preponderance of the small peasant economy, with the increasing importance of the world market and of its prices in our economy, the state planned management would be able to exclude the possibility of crises under the N. E. P.

The present crisis emphasizes, however, the necessity of increasing the efforts towards co-ordinating the single branches of the national economy, and extending the basis of planned economy in the work of the state economic organs.

In a far greater measure than heretofore, the Party must learn to coordinate the elements of the state economy in their mutual relations with the market. This task is facilitated by that fact that we have now gained considerable successes in regard to the creating of fundamental premises for the management of planned economy, without which it could easily transform itself into a bureaucratic utopia. These premises for a successful planned economy consist of: 1. the creation of a stable valuta, 2. the organization of credits, 3. the accumulation of material resources with which to operate, 4. the realization and strengthening of certain forms of the organization of economy (trusts and the like), 5. the existence of a number of individual plans, constructed on the basis of experience, in the first place of well-founded budget plans and the like.

The existence of these conditions furnishes the possibility of a far more successful work than hitherto of the state organs of planned economy. The next tasks are the strengthening of the "Gossplan," the increasing of its role in relation to financial and credit policy, the creating of closer connections between its work and the work of the People's Commissariat for Finances, the Superior Council for People's Economy, the People's Commissariat for Agriculture, the Commission for Interior Trade and the like, the strengthening of its local organs and the like.

The next task of the "Gossplan" must be the systematic study of the current market conjuncture, and the elaboration of fundamental measures aiming at influencing the trend of the market. The "Gossplan" must be actually guaranteed that position which was indicated in the resolution of the 12th Party Congress. The appointing of one of the vice-presidents of the Council of People's Commissars as president of the "Gossplan" assures the immediate participation of the "Gossplan" in the solution of all current questions of the economic life.

IX. Practical Conclusions.

A. In the Sphere of Agriculture.

1. Intensification of agriculture, development of the cultivation of raw materials, of cattle-breeding, etc., by means of several stimulative measures (alleviation of taxes, credits and the like);

2. Development of grain export by every means in order to procure market for the surplus grain produced by the peasants, and thereby to gain better grain prices for peasants' economy; for the same purpose there must be the greatest possible reduction in the additional expenses for the purchase and transport of grain;

3. To adopt all measures for organizing the state grain trade in the home market in such forms as will guarantee the stability of grain prices (arrangements for the transport of appropriate quantities of grain, regulation of freight charges, development of the distribution of elevators, etc.);

4. Development of a complete system in the villages of consumers and agricultural products and for supplying to the peasantry the necessary articles of consumption;

5. The adoption of urgent measures for the development of agricultural credits by a central agricultural bank, and by local credit associations, in order before all to supply the peasants, the peasants' associations and the collective farms with agricultural machines and tools at reasonable prices on the principle of long-term credit;

6. Beginning with the year 1924, transition to the levying of a uniform agricultural tax, calculated in stable valuta;

7. For the year 1924 there must be instituted large scale alleviations of the agricultural tax for peasant farms with but feeble resources; the organizations of agricultural laborers (All-Russian Confederation of Agricultural and Forest Laborers) and of the poorest strata of the peasantry (as the Committees of Poor Peasants and the like) must be helped by every means;

8. There must be an end made to the imposing of non-official supplementary levies in the village on the part of local authorities; voluntary levies are only to take place with the sanction of the central organs in each single case.

B. In the Sphere of Industry.

1. Rationalization of production and increase of productivity of labor;

2. Increasing of the tasks prescribed for the various undertakings and systematic distribution of orders, especially in the heavy industry;

3. Reduction of the additional expenses by means of simplification of the organizations of industry, reduction of the number of employees, etc.;

C. In the Sphere of Wages.

1. To aim at an increase of wages in accordance with the progress of the industry and of the productivity of labor;

2. To impose severe penalties for the withholding of the payment of wages. Along with this there must be recognized the necessity of fully compensating the worker for loss deriving from the fluctuation in the value of the Soviet note in all cases of the withholding of payment of wages.

3. To forbid the payment of bonuses on the turnovers, and only permitting the payment of bonuses on the net profit and then only to particularly conscientious and meritorious functionaries with the consent of the trade unions;

4. To improve the housing conditions of the workers, acknowledging as an urgent task the insuring of state credits for the Soviet housing schemes;

5. Special attention must be given to the payment of insurance contributions in order, in the first place, to insure that portion of the unemployment who constitute genuine proletarian elements and who are, before all, to be absorbed into production as soon as the latter is extended.

D. In the Sphere of Foreign Trade.

1. To adopt further measures for consolidating the foreign trade monopoly;

2. To attract foreign capital for the purposes of foreign trade, by promoting mixed companies for carrying on export and import;

E. In the Sphere of Home Trade.

2. Strengthening the regulation of wholesale prices, before all of articles of mass consumption, in the first place of those of peasant consumption, extending the same to retail prices by means of establishing maximum allowances for profit to the co-operatives on the wholesale organs, by means of operating with certain stocks of goods on the part of the state in order to reduce the prices in certain areas, finally, by means of establishing a credit policy aiming before all at serving the interests of the subordinate trade organs.

3. The necessity must be recognized of normalizing prices of salt, petroleum and sugar in all categories of trade (co-operative, state and private trade).

4. Modification of the existing system of centralized purchases on the part of the superior organs in the direction of promoting immediate contacts between the subordinate trade organizations, the factory and work associations and the wholesale and retail stores, transforming accordingly the systems of the granting of credits to co-operatives and state trade.

5. The necessity must be recognized of a revision of the existing system of syndicates in order to abolish those which cannot be economically justified, limiting as a rule the commercial activity of the remaining syndicates within the confines of wholesale trade.

6. To revise the existing railway tariffs with a view to cheapening the transport of mass consignments of goods.

7. To adopt all measures for reducing the additional trade expenses by means of reducing the number of trade representations, both in the capital and in the provinces, by eans of giving contracts to co-oper ive and state trade organs, finally y the reduction of wasteful expendi ire (personal conveyances, office uipment, advertising, etc.).

4. Cheapening of the credits for industry and trade purchases and decentralization of credits with a view to bring them within the reach of the subordinate economic units.

5. To exploit by every means the regulating role of the credits, co-ordinating the activity of the state bank and of other credit institutions with the leading organs of industry and trade thru the "Gossplan" and the Council of Labor and Defense.

G. In the Sphere of the Work of Planned Economy.

1. Enlarging of the role of the "Gossplan" regarding the elaboration of effective economic plans for the Council of Labor and Defense as to the connection of the elements of the national economy and to the regulation of market conditions on the basis of a systematic study of the economic conjunctures.

2. A close co-ordination between the work of the "Gossplan" and of the People's Commissariat for Finances, Superior Council for People's Economy, the Commission for Home Trade and other economic people's commissariats, with an obligatory co-ordination of the general work scheme of the Central Statistical Institution with the work scheme of the "Gossplan."

C. P. P. A. Aids Communists.

The Conference For Progressive Political Action thru its official organ, "Labor," is waging war on the June 17 Farmer-Labor convention to be held in St. Paul.

It warns its readers that June 17 is a carefully baited trap set for the unwary workers and farmers by the Communist ogres and, that once in, the hapless wights will be devoured. The June 17 convention called by farmer-labor parties representative of the movement in more than half a dozen western states is in no sense a competitor of the July 4 conference called by the Conference for Progressive Political Action.

If the C. P. P. A. had said that it was its intention to organize a farmer-labor party or if any of its acts and utterances could be so construed, it could consistently denounce the June 17 convention as a dual movement and advise the elements it can reach to stay away for that reason.

The last thing in the world that the C. P. P. A. wants, however, is to be confused with the elements that desire the formation of a class farmer-labor party; it does not even wish to sponsor a heterogeneous third party dominated by middle class groups; it has no intention of crystallizing the disgust with and distrust of the two capitalist parties into anything more than some sort of an "independent" movement to back LaFollette for the presidency. In the elections for congressmen and senators and state offices it intends to back so-called progressive republicans and democrats. It does not intend to establish any sort of an organization other than the one it now has—a bi-partisan voting machine controlled by labor union bureaucrats and labor union lawyers.

It should be plain from the above facts that the reason the C. P. P. A. fights the June 17 convention is not because the Workers (Communist) Party of America will be represented there by five delegates and that the Federated Farmer-Labor party which includes Communists in its membership will also be represented by three or four delegates, but because it is against the organization of a class party of any kind.

It wants to continue the united front of business men, wealthy farmers, lawyers and small manufacturers which allows nothing but middle class views to dominate. It fears the rise of a rank and file organization such as will in all probability come out of the June 17 convention.

What will be the result of the campaign of sabotage carried on against the farmer-labor movement by the C. P. P. A.?

The result will be one that will please the Communists hugely—the frightening away from St. Paul of any middle-class elements who might have opposed with some effectiveness the formation of a class party. The C. P. P. A. will not succeed in keeping away from St. Paul those groups and organizations that really desire to organize on a class basis and the only consequence of its volunteer efforts will be to make of the June 17 convention exactly the kind of a gathering that the Communists desired in the first place—representatives of every union, co-operative society, workingclass party, etc., that is willing to sever all connection with the parties of American capitalism and help to build a mass movement of workers and farmers.

The C. P. P. A. is certainly welcome to everybody who does not want to take this step in the struggle that the masses are forced to wage for the preservation of elementary privileges and which will serve to consolidate their forces for an offensive against American capitalism.

Amalgamation.

In St. Louis the painters' union is engaged in a struggle with the bosses but gets little or no support from other building trade organizations and this experience is duplicated dozens of times in every industrial center.

The building trades crafts were more militant in their earlier history than they are now; they developed the sympathetic strike and the doctrine of "an injury to one is an injury to all" to a high point while the building industry was of a more competitive nature.

Of late years the officialdom of the building trades unions has sought to force a policy of arbitration and conciliation on the membership and this has resulted in almost complete demoralization; true, wages are still high and conditions fairly good but only because of a building boom and the consequent demand for skilled labor.

The building industry is peculiar; if a contractor can prevent a strike until the building is finished he can, without much fear of reprisal, tell the building trades to go to a much warmer climate and does so. Craft division, combined with the yielding to the safe entreaties of the employers' agents for "peace and harmony" has put the trade unions in a precarious position.

Faced with a like situation the building trades unions of England amalgamated and multiplied their power many times. In America the same remedy is indicated but it can only be accomplished by an organization such as the Trade Union Educational League, which recognizes that the mere logic of an idea is not enough to obtain general recognition but that ideas must be given organizational backing and unity of purpose on the part of the rank and file who want progress be opposed to the unity of an officialdom for whom everything is all right just as it is as long as they draw their very satisfactory salaries.

Educating Young America

A nation-wide campaign with the object of instilling the "American ideal" in the hearts of everyone has been launched here in Chicago by a number of persons who are worrying about the welfare of our great nation.

The type of persons who are doing all the worrying is interesting. The City Club, the Union League Club, the Woman's City Club, the Association of Commerce and the Kiwanis Club were all represented at the preliminary meeting.

One Rosenthal, a contractor who employs many workers, is chairman of the literature committee and the speakers bureau is headed by Professor George Vincent of the Rockefeller foundation.

Assistant City Superintendent of Schools Hogge was also present and promised that the burning message of the "American ideal" would be placed in the hands of every one of the 500,000 Chicago school children.

This will be of great help to these little Americans when we go to war for the House of Morgan or the Rockefellers or some other patriotic group and shows the exceptional educational facilities enjoyed by American children. We hope the leaflets issued will point out that the Russian children are deprived of the manifest advantages of having no capitalists to get slaughtered for.

Two Dirty Deuces

So the righteous gent known to fame as A. Mitchell Palmer was just a common crook and stood for the blackmail weapon which another more energetic crook—Harry M. Daugherty—held over his head. This much we gather from the testimony of the busy Gaston Means before the senate committee. Mr. Means is not too credible a witness but his detailed story of the conference between Palmer and Daugherty, from which the former emerged white and shaking, carries conviction; no denial has come from either of these gentlement who before the oily flood engulfed them were wont to vociferously warn their fellow-patriots to beware of the Communists who intended to confiscate all private property.

While the attention of the populace was distracted by the loud and frightful cries of these two reprobates, they were busily engaged in confiscating all the private property they could lay their hands on. Just how much the democrat Palmer shook down concerns like the Bosch Magneto Company for will probably never be known but the loot grabbed by the republican Daugherty is of more recent date and may be estimated if the voluble Means continues to talk.

Here we have an accurate measure of the calibre of these 100 per centers. Not only were they the tools of labor hating corporations, the agents who essayed to terrorize and smash the organizations of workers, part of the mechanism of the capitalist state, but they were and are criminals of a particularly loathsome type, men who deliberately created widespread misery, who tore families apart, jailed thousands of workingmen and women, sent many to their death at the hands of foreign tyrants and instituted a nation-wide spy system, not only to serve the foes of the workers but to fill their own pockets.

It is possible to have some respect for an individual who, tho cruel and reactionary, fights the workers because he wants his class to rule and believes that it alone is capable of ruling. But the Palmers and Daughertys are merely low types of mercenaries without convictions of any kind who will serve any interest willing to pay them well.

American government, however, is not in trouble today because it has had Palmers and Daughertys in high places. It is in trouble because of the weakening of its economic foundations and it is because of this that its mercenaries cannot be controlled and their acts hidden from the gaze of the working and farming masses.

Palmer and Daugherty are merely two dirty deuces in the marked deck with which American capitalism robs the workers.

Turning them face up will help a little.

Page the Security League.

Our 100 per cent American sensibilities are wounded badly by an article on immigration published by an Italian capitalist sheet, Corriere d'Italia, in which the sacred doctrine of Americanism is ascribed to the influence of a "group of Anglo-Saxons and intransigeant Americans mixed with Puritanic, theosophic, vegetarian, and anti-alcoholic elements."

Will not the American Security League take steps to deny, to a sheet carrying such studied insults, access to our shores?

Lessons of the London Tram Strike

By HARRY POLLITT

The end of the tram strike, like that of the dockers' strike, is another evidence of the sinister part now being played in relation to all industrial disputes by the Labor Government.

The mass of the workers have always imagined that the advent of a Labor Government meant that at last the workers had gained a powerful ally in all their industrial struggles. Instead, the opposite has been the case, and, rather than place the whole resources of governmental machinery on the side of the striking workers, every possible subterfuge and intrigue, and even blatant threatenings, have been resorted to by the middle-class politicians who dominate the Labor Government in order to intimidate the strikers to moderate their demand and accept compromises.

Wonderful Solidarity.

The magnificent solidarity displayed by the dockers a month ago has been excelled by the solidarity of the tramway men and the spontaneous sympathetic action taken with them by the busmen. In the long history of labor struggles no finer example of working class solidarity has been recorded. Let it be placed on record to the credit of the underground railway workers that they, too, would have responded to a similar call for sympathetic action on their part on the first day of the strike had this been demanded by their officials.

As it was, when the government and the capitalists saw that the underground workers were determined to line up with their fellow transport workers, and that this was no idle threat, but one that would be put into practice, increased concessions were immediately offered to the Transport and General Workers' Union.

Government Pressure

And had the underground workers been called out, let there be no misunderstanding, the full demands of the tramway men would have been met. But just as the Labor Government put pressure to bear on Mr. Bevin and his colleagues in the dockers' strike, even more drastic pressure was brought to bear during the tramway men's strike. This took the form of the Government's determination to declare a state of emergency under the Emergency Powers Act.

We understand that Mr. Macdonald, in the middle of the strike, asked the Labor Party to give him complete power to deal with the strike. This, the Liason Committee of the Labor Party refused to do. Yet there can be no doubt that the underground workers come out on strike this state of emergency would have been declared. There should be no misunderstanding as to what this meant. It would have brought about a similar situation as existed during the miners lock-out when the State was used to smash the miners, the right of free speech and agitation during the strike destroyed, and when over 70 members of the Communist Party were arrested for their activities during that lock-out.

Capitalists Sitting Pretty

Even if the workers still doubt that this would have been possible the capitalists had no illusions. They knew that they could rely upon the present Labor Government to act as ruthlessly as any capitalist government would have done under similar circumstances.

In this connection, the reasons for the strike should not be lost sight of.

We believe that the strike was deliberately encouraged by Lord Ashfield and the Traffic Combine interests he represents, in order that as a result of the impasse created, the Labor Government would be forced to intervene with the Court of Inquiry, who, obviously, would have to recommend the setting up of a London Board of Traffic Control.

This would have been a cloak, as it will be, for the future operations of the combine under the leadership of Lord Ashfield to get the complete monopoly of the whole of the traffic system of London, thus ensuring them a guaranteed rate of profit, eliminate all competition on the part of the pirate buses, prevent any attempt on the part of the municipalities to make the combine pay towards the upkeep of the roads in repair.

In these circumstances we urge the working class of this country to demand an end to this serving of capitalist interests by the Labor Government.

We are faced with a situation in which the whole of the organized workers are definitely in revolt against starvation conditions. The Capitalists are making desperate attempts to play off the unskilled men against the skilled men. the sheltered trades against those trades subject to foreign competition. It is surely no part of the Labor Government to be assisting in this business. Their policy is a simple one, and one that the workers will understand. That is to use the advantages of being a government on behalf of the class they are supposed to represent.

The miners' situation gives them one further opportunity of redeeming their otherwise despicable and reactionary record. If this is not taken and the Government refuses to introduce a minimum wage bill that will guarantee the miners a wage equal to their 1924 rate plus the increased cost of living, then we hope that the workers will sweep away these middle-class bourgeois politicians and replace them by men who understand what poverty and a strugle for existence means.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

THE FARM AND THE AMERICAN YOUTH.

By HARRY GANNES.

"Get away from the farms" is a popular expression among the American youth. They do not like the life of the farmers, and it is next to impossible to transform a young worker into a young farmer; while the reverse of the process seems to be a rapid evolution.

The long hours and the miserable pay on the American farm is proverbial. Bad as conditions always were for the youth on the farms, they are becoming worse.

For a long time in the United States there were a select group of farmers; those who owned their land, free of encumbrances, and who were able to enjoy some of the luxuries which went with a prosperous farm. But that number was small, and as some figures that I shall quote further on will show, is growing smaller and smaller.

For the past twenty years, the central theme of nearly all cheap and melodramatic boys' novels has been the saving of some farm, at the last moment, by the boy hero by redeeming the mortgage. Farm and mortgage are now becoming synonymous words.

Why is it that the American farmers who technically are the most advanced in the world should suffer such hardships and hold so insecure a social position?

The answer is the predatory nature of American capitalism, and the constant and increasing exploitation of every section of the farmers by both the small and large American capitalists.

The robbing of the American farmers by the railroads is now stale knowledge.

How the Youth Fare on the Farm.

There are 8,000,000 children and young people on the farms in the United States and nearly all of them do some form of farm work. As a whole, the American youth detest the farm and a great amount of persuasion is necessary to keep them on the land. The cities and industrial centers with their highly concentrated life have a strong appeal for them; while, on the other hand, the continually growing depression makes life miserable for them at home. Even tho the farmer might not be utterly bankrupt, as his condition grows worse, he hires fewer farm hands, relying more on his own children to do the work.

On the smaller farms, known as truck farms, whole families are hired to do the work, and the more children in these families, the better for the farmer employing the labor, as children are used very extensively on the truck farms in the United States.

In the harvest fields thousands of young laborers migrate from state to state following the ripening crop. Tho these harvesters are not very young, there is no doubt that the average age is about 25. These workers are not strictly farm workers; for when the crop is harvested most of them go either to the cities or farther west to the lumber camps.

Child Labor on the Farms.

There are in the United States over 2,500,000 children from 5 to 15 years of age; and 61 per cent of these children work on farms.

The conditions of the child farm laborers is indeed miserable. In the Southern cotton fields, the little children drag big heavy sacks about in the fields, picking cotton, under the blistering sun. Their work is very long, sometimes exceeding 10 hours. There are no legal regulations in the South. Thousands of colored children are also employed in this work.

In California, a so-called enlightened section of the United States, employs literally thousands of children, some five and six years old. Even in the highly industrialized states of Rhode Island, Michigan and New Jersey, as well as Maryland, special investigations by the United States Department of Labor (Children's Bureau) reveal horrible facts regarding the exploitation of children and youth in the farming territories.

The hours of all the young farm workers are extremely long. Housing conditions are rotten, and can be likened to the conditions described by Frederick Engels in his "Conditions of the Working Class in England." In Maryland and New Jersey, for instance, hundreds of these people sleep in one shack without any semblance of privacy. Children and older people sleep and perform all functions in the same chambers without any partitions.

Because there are no laws to protect these farm children, they receive the most meager schooling. The average number of grades finished by these children is very small, and the type of schools attended are indeed primitive because the wages of the teachers are poor.

Laws Neglect Children.

Most of the states have passed some form of child labor law, but it is significant to note that in no state do they pertain to the welfare of the farming youth. On the land, the children are left to the mercy of the exploiters and their parents, both of whom, in most instances look upon them as objects of work—as farming inplements.

And the number of child workers is growing.

Organization of Farming Youth.

Strange as it may sound, the American farming youth is pretty well organized, but not in its own interests. Reactionary farm bureaus, churches, and capitalist controlled agricultural universities expend great sums of money and abundant effort in organizing the farming youth ostensibly to keep them on the farm, since the American youth has shown such a strong tendency to leave the land.

These youth farm organizations have as their purpose the making of better farmers of the rural youth. At the same time, they are taught the most reactionary sort of trash. For example, the anti-labor president, Calvin Coolidge, was made honorary head of all the youth farm organizations comprising a membership of over 700,000. It may be safely said that the bulk of the American farming youth are the most reliable supporters of the reactionary capitalist elements, tho, at the same time, this spirit is gradually being undermined by the economic reverses which their parents are now facing.

President Coolidge recognized the importance of taking over the ideological leadership of the greater number of farming youth, when he said in accepting the honorary leaderships over the organized farming youth:

"Probably no activity is of more importance to the future standing, prosperity and social position of agriculture than the boy and girl farm clubs."

Difficult to Reach Farming Youth.

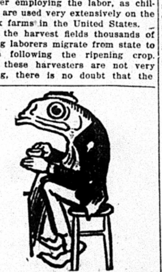
It is extremely difficult to reach the American farming youth with any revolutionary propaganda, as the more intelligent and more revolutionary of the youth do not stay on the farm. Those who are already organized are under the complete domination of capitalistically trained leaders or reactionary farmers.

The Workers Party of America is succeeding, in a small measure, in reaching the American farmers thru its Farmer-Labor Party agitation and because of the favorable state of the farmer's mind due to his embittered position.

The Young Workers League of America has within its ranks some 15 or 16 farming leagues, but these are composed nearly all of Finnish young people.

The problem is to go into contact with the farming youth, and experience has shown that merely sending an organizer into rural territory is not fruitful.

With the growth of the Young Workers League and the development of a mass Farmer-Labor Party, there is no doubt that some valuable means of reaching the American farming youth will be offered the American Communist Youth organization.



The Poor Fish says the senate is doing wrong to harry Andy Mellon because he is a very rich man and if he is annoyed he might take all his money and go away somewhere.

WHERE, O WHERE ARE THE CITIES OF REFUGE?
I WENT to a room,
IN A big hotel,
WHERE WISE men talked
AND I HEARD a story
THAT WOULD make gray
STONE MEN weep like babies.
FIVE MILLION farmers
IN THE United States
ARE ON the run
FOR CITIES of refuge.
EVERY FAMILY on the farm SEEMS TO BE mixed in,
FOR FARMING does not pay.
FIRST COST of crops,
BECAUSE OF no markets;
THE FARMERS of our land
OWE BILLS, notes and mortgages,
TWENTY BILLION dollars in total,
FOUR TIMES the money
COINED, MINTED and printed
BY THE United States Treasury.
THEY CANNOT pay their bills,
FOR BIG harvests are liabilities
AND NOT assets on the farms.
BUT WHERE are
THE CITIES of refuge
TO WHICH the farmers
ARE FLEEING for work and food?
FARM MEN are not
SKILLED WORKERS in any sense.
THE CITIES are crowded
WITH LABORERS on poor pay.
MEN AND WOMEN work long hours
IN SHOPS and factories
TO PAY the rent,
STAND IN with the butcher,

Old Parties Kill Labor Bill.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 17.— The floors are littered with death reform bills as the New York state legislature closes its 1924 session here. Some of the defeated bills provided for restricting injunctions in labor disputes, election reforms, 48-hour week for women and minors, movie censorship repeal, minimum wage commission, state ownership and development of water power resources.

MENTIONING THE MOVIES

By PROJECTOR.

The movement for better films is America is progressing— down—and out.

Trade papers speak quite cynically over the passing of The Little Theatre Films which was to further Art in the films even as its namesake in the field of the speaking stage.

Now, despite the presence on its Advisory Board of the brightest stars in the filmament, including Chaplin, Fairbanks, DeMille, Lubitsch, Hughes, Ingram, Pickford, Seastrom, Sherwood, Villard, etc., its manager is out looking for a job.

They made one picture. And could not release it. "It wouldn't pay," said the distributor. And that was the end of ART. But what can one expect now that America has turned Soviet and capitalism is no longer here to patronize art for art's sake?

Which recalls an aged and honorable joke in the film profession:

"There are two kinds of producers today: those who make bad pictures and write good checks, and those who make good pictures and give bum checks."

* * *

By mutual agreement between picture theatre owners and ministers of Portland, Ore., competition in bunking the "young idea" will be regulated. The theatre owners have promised to bar all children during Sunday School hours.

"HAPPINESS"—SAME OLD SOAP.

Laurette Taylor, thru her stage work in a succession of one-type Polyanna plays, has built up a public that will probably be satisfied with her screen appearance with Pat O'Malley in "Happiness." That it will bring any of its namesake to a class-conscious worker in the audience is highly doubtful, however.

As usual, she is a p. w. g., good-natured, but somewhat "dumb". She is an errand girl and supports her invalid mother on eight dollars a week. Those miraculous movies!

Delivers a dress to one who has "everything but happiness"—money, beauty, breeding, a husband safely planted in the grave-yard, and still she is unhappy. Enter the errand girl. While waiting for the grand dame, tries on the hats and things. Caught in the act. As a reward she gets a rich home, and an electrician husband.

Her recipe for happiness is "jest lookin' ahead." It should have been Pat O'Malley for there never was a more human, lovable young screen electrician. His hobby for inventions contributes most of the happiness that the audience gets out of this muchly padded film.

The errand girl is ambitious to own her own shop. She leaves her rich home to go back to work so that she won't lose any time. "By hard work and constant application"—you know the rest. She gets $25 a week as a fitter and soon after has her own shop, with her name in electric lights, and her husband, with his name in electric lights just around the corner.

The clinch having come in the middle of the picture, the end is a sermon. She is just breaking even in business, when along comes a gawky little Brooklynite to be taken under her wing and started on the road to her own shop, her name in electric lights, and Happiness.

The inventor of tooth-brushes and mouth-wash must have had such pictures in mind.

WASHINGTON STATESMEN GOT BOOZE

U. S. JUSTICE DEPARTMENT FORTIFIED POLITICIANS AT CAPITOL AGAINST DRY DAYS

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Speaker Gillett got a trunkful of liquor seized by the department of justice in 1920, Captain H. L. Scaife, former department of justice agent, charged today before the senate investigating committee.

Scaife's charge brought a sharp rebuke from Senator Wheeler, Montana, when the witness said his testimony was based on "reports" and an alleged newspaper statement by Gillett acknowledging having the liquor for a constituent.

"Who gave you the information?" asked Wheeler.

"Gaston B. Means, for one."

Wheeler Worries About Gillett.

"It is not fair to Speaker Gillett to inject second and third knowledge into this testimony," said Wheeler. "I think it should be stricken from the record."

"I can name witnesses who can prove it," said Scaife.

"We don't want 100 per cent gossip," continued Wheeler.

"You'll find it 100 per cent true," insisted Scaife.

Seven department of justice agents and former agents who could "prove" his story were then named by Scaife.

Everybody Got Some.

Scaife charged that the liquor obtained by Speaker Gillett was a part of liquor valued between $50,000 and $100,000 seized by the Department of Justice before the Volstead Act went into effect.

This liquor, he said, was distributed among officials of the department and private citizens. Scaife said the case was presented to a Grand Jury October, 1922, but no indictments were returned because of insufficient evidence.

"The statute of limitation has not run against that crime and the guilty can be punished if the case is properly presented to the Grand Jury," said Scaife.

Scaife said that he sent a full report of the case to former Attorney General Daugherty by registered mail, asking him why no indictments had been returned in the case.

Liquor Owner Is Absent.

Chairman Brookhart called for Alonzo Bunch of Washington, D. C., alleged to have owned part of the liquor, but Bunch did not respond.

Druggist on The Stand.

The Senate Daugherty Investigating Committee resumed open hearings today with Cecil H. Kearns, former Toledo druggist, paroled from Atlanta penitentiary, again on the stand.

Kerns, who was convicted in 1922 of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, charged that Federal Judge Killits of Ohio, was responsible for the revoking of his parole.

Soap King Testifies

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Colonel William Cooper Proctor, millionaire soap manufacturer, denied before the Senate Oil Committee today that any "oil deal" offer had been made to General Leonard Wood at the 1920 republican national convention.

Previous witnesses have said that Wood turned down an offer by the late Jake Hamon of votes and money in return for promise of the secretaryship of the interior if Wood was elected.

"I don't know anything about any such story," Proctor, who was campaign manager for Wood, declared.

Didn't Want Cabinet Job.

His voice choking with emotion, Nichols, intimate friend of the late Jake Hamon, told the committee the story of his "Buddy's death" and how Hamon wrote a secret note to President Harding while he lay on his death bed.

Jake told him Nichols said, that he (Hamon) could have had the secretaryship of interior in the Harding cabinet if he wanted it, but that he didn't want it.

One of Hamon's last acts was to write a secret note to President Harding while he lay dying. Nichols delivered the note to the president and then destroyed it. Nobody but Hamon and Mr. Harding, both dead, know its contents, but when the president read it, Nichols said, tears

MINNESOTA FARMER BLOWS UP AND DIES FROM POISON HOG BITE

RED WING, Minn., April 18.—Bacillus poisoning from a hog bite caused Ernamus Johnson, 59, to "blow up" and die, Dr. H. E. Johnson announced today.

Johnson, a farmer living near Diamond Bluff, Wis., literally blew up. His body, which has been swollen and discolored, since he entered the hospital last Wednesday, burst from the pressure of the poison gas.

Johnson swelled up far beyond normal despite all the physicians could do. Then his skin started to give way, breaking at many points. Death followed in a few moments.

HANG NEGROES ON ANNIVERSARY OF DEATH OF CHRIST

Friendless Negroes Die On Chicago Gallows.

Chicago celebrated Good Friday—the Crucifixion of Jesus—yesterday by hanging two young Negroes, Lucius Dolton and Henry Wilson, convicted for the slaying of Policeman Vincent Skiba, January 7.

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, gloating over the execution, declared that he wanted more hangings at shorter intervals.

Hangings are few in Chicago, in comparison to the number of slayings here. Rich men always escape the death penalty, white criminals seldom suffer it. The law is speedy in the application of the gallows only in the case of Negroes.

The case against Lucius Dolton and Henry Wilson was railroaded thru in frantic speed. To begin with, the men were not arrested in the act of killing Skiba. Seized later and third degreed an alleged "confession" was obtained by the police.

At the trial in open court thirty days later, the two stoutly maintained their innocence. Policemen have a bad reputation on the South Side where they have committed numerous crimes against the Negro population, but Dolton and Wilson contended that whoever killed this policeman, it was not them.

Negroes Denied Appeal.

Unsatisfactory evidence was offered y the State's Attorney's office. But e jury gave short shrift to the Nero defendants. The verdict of guilty as quickly reached. Appeal to highr courts was denied to black skin d small purse.

Negroes charge that Governor mall is hostile to their race. In the ase of Dolton and Wilson not only id he refuse to commute their senences, as he has commuted many thers, but he would not defer exeution over Good Friday.

Dies for Killing Detective.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 18.—"Diamond Joe" Sullivan, last of the southwest's old school outlaws, went to his death in the electric chair here today—Good Friday—without an outward sign of the "yellow streak" attributed to him by underworld associates.

The prisoner walked to the chair with an air of gay carelessness and ease that astounded spectators. He maintained his calm and unconcerned attitude as the adjustments were made and until the switch was turned on.

IF YOU HAVE TEARS SHED THEM NOW FOR IGNACE PADEREWSKI

"Ping Lung still lives, but I do not expect him to last out the day."

With these words Dr. W. P. Tague crushed the hopes of the adorers of the fat little Pekinese who once belonged to the son of the last emperor of China and is now the darling of Ignace Paderewski, late anti-Bolshevik premier of Poland.

Newspapermen and photographers, the eyes of the bourgeois world, are keeping the last death watch on the prize pup. It is a tragedy that obliterates the fact that thousands of migratory workers are half-starving on West Madison St, and that greedy landlords are putting mothers with families out into the street.

Pity for Ping! It looks like curtains for him, as he lies in his lacquered bed, with silken mattress and covers in a private compartment of the Paderewski Pullman car in the Illinois Central yards right off Lake Michigan. Ping is suffering from the same plutocratic disease which nearly carried off Fat Bill Taft some time ago—acute stomach ache from eating too much rich food.

Ping is 15 and fat. He has over-indulged in everything. Dr. W. P. Tague who has been giving him hours each day has nearly given up hope. M. Paderewski and the Madame are heart-broken. The measure of their anguish can be gauged by the fact that they are showing more distress over the illness of their dog than over the starvation of the workers of Poland.

COOLIDGE TRYING TO MAKE UP MIND ON JAP PROBLEM

Here Are Two Solutions, Take Your Choice.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 18.— President Coolidge today took under consideration what action he shall take on the new immigration bill excluding Japanese when the measure reaches the White House.

The President conferred in rapid succession with Secretary of State Hughes, known to oppose strongly the exclusion provision in the immigration measure; Senator Lodge, Republican leader of the Senate, who took the lead in supporting the exclusion provision.

One of the following two courses is likely:

1. That Mr. Coolidge will sign the measure and at the same time issue a statement explaining that no practical end would be served by a veto, in view of the temper of Congress; that no affront is meant to Japan and that the administration has made it plain that it strongly opposes the enactment of such legislation against Japan.

2. That the president will veto the measure under some arrangement, such as a plan whereby Ambassador Hanihara would issue a statement clearing up the supposed threat of "grave consequences" in his note, which would give Congress an opportunity to reconsider the passage of the exclusion bill in view of Hanihara's explanation.

Daily Worker Big Issue In Strike Court

All Pickets Are Grilled About Their Paper.

Garment strikers staunchly defended the DAILY WORKER in Judge Foell's court room yesterday, when the prosecutor, stung by the support given the pickets, repeatedly launched an attack on the DAILY WORKER.

"Are you a reader of the DAILY WORKER?" was the question asked of every defendant by Charles Hyde, instead of the usual query, "Did you go on the picket line?"

Raymond White, one of the strikers, was suspected of being a DAILY WORKER reporter and was quizzed at length as to whether or not he ever worked or reported news for the DAILY WORKER. Alive to the fact that the DAILY WORKER is a bulwark of strength to the strikers, the dress manufacturers have evidently instructed their lawyer to concentrate their attack on the paper.

All Read Daily Worker

Every striker admitted proudly that he reads the DAILY WORKER every day in order to get the strike news that the other papers in Chicago will not print.

"I am a striker," said Raymond White when asked his business. "I am not a reporter for the DAILY WORKER and have not reported news to them. I read it every day."

Judge Slams Foreigners

Judge Foell continued his polite but nevertheless severe attack on the right of strikers to picket.

He resorted to the hackneyed phrase which is the last resort of every tyranical fool of the master class when he questions Fabian Tipshus, who was born in Russia.

"I don't want foreigners to ride rough shod over the institutions of this country," said the labor-hating Judge. "This is a country of opportunity and if you don't like it in America you'd better go back to the country you came from".

Constitutional Rights Violated.

After a clash between Hyde and Peter Sissman, Marya Czajkowska was called to the stand, altho she is one of the defendants, and the lawyer for the defense objected to having her called on a technical ground. Sissman argued that no defendant can be forced to testify in her own case. He exclaimed that Miss Czajkowska could not speak English and would not understand. Sissman was overruled. She was finally called. She denied thru and interpreter that Patrick Moran had served her with an injunction writ.

Judge Foell tried to bring out that the strike picketing was a "conspiracy", by trying to show that the strikers were directed by the union. Strike-cards were produced on the demand of the Judge. But Raymond White explained that the cards had nothing to do with a strike benefit or with going on the picket line. They are

May Day a Holiday!

On the initiative of the Harlem section of Local Greater New York, the Central Executive Committee has taken action to make May Day a holiday for every member of the Party.

The Harlem Section recommended to the Central Executive Committee that no Party member should work on the First of May, if they could avoid it, and that those members who were compelled to work on that day should donate to the DAILY WORKER, their wages for May Day.

The Central Executive Committee concurs in this suggestion and urges all Party members to make May Day a holiday whether they work on that day or not. A donation of a day's wages if the member is obliged to work would certainly show a spirit of May Day and such donations will help to build the DAILY WORKER.

LEON TROTZKY UPHOLDS ZINOVIEV IN DEFIANCE OF JOHN BULL'S THREATS

MOSCOW, April 18.—Minister of War Leon Trotsky, speaking here, declared himself in accord with the statement made by G. Zinoviev, president of the Communist International, that Soviet Russia would refuse to meet the entirely fanciful claims made by the British government in behalf of its capitalist clients. Trotsky said that the Soviet government would carry out any engagements made by its representatives at London. It should not be understood, however, that Moscow would be intimidated by inspired propaganda campaigns in the British capitalist press.

The breaking off of negotiations with Roumania did not mean war, he continued, altho there was such a possibility. Germany was the battlefield of the revolution of the west, and the Bessarabian question would be solved in connection with Germany's fate.

The trade unions in Russia have decided to permit the workers to abstain from work for eight days, beginning April 26 and ending May 2. The period will cover the Easter and May 1 and 2 holidays.

N. Y. WORKERS HIT IMMIGRATION BILL AS SCAB SCHEME

Big Demonstration For Foreign Born.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, April 18.—Two thousand workers voiced their protest against the Johnson immigration Bill in an open air demonstration called by the International Council for the Protection of the Foreign Born. The International Council is an organization representing many labor unions and foreign language bodies. The Workers Party has been one of the prime factors in pointing out the dangers ahead should this bill become a law.

An Open Shop Scheme.

Great enthusiasm greeted the various speakers as they assailed the Johnson measure now pending in the U. S. Senate. Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkzeitung, pointed out that this bill is aimed primarily to bar all those workers escaping Fascisti terrorism and brutal white reaction in western Europe. The open shop advocates, in mortal fear of the militant elements that would thus strengthen unionism, are trying to weaken the workers by bringing in conservative labor from England and the northern countries. It was shown that Samuel Gompers, is once more lining up with the enemies of labor in his agitation for the Johnson Bill.

Foreign Born In Strike.

Charles Krumbein, District Organizer of the Workers Party, showed that the main reason for this attempt to bar Western European workers, is the role they have played in all the big strikes in recent years. The textile strike, miners and steel workers' strikes showed that the foreign born workers are always to be found in the front ranks against their masters. He further pointed out that this bill is merely the forerunner of numerous others, should this bill become a law.

Among the others who addressed the meeting were Jack Jampolsky, of the Trade Union Educational League, Jack Stachel of the Young Workers League spoke on the attitude of the young workers against this new assault against the foreign born. J. O. Bentall spoke on the attitude of the Western workers. Ben Litfshitz spoke in Yiddish.

A resolution to be sent to all Congressmen from New York protesting against this bill passed unanimously.

Told To Work With Scabs

SEATTLE, April 18.—Pacific coast bill posters are restive under the terms of a contract recently negotiated by international officers and the Foster-Kleiser company after a strike of several week's duration. Unionists received increases and are being forced to work with non-unionists in all Pacific coast cities except Los Angeles.

SENATE IMMIGRATION BILL BINDS THE FOREIGN BORN TO AMERICAN FARMS AS SERFS

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 18.—U. S. farm serfs will be created by the amendment to the immigration bill which the senate adopted this afternoon by a 46 to 39 vote.

The amendment, offered by Senator Simmons of North Carolina, democrat, provides that quotas as large 25 per cent might be provided from countries whose immigrants were skilled in farm cultivation. The farmer immigrant would be required to go to states or sections where farm help is needed.

Should he leave the soil he could be seized as an "undesirable" and deported on complaint of his employer. This is facilitated by the registration clause in the bill.

A Southern Cotton Scheme.

Senator Simmons' idea, it was learned, is to provide cheap and semi-compulsory labor on the tobacco and cotton fields which have lost their Negro tenants and day laborers thru the migration to the industrial north.

War With Japan Nearer.

Passage of the immigration bill puts America just that much nearer to war with Japan. Even if President Coolidge vetoes the bill the Japanese have learned that the legislative branch of the government is indifferent to ordinary diplomatic courtesies where they are concerned.

It was not merely exclusion that was at stake. Exclusion was carried out fairly completely under the "gentlemen's agreement" that existed before. It was the obvious anti-Asiatic bias with which the act went thru.

The reduction of the immigration quota for Europeans to 2 per cent of the nationals living in America at the time of the 1890 census and the registration restrictions put on these immigrants who are admitted will lessen the friendship of Europe and tend by that much toward war.

For Use Against Strikers.

Progressive labor is concerned most with the power which the immigration bill gives the anti-labor administration over foreign born workers coming in here. By putting the burden of proof on the immigrant it will be possible for the government to pick up strikers of apparent foreign birth and hold them in custody until they can prove their citizenship or their "desirability." It is pointed out that the free use of deportation warrants on steel and coal strikers in 1919 will be intensified under the new law.

Senate Democrats Call On Coolidge For Party Showdown

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Senate Democrats, after a series of conferences, today called for a showdown by President Coolidge on his views toward pending bonus proposals in the Senate.

Senator David I. Walsh, Massachusetts, in charge of the Democratic bonus bill, announced he would not press for the Democratic cash payment plan if assurances were received from Republicans that the President will not veto the Republican "insurance policy" plan.

World Court Up Again.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The Senate foreign relations committee today appointed a special sub-committee to hold hearings on the proposal of the late President Harding that the United States should participate in the world court.

COOLIDGE BACKERS AT THE STANDARD OIL "U" ARE VERY HARD LOSERS

Charges of political trickery were made today in connection with the presidential nomination of Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin by a mock Republican national convention at the University of Chicago last night.

"The entire LaFollette business was framed by a group of radicals in the political science department," C. D. McBride, a senior and president of the Coolidge club declared. "It was carefully plotted by LaFollette workers who wanted it said the University of Chicago favors the Wisconsin senator."

McBride refused to place the name of President Coolidge in nomination because he charged the convention was dominated by "radicals and reds." He declared he refused to nominate any real American on the platform, which called for recognition of Russia, total disarmament, continuance of the "gentlemen's agreement" with Japan, independence of the Philippines and other similar planks. McBride then bolted the convention, followed by several solid Coolidge delegations.

LaFollette was nominated on the first ballot, receiving 199 votes. President Coolidge was given 96; Senator Hiram Johnson 21; Senator Borah 19; Secretary of Commerce Hoover 11, and former Governor Lowden 3.

APPEAL IS MADE FOR PARDON OF PA. POLITICALS

Favorable Action Would Stop 21 Cases.

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, April 18.—On the ground that the prosecutions violated constitutional rights of free speech, the American Civil Liberties Union, New York, is appealing for immediate and unconditional pardons for four victims of the Pennsylvania state sedition act. The prisoners, Joseph Martinovitch and Israel Blankenstein, Communists, and Charles Spinack and Steve Zonoff, members of the Union of Russian Workers, were convicted in 1921 and 1922 for terms from three to five years.

In the cases of the first two mere membership in the Communist Party was held a violation of the law. The only testimony against the men was given by a government spy. Spinack and Zonoff were convicted for distributing radical leaflets.

Twenty-one Workers Party members are waiting trial at Pittsburgh, Farrell and Philadelphia under the same state sedition act, and it is expected that the ruling of the pardon board at Harrisburg in the four cases now before it will have an important effect upon the pending prosecutions.

The governors of Illinois and New York have long since pardoned the prisoners held under the sedition laws of those states. Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania opposed the sedition law in question before he became governor.

Francis Fisher Kane, former United States district attorney at Philadelphia, who recently returned from Russia, is conducting the appeal of the four cases before the Harrisburg pardon board.

SOAP KING TO THE DEFENSE OF LEONARD WOOD

Tries to Deny 1920 "Oil Deal."

streamed down his face and he shook his head in sorrow.

Wood's Worker Called.

T. A. Harmon, tax expert of Indianapolis, was then called to testify regarding an alleged conversation with James L. Himrod who was connected with Wood headquarters.

Harmon said he met Himrod at Sycamore, Ill., last February, who is an electrician connected with the Moose Lodge at Moose Heart, Ill.

"Himrod told me he was a confidential worker to General Wood," Harmon said. "He said somewhere between 9 and 10 p. m., the night before Mr. Harding was nominated, Penrose called Wood headquarters on the phone. Wood refused to talk, but authorized Himrod to take the message.

"Penrose asked Wood, he said, if he was elected, if he would give 'us' three cabinet members.

Didn't Know How Sick.

"General Glenn was in the room They were the only three. Glenn told Wood 'now is your chance, General—one word will make you president.' Himrod said Wood told him to tell Penrose that he had made no promises and was making none now. Himrod said he told Penrose that."

"Don't you know Senator Penrose was so sick at the time he is supposed to have talked with Himrod that he could not talk over the phone?" Spencer, Missouri, republican, asked.

"I knew he was sick, but I don't know how sick he was. I am merely telling you something that Mr. Himrod said to me. I don't undertake to stand for the veracity of the statement."

Harmon was then excused and William B. Nichols was called to the stand.

Nichols described how he assisted Hamon in the first campaign to defeat Jim McGraw, as republican national committeeman and then to carry the state for the republican national ticket.

"I never knew of Jake Hamon having any ambition except for the best interests of the republican party."

Proctor said he had seen Harry F. Sinclair in New York in April before the convention and that Sinclair was "nominally favorable" to the Wood candidacy.

"Did Sinclair contribute to the Wood campaign?" Senator Walsh asked.

"Not to my knowledge."

The witness said he had heard the decision to nominate Warren G. Harding was made at a conference the night before Mr. Harding was chosen as republican presidential candidate. He said he understood Will Hays, Harry Daugherty and Colonel George Harvey were at that conference.

"What do you know about the influences that brought about the nomination of Harding?" Walsh asked.

"I know nothing."

Proctor was then excused and L. W. Dixon, Western Union telegrapher of Chicago, was called. He "worked" a private wire from Senator Penrose's headquarters at the Chicago convention to the Penrose house in Philadelphia.

Most of the messages sent over the wire were in cipher and names of men mentioned in the convention were discussed, Dixon said.

John T. King, former national committee man of Connecticut, was manager of Penrose headquarters, he said.

"Who did Penrose favor for the nomination?" asked Walsh.

"I don't know."

"To what end was he working?"

"He was trying to eliminate General Wood, Senator Johnson and Governor Lowden."

Dixon said it was generally known at the conference which decided upon the nomination of Harding was held at the Congress Hotel Annex and broke up about 4 a. m.

Dixon was then excused and John B. Alcorn, telegrapher of Terre Haute, Ind., called.

Alcorn said he went to Penrose headquarters the night before Harding was nominated. He said he was sent there to listen to the Penrose private wire.

"A city editor of a newspaper told me Penrose would name the republican nominee that night and that Mr. Harding would be the nominee," Alcorn said. "A reporter took me to Penrose headquarters where I stayed until about 4 a. m. I could not hear all that went over the leased wire. I could only pick up words now and then and they didn't make sense.

Hears Harding's Name.

"I heard the word 'Harding' once or twice, but I couldn't get the connection in any way so I could be sure he was the man who was to be nominated.

"The reporter, named Brown, told me it had been decided at a conference that night that Harding was to be nominated on the third ballot next day."

The name of the newspaper was not mentioned by Alcorn. He said he got into the headquarters with an introduction from Judge Barasa of Chicago, obtained for him by the city editor of the newspaper.

Who Is This Foell?

Judge Charles M. Foell doesn't like the DAILY WORKER. We are proud of the fact. If Judge Foell should find anything to his liking in the columns of the DAILY WORKER we would become suspicious of our loyalty to the working class.

Judge Foell is a bosses' judge. Today he is the garment bosses' judge. Tomorrow he will be the judge of some other group of bosses. The fact that the Chicago Federation of Labor mistakenly endorsed him for re-election last fall, doesn't change the fact.

That Judge Foell is a bosses' judge has been clearly shown in his whole attitude toward the striking garment workers brought before him. Judge Foell, the so-called "friend of labor," has shown himself just as bitter toward the strikers as Judge Denis Sullivan, whom the officials of the Chicago Federation of Labor tried to defeat thru "punishing its enemies."

Judge Foell has taken just as drastic action as "Dennie" Sullivan, in his efforts to wipe out the picket line of the striking garment workers. But his super-efforts at intimidation have had no more effect than those of his co-partner in trying to keep the workers cowed in submission.

The DAILY WORKER intends to continue telling the truth about Judge Foell, and all the rest of the lickspittles of the big employers on the judicial benches of Chicago.

If Judge Foell cannot endure to have the truth told about himself, then so much the worse for him. The republican or democratic judge who parades as a "friend" of labor before election day, is always unmasked, and quickly, when he gets into action on the bench, after election, especially during a strike.

It has come to us that Judge Foell, in resting the criticism and truth-telling of the DAILY WORKER, might try to take it out of the strikers brought before him. It is stated that he might impose heavier fines or jail sentences upon the strike pickets struggling to protect their union, to carry its standards to victory in this fight, and thus secure some more of the scant necessities of life, of which they are now being deprived.

Judge Foell showed himself a turncoat when he betrayed his election promises made to secure the support of the officialdom of labor. On top of this he will show himself heavily tainted with cowardice if he tries to punish strikers for what he dislikes to read in the DAILY WORKER. The workers are learning the answer to the question, "Who Is Judge Foell?"

CHAMPION Y. W. L. SOCCER FOOTBALL TEAM BATTLE WITH DANES THIS SUNDAY.

The champion soccer football team of the Y. W. L. of Chicago will play the Danes for leadership in the Chicago Soccer Football League. The Young Workers League team, which was very successful last season, promises to do even better this spring. The team has been materially strengthened.

At this game, which will be played on Sunday, April 20, at 10:30 A. M., at Humboldt Park, the Y. W. L. team will make its appearance in a brand new uniform, a red jersey which bears the emblem of the Young Communist International, the hammer and sickle.

This game is expected to be a lively one, as many of the young workers will be on the lines cheering and singing for their players. All young workers should be out at Humboldt Park this Sunday morning and bring their song books along with them.

Contempt Fight on Mal.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Contempt proceedings against Mal Daugherty probably will be started today in the Senate.

A draft of the resolution citing the brother of the former attorney general for defying the authority of the Senate investigating committee will be considered in executive session. Prompt action is expected to follow its approval by the committee.

If the contempt resolution is adopted by the Senate, Daugherty will be haled before the bar of the Senate. His continual refusal would subject him to imprisonment until he consents to testify. A long legal battle will probably result before the reluctant witness is heard.

The committee has all but abandoned its effort to compel Howard Mannington, once resident of the "little green house on K street," to appear.

DAILY WORKER IS BIG ISSUE IN STRIKE COURT

All Pickets Are Grilled About Their Paper.

merely punched so as to keep track of the strikers, he said and to find out who is and who is not working.

Getting The Strike News

"Do you read the DAILY WORKER," asked Hyde of Fabian Tipshus.

"Yes" was the answer.

"Do you read it every day?"

"Yes, I read it every day to get the strike news," Tipshus answered.

Hyde again was aroused by the fact that the DAILY WORKER is exposing the farce on justice being enacted in Foell's court where workers striving for a decent wage are browbeaten like criminals.

Ask Funds For Strike

The Committee of Fifteen yesterday sent a letter to all unions in Chicago asking them to aid the strikers financially. Members of the Committee of 15 today said they doubted if a float to advertise the cause of the strikers. They declared the idea may be abandoned because of the expense.

A recent report says that Gompers, serenely oblivous of the gallant struggle of the garment strikers against the injunction, is in Harrisburg pulling some of his political strings on a matter more important to him, personally than a labor struggle.

Put Off Cases Till Tuesday

The thirteen cases before Judge Foell were postponed yesterday until the coming Tuesday. One of the lawyers was informed by Judge Foell that possibly on Tuesday the cases will be laid over until at least another week.

One interpretation of the postponments is that Judge Foell has a busy calendar and postponed the cases for lack of time.

Daily Worker Forces Judge's Hand

But many are pointing out that the exposure by the DAILY WORKER of the class antagonism in which Judge Foell continually sides with the employers, is making itself felt. These people point out that the publicity has injured Foell's prestige as a fair Judge..

The DAILY WORKER is showing up the Judge who was indorsed by so many labor leaders in the last election, and the cases are being postponed by Judge Foell, it is believed, in order to save his face.

They Read the Daily Worker.

The DAILY WORKER was constantly being brought up in yesterday's testimony by Charles Hyde, lawyer for the ladies' garment bosses.

"Do you read the DAILY WORKER?" asked Hyde of Morris Sher.

"Of course I read the DAILY WORKER," was the answer.

"Do you read it every day?"

"Yes, I read it every day."

"I read the DAILY WORKER to get the strike news," Morris Sher said to a DAILY WORKER reporter a little later. "None of the other Chicago papers tells the truth about the strike of the garment workers."

Judge Foell said in court yesterday: "The right to strike is as sacred as the right to work." If Judge Foell believes that then the least he could do would be to declare the injunction against picketing unconstitutional. As long as Judge Foell sentences strikers and keeps them off the picket line he is acting in the interests of the garment bosses and helping them break the strike.

But Judge Foell should not allow Attorney Hyde to browbeat the girl defendants, get up close to them and wave injunction writs and strike cards in their faces as he has been doing.

The present hearing in Room 807, in the County Building, is a perfect example of the use of the courts in the battle of organized labor against the employers, showing how the courts are used to break strikes in the interests of the employers.

That use of police, detectives and judges to enforce injunctions against picketing is a part of the employers' plan to crush labor. The American Federation of Labor and every organized union has recognized the use of the bench as an instrument in the hands of the employers.

No worker can respect a judge or vote for him on election day when he allows himself to be used as such a tool. This case is not an ordinary criminal case and the defendants are not criminals. The right to picket is as sacred as the right to strike, because one cannot be carried on without the other.

AMALGAMATED HALTS BOSSES' WAGE CUT PLAN

Agreement Continues Until 1925.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers has come successfully thru protracted negotiations with the men's clothing manufacturers of the Chicago district, it was learned yesterday from Samuel Levine, manager of the Chicago Joint Board.

Wages and working condtions will remain unchanged until the termination of the agreement in 1925. Employers finally agreed to give up their demands for wage reductions.

Union Rejected Wage Cut.

The agreement was made in 1922 to last until 1925. Under its terms either side had the option of opening negotiations for a change in terms at the end of each year. The employers this year took advantage of this and asked for a wage cut. However, the union refused to consider a reduction in wages and after prolonged discussion the employers yielded the point rather than face the stoppage of production that would have followed a wage cut.

25,000 Workers Affected.

Twenty-five thousand clothing workers are included in the Amalgamated's ranks in this district and there is general satisfaction that the union has maintained its position. The fact that the Amalgamated had enough surplus strength to contribute ..0,000 to its sister needle trades union, the International Ladies' Garment Workers, for the dressmakers' strike, is believd to have been a factor in convincing the bosses of the folly of starting trouble.

The Chicago market has been almost completely organized since the long and hard 1919 strike when injunctions and thousands of arrests fail to halt the victorious clothing workers. Hart, Schaffner & Marx and several other firms came in number of years before.

500 Strike Against 50 Cent Wage Cut At Pullman Plant

Five hundred riveters, reamers and other metal workers are on strike at the Pullman shops against a 50 cent cut.

The company is trying to get the men to deal with the shop committee, which is a company union of the so-called "industrial democracy" pattern, but the men refuse to recognize this scab organization.

A mass meeting will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at Samuel's hall, 150 East 107th street. Daily mass meetings have been held for the three days the strike has been going on.

There are altogether 15,000 workers in the Pullman plants and they are unorganized.

Signwriters Sign Three Shops.

NEW YORK.—Three of the 40 small shops against which Signwriters' Local 230, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, are striking have accepted the union's demands for a 20 per cent wage increase and a five-day week. The old contract, which expired March 31, gave the journeymen $11 for a five and a half day week. The large employers, constituting 85 per cent of the industry, accepted the new agreement without a strike.

The Troubles of California.

LOS ANGELES, April 18.— With two new outbreaks of the foot and mouth disease discovered within the past 24 hours, 1600 motorists reported stranded at Needles, because of the Arizona ban on automobiles, and with that state planning to call out the national guard to keep California tourists from crossing the river, the epidemic situation in southern California was admittedly serious today.

Jap Ambassador Sits Pretty.

TOKIO, April 18.—There is no present intention on the part of the Japanese government to recall M. Hanihara, Japanese ambassador to Washington, for his letter to Secretary of State Hughes on the American-Japanese exclusion measure, Premier Kiyoura announced.

YONKERS, N. Y., April 18.—John E. Andrus, "millionaire subway straphanger," has ordered a mausoleum built in "Kenisco" to cost between $350,000 and $500,000.

$57,000,000 NETTED THRU TEAPOT DEAL

Witness Says Stock Rose That Much.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 18.—How Harry Sinclair made his money out of the suckers on the stock market rather than out of the ground was brought on in the testimony of W. W. Tarbell, geologist, called before the Teapot Committee by Senator Spence, republican, of Missouri.

Tarbell said how the Teapot Dome lease did not result in much oil production, but it led to a tremendous boom of Sinclair's oil stock on the New York Exchange.

Beginning with a story of the "marvelous manipulation" of the stock of the Mammoth Oil Company, the concern which operates Teapot Dome, Tarbell went on to give figures.

Stock Advances $57,000,000.

The stock was put on the market at $40 and run up to $140, he claimed.

Sinclair's stock advanced $57,000,000 on the strength of rumors about the Teapot lease shortly after it was made, Tarbell added.

Walsh declared as a result of Tarbell's testimony he intended to summon E. C. Finney of the secretary of the interior office to give additional information concerning lease of naval reserve No. 2 in California.

Wood's Buyer Coming.

William Cooper Procter of Cincinnati, who contributed lavishly to the presidential campaign of General Leonard Wood in 1920, told Senator Walsh he will arrive in Washington tomorrow in answer to the oil committee's subpoena. Procter will be quizzed about the sale of the nomination at the Chicago Republican convention.

The late Jake Hamon, who handled the boodle bag at the convention, was brought into the hearings today by Phil H. Baer, United States marshal for the eastern district of Texas. Baer said he was a delegate to the Chicago convention and that Hamon tried to swing the delegation to Lowden. That was before the deal was fixed up that gave the nomination to Harding. At an earlier hearing John Smith of Paris, Texas, told the committee that Baer informed him that Hamon intended to make Baer rich if he got to be secretary of the interior.

Civil Liberties Union And Workers Party In Free Speech Test

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK.—Whether peaceful meetings held on private property may be prohibited by interference of police or municipal authorities is the issue in the test case which the American Civil Liberties Union here has brought before the Pennsylvania Superior Court in Pittsburgh. This action is being taken, acording to the union, "following a long series of arbitrary interferences with the right of peaceful assemblage and free speech by Mayor Lysle of McKeesport."

This particular appeal is brought before the court on behalf of Robert W. Dunn, associate director, American Civil Liberties Union and Patrick Toohey, member of the Workers Party. Dunn and Toohey were two of five speakers arrested in McKeesport last September for holding a free speech test meeting forbidden by Mayor Lysle. The meeting was held deliberately by the union and the Workers Party to test the workers' constitutional rights in Pennsylvania, and they say the case will be carried to the United States Spreme Court if the present appeal is lost.

No similar test case has ever been before the high courts of Pennsylvania. Other cases have affected only the right to meet in public places or streets, the court ruling that such places were completely under control of the authorities.

Canuck Lumber Barons Decide To Tighten Screws On Farmers

(By The Federated Press)

WINNIPEG, April 18.—A profiteering activity of the Canadian lumber interests is the statement of the president of the Western Retail Lumbermen's Association of Winnipeg, who urged that the prairie lumber men force the prairie farmers to change from grain growing to mixed farming. As long as the prairie farmer simply grows grain there is little chance of the lumber dealers' squeezing much out of his hide. President Skov of the Retail Lumbermen's Association declares that the lumbermen should not hesitate at using coercive methods if necessary to "make the farmer understand that his credit would be not good unless he engaged in mixed farming." Mixed farming like dairy farming and stock and poultry raising mean no more money for the farmers but it calls for erection of silos and barns and outbuildings and more fences and right there is where Skov and his consorts are numbered among those present.

BRITISH RULERS ARE RAILROADING 8 INDIAN RADICALS

Communists Put Issue Up To MacDonald.

BOMBAY, India, April 18.—"A trial is proceeding in India upon the outcome of which hangs for the time being, the right of political action and association for economic ends of the three hundred million members of the Indian working class," says a manifesto issued by the Communist Party of India to Ramsay McDonald and his fellow cabinet members in London.

A charge has been lodged in an Indian Court by the Chief of the Secret Service Department, on behalf of the Indian Government, against eight persons for alleged "conspiracy against the sovereignty of the King Emperor," on the grounds that political agitation has been made among the Indian workingclass for the organization of the Indian workingclass into a political party of their own.

"The most arbitrary allegations have meen made, without foundation of proof, and the trial is proceeding to its close without any chance being given to show its true purpose nor the real issues at stake.

Conspiracy Trial at Cawnpore.

"Gentlemen of the labor Government and Fellow-Workers of Great Britain, it is not we eight accused who are on trial in Cawnpore. It is the entire Indian workingclass and the idea of political agitation and organization of the workingclass which awaits the verdict of the august Court. The time-honored charge of "conspiracy" has been brought against eight individuals, in order to damn the growing workingclass movement in India for social, economic and political emancipation, as illegal.

"Such a struggle is proceeding in India, not only on political but on economic and social lines as well. The movement is all-embracing and is revolutionary in the truest sense of the word, for in its course, the entire outlook and condition of the people are destined to be changed. * * *

Labor Party's Responsibility.

"Were another party in power in England now, we could expect it to sit idly by, while the weapons of the bomb and the Star-chamber proceed unchecked in India. But you are a Government of the working class, pledged to support the interest and welfare of your class wherever these are jeopardized. As a Party, you have always proclaimed the international solidarity and brotherhood of the workers. As a Government, you are bound to protect the rights of the Indian workers to freedom of political association for economic ends.

"Under cover of a trial of a few individuals charged with 'conspiracy' for the crime of having preached the Indian workers and peasants into a political party of their own, a whole creed, an entire principle and the long history of the working class struggle for betterment is at stake, —the creed and principle and tradition upon which you yourselves, as a Party and as a Government, stand.

"The toiling masses of India will record the verdict or the British Labor Government upon this chapter in the history of their struggle for emancipation.

"On behalf of the Communist Party of India, (Signed) "Manabendra Nash Roy.

Irish Free State Finds The Divorce Problem Hot Spud

DUBLIN, April 18.—Since the treaty between the British government and the Irish Free State was signed, at the close of the year 1921, the imperial lackeys who function as a government in Dublin have had many problems on their hands, many of them quite knotty. They surmounted their difficulties, however, tho sometimes the margin of safety was narrow. It is generally agreed that a problem now faces them which carries more dynamite in its system more than even the republican wing of the Irish Republican Army in its palmiest days.

It is the problem of finding a convenient method for separating a couple once bound in the holy trammels of wedlock, without giving his holiness the Pope an apoplectic fit. The Catholic church has rung the changes on the evils of divorce until Catholic Ireland is almost as prejudiced against it as bootleggers are against straight-laced prohibition agents.

When Ireland was more nominally inside the British Empire, an Irishman finding the bonds of conjugality infelicitous could take his troubles to the British House of Lords, and behind the Pope's back, so to speak, regain the right of self-determination. But small nations are vigilant, particularly when they are Catholic nations, and the question of divorce is at stake. The Catholic church takes the position that those put together by God cannot be separated by man, tho this rule is sometimes violated when one man takes another man from his wife and sends him to death on the battlefield.

The world will watch Ireland on the divorce question.

American Agriculture Pioneers In Russia Hold Conference

CHARKOFF, Soviet Russia, April 18.—A conference of representatives of American agricultural communes of Russia was held here from the 6th to 8th of March. Comrade Smolianinoff, representing the Council of Labor and Defense, acquainted the delegates with the problems that confront the immigrants. It is expected of the immigrants that they will help to rebuild and develop the agriculture of Russia by using the knowledge and methods acquired by them in the United States. For a few years to come Russia is more interested in agricultural immigration, than in industrial. The communes of the immigrants should become educational centers where mechanical means of tilling the land will be demonstrated. The use of hired labor by the communes will be permitted only in cases of emergency and when all able bodied members of the commune will also participate in the work. The conference drafted an appeal to the Russian colony in the United States.

Massachusetts Party Branch Shows How To Boost Membership

To the DAILY WORKER: Here is a bit of good news. The month of March witnessed a phenomenal growth of our branch of the Workers Party, Revere Jewish. It was indeed a red letter month for us. Having only nine members on March 1, we closed the month with 23 full-fledged members and a couple of prospects. This proves that the material is present, and it is only up to us to get on the job.

How did we do it? We arranged a social gathering in the house of one of the comrades and invited all sympathizers to attend. After the meal (?) we started an impromptu forum on the subject, "Why Join the Workers Party?" with a net result of seven applications. Since we have added two members and they are still coming. We are fast turning our new recruits into readers of the DAILY WORKER.

It seems to me that the reason why we are able to enlist new members is because most of our comrades are active in their unions and in their fraternal organizations. This is the real secret of our success.—Charles Schwartz, Secretary, Revere, Mass.

Trachtenberg's Chicago Speech In Monday's Paper

Full reports on Alexander Trachtenberg's speech on "What I Saw in Russia and Germany" will be given in the next issue of the DAILY WORKER. Our early press time made it impossible to carry the story this morning.

Indications point to an audience that will fill the large auditorium at North Side Turner Hall, and we can confidently predict that the effect of the international demonstration will be to put additional life into the movement.

BIG RAILROADS RUIN SERVICE IN GREED FOR PROFIT

Lay Off Thousands Of Men.

By LELAND OLDS.

(Federated Press Industrial Editor.)

The extent to which private operation of the railroads tends to enthrone profits above the interests of shippers and employes is revealed in the reports of two leading carriers to the interstate commerce commission. During the first two months of 1924 the New York Central and the Pennsylvania have reduced the proportion of the shipper's dollar used to provide for adequate service and have laid off thousands of men in order to squeeze out a larger net income for stockholders. This resulted in a serious impairment of equipment.

Compared with the first two months of 1923 the Pennsylvania has increased the proportion of the shipper's dollar going to profits from 12.9 per cent to 17.1 per cent. This means a decrease of nearly 5 per cent in proportion of the shipper's dollar used to provide for safe and expeditious handling of shipments. The proportion of the dollar used to maintain cars, locomotives and roadbed dropped from 37.2 per cent to 35.1 per cent and the expenditure for maintenance of equipment decreased by $3,355,752.

All For Profit.

The New York Central increased the proportion of the shipper's dollar going to profits from 18.1 per cent to 21.2 per cent. The extra profit was made largely at the expense of equipment. The proportion of the dollar going to maintenance fell from 35.8 per cent to 33 per cent and the reduction in expenditure on the repair of cars and locomotives amounted to $3,370,646.

The Pennsylvania shows the most rapid deterioration of equipment as a result of this policy. Between December and February the proportion in unserviceable condition has increased as follows: Freight locomotives from 17.5 per cent to 21.1 per cent, passenger locomotives from 18.5 per cent to 19.7 per cent and freight cars from 5.9 per cent to 7.4 per cent.

During the same period the following changes in the proportion of New York Central equipment in bad order were reported: Freight locomotives from 22.5 per cent to 25.4 per cent, passenger locomotives from 21.9 per cent to 23.7 per cent and freight cars from 5.9 per cent to 4.7 per cent. When it is recalled that railroad executives proclaimed 15 per cent of locomotives and 4 per cent of cars as bad order ratios which should not be exceeded the recent reduction in expenditures involving the laying off of thousands of repair men appears without excuse.

Pennsylvania Profits Grow.

The results will win the praise of stockholders. Pennsylvania profits for the first two months of 1924 amounted to $11,311,071 as compared with only $8,413,381 for the same period in 1923. But last year's total profits reached $88,065,252, exceeded only once in the railroad's history and gave common stockholders a return of more than 10 per cent. The owners can hardly request a larger return this year.

New York Central profits for the first two months amounted to $8,222,246 as compared with $7,734,645 a year ago. But last year's profits when complete amounted to $45,339,427, giving common stockholders nearly 17 per cent on their money, so here again squeezing necessary expenditures is not justified.

There is, perhaps, another explanation of this effort to wring all the profits possible out of the early months of the year. Financiers back of the management may see a business slump ahead and want to pile up profits early in order to pay dividends as usual even tho traffic decreases. By laying off men and decreasing expenditure on equipment they increase the probability of such a slump. And they are well aware of this.

Austria Collapses

The league of nations appointed the Belgian financier Zimmerman as the dictator of Austria, a loan for that bankrupt nation was negotiated with the international bankers, the press of the finance-capitalists announced that Austria was "saved" and among the liberal fraternity there was general agreement that the league of nations was, after some annoying delays, beginning to get down to the business of bringing peace on earth and good-will to men.

Austria today is in a state of utter collapse after the usual capitalist remedies of war on the unions and other working class organizations have been applied. What seemed to be a temporary recovery of finance and industry has become disaster and the government, a tool of the banking fraternity, has squandered the treasury funds by attempting to protect the bankers and speculators when Austrian stocks and bonds hit the toboggan following wild speculation in French francs.

Conditions in Austria are rapidly approaching those that prevailed before the international loan was negotiated.

The depreciated currency has the effect of throwing thousands out of work and this in turn curtails the Austrian markets.

Production and trade cease because no one knows what the price of any commodity will be twenty-four hours in advance.

Capitalism cannot be revived permanently by artificial injections of money.

The disease from which capitalism is suffering may be checked temporarily in this or that nation but it becomes more acute thruout the capitalist world as a whole and the Austrian debacle is a splendid example of this.

It was necessary for the finance-capitalists to come to the rescue of France. A huge loan was made, the franc stabilized but Austria was ruined; the capitalists themselves could not resist the temptation to speculate in the franc. The finance-capitalists chose to save France from immediate bankruptcy—to take care of the greatest danger.

They are preparing now to "save" Germany as they saved Austria and the results will be no better for them for German production can be restored only at the expense of production in other capitalist nations.

Capitalism exists today in a state of chronic crisis. No sooner is a wound salved over in one spot than another lesion appears.

Y. W. L. Material—Poor But Plentiful.

The Englewood branch of the Young Workers League has had some interesting experiences in carrying out the Communist policy of going to the masses and undoubtedly the members have now a better idea of the magnitude of the task the Young Workers League has to carry out—winning the masses of young toilers in America to Communism.

In American industry where boys and girls in their "teens" are not so brutally treated that they feel after working hours the need for nothing but food and sleep, the vicious "welfare" systems sodden and benumb their brains until they register like phonograph records the stereotyped and conventional slogans of American capitalism.

In no country in the world is the rising generation of workers so uninterested in the welfare of their class; any culture other than the Bill Hart school is banned; their music is jazz, their literature is the comic section of the Sunday capitalist sheets, their ideal of the drama that in which the virtuous hero is rewarded by the hand of the daughter of the factory owner.

Yet these thoughtless youths are caught in the gigantic machine of American capitalism; all their lives they will be workers, and the fathers and mothers of workers, for the days of pioneer enterprise are past. They will have to choose some day between the working class of which they are part and the boss class to whom they are now loyal with an unthinking loyalty.

Unemployment, low wages, the speed-up system and the increasing discipline of the factory and workshop will awaken America's youth just as these conditions have produced a young rebel movement in other nations; this is the economic background of the student pacifist movement.

The Young Workers League has the task of guiding the young workers whose shoulders the capitalist yoke galls; it is truly the vanguard of the young workers and it has the field all to itself. Its work, the work it is doing, is to turn the exuberant energy of young workers like those in Englewood to the service of the working class movement.

It is work that requires patience, knowledge and courage.

The White House Outburst

The protest of Coolidge against the appointment of Francis J. Heney to conduct the investigation of Mellon's Bureau of Internal Revenue is part of the general, national capitalist conspiracy to stifle the damaging investigations that have broken the clay feet and heads of many employing class political idols.

Our exploiters have had an overdose of these investigations. The order has gone out from the "G. H. Q." of the powers that be who dominate all must discontinue immediately. Each group, in its own way, it is true, is falling in line. The republicans, democrats and insurgents are all preparing to toe the chalk line and run away from the investigations.

But immediate exigencies of a two-fold character compelled Coolidge to demand so openly and arrogantly that the lid be put on the governmental disclosures and that the Senate keep its hands off Mellon. The driving facts here are that an investigation of Mellon's Bureau of Internal Revenue would, as Coolidge well knows, reveal so inherent a sordidness in the capitalist ownership of government as to blast to smithereens the little confidence that Washington may still inspire in the breasts of the uninformed. For instance, the capitol has for some time been saturated with rumors about a million dollar whisky steal in which Mellon and the republican National Committee were the principal beneficiaries.

The nature of the investigator, Mr. Heney, as well the importance of the person to be investigated, has inspired "Silent Cal" to a fit of eloquence. Heney's past record appears to be one of fearlessness in conducting such investigations. The flood of words, in behalf of Coolidge, emanating from the dry-as-dust Beef Trust Senator Watson of Indiana reminds one of the telling blows struck by the Heney revelations in the investigation of the packing interests a few years ago.

More than that, the fact that the reactionary labor-hating Los Angeles Times denounces Heney is sufficient reason for the capitalist watchdog in the White House to get on his hind legs and bark and bite. Commenting adversely on the appointment of Heney, the editor of this open-shop organ significantly remarked in this fashion apropos of the counsellor's record in the old graft investigation of San Francisco: "No business was safe from indictment. . . . One dose of Heney was enough. His record shows him to be a violent, unfair, immoderate, unbalanced, insatiable seeker after power at any cost."

The New England banking interests and the Pacific Coast financial clique are closely allied today. Coolidge's outburst is dictated solely by his fear that too much might be told in an investigation of Mellon's financial maneuvers in the cabinet, at this time, by Mr. Heney who has more than one score to settle with the big capitalist coterie that has been hot on his trail for some time.

Apologetic Leadership

We remarked the other day, following the defeat of the MacDonald government on the Wheatley housing bill, that the leadership of the British Labor Party had shown but little disposition to put up a real fight for the measure.

An editorial in a recent issue of the London Daily Herald, official organ of the Labor Party, confirms our statement.

Speaking of the manner in which the fight for the housing bill was conducted, the Daily Herald says:

> That the government handled the matter skillfully we do not claim. . . . But as Mr. Clynes proceeded his courage appeared, like that of Bob Acres, to ooze away out of the tips of his fingers. The bold front was dropped. A conciliatory, almost an apologetic tone was taken. The whole business was disposed of by Labor's opponents, who had it pretty much their own way. It was a pity that Mr. MacDonald had to attend the National Gallery dinner and could not be present. . . . It would be wise of Mr. MacDonald to husband his energies and to keep his hand firmly upon the helm. If it had been there on Wednesday evening, we cannot believe that there would have been so lame and impotent a conclusion to this effort to save the brave soldiers of industry and their wives and little ones from further undeserved hardship and pain.

The Daily Herald adopts a careful tone but it is not hard to see that even the official organ of the Labor Party considers it a disgrace to the labor movement that the Wheatley bill—the first real working class measure to be sponsored by the Labor Party—was defeated without a struggle.

It may be necessary for Premier MacDonald to attend a National Gallery dinner when a measure of such vital importance to the working class is up for consideration but it is indicative of the attitude of the right wing leadership of the party that this should be so.

Furthermore, we differ with the Daily Herald as to the value that the presence of Ramsay MacDonald would have had and it is our humble Communist opinion that he deliberately ducked a fight and that the Daily Herald is of the same opinion.

The Case of Jacob Dolla

By WALLACE T. METCALFE.

Behind the walls in a Pennsylvania prison, Jacob Dolla, militant member of the working class, waits daily for word that will return him to his wife and family, giving him the freedom that he was so unjustly deprived of. No word of complaint has come from the lips of this man. Even tho his cup of sorrow has been overflowing at times and the prison walls have engulfed him deeper and deeper into the clutches of their shadows, the world has yet to hear one word of complaint from Jake Dolla. His voice, coming forth from prison, has always urged the workers forward to their tasks, to remain steadfast and loyal to their ideals.

Compared with the splendid loyalty of this man, who as a member of the Lebanon lodge of the A. A. of I. S. and T. W. of N. A., was jailed after one of the most contemptible frame-ups ever recorded in the history of the American labor movement, we have the cringing knave-like conduct of M. F. Tighe, president of Dolla's union, the union he fought for, in who's cause he was cast into prison. In submitting his report to the forty-ninth annual convention of the A. A., recently held in Pittsburgh, Pa., Tighe had the brazen effrontery to assert that everything possible has been done for Dolla and that nothing more could be done. Tighe charged the "agitators," or those active in Dolla's behalf, with being "falsifiers" when they stated that he was doing nothing for Dolla. Gradually does the national president of the A. A. record how he made a special trip to Lebanon to silence the "agitators." In fact, three-fourths of Tighe's report to the convention on the case of Jacob Dolla was taken up condemning the militants active in behalf of their brother worker.

The following letter was received by Tighe from the Department of Justice, Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 2, 1923:

"M. F. Tighe, 510 Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

"Dear Mr. Tighe—The Pardon Board is still holding under advisement the case of Jacob Dolla, mentioned in your letter of Oct. 29.

"I believe the case will be disposed of at our November meeting. In the meantime we are looking with great care into the evidence and argument presented.

"The trouble is that no matter what the circumstances surrounding the trial may indicate, there was sworn evidence by some of his fellow union members that he worked with and guided them in the making of bombs and the planning of the bombing of a residence.

"On top of that Jacob Dolla entered a plea of guilty. If men in the position of Dolla desire to have their later claim of innocence considered with full credence, they certainly ought not to plead guilty as he did. You can see plainly that a plea of guilty places the Pardon Board in an embarrassing position, even tho the applicant for pardon states definitely that he did not tell the truth in entering such a plea.

"Yours very sincerely,
"GEORGE W. WOODRUF,
"Attorney General."

Nineteen witnesses have sworn to affidavits repudiating their former testimony. A gassed and wounded ex-serviceman was beaten and compelled to testify against Dolla. Scores of others and facts beyond the question of a doubt have been presented proving the innocence of Dolla, yet M. F. Tighe reported nothing done since Nov. 2, 1923. Five months ago, and five dreary ones for Jacob Dolla.

The case of Jacob Dolla was first called to the attention of the world by William Z. Foster and others who have battled consistently for his release, and it was thru the efforts of the T. U. E. L. that the Dolla case was brought to the attention of the forty-eighth annual convention of the A. A., held in Warren, 1923. Every step of the way M. F. Tighe has had to be driven and he has never failed to yelp back at the militants in the A. A. who compelled him to officially do something for the release of Dolla.

If Jacob Dolla is to be released it will be only thru the efforts of the working class, and not the officialdom such as Tighe represents, every labor organization in the United States and the North American continent, every fraternal organization must SPEAK for the release of Jacob Dolla. He is needed on the outside to head the organization in whose cause he was imprisoned. His family needs him. The working class can ill afford to remain idly by and stand with folded arms while its alleged leaders act as pallbearers for the burial alive of its militants.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

ENGLEWOOD Y. W. L. FINDS YOUTH RESPONSIVE BUT NOT RECEPTIVE; TO MAKE NEW EFFORT SUNDAY

By P. K.

The must discussed and highly important problem of going "to the masses" presents no difficulties whatever to the Englewood Branch of the Chicago Young Workers League—as per the experiences of the last three meetings. In fact, the branch finds itself in the peculiar position of not having to go to the masses at all, but rather of keeping its bearings and feet against the enthusiastic inrush of these masses. Between 25 and 40 strong, and all young workers, they have conceived such a strong attachment to the Englewood Branch that as the last meeting demonstrated, nothing short of violent ejection can induce them to forego the pleasure of attendance and participation. All of which sounds fine and would be if there was no details and explanations to be added. It all happened like this.

Two months ago, the Englewood Branch, dissatisfied with the work it was doing instituted a new policy. Since it is a small branch and has very, very few industrial workers among its ranks and could not reach the masses thru the shop nuclei, decided upon other methods of reaching the masses. This new policy had two phases; first, to attract young workers, and second, to educate and organize them. Seems simple, doesn't it?

And it is—some of it.

As above intimated, the first part of this policy has more than succeeded. With free dancing as the attraction, the young workers have fairly flocked in. At the first meeting they came in goodly numbers. They came for a good time and for a while they had it. That was the first part of the new policy. Then came the second part. The dancing was stopped, the dancers were seated and a high-powered propagandist took the floor.

A New Specimen.

He was a well-known comrade and he talked well. The young workers listened, some of them curiously, more of them resentfully and more of them indifferently. It was the first time they heard about the class struggle or the Communists. It was the first time they had heard themselves addressed as comrades and young workers. It was the first time they had heard about modern society and the truth was so strange and new as to seem unbelievable. A plea for members proved fruitless as expected. One talk does not make a young worker class conscious. The members were not discouraged. A few copies of the Young Worker were sold.

Came the next meeting and to it flocked all the young workers who had attended previously and also newcomers. Again there was dancing. And again it was stopped and an hour was devoted to a propoganda talk. This time the results were in evidence. The young workers were stimulated into argument. But not into joining. The meeting disintegrated into small groups, holding animated discussions.

Pleasant Time Was Had.

And then came the last meeting. The young workers came again in full force augmented by many friends. This time they came prepared to try and obstruct the meeting. The inevitable speaker was again introduced to them and talked to them in spite of their many interruptions and the missiles that found their way thru windows and doors. They are still unconvinced but we feel confident that they will return again. They are terribly miseducated, incredibly incredulous of the truth. Can they be organized? The Englewood Branch proposes to find out. Our next meeting is Thursday, April 24th, at 6359 S. Ashland Ave. Wm. F. Dunne, editor DAILY WORKER, will speak on "Anti-Militarism" to these young workers typical of America's youth.

All young workers, boys and girls, should attend this meeting.

A Note On The New Russian Poetry

By LOUIS LOZOWICH.

Had your international affiliation or personal curiosity led you to the new Jerusalem of Communist Russia in the busy lecture season of 1918, a certain poster would have, doubtless, attracted your attention, for it announced to red Moscovy a discourse of the famous Bolshevik poet, Vassily Kamensky. The title of the discourse was "The Career of a S— of a B—" (Karyera Sukinavo Syna), and lest you misunderstood the drift and purport thereof a parenthetic subtitle came obligingly to your aid: "The Story of the Russian Intelligentzia" (Istoria Russkoy Intelligentzii).

The piquant incident is significant. Communist Russia is recasting old standards in new moulds, and, in the process, Intelligentzia comes in for a heavy drubbing. Well deserved, it must be admitted. The Intelligentzia dreamt the Revolution, gloried in it, deified it. From Hertzen to Plechanov, from Lavrov to Merezshkovsky the Revolution had been foreseen and foretold with prophetic exactness—its whole course can be narrated in extracts from their works. The Revolution came, and behold the Intelligentzia scatter precipitously to all corners of the globe squealing pitifully its disaffection. Well may the poet take it severely and mockingly to task:

You trembled apprehensively
Like children in some happy expectation.
• • • • • • •
You welcomed the ruin and tragedy
And horror of a new deluge.
• • • • • • •
And it came.

We hear reverberating thunders,
Eternal foundations crash into the abyss.
• • • • • • •
Why then do you not plunge into the storm of events,
Intoxicated by the strangely terrible hurricane?
Why do you still look sadly to the past
As to some land of promise?

Is it not because the past has now taken place of the future? Is it not because:

The dream was welcome only from afar
And originality pleased you
Only in books of poetic inspiration?
(Valery Bryussov, "Invective.")

Apparently, for revolutionary ardor has evaporated at the first approach of rough reality, and past prejudices still hold the Intelligentzia in the grip.

And who is this? Long haired
And speaking in a whisper:
"Traitors!
Russia is lost!"
Must be a writer. . . .
(Alexander Blok, "Twelve.")

And sticking out
From amidst the canon roar
Is seen the round-shouldered back
Of a bespectacled, sickly Intellectual.
A shaggy head
Is mutterng
Indignant words
About the importance
Of Constantinople
And the Straits.
(Andrey Bely, "Christ Is Risen.")

The world is shattered to its foundation, but the Intelligentzia still cherishes its old illusions. Perish the Revolution that the old prejudices might survive. This is how the renegades are regarded by those members of the Intelligentzia who stuck to the guns. But a further distinction must be drawn between the old and the young.

Bryussov, Bely, Blok, Ivanov, Sologub, men already in the fifties and the sixties, came to the Revolution with a baggage difficult to discard. Extreme modernists of some twenty years ago, they grew to maturity at a time when environment was so oppressive and life so banal that they might have exclaimed with the poet:

Un couchant des Cosmognies!
Ah! Que la Vie est quotidienne!
(J. Laforgue, "Complaint sur certains ennuis.")

Disgusted with the stifling circumambient atmosphere, they retired within their ego whence they exuded, as it were, a protective covering, a subjective poetry that sought respite in ancient Greece, in the far Orient, in the infinity of the Cosmos.

Too skeptic to accept official religion, they built up an ideologic logomachy of "God-seekers" (Bogoiskately) and "God-creators" (Bogostroitely). Masters of ancient and modern languages and literatures, thoroly versed in old and contemporary philosophy, esthetic theoreticians of a high order, prose writers of great power—it was in poetry that they reached their full stature. Never before had Russian poetry ascended such heights or sounded such depths; never before had the Russian language exhibited such subtlety, richness, expressiveness. They brought Russian poetry to a state of excellence that will compare favorably with the poetry of any nation.

The Revolution shook them from their torpor, but was powerless to transform them completely. True, they turned from dream to reality, they forgot their individual selves to blend with the mass, but they were not sufficiently assertive. It is with their pre-revolutionary achievement that their fame rests.

But if these men, entrenched behind their deep rooted habits and convictions, behave with reticence and speak with reserve, the younger poets fling caution to the wind and bring their intemperate excesses into the market place. Shershenevitch, Mariyengoff, Kamensky, Polyetayev, Yesenin, Guerasimov, Mayakovsky throw a challenge to the whole world, exult in terror, blood, dynamite, blaspheme Christ and God, denounce Pushkin and Raphael, threaten destruction to the old order, call to universal revolution, celebrate the reign of labor. In a great outburst of revolutionary patriotism they glorify the Communist fatherland. The German Expressionist poet has well expressed their attitude:

Tag der Freiheit heiliges Russland!
. . . . . Oh, Tag der Wonne

Nie hat Europa schoneren Tag, nie
unsere Jugend herrlicheres Ziel!
(Carl Ooten, "Fur Martinet.")

They sing paens to the new art and the new life. Art and life are for them indissolubly one.

Prikaz for the Army of Art.

The brigades of old men always trudge on slowly
The same straggling step.
To the barricades, comrades!
To the barricades of souls and hearts!
• • • • • •
Enough of jog-trotting;
A leap into the future!
• • • • • •
Forward singing and whistling!
• • • • • •
Enough of pennyworth truth;
Sweep clean every old notion from your heart.
The streets are our brushes,
The public squares our palettes.
• • • • • •
Into the streets, Futurists,
Drum players and poets!
(Vladimir Mayakovsky.)

Dekret About Fence Literature, Decoration of Streets, Balconies With Music, Carnivals of Art.

Come on, fellows—
Poets, artists, musicians—
Roll up your sleeves.
Yesterday the Tolstoys and Kants had taught you;
Today it is your own head that works.
Let us take all vacant fences,
Roofs, facades, sidewalks;
Let us decorate them to the glory of Freedom
Like universal cathedrals.

Then follows an injunction for poets to paste their verse on posters all over the city, for painters to decorate it, for musicians to play and sing with and for the nation.

There are six working days in the week,
And I boldly propose
To stage carnivals and processions
Every day of rest,
In praise of the spirit of Revolution
In the world.
(Vassily Kamensky.)

Technically little change has taken place in Russian poetry during the Revolution. All schools of Europe are represented. The Soviet government, master—nominally, at any rate—of the printing industry, has shown itself extremely indulgent (often too indulgent, one is tempted to say) with the poetic effusions of all schools and tendencies. Studios have been opened for recitation, theoretic analysis and esthetic discussion of poetry, anthologies have been issued, magazines have been published. When the shortage of paper is too great "oral almanachs" do duty for printed ones. Poetic production has increased to proportions never before attained in Russia.

At one end—on the right—are the Proletarian poets, who seek simplicity, and the Symbolists, who seek subtlety; in the middle are the Imaginists (Imaginistry), who seek rich imagery, and the Futurists, who seek the hidden contact of dissociated ideas; at the other end—on the left—are those who, like the Suprematists, seek the "zero point of art," and the Nothingists (Nitchevoki, "Art must be destroyed!"), who seem to have found it. Before the Revolution Krutchenych thought this admirable:

Dir boor shtchill
oobyestchoor skoom
vy so boo

And now Malyevitch thinks this superb:

Oole Ele Lel Lee One Kon See An Onon Koree Ree Koazambe Moena
Lezh
Sabno Oratr Tulozh Koaleebee Blestore
Teebo Orene Alazh.

These quotations are as cryptic in the Russian original as in the literal English transcription. The theory of the extreme poetic Left absolves the poet from the use of comprehensible language. The great Russian poet Tyuetchev said:

A thought once expressed
Becomes a lie.

The poets of the extreme Left are evidently determined to utter no lie, for they express no thought. Poetry is to be sung in a language newly created by each poet, a language empty of logical content but full of emotion to all those whose souls are carry inteligibility, but communicate emotion to al those whose souls are attuned to receive it, and whose mood and temper are congenial with the poet's own mood and temper. Whether these chosen spirits be ten or a million is of no consequence.

In the background of the rich poetic activity there is an abundance of speculation in the social theory of the new art (Lunatcharsky, Bogdanov, Fritche, Tchukovsky, Shklowsy). Russian society—and all other—is passing from the Hell of Capitalism thru the Purgatory of Proletarian Dictatorship to the Paradise of Communism. To each different stage corresponds a different form of art (poetry, we know, is a prostitute—poesia e una pttana—which is not the least of her merits). Present Russian art is still wavering between capitalist reality and Communist visions. It would be therefore premature to draw a valedictory of Communist poetry before it found full expression. Daring experiments are tried and incompatible poetic elements often collide and burst into explosion. A school whose phylogenetic evolution, so to speak, took some five decades elsewhere is now ontogenetically recapitulated in five months. It is before all else a period of preparation, fermentation, incubation. It may be that some attempts are halting and some experiments crude; it may be that poetic circles are cluttered. But if the great energy liberated by the tremendous upheaval has not yet crystallized into definite shape, high enthusiasm sustains every effort, and, according to the Communists, when revolution is in full swing he who whines is an imbecile.

And perhaps they are right!

We Are The Mob

By OSCAR KANEHL

We are the mob. Thank God.
To suit?
We have no more to loose
Than our chains.

We are the mob. Thank God.
To be moderate?
Tell it those,
Whose measure doesn't overrun.

We are the mob. Thank God.
Considerateness?
Recommend it those
Who are lounging on cushions.

We are the mob. Thank God.
Patience?
Desire it from those
Who are eating from filled dishes.

We are the mob. Thank God.
Ever to toil only?
We have nothing in our body
Nothing upon the body.

We are the mob. Thank God.
Desire nothing more from us.
Recommend us nothing.
Tell us nothing.

We are the mob. Thank God.
Why keep it secret?
We are the mob. Thank God.
We will show it to you.

Where Do You Stand On June 17th?

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

This question should be addressed to every leader of labor in the country and to everyone who claims to represent the interests of the exploited farmers. Now is the time for each organization of workers and poor farmers to take a definite stand on the convention of June 17th in the Twin Cities, which is to cement and consolidate the farmer-labor forces of the country for an independent political struggle against the domination of capital and its servants in the government. Now more than ever is the time for positive commitments on this momentous issue in the life of the oppressed masses of America. Where do you stand?

It is no longer the old abstract proposition of independent political action versus nonpartisan politics of the kind practiced by Gompers and the C. P. P. A. Nor is it a mere matter of preference, taste or desire. No, it is a perfectly concrete, definite and practical problem that is now confronting the workers and exploited farmers. It is the problem of June 17th or July 4th. Which do you choose?

And remember: there isn't must time left for making up one's mind. In another few weeks the workers and poor farmers of America will have to take action. They will have to decide in which of the two gatherings—June 17 in the Twin Cities or July 4 in Cleveland—they will participate. Hence, the immediate necessity of placing this question on the agenda of all organizations of workers and poor farmers.

A Third Party or a Labor Party.

Of course, a class farmer-labor party, this is what the workers and exploited farmers need. A party of their own. A political instrument for their own battles. A means to further their own interests as against the interests of the exploiting and ruling classes.

Who will undertake to challenge or disprove this contention? Only those who don't give a damn for the interests and well-being of the workers and exploited farmers; only those who are consciously or unconsciously working for the promotion of the interests of capital, big and small. In short, only those who represent interests other than the interests of the workers and exploited farmers will deny the imperative necessity of a class farmer-labor party.

This pressing need of a class farmer-labor party is not of recent origin. It has been with us for many and many years, practically since this republic of ours was established. But never, never as yet in the history of the country were conditions so ripe and favorable for the realization of such a party. And, furthermore, never was there so much at stake for the life interests of the oppressed masses depending upon the immediate and successful formation of a mass farmer-labor party. Who will deny this?

The C. P. P. A. and July 4.

Much of what has been said before will no doubt be accepted as true by quite a number of leaders of labor and exploited farmers. Which is progress, indeed. For there was a time, and not very long ago, when the nonpartisan bunk of Sam Gompers, and the newer edition of the same thing by the C. P. P. A., were practically dominating the American labor movement.

Happily this is no longer the case. Social and political events have the great virtue of compelling action, if not always understanding and sympathy. And so it came about that even Gompers was compelled to congratulate Magnus Johnson from Minnesota on his election to the Senate, in spite of the fact that the election of Magnus Johnson was the result of a third party movement, which is clearly at variance with the political "philosophy" of this same Gompers.

This, of course, is not the most significant symptom of the times. With Gompers it means very little after all. Regardless of what he may feel compelled to say at one time or another, he is positively hopeless from the point of view of progressive developments in the American labor movement.

But there is another case which is of much more significance. It is, namely, the result of the last conference of the C. P. P. A. in St. Louis. The leaders of the 16 standard railroad unions, who mostly compose and completely dominate the Conference for Progressive Political Action, came to St. Louis to endorse William G. McAdoo as the presidential nominee of the Democratic party. This decision was to be the crowning act of a year or more of nonpartisan "progressive" political action, whatever that may mean.

But the gods of politics (and the developments of the class struggle) willed differently. It was not to be McAdoo, not in St. Lous. The presidents of the railroad unions could not—don't you see, they couldn't—endorse McAdoo after it has been publicly proven that he had been on the pay roll of Doheny, one of the biggest oil magnates in the country.

Did the presidents of the railroad unions, which is the C. P. P. A., suffer a change of heart because of these developments? Not at all. Neither a change of heart, nor a change of mind. The same old thing. Which is best proven by the fact that most of the presidents of the railroad unions, who did not dare to endorse McAdoo in St. Louis, gave him their endorsement in Chicago only a few days subsequent to the St. Louis gathering.

While in St. Louis, however, they merely delivered and listened to speeches, applauded vigorously all the fine sentiments of Morris Hillquit, and decided to hold another conference on July 4, in Cleveland.

Speaking again of the virtue of events and developments to compel action, here is a case. The C. P. P. A. has been clearly and expressedly a non-partisan proposition in the sense of supporting "good" men on the tickets of the two old parties. It was going to complete this policy by endorsing McAdoo on the ticket of the Democratic party. The interference of events prevented this from happening. What is to come next?

To answer this question is to define the present nature and political tendencies of the C. P. P. A. and of its conference of July 4 in Cleveland. The answer is: that at and after the conference in St. Louis the C. P. P. A. has taken a definite turn in the direction of a third party. Which means, in other words, that the C. P. P. A., at its conference in Cleveland on July 4, may under certain conditions throw in its lot with a third party—bourgeois liberal party.

This eventuality is by no means absolutely certain. It must be borne in mind that many of the leaders of the C. P. P. A. are so completely and intimately bound up with the old capitalist parties that nothing can divorce them from these parties. Many of the leaders of the railroad unions will stick to the old parties to the very end.

And again we must not lose sight of the fact that the strategy of Senator LaFollette and his group will have a determining effect upon the whole third party movement as far as the coming elections are concerned. Which means—what? That the C. P. P. A. and its conference of July 4 are totally at the mercy of the plans, policies and tactics of the LaFollette group.

From Words to Action.

The only thing that can, therefore, be said with any degree of certainty about the C. P. P. A. and its conference of July 4 is this: that it is moving in the direction of a third party; that it finds itself in the wake and not in the lead of this movement; and that, in spite of the fact that it is made up mostly of labor unions, it is completely dominated by petty bourgeois liberal ideology.

A Movement of Leaders.

The C. P. P. A. is a movement of leaders and not of the rank and file. This, too, determines its nature. And here we are not arguing against leaders in general, but against a certain kind of relationship between labor leaders and the rank and file of their organizations. We want the rank and file of labor and of the exploited farmers to consciously mould and create their own movement. We want them to put the stamp of their sufferings, needs and desires upon the policies and actions of their organizations. We are conscious of the fact that the rank and file in the shops, factories, mines, railroads and on the farms are much more alive to the needs of the working masses than are the well-paid and comfortable officials of the labor and farmer organizations.

The C. P. P. A. does not reflect the state of mind of the rank and file, nor does it respond to their desires. The leaders of the C. P. P. A. are afraid of the rank and file. They don't want them. Proof? Why, take the make-up of all the national conferences of the C. P. P. A., the basis of representation. And what do we find?

Everybody is welcome to these conferences: presidents, vice-presidents and other high officials of labor unions, professional politicians of all kinds and sorts; in a word, everybody but the direct representatives of the rank and file—delegates elected by local unions and local organizations of exploited farmers. These are not wanted. It will be well to remember that the leaders of the C. P. P. A. have adopted such a basis of representation to their July 4 conference which excludes from participation all delegates from local unions.

In view of all this, what is to be expected of the July 4 conference in Cleveland? At most a continuation of the non-partisan bunk of Sam Gompers. At best a hip-hip-hooray explosion in favor of a petty bourgeois third party candidate for president. If the former happens, the Socialist party and a few more delegates may split away from the conference. If, on the other hand, the latter takes place, some of the die-hard reactionaries may split away. But whatever happens, no farmer-labor party can result of the conference of July 4.

June 17 the Only Instrument.

To bring about a consolidation of the farmer-labor forces, we must turn to the convention of June 17 in the Twin Cities.

In the first place this convention is being called by the politically organized elements of the workers and exploited farmers—by the Farmer-Labor Party movement of the United States. It is predominantly a class movement for a class party. In the second place this is a rank and file movement which is going to produce a rank and file convention. If at any time anywhere in the United States there was a gathering capable of producing a united and strong political movement of workers and exploited farmers, such a gathering will take place in the Twin Cities on June 17. In addition to international unions, state and city central labor bodies, national and local organizations of exploited farmers, all existing farmer-labor parties, other working class political parties, national and local fraternal organizations of labor and co-operatives—in addition to all these, every local union will be called upon to send delegates to the June 17 convention.

Now is the time to pass over from words to action. In saying this we are particularly mindful of those labor leaders and labor organizations which are theoretically in favor of a class party of workers and exploited farmers, and do make the distinction between a third party and a labor party. We might refer, by way of example, to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, whose official organ, the "Advance," carried in its issue of March 27 an editorial in favor of a labor party. The editorial is significantly entitled "Labor Party Not a Third Party," and concludes by saying that:

> "To cope with those evils (in our industrial system) the workers must have their own labor party. No other party could or would do it."

Correct. Only a farmer-labor party and not a third petty bourgeois party can or will effectively tackle the problems of the oppressed masses and lead successfully their struggles.

This is true. But what does it mean concretely? Under the present conditions and on the eve of two conventions, June 17 and July 4?

If it means anything at all, it means this: that every labor organization must participate in the convention of June 17 and not in the conference of July 4. This the official organ of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers failed to say, whereas without this conclusion no amount of professions and expressions in favor of a labor party will have any practical meaning.

The left wing of the American labor movement has at present a serious duty to perform. It must awaken the rank and file workers and exploited farmers to the significance of the June 17 convention. It must make it clear even to the backward masses that the call of the hour is the class farmer-labor party. This party may, under certain conditons, co-operate with or even support the candidates of a third party. But the primary condition for this as for everything else is first and foremost the consolidation of the farmer-labor forces into an independent and distinct party of their own.

Hence, the convention of June 17.

AT THE DOORS - -

By BORIS PILNIAK

AT THE DOORS is a picture—or rather a series of pictures, of Russian life. The author gets his results by the cumulative effect on the mind of the reader of sketches in rough outline of characters and their surroundings. There is no plot in "At the Doors" in the conventional sense of the word. There is no hero and no heroine, no action of characters grouped around a central figure culminating in a breath-taking climax but there is strength and beauty of touch giving the reader an extreme consciousness of the reality of the life with which the author deals.

AT THE DOORS is more like a play than a story. It consists of five pictures each complete in itself but at the same time all part of what might be called the color scheme of the writer. The colors are mostly gray and black—there is very little red—yet it is a revolutionary novel, a beautiful sample of the new culture that is coming into being in revolutionary Russia.

(A word of introduction. This story forms a connecting link in the chain of stories about the Splendid Face of the Revolution. And it is a story that tells about the snow of yesteryear melted under the fence.)

So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things know that it is near, even at the doors. St. Matthew, 24, 33.

I.

Some years ago the merchant's wife Olga Nicolayevna Jmukhina had a pumping station built at the foot of Siberna Mountain. The station was nick-named after its owner, Olga Nicolayevna. No water was being pumped any more, but the whistle still blew regularly at 8 o'clock in the morning, and at 2 and 4 in the afternoon. Whenever the morning whistle blew at the foot of the mountain, Ivan Petrovitch Bekesh, who lived at the other end of the city, would wake up, and, filled with an inexpressible sadness in his half-drowsy state, would begin to weave dreams about the beauty of human life and the splendor of human spring. Ivan Petrovitch had once passed two days on the Volga, and the whistle of Olga Nicolayevna seemed to him exactly like that of "Caucasus Mercury". Who indeed, does not know the sweet melancholy of the Volga in spring and the longing its cool, red mornings inspire to embrace the whole world? Ivan Petrovitch would get up, drink his classical carrot-tea, and go to work at the Finance Section. The life of Ivan Petrovitch was dull.

Olga Nicolayevna stood at the foot of the mountain, and on the mountain itself, beyond the ramparts, near the Kremlin Gates, was the building formerly known as the Social, now as the Communist Club. At the 2 o'clock whistle, Doctor Andrey Andreyevitch Veralsky dropped in for lunch. In the old days, the bartender would call his boy before the doctor's arrival and say, "Hey kid, make it fresh." And the boy would use his tongue to refreshen the caviar sandwiches which he handed the doctor together with a glass of vodka. Now, the doctor was served an empty glass which he would fill from a special vial, always kept in his vest pocket. But as ever before, when lunch was over, the doctor would shout thru the window and across the street: "Ilya, fetch the carriage," and drive forth to his patients.

Christmas.

Owing to the holiday, the whistle of Olga Nicolayevna did not blow at 4. The real Olga Nicolayevna, Mrs. Jmukhina, had died from terror two years previously when her furs and smoked geese were requisitioned. Hand-written posters hung on the walls of the club. And the bartender knew that the orchestra of the Cavalry Division would play on Christmas night at the ball of the Voyenkom* to celebrate his wife's birthday, and that on New Year's eve (old style) the Voyenspetz  of the Division would arrange an out of town picnic. On Christmas Eve everybody went to the Church of St. John the Baptist to meet the new Church warden, the Commander of the Division, comrade Tanatar. Comrade Tanatar, a handsome Caucasian, dressed in a leather jacket and boots, was selling candles and passing around the plate.

The entire population was busy killing poultry, exchanging shirts for butter, baking pies with beetroot instead of sugar. A week before the holidays, all drug stores in the city were cleaned empty.

Frost and Storm.

In the deadstill brick house of Doctor Veralsky, on the Sibirna Mountain, only two rooms were fit for habitation. All the others were extremely cold and frost-covered. On the first day and night Olga, the doctor's intense blue, and the moon seemed lost in it. Morning came yellow and daughter, sat watching the weather outside. The frost was playing with its cold diamonds; the sky was an wax-like. The sun was yellow like wax, yellow like the face of a corpse. The barometer fell to 32. Ilya said the birds were falling frozen to the ground. In the evening some one called up to say that a snow-storm was coming from the Ural. It soon came sweeping along, dancing, howling, groaning, shrieking above the fields and the city, around the Sibirna Mountain, and in the empty parlor. The only place in the house where one could support the weather was the corner near the stove. Olga Veralskaya saw now the revolution as a snow-storm and the people in it as mere snow-flakes. It seemed to Olga that the snow-storm had killed her. Dressed in a fur coat and top boots, she sat huddled near the stove, tired of thinking, tired of reading.

Nevertheless, with the storm raging outside, she sat reading the diary of Ivan Petrovitch Bekesh.

Five image-lamps burned before Olga Veralskaya. The couch stood facing the stove and was all cluttered with fur-coats. The tiles of the stove shone dimly. And behind the wall the wind was blowing in the empty rooms.

July 11, 1913.

At the ball of Olga Nicolayevna Jmukhina.

Having cleaned our faces of the make-up, we went there together with Volynskaya. We found the party in full swing. The old and middle-aged occupied two rooms; our own company chose one far from indiscreet eyes. Samuel Tanatar sat beside me and Volynskaya opposite me. No sooner had I drunk the first glass of vodka than Volynskaya came proferring advice: "Don't drink too much." She had promised to spend the evening with me and allow me to accompany her home if I did not get drunk. Before an hour was over everything was topsy-turvy. Some one shouted: "Wine!" Some one burst out singing. A roar went up. Plates began flying. . . . . . My organism refused to drink any more. I began to feel tipsy. In order not to become completely drunk, I said to Volynskaya: "Well, who is going to see you home, Tanatar or I? She was just then sitting beside him, and they were preparing to go home together. "I do not really know" she said and added: "But you are already tipsy, Vania." "Alright," I answered and went into the next room where I found Doctor Veralsky, the father of my beloved Olga. As soon as he saw me, he made me sit down and silently treated me to a glass of some strong drink. I drank it to spite Volynskaya, and at once became dead drunk. My friend took me into the garden, gave me some soda water to drink, and went away. I sat there for a while, crying over my sorry state and thinking of Olga Veralskaya, the only woman I truly loved. Why, for Heaven's sake, did I ever drink so much and spoil my whole evening — and spoil everything? I did not remain alone for long. Volynskaya came, sat down beside me, put her arms around me and began preaching morality: "One must not drink so much." In full possession of my wits I answered: "I am not to blame, it is all Samuel's fault. I heard you arranging to go home together. And now I am far too drunk to do what we intended." She pressed close to me and embraced me. I was kissing her hands repeatedly: "Forgive me, forgive me," and begged her not to leave me, adding: "I know that this is the last time I see you." At these words I tried to break away from her and Tanatar (the latter had been present, all this time). She sought to hold me back, but I escaped. Tanatar caught me and made me sit down beside her again. She took me into her arms and said: "Vania, if you only love me, you won't commit suicide," and clinging passionately to me she pressed her lips to mine and remained motionless. Oh, how much pity there was in this kiss, how much despair, frenzy, passion, how much unselfish love! Minutes passed, each an eternity and each rich in memories (of Olga Veralskaya). Yes . . . . . that kiss gave me the illusion of happiness; mere illusion, it is true, but still of happiness. When Volynskaya left (she went to dance) I noticed Tanatar and drove him from me, shouting: "Rascal, scamp, you shattered my happiness!" I even began to cry. "I won't have anything to do with you." Tanatar washed my head and gave me some soda water to drink. I felt sick. The boys tried to put me to bed, but no, by Heck! I would not have anybody except Volynskaya. She helped me to reach the bed (I could not walk alone) and was on the point of leaving when I detained her and sang:

"Please don't go away, please stay with me,
I feel so happy, so light-hearted."

There she stood before me. I saw her splendid sensual body, her thick golden hair (the chignon), her snow-white teeth framed with red voluptuous lips—and felt an electric current shoot thru me. . . . . . Yes, happiness was so near, so near (Tanatar got it) . . . . . Oh happiness!

July 12, 1913.

Woke up at one in the afternoon and the first man I saw, right in front of me, was Vassia Federoff. He slept in a curious position; his head was on the pillow and his entire body on the dirty floor. We looked into the mirror and—Good Lord, what a sight! My clothes were all crumpled, spewed over in various parts, and covered with feathers from top to bottom. Having performed the morning ritual, we went into the garden. We met Tanatar coming from the other end, where he had probably been sleeping. He looked a terrible sight. On the front, his clothes bore everywhere traces of vomiting; on the back they were thickly covered with dirt, as if he had been dragged by his feet over the ground. After Tanatar, we met the girls coming from the pavilion where they had been sleeping. Soon everybody was present and Heavens, we did laugh! The lunatic Federoff, was the first to speak. Hardly able to stand on his feet, he had sneaked into the pavilion just as the girls were turning in after the ball... He bade them all good night, then seizing somebody's dress, jacket, and hat, he put them on and took to dancing. A young chap, scarcely known to anyone, had spent the entire evening with the hostess Olga Nicolayevna Jmukhina in a carriage outside, where they had supper and wine, spiced abundantly with frequent kissing and smutty talk. Then the girls told their version of the story. They had scarcely undressed when Sammy Tanatar broke in dead drunk announcing his intention of sleeping with them. The girls, of course, all got frightened and hid under the blankets. All their exhortations and prayers for him to leave the pavilion were of no avail. Then, disregarding all rules of decency, the girls jumped out of bed and threw him out of the pavilion by main force. Immediately after Tanatar's departure came the lunatic Fedoroff, but everybody only laughed at him because he was nice and behaved more decently than Tanatar.

Happiness. Happiness and laughter.

A half forgotten nursery tale is revived in some corner of her mind. If you plunge a sharp knife into the funnel of whirling snow you will kill the grand-daughter of the snow-storm—the snow-flake. A drop of her cold white blood will fall on the ground and this blood will bring happiness—happiness. If one could only believe this tale, go out into the snow-storm—waylay the snow-flake dancing carelessly its round dance—and attain happiness—

But what if one believes in nothing?

Happiness. Happiness.

And Olga Veralskaya knew: she was that snow-flake; she had been killed. The storm was blowing, sweeping onward, howling, raging. The fur coats were lying on the couch. The five images were burning, the tile was shining dimly. Doctor Veralsky was heard snoring. The diary had fallen in her lap; tears were falling in her lap. Tears for him. Her head had fallen in her hands.

But what if one believes in nothing? What if they had killed her like a snow-flake? No, not they—he had killed her. The story of Olga Veralskaya's life was simple: high school, college, the Red Front, where one could neither understand nor condemn, then he . . . . A dark military hut, the smell of horses, a dim lantern on the wall, a horse's head, black eyebrows, black eyes—red lips—pain, pain, horror, horror, horror, disgust. That was all.

The diary had falled in her lap; tears were falling in her lap. The image lamps were burning. Her eyes were lanterns in an autumn rain. Anxiety. Pain.

Doctor Andrey Andreyevitch Veralsky, dressed in fur coat and felt boots, came out of his room yawning, and got near the stove.

"Olenka, I've brought some mutton. Shall we treat ourselves to some mutton roast or use it for soup? Tell Ilya about it."

"Father, what did Olga Nicolayevna Jmukhina die from?"

"She died from a shock. Got frightened when her house was searched. They found her dead under her bed. Why do you ask that?"

"What was she like?"

"What sort of a person you mean? Well, rather depraved but kindhearted. Won't you tell, then, Ilya about the meat?"

Doctor Andrey Andreyevitch yawned sweetly.

The Economic Condition of the Landless Farmers in the U. S.

By LOUIS ZOOBOCK.

Agrarian unrest is now spreading all over the country. The mortgages upon the farmers have more than doubled in a period of ten years; the number of those owning farms has greatly decreased while the number of tenant farmers has considerably risen. The farmers are on the brink of ruin.

Financial capital is conquering agriculture. The monopolists and exploiters of this country, who control the machinery of the government, the presidency and the congress are responsible for the distress of the farmers; they have brought to a condition where the income of the agricultural laborer is transferred to the pockets other than his own. A very careful statistician has estimated that out of every dollar of farm products sold to the consumer the farmers gets only 38 cents; that 62 cents of his dollar goes to the other agencies that handle the farm product before it gets to the consumer. It is generally estimated that the cost of distribution of the varied farm products to the consumer range from 50 to 65 per cent. These estimates only partly tell the story of the farmers' distress.

What is more important, is the growing speculation in land. Thruout the country land is held for speculative purposes. Financiers, bankers, etc., have contributed to the speculative spirit—purchasing land with idle funds, deriving whatever income it yielded in the hands of tenants, and awaiting the natural increase in value. The effect of this speculative activity has been to raise the value of land far above the capitalization of its rent at the current rate of interest; many farmers were ruined and passed into the class of landless farmers.

The same group of financiers have brought about a process of forced deflation which has overtaken the country in the last few years. "During the autumn of 1920, while crops were being harvested and when the farmer was looking forward to a winter of fair prosperity, the process of deflation began. Loans were called and renewals were refused." Freight rates had, in the meantime, been raised so high that in many places the farmers' products were allowed to rot on the farms because the freight rates were equal, if not exceeding, the price received for the products; if we add to this the increase in taxes of 126 per cent in the last 8 years, taxes which absorb one-third of the farm income, we get a complete picture of the farmers' distress.

Depopulation of Farms and Tenancy.

The distress of the agricultural population has led to two results: (2) many farmers left the country and moved to towns, thereby increasing the reserve army of unemployed, (1) it increased the number of tenant farmers.

Hard times on the farm are causing a rapid shift of population. In 1922 no less than 2 million people gave up the effort to get a living out of the soil and moved to towns and cities. To offset this about 900,000 left town for the country, a loss of 1,120,000 of the farm population. This exodus was accompanied by the ruin of the best farmers: in many cases they have been compelled to forfeit large sums of money as part payment on farms and finally have the mortgage take it all. The mortgageers then kept the farms idle for speculative purposes. Thus, in Michigan 18,230 farms were idle in 1922, and 11,531 in 1921. Of the 276,000 men on farms three years ago, 46,000 have since left; in Ohio, 60,000 farmers left the farms for the city up till June, 1922. In Minnesota, in 1923, 14,690 farmers were bankrupt and 4,959 have been forced to abandon their farms and the country.

But the most alarming fact in American agriculture is the rapid growth of tenancy accompanied by the development of huge estates owned by corporations and operated by salaried managers upon a purely industrial system. It is the economic condition of the tenant class that we are mostly interested in.

The growth of tenancy in the United States may be illustrated by some figures. On the basis of number of farms, tenancy increased 44.5 per cent in the United States between 1880 and 1910. The percentage of farms operated by tenants was 25.6 in 1880, 28.4 in 1890, 35.3 in 1900, 37 in 1910, and in 1920 out of every 100 farms in the United States, 38 were operated by tenants. The whole number of farms operated by tenants in 1900 was 2,024.964 as compared with 2,454.804.

The per cent of farms operated by tenants increased in all but two Southern States—Florida and Alabama; it increased in all states west of the Mississippi, except Nevada, Oklahoma and Missouri. Oklahoma tho a new state, has half of its farms operated by tenants. As a rule, tenancy is highest in the Southern and Western states, where in the last 10 years it increased most rapidly. Tenants now operate over one-fourth of the farms in half of our states, over 40 per cent of farms in 15 states, and over one-half the farms in eight states. In brief, 4 out of every 10 of the farms in the United States are operated by landless farmers.

General Living Conditions.

The tenant farmers are divided into five classes:

(1) Share tenants, who furnish their own equipment and animals and pay a certain share of the product, as one-half, one-third or one-fourth, to the landlord for the use of the farm.

(2) "Croppers"—share tenants, who furnish their work animals. This class prevails in the South.

(3) Another class of share tenants "who pay a share of the products for part of the land rented by them and cash for other part."

(4) "Cash tenants"—who usually pay cash rental.

(5) "Stanting Renter"—those who pay a stated amount of farm products for the use of the farms.

No nation-wide investigation of the living conditions of tenant farmers has ever been made, but from the scattered studies made by different scholars we may deduce that the economic condition of the tenants is extremely bad and that in many places he is far from being free. As a rule, the tenant is badly housed, ill-nourished, uneducated and hopeless. Year after year, he continues to eke out a bare living: in his despair he moves from place to place in the hope that something will turn up. Without the labor of the entire family, he is helpless. As a result, his wife is prematurely broken down and his children remain uneducated and "without the hope of any condition better than that of their parents."

A great number of the tenants are hopelessly in debt and are charged exorbitant rates of interest. "Over 95 per cent of the tenants borrow from some source and about 75 per cent borrow regularly from year to year."

Leases and Rents.

The leases, concluded between the tenant and his landlord, are in many cases in the form of oral contracts. They run for one year and make no provision for compensation to the tenant for improvements which may be made upon the property. Furthermore, the tenants are in many cases the victims of oppression on the part of the landlords. This oppression "takes the form of dictation of character and amount of crops, evictions without due notice and discrimination because of personal and political convictions." This is especially true in the South and on the estates run by managers.

In the South, where "cropper" tenancy prevails, the landlord has such complete control over the renter and the term of the lease is so short that the negro as well as the white farm laborers are reduced to a system of peonage. There are at present 225,000 croppers in the Southern states. The difference between a "renter" and a "cropper" lies in the fact that whereas, the first "runs himself" the latter is run by his landlord. He possesses no property and has no permanent habitation. He is constantly on the move from place to place, cultivating one farm after another on "halves." He supplies nothing except his labor and that of his wife and children. For years and years he was producing cotton "on a pauper level at a pauper daily wage." The "cropper" is the man "whom God forgot."

The condition of the renter is not any better. In Texas and Oklahoma the conditions are unusually severe. In the former state, the one-crop and the chattel mortgage system works great hardships on the renter. "One crop and a chattel mortgage on it, and on the property used in producing it, hold thousands of tenants in economic bondage." In Oklahoma, tenancy is about as intensive as in any part of the Union. The leases are usually drawn in favor of the landlords; rents are high and evictions are a frequent occurrence.

"Framing-Up" Tenants.

The laws have been changed so that justices of the peace, before whom eviction cases are tried, are elected by "electric-light cities" in which the landlords live. The landlords control the elections of the justices and the cases are decided in favor of the landlords. The juries before whom many of the tenant cases are brought are selected from the non-renting class, renters being quite effectually excluded.

Again practically all renters are burdened with chattel mortgages assumed to carry them thru the season. "In the case of many renters who are close to bankruptcy, the landlords, bankers, etc., force or weedle them into auction sales, the goods being frequently bought in to the great disadvantage of the renter."

Some large estates, such as the Scully farms in Illinois, Kansas and Nebraska impose rack-renting conditions on the tenants. Wm. Scully paid about 75 cents an acre for farm land when land was cheap in Illinois. He rented it to tenant-farmers at $4 an acre on condition that they would build good houses and barns at their own expense. The contracts were mostly for a year at a time, but with provisions that if the farmer moved, the next farmer should pay him for his improvements. So long as Wm. Scully lived, the contracts were kept; when he died an executor of the estate came from Ireland "who disliked the farmers because they did not doff their hats to him." To punish them, he raised the rent to $10 an acre and "told those that did not like it to get off, with the loss of improvements."

Absenteeism.

This is only a typical example of the deplorable conditions which prevail on the huge estates operated by managers upon a purely industrial system. These estates are as a rule the property of absentee landlords, who are for the most part millionaires, residents in the Eastern states or in Europe. Some of the estates embrace within their boundaries entire counties and towns; they are a law in themselves; and the landlords are the absolute dictators of the lives, liberties and happiness of their employes. It is industrial feudalism, pure and simple.

Such are in general the economic conditions of the landless farmers. Some of "our" agricultural scholars, including well-known professors have tried to minimize the importance of the problem of tenancy. They consider tenancy as merely the first step on the "agricultural ladder," as the first step towards farm ownership, but this only proves how little they have studied the problem. A concrete analysis of the wages and other living conditions of the tenant farmers, which will be given in the next article, will conclusively prove that under the present conditions the tenant's wish of acquiring a farm is hopeless.

Landless farmers and homeless city workers are a rapidly increasing body of people thruout the country. In 21 states of the Union and especially in the industrial area north of Ohio and east of the Mississippi, they are now an overwhelming majority. Will this common condition of the landless at last result in a common-mindedness?

PITHECANTHROPUS NOT SO ERÉCTUS

By MIRIAM ALLEN DE FORD

Take an animal which is predatory, thick-furred, dark brown, arboreal, long-tailed and carnivorous. Take another which is timid, wiry-haired, light grey, littoral, tailless and vegetarian.

Would any scientist proclaim that these two beasts belonged to the same genus and species?

A ferry-boat is a small world—Gopher Prairie commuting to Zenith. There is more room than in a train, to move around, to listen in, and to observe the temporary population.

I sit in the cabin of the ferry, and half a dozen conversations assail my ears. The sea-gulls whine without, and the sea-gullibles chatter within.

• • •

"Attaboy! Whacher reading?"

"Oh, hello there, Henry. This is great stuff. Ever see it?"

A book is passed. "Selling Yourself," by Charles Q. Higginbotham.

"Good, eh?"

"You betcher. Ths bird's got something. Listen here:

"'Your only value to the boss is what you can persuade him you are worth. He gets his money by the amount of service he renders society, and you will get yours by the amount of service you can render him. If you want a raise, you must serve him better; just as if he wants a bigger profit he must serve the world better.'

"Pretty good, I'll say."

"Sounds all right. A little deep for me."

• • •

"Walter! Keep your hands off mama's embroidery. How many times have I got to tell you? Do you want the big black man to get you?"

"Want you to buy me some candy."

"You've had enough candy already. You'll make yourself sick. Walter! Come back here!"

"I—want—some—candy!"

"Mama said no! Naughty boy!"

Loud sobs from Walter.

"Oh, well, all right. Come on, I'll get some. Look after my things a minute, will you, Mrs. Harvey? I simply can't do a thing with that child!"

"Oh, boy! Some party! So when we got to the beach, everything was closed. And I said to the dame, 'What'll we do now?' And she said—"

"Say, listen! Fellow I met the other day, told me he can get good stuff—good stuff, mind you; I had some of it—at two and a quarter a pint. Fellow he knows makes it himself—he's got one of those electric things makes it twenty years old in two hours."

"Well, I was telling you. We didn't get home till 4:30. And as soon as I opened the door the wife called out—"

"You might listen a minute, Joe. What do you say we chip in together and buy us a gallon or two?"

• • •

"Bertie made it for me. Isn't it pretty? How that girl finds the time for everything, I can't imagine. She's learning to play golf now, and you know what a fiend she is for Mah Jongg."

"It's awfully sweet. Well, Bertie doesn't have much to do, with a Jap and two girls."

"Oh, but my dear, that big house! And you know how much it means to have two girls. Arthur says Bertie keeps two servants all right—one on the way to the job and one just leaving."

• • •

"I have her in history. I can't bear her. She's awfully sarcastic.

"Yesterday she said to Marie, 'I hoped when you bobbed your hair you'd give your brain an airing.' What do you think of that?"

"I know; she's just fierce. Edith changed schools rather than have her again."

"Well, that's all right, Dick, but there're limits. I don't mind being polite and all that, but when he comes right up in front of everyone in the office and—"

"Sure, I know all that, but that's not the way to handle him. You just get hot and tell him where to get off, and what good does it do you? Now the next time he starts some of this smart Aleck business, you just go to the old man and tell him—"

"Gee, I'd have a hot chance with that. The old man thinks he's the cat's pajamas. 'Now, boys, if you were bringing in business the way Ellis is'—that kind of stuff."

"Now, listen; I know for a fact that his own brother is one of those wild-eyed reds. They say it's a fact he served time for it, up north. Now you go to the old man as if you just hated to do it, and just say to him, 'Mr. Levy, I think it's my duty to tell you the type of man you're employing.'"

"Oh, I don't think you mean that, Mr. Saunders! I'm not the least bit clever—poor little me! I couldn't do it in a thousand years."

"Go on, I guess I know what I'm talking about. This is straight—I know a fellow whose sister went to Hollywood and inside of three months Lasky's were, talking about starring her. And you're a dead ringer for her, in looks and everything."

"Well, everybody says I'm a screen type. But I'd never dare—I'd just die of fright when I got in front of one of those cameras."

"Get out! You'd have 'em eating out of your hand in no time. No kidding, now; why don't you try it?"

• • •

"Well, sir, give me Ford. That man's got a head on his shoulders. If we had a president like him—"

"What's the matter with Hiram Johnson?"

"Johnson's too radical. Now Ford would run this country the way he runs his factories. Efficiency, that's what we want. Standardized production in government."

"Well, I'm for Coolidge, myself. He's handling a big job in a big way. Look how fine he's acting in this oil business."

"I don't know what on earth I'm going to do with Grace. She's got the piano cluttered up with the queerest things—people no one ever heard of, like Ravel and Debussy, and not a tune in the lot of them.

"I said to her, 'Daughter, here you've been studying music for twelve years, and yet you can't play for your friends to dance. What's the use of all the money papa and I have spent on you? Do you want to grow up a regular high-brow?'"

"You bet jazz is good enough music for me. They say the people who wrote 'Yes, We Have No Bananas' have made a hundred thousand dollars out of it."

• • •

"You ought to join the Legion, man. What do you want to do, be a slacker when the war is over? Don't you want to get in with your buddies and keep things going straight in God's country?"

"I never had it put to me like that before. Sure, you can put my name in at the next meeting."

"That's the kid! It won't hurt you none in the insurance game, either."

• • •

"So I said to him, 'If you think, just because you're the only butcher in town, that you can charge me three prices for a pork roast, you're very much mistaken. Mr. Gorham will bring my meat from the city every day, and then where will you be?'"

"I tried that, and he just laughed. I think it's awful. He knew Jim would rather never eat meat again than drag it out from the city every day."

"Well, he took fifteen cents off. That's better than nothing. I showed him he couldn't put anything over on me, anyway."

"Yes, sir, I say you can see that town grow. Why, when I bought my first lot there, in 1904, there wasn't a thing between Grant's place and the station. And now they've had to put up a new telephone building to take care of that section. You couldn't do better than buy that place right next to mine."

• • •

"But listen, I do care. You just won't understand."

"Yeh—it looks like it. Where were you when I called up last night? 'Ruth's not here—she's gone out for the evening!' That's the way—out for the evening. Didn't you know I was coming over?"

"What did you expect me to do—dream it? You haven't been near me for a week. Yesterday I met Ethel, and she said, 'Aren't you going with Bob any more? I saw him with Myrtle Bronson twice last week.' Do you c-call that c-ca-aring?"

"For heaven's sake, Ruth, cut it! Somebody'll hear you! Listen, I do—I do! Why can't you be reasonable?"

In anguish I gaze about me for one glance of responsive intelligence—one intimation of conscious thought. I find it. Two men; perhaps forty odd; rather loosely dressed; a pair of dreamy gray eyes and a pair of keen blue ones; pipes; hair a little too long for fashion; occasional words—

"That era is past; the time has come to look at the thing from the standpoint of . . . . Dunne's speech at Portland was . . . . That was perfectly true under the Kerensky regime. . . . . It needs de-bunking. . . . . The same situation obtained in 1870. . . . . Sort of heaven of Jurgen's grandmother. . . . . End of the peace to end peace. . . . . Clever thing Mencken said in . . . ."

• • •

Across the way from me, the lightly satirical voice of a lady.

"Have you noticed those two over there? Do look at them! Aren't they funny? A mixture of garlic and Bolshevism!"

An answering masculine grunt.

"Ought to go back there if they like it so much."

They return to the Hearst paper and The Saturday Evening Post.

The Situation in Greece

By D. K. MINTILOGLI

The class struggle in Greece has taken on a very sharp character since the the militaristic government of Col. Plastiras came to power. The Greek masses disappointed after ten years of continuous war in Thrace and Asia expressed their dissatisfaction by throwing their guns away at the Asiatic Front nearly two years ago which resulted in the famous disastrous defeat.

The Greek soldiers at that time not only refused to fight and sacrifice their lives for the British imperialism, but were also seized by a real revolutionary fever which threthened to sweep off, all the bourgeois elements who had thrown the masses into such unspeakable misery. The soldiers were already singing "Bolsheviki" songs as they marched back, threatening to enter Athens and avenge their tyrants.

No sooner was the revolutionary government established than the masses began to feel the oppression of Col. Plastiras, the man whom they backed to power. Plastiras was a Venizelist under mask and Venizelist for Greece means a blind tool of European Imperialism. Under his rule the masses of Greece were subjected to an oppression unheard of before. Class-conscious workers were persecuted, jailed, and often shot in the streets, like dogs. In the reecnt general strike, the unions were declared illegal by the Government of Col. Plastiras. The union funds were confiscated; the whole country was placed under strict martial law; the the Communist daily was suppressed, and the autrocities of the "Revolutionary Government" were manifested openly in attack of white soldiers upon the strikers. They could not go on forever. The dissatisfaction of the masses reached such a point that Colonel Plastiras had to give in. So he decided to have an election. What happened then?

Mask Torn Away.

The purpose of the Venizelist was to destroy the "Conservative" party of Greece which was under the banner of Metaxes. The conservatives tried their coup'd'etat which resulted in their complete destruction. When one of the two major parties of Greece was uprooted the Venizelists in order to deceive once more the Greek masses divided themselves into two different parties: "Liberals" and "Democrats." These two parties appeared before the "People" which were compelled to choose between the devil and his son.

The Communist Party of Greece did not keep aloof from this political struggle, applying Communistic tactics correctly. The Communist Party of Greece had formed a united front with the organizations and put up some 90 candidates. Freedom of speech and of press was given just one week before the elections. The Communists were not allowed to demonstrate. Numerous mass meetings were scheduled to take place with speakers of the working class explaining to the workers and farmers the political situation and the role of the party which was fighting for their interests, these meetings were not permitted by a Government order issued just one day previous to the elections. Nevertheless the workers gathered at the meetings "en masse" and the army was called upon to disperse them. Such is the liberty of Venizelos.

Fattening the Calf.

The workers of other countries are exploited by the capitalists of their respective countries, but the workers of Greece are sweating and bleeding for both, the Greek and English capitalists, and it is the later of whom Venizelos is an obedient servant. And it is thru their power that he came to rule Greece again. Greece is a helpless victim of British Imperialism. The revolution of 1821, of which Byron sings so enthusiastically and Webster speaks so eloquently, was fought solely for the interest of capitalism of England, France, and Russia, and it is to them that Greece owes her liberation for the Turkish yoke and her subjugation to allied capitalism.

Ever since that time Greece has been merely a colony used by and for the protection of foreign interests. So it is today when British imperialism has spread to all parts of the orient. Greece owing to her geographical position, plays a great role as the guardians of foreign imperialism. And now, with Venizelos back in power, we can convincingly assert that there is another imperialistic war in sight, and that he was sent to Greece by Zaharoff & Co. to prepare the way for such an adventure in which the Greek workers will be called upon to play the role of mercenaries again.

Task of Communists.

We hope tho that the Communist Party of Greece will in spite of all the oppressive measures of Venizelos lead incessantly the workers to the establishment of a Soviet Republic.

INTERNAL PARTY PROBLEMS

Statement of the Central Executive Committee of Workers Party of America.

To the membership of the Party.

Comrades: We are on the eve of big developments. The succesful consumation of the June 17th Convention will mean a gigantic stride forward in the life of the American Labor movement. It will also increase manifold the prestige and influence of Communist ideas and consequently of the Workers Party.

And yet it is only gradually and slowly that our membership is awakening to the realization of these immense possibilities. This statement and appeal to the party is issued in the hope that it will accelerate this process and thereby enable the party to mobilize all its resources and energies for the impending task and carry it out.

Internal Conditions for Our Success.

The Central Executive Committee fully realizes the conditions that must prevail in the party in order that our present labor party campaign may be crowned with success. These internal conditions are:

1) The membership of the party must be fully conscious of the nature of our task as well as of the strategy and tactics to be employed in the realization of these tasks.

2) The membership, or at least its overwhelming majority, must have complete confidence in the ability and competency of the C. E. C.

3) The entire party membership and party organization must give whole-hearted and unstinted support to the leadership of the CEC.

Actual Situation in the Party.

The CEC is glad to say that our membership has reached a pretty thoro understanding of the general nature of our immediate task and objectives regarding our labor party campaign. The thing, however, that is yet to be achieved by our membership is just as a thoro a grasp of our strategy and tactics.

This is just as important as a clear understanding of our objective. To define at any given moment the immediate objective of a Communist Party is hard enough to be sure. But when this objective has been defined correctly, then the entire success of the struggle to attain it depends upon the correctness of the strategy and the tactics applied.

On this point, on the point of strategy and tactics in our labor party campaign, we still find in the party a lack of sufficient clarity and understanding, with the result that the party organization does not respond readily and quickly enough to the leadership of the CEC, and that in a few instances party units have actually deviated from the established party policy.

We also find in the party at present a clear manifestation of an organized factional opposition. Irrespective of the merits or demerits of its case, the harmful effect of such organized opposition upon the fighting ability of the party cannot be successfully disputed.

The Study of Strategy and Tactics.

The Central Executive Committee wishes to impress upon the party membership the vital necessity of studying party policy with particular regard to the strategy and tactics involved. We have already become accustomed and pretty well trained to analyze party policy always from the point of view of the fundamental Communist principles. This is a great achievement indeed. But we have yet to learn to analyze the means and methods for the realization of our immediate objective; that is, the art of strategy and tactics.

Toward this end we recommend a critical and careful study of the last thesis of the C. E. C., also the thesis of comrade Lore and Olgin and the reply thereto by comrades Cannon and Bittelman, the recent speech of comrade Ruthenberg to the party membership meetings which the C. E. C. is publishing in pamphlet form, and the recent published letters of the C. E. C. to the District Executive Committees of Minnesota and Michigan respectively.

Deviations From Party Policy.

In recent weeks the C. E. C. had occasion to deal with the following deviations from party policy:

1) Failure by some of our members to consider and treat our policy in regard to the Third Party movement as an integral part of our general labor party policy. Altho the final decision in the matter of the Third Party movement rests now with the Comintern; nevertheless, it must be accepted as established party policy that our attitude toward the third party movement cannot be treated as something separate and apart from our general labor party policy. A certain portion of our membership, particularly in the East, has not as yet accepted this point-of-view.

2) An inclination by some of our members, when engaged in united front campaigns, not to make known the fact that they are Communists, and members of the Workers Party. This inclination manifested itself recently in Minnesota.

3) An exaggerated anxiety to avoid conflicts with so-called progressive labor leaders to the point hesitating to fight openly and promptly the idea of Labor organizations supporting candidates on the old party tickets. This manifestation took place recently in Detroit.

These deviations from correct Communist policy, have their origin in two different sets of circumstances. The incorrect treatment of the third party movement reflects a conception of Communist tactics and policy which Comrade Lenin described as "Leftism." In our case this conception is motivated mainly by the fact that some sections of our party have not yet fully entered the daily struggles of the workers, have not actually engaged in united front campaigns on a large scale, and therefore have failed to realize the intricate and complicated nature of Communist strategy and tactics. It is by no means accidental that these leftist ideas prevail in the East where our party organization, so far, has not engaged in large scale united front campaigns.

Nor is it accidental that the deviations manifested in Minnesota and Michigan are rather of an opportunist character. It is these places (the West generally, and particularly in Minnesota) that our united front campaign have assumed the biggest proportions. It is there that we have made our greatest practical achievments.

No wonder, therefore, that some of our most active comrades in these districts have become over-sensitive to the requirements of expendiency, practical advantage and immediate success.

Deviations from Communistic policy of an opportunist nature are mostly the result of practical success, just as deviations of a leftist nature are the result of isolation and pacivity. Both must be guarded against constantly and carefully.

The C. E. C. lost no time in correcting the mistaken ideas of our comrades in the districts referred to above. We are glad to report that the instructions and corrections of the C. E. C. have in all cases been accepted in proper Communist spirit.

Organized Opposition to the C. E. C.

At the membership meetings recently held in Philadelphia and New York, an attempt was made by some of our comrades to raise factional issues and, by indirect means, to crystalize opposition to the leadership of the C. E. C. Resolutions of the same contents and practically of the same wording were introduced at both of these meetings, calling upon the C. E. C. to do the following:

1) To combat and stamp out the opportunistic tendencies manifesting themselves at present in the party.

2) To take action against Comrade Lore for his alleged attack upon the Comintern.

The identify of the resolutions, as well as the manner in which they were introduced, convinced us that we have before us a clear manifestation of an organized opposition against the C. E. C.

Consider the facts:

1) At both of these meetings Comrade Ruthenberg appeared in the name of the C. E. C. and delivered an extensive report on the policies and activities of the C. E. C. From his report, as well as from the party press, it should have been obvious to everyone that the C. E. C. is perfectly alive and alert to every situation in the party, and that opportunistic tendencies—wherever and whenever they made their appearance—were promptly dealt with by the C. E. C. in a proper Communist way. In fact, it was only from this report of the representative of the C. E. C., and the published letters of the C. E. C. to Detroit and Michigan, which were designed to point out and combat opportunist deviations, that the comrades could have learned of their existence. Then why did the comrades find it necessary to introduce resolutions "calling upon" the C. E. C. to take action which had already been taken in each case, promptly and decisively?

2) These meetings were called by the C. E. C. for the express purpose of clarifying some of the issues of our labor party policy before our membership, and of mobilizing them for the June 17th Convention.

3) The C. E. C. considered the case of comrade Lore some five weeks ago. After thoro deliberation, the C. E. C. decided that the articles of comrade Lore in question give rise to misconceptions regarding the history of the Comintern. It decided, therefore, to call upon Comrade Lore to submit for the approval of the C. E. C. a draft of a statement correcting the impression that might have been created by his article, and that this statement, upon approval by the C. E. C., should be published as an editorial in the Volkszeitung. Comrade Lore agreed to this decision.

5) In the course of the membership meetings in New York and Philadelphia comrade Ruthenberg related all these facts.

It appears from the above facts, that the C. E. C. took prompt and proper action in the case of comrade Lore, and, also, that the C. E. C. needed no reminder in the matter of combating opportunist deviations in those sections of the party where they arise.

And yet some of our comrades in New York and in Philadelphia found it necessary to introduce resolutions of a sort which could have no other purpose than to sow doubt and suspicion in the party ranks against the C. E. C. and thus, by indirection, to undermine its authority, crystallize opposition to its leadership, and generally demoralize the party organization.

Aside from this, the introduction of these resolutions was bound to divert the attention of the membership from the main purpose of these meetings, thereby seriously interfering with our campaign for the June 17th convention.

We Need a United Party.

The success of our work, particularly on the eve of the June 17 convention, demands a united party. The C. E. C. appeals to the party membership for unity and action.

We also appeal to the comrades involved in the opposition to lay aside for the present their factional differences, and to give the C. E. C. and the party the necessary support and cooperation to make the labor party campaign a success.

The C. E. C. is fully in favor of freedom of discussion within the party organization and in the party press of all new problems and difficulties arising out of our activities. But at the same time the C. E. C. feels in duty bound to insist that once a matter has been settled by the proper party authorities, and a call for action issued, the party ranks must close, and every party member must render the C. E. C. the utmost support and cooperation.

Close the ranks, Comrades!

Strengthen the party organization!

Forward to the June 17 Convention!

To a Class Farmer-Labor Party!

To a Workers and Farmers government in the U. S. and thence to the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

THE NEW AND SIGNIFICANT BOOK ENTITLED
The World's Trade Union Movement
By A. LOSOVSKY
General Secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions
In this book, published in March at Moscow, and now made available to American readers, the leader of 13,000,000 trade unionists depicts, dissects, and measures the relation of forces developed before, during, and since the war.
The first book ever written dealing so comprehensively with this vital subject
William Z. Foster says:

PITHECANTHROPUS NOT SO ERÉCTUS

By MIRIAM ALLEN DE FORD

Take an animal which is predatory, thick-furred, dark brown, arboreal, long-tailed and carnivorous. Take another which is timid, wiry-haired, light grey, littoral, tailless and vegetarian.

Would any scientist proclaim that these two beasts belonged to the same genus and species?

A ferry-boat is a small world—Gopher Prairie commuting to Zenith. There is more room than in a train, to move around, to listen in, and to observe the temporary population.

I sit in the cabin of the ferry, and half a dozen conversations assail my ears. The sea-gulls whine without, and the sea-gullibles chatter within.

• • •

"Attaboy! Whacher reading?"

"Oh, hello there, Henry. This is great stuff. Ever see it?"

A book is passed. "Selling Yourself," by Charles Q. Higginbotham.

"Good, eh?"

"You betcher. Ths bird's got something. Listen here:

"'Your only value to the boss is what you can persuade him you are worth. He gets his money by the amount of service he renders society, and you will get yours by the amount of service you can render him. If you want a raise, you must serve him better; just as if he wants a bigger profit he must serve the world better.'

"Pretty good, I'll say."

• • •

"Walter! Keep your hands off mama's embroidery. How many times have I got to tell you? Do you want the big black man to get you?"

"Want you to buy me some candy."

"You've had enough candy already. You'll make yourself sick. Walter! Come back here!"

"I—want—some—candy!"

"Mama said no! Naughty boy!"

Loud sobs from Walter.

"Oh, well, all right. Come on, I'll get some. Look after my things a minute, will you, Mrs. Harvey? I simply can't do a thing with that child!"

"Oh, boy! Some party! So when we got to the beach, everything was closed. And I said to the dame, 'What'll we do now?' And she said—"

"Say, listen! Fellow I met the other day, told me he can get good stuff—good stuff, mind you; I had some of it—at two and a quarter a pint. Fellow he knows makes it himself—he's got one of those electric things makes it twenty years old in two hours."

"Well, I was telling you. We didn't get home till 4:30. And as soon as I opened the door the wife called out—"

"You might listen a minute, Joe. What do you say we chip in together and buy us a gallon or two?"

• • •

"Bertie made it for me. Isn't it pretty? How that girl finds the time for everything, I can't imagine. She's learning to play golf now, and you know what a fiend she is for Mah Jongg."

"It's awfully sweet. Well, Bertie doesn't have much to do, with a Jap and two girls."

"Oh, but my dear, that big house! And you know how much it means to have two girls. Arthur says Bertie keeps two servants all right—one on the way to the job and one just leaving."

• • •

"I have her in history. I can't bear her. She's awfully sarcastic.

"Yesterday she said to Marie, 'I hoped when you bobbed your hair you'd give your brain an airing.' What do you think of that?"

"I know; she's just fierce. Edith changed schools rather than have her again."

"Well, that's all right, Dick, but there're limits. I don't mind being polite and all that, but when he comes right up in front of everyone in the office and—"

"Sure, I know all that, but that's not the way to handle him. You just get hot and tell him where to get off, and what good does it do you? Now the next time he starts some of this smart Aleck business, you just go to the old man and tell him—"

"Gee, I'd have a hot chance with that. The old man thinks he's the cat's pajamas. 'Now, boys, if you were bringing in business the way Ellis is'—that kind of stuff."

"Now, listen; I know for a fact that his own brother is one of those wild-eyed reds. They say it's a fact he served time for it, up north. Now you go to the old man as if you just hated to do it, and just say to him, 'Mr. Levy, I think it's my duty to tell you the type of man you're employing.'"

"Oh, I don't think you mean that, Mr. Saunders! I'm not the least bit clever—poor little me! I couldn't do it in a thousand years."

"Go on, I guess I know what I'm talking about. This is straight—I know a fellow whose sister went to Hollywood and inside of three months Lasky's were talking about starring her. And you're a dead ringer for her, in looks and everything."

"Well, everybody says I'm a screen type. But I'd never dare—I'd just die of fright when I got in front of one of those cameras."

"Get out! You'd have 'em eating out of your hand in no time. No kidding, now; why don't you try it?"

• • •

"Well, sir, give me Ford. That man's got a head on his shoulders. If we had a president like him—"

"What's the matter with Hiram Johnson?"

"Johnson's too radical. Now Ford would run this country the way he runs his factories. Efficiency, that's what we want. Standardized production in government."

"Well, I'm for Coolidge, myself. He's handling a big job in a big way. Look how fine he's acting in this oil business."

"I don't know what on earth I'm going to do with Grace. She's got the piano cluttered up with the queerest things—people no one ever heard of, like Ravel and Debussy, and not a tune in the lot of them.

"I said to her, 'Daughter, here you've been studying music for twelve years, and yet you can't play for your friends to dance. What's the use of all the money papa and I have spent on you? Do you want to grow up a regular high-brow?'"

"You bet jazz is good enough music for me. They say the people who wrote 'Yes, We Have No Bananas' have made a hundred thousand dollars out of it."

• • •

"You ought to join the Legion, man. What do you want to do, be a slacker when the war is over? Don't you want to get in with your buddies and keep things going straight in God's country?"

"I never had it put to me like that before. Sure, you can put my name in at the next meeting."

"That's the kid! It won't hurt you none in the insurance game, either."

"So I said to him, 'If you think, just because you're the only butcher in town, that you can charge me three prices for a pork roast, you're very much mistaken. Mr. Gorham will bring my meat from the city every day, and then where will you be?"

"I tried that, and he just laughed. I think it's awful. He knew Jim would rather never eat meat again than drag it out from the city every day."

"Well, he took fifteen cents off. That's better than nothing. I showed him he couldn't put anything over on me, anyway."

"Yes, sir, I say you can see that town grow. Why, when I bought my first lot there, in 1904, there wasn't a thing between Grant's place and the station. And now they've had to put up a new telephone building to take care of that section. You couldn't do better than buy that place right next to mine."

• • •

"But listen, I do care. You just won't understand."

"Yeh—it looks like it. Where were you when I called up last night? 'Ruth's not here—she's gone out for the evening!' That's the way—out for the evening. Didn't you know I was coming over?"

"What did you expect me to do—dream it? You haven't been near me for a week. Yesterday I met Ethel, and she said, 'Aren't you going with Bob any more? I saw him with Myrtle Bronson twice last week.' Do you c-call that c-ca-aring?"

"For heaven's sake, Ruth, cut it! Somebody'll hear you! Listen, I do—I do! Why can't you be reasonable?"

In anguish I gaze about me for one glance of responsive intelligence—one intimation of conscious thought. I find it. Two men; perhaps forty odd; rather loosely dressed; a pair of dreamy gray eyes and a pair of keen blue ones; pipes; hair a little too long for fashion; occasional words—

"That era is past; the time has come to look at the thing from the standpoint of . . . . Dunne's speech at Portland was . . . . That was perfectly true under the Kerensky regime. . . . . It needs de-bunking. . . . . The same situation obtained in 1870. . . . . Sort of heaven of Jurgen's grandmother. . . . . End of the peace to end peace. . . . . Clever thing Mencken said in . . . ."

• • •

Across the way from me, the lightly satirical voice of a lady.

"Have you noticed those two over there? Do look at them! Aren't they funny? A mixture of garlic and Bolshevism!"

An answering masculine grunt.

"Ought to go back there if they like it so much."

They return to the Hearst paper and The Saturday Evening Post.

The Situation in Greece

By D. K. MINTILOGLI

The class struggle in Greece has taken on a very sharp character since the the militaristic government of Col. Plastiras came to power. The Greek masses disappointed after ten years of continuous war in Thrace and Asia expressed their dissatisfaction by throwing their guns away at the Asiatic Front nearly two years ago which resulted in the famous disastrous defeat.

The Greek soldiers at that time not only refused to fight and sacrifice their lives for the British imperialism, but were also seized by a real revolutionary fever which threthened to sweep off, all the bourgeois elements who had thrown the masses into such unspeakable misery. The soldiers were already singing "Bolsheviki" songs as they marched back, threatening to enter Athens and avenge their tyrants.

No sooner was the revolutionary government established than the masses began to feel the oppression of Col. Plastiras, the man whom they backed to power. Plastiras was a Venizelist under mask and Venizelist for Greece means a blind tool of European Imperialism. Under his rule the masses of Greece were subjected to an oppression unheard of before. Class-conscious workers were persecuted, jailed, and often shot in the streets, like dogs. In the reecnt general strike, the unions were declared illegal by the Government of Col. Plastiras. The union funds were confiscated; the whole country was placed under strict martial law; the the Communist daily was suppressed, and the autrocities of the "Revolutionary Government" were manifested openly in attack of white soldiers upon the strikers. They could not go on forever. The dissatisfaction of the masses reached such a point that Colonel Plastiras had to give in. So he decided to have an election. What happened then?

Mask Torn Away.

The purpose of the Venizelist was to destroy the "Conservative" party of Greece which was under the banner of Metaxes. The conservatives tried their coup'd'etat which resulted in their complete destruction. When one of the two major parties of Greece—was uprooted the Venizelists in order to deceive once more the Greek masses divided themselves into two different parties: "Liberals" and "Democrats." These two parties appeared before the "People" which were compelled to choose between the devil and his son.

The Communist Party of Greece did not keep aloof from this political struggle, applying Communistic tactics correctly. The Communist Party of Greece had formed a united front with the organizations and put up some 90 candidates. Freedom of speech and of press was given just one week before the elections. The Communists were not allowed to demonstrate. Numerous mass meetings were scheduled to take place with speakers of the working class explaining to the workers and farmers the political situation and the role of the party which was fighting for their interests, these meetings were not permitted by a Government order issued just one day previous to the elections. Nevertheless the workers gathered at the meetings "en masse" and the army was called upon to disperse them. Such is the liberty of Venizelos.

Fattening the Calf.

The workers of other countries are exploited by the capitalists of their respective countries, but the workers of Greece are sweating and bleeding for both, the Greek and English capitalists, and it is the later of whom Venizelos is an obedient servant. And it is thru their power that he came to rule Greece again. Greece is a helpless victim of British Imperialism. The revolution of 1821, of which Byron sings so enthusiastically and Webster speaks so eloquently, was fought solely for the interest of capitalism of England, France, and Russia, and it is to them that Greece owes her liberation for the Turkish yoke and her subjugation to allied capitalism.

Ever since that time Greece has been merely a colony used by and for the protection of foreign interests. So it is today when British imperialism has spread to all parts of the orient. Greece owing to her geographical position, plays a great role as the guardians of foreign imperialism. And now, with Venizelos back in power, we can convincingly assert that there is another imperialistic war in sight, and that he was sent to Greece by Zaharoff & Co. to prepare the way for such an adventure in which the Greek workers will be called upon to play the role of mercenaries again.

Task of Communists.

We hope tho that the Communist Party of Greece will in spite of all the oppressive measures of Venizelos lead incessantly the workers to the establishment of a Soviet Republic.

INTERNAL PARTY PROBLEMS

Statement of the Central Executive Committee of Workers Party of America.

To the membership of the Party.

Comrades: We are on the eve of big developments. The succesful consumation of the June 17th Convention will mean a gigantic stride forward in the life of the American Labor movement. It will also increase manifold the prestige and influence of Communist ideas and consequently of the Workers Party.

And yet it is only gradually and slowly that our membership is awakening to the realization of these immense possibilities. This statement and appeal to the party is issued in the hope that it will accelerate this process and thereby enable the party to mobilize all its resources and energies for the impending task and carry it out.

Internal Conditions for Our Success.

The Central Executive Committee fully realizes the conditions that must prevail in the party in order that our present labor party campaign may be crowned with success. These internal conditions are:

1) The membership of the party must be fully conscious of the nature of our task as well as of the strategy and tactics to be employed in the realization of these tasks.

2) The membership, or at least its overwhelming majority, must have complete confidence in the ability and competency of the C. E. C.

3) The entire party membership and party organization must give whole-hearted and unstinted support to the leadership of the CEC.

Actual Situation in the Party.

The CEC is glad to say that our membership has reached a pretty thoro understanding of the general nature of our immediate task and objectives regarding our labor party campaign. The thing, however, that is yet to be achieved by our membership is just as a thoro a grasp of our strategy and tactics.

This is just as important as a clear understanding of our objective. To define at any given moment the immediate objective of a Communist Party is hard enough to be sure. But when this objective has been defined correctly, then the entire success of the struggle to attain it depends upon the correctness of the strategy and the tactics applied.

On this point, on the point of strategy and tactics in our labor party campaign, we still find in the party a lack of sufficient clarity and understanding, with the result that the party organization does not respond readily and quickly enough to the leadership of the CEC, and that in a few instances party units have actually deviated from the established party policy.

We also find in the party at present a clear manifestation of an organized factional opposition. Irrespective of the merits or demerits of its case, the harmful effect of such organized opposition upon the fighting ability of the party cannot be successfully disputed.

The Study of Strategy and Tactics.

The Central Executive Committee wishes to impress upon the party membership the vital necessity of studying party policy with particular regard to the strategy and tactics involved. We have already become accustomed and pretty well trained to analyze party policy always from the point of view of the fundamental Communist principles. This is a great achievement indeed. But we have yet to learn to analyze the means and methods for the realization of our immediate objective; that is, the art of strategy and tactics.

Toward this end we recommend a critical and careful study of the last thesis of the C. E. C., also the thesis of comrade Lore and Olgin and the reply thereto by comrades Cannon and Bittelman, the recent speech of comrade Ruthenberg to the party membership meetings which the C. E. C. is publishing in pamphlet form, and the recent published letters of the C. E. C. to the District Executive Committees of Minnesota and Michigan respectively.

Deviations From Party Policy.

In recent weeks the C. E. C. had occasion to deal with the following deviations from party policy:

1) Failure by some of our members to consider and treat our policy in regard to the Third Party movement as an integral part of our general labor party policy. Altho the final decision in the matter of the Third Party movement rests now with the Comintern; nevertheless, it must be accepted as established party policy that our attitude toward the third party movement cannot be treated as something separate and apart from our general labor party policy. A certain portion of our membership, particularly in the East, has not as yet accepted this point-of-view.

2) An inclination by some of our members, when engaged in united front campaigns, not to make known the fact that they are Communists, and members of the Workers Party. This inclination manifested itself recently in Minnesota.

3) An exaggerated anxiety to avoid conflicts with so-called progressive labor leaders to the point hesitating to fight openly and promptly the idea of Labor organizations supporting candidates on the old party tickets. This manifestation took place recently in Detroit.

These deviations from correct Communist policy, have their origin in two different sets of circumstances. The incorrect treatment of the third party movement reflects a conception of Communist tactics and policy which Comrade Lenin described as "Leftism." In our case this conception is motivated mainly by the fact that some sections of our party have not yet fully entered the daily struggles of the workers, have not actually engaged in united front campaigns on a large scale, and therefore have failed to realize the intricate and complicated nature of Communist strategy and tactics. It is by no means accidental that these leftist ideas prevail in the East where our party organization, so far, has not engaged in large scale united front campaigns.

Nor is it accidental that the deviations manifested in Minnesota and Michigan are rather of an opportunist character. It is these places (the West generally, and particularly in Minnesota) that our united front campaign have assumed the biggest proportions. It is there that we have made our greatest practical achievements.

No wonder, therefore, that some of our most active comrades in these districts have become over-sensitive to the requirements of expendiency, practical advantage and immediate success.

Deviations from Communistic policy of an opportunist nature are mostly the result of practical success, just as deviations of a leftist nature are the result of isolation and pacivity. Both must be guarded against constantly and carefully.

The C. E. C. lost no time in correcting the mistaken ideas of our comrades in the districts referred to above. We are glad to report that the instructions and corrections of the C. E. C. have in all cases been accepted in proper Communist spirit.

Organized Opposition to the C. E. C.

At the membership meetings recently held in Philadelphia and New York, an attempt was made by some of our comrades to raise factional issues and, by indirect means, to crystalize opposition to the leadership of the C. E. C. Resolutions of the same contents and practically of the same wording were introduced at both of these meetings, calling upon the C. E. C. to do the following:

1) To combat and stamp out the opportunistic tendencies manifesting themselves at present in the party.

2) To take action against Comrade Lore for his alleged attack upon the Comintern.

The identify of the resolutions, as well as the manner in which they were introduced, convinced us that we have before us a clear manifestation of an organized opposition against the C. E. C.

Consider the facts:

1) At both of these meetings Comrade Ruthenberg appeared in the name of the C. E. C. and delivered an extensive report on the policies and activities of the C. E. C. From his report, as well as from the party press, it should have been obvious to everyone that the C. E. C. is perfectly alive and alert to every situation in the party, and that opportunistic tendencies—wherever and whenever they made their appearance—were promptly dealt with by the C. E. C. in a proper Communist way. In fact, it was only from this report of the representative of the C. E. C., and the published letters of the C. E. C. to Detroit and Michigan, which were designed to point out and combat opportunist deviations, that the comrades could have learned of their existence. Then why did the comrades find it necessary to introduce resolutions "calling upon" the C. E. C. to take action which had already been taken in each case, promptly and decisively?

2) These meetings were called by the C. E. C. for the express purpose of clarifying some of the issues of our labor party policy before our membership, and of mobilizing them for the June 17th Convention.

3) The C. E. C. considered the case of comrade Lore some five weeks ago. After thoro deliberation, the C. E. C. decided that the articles of comrade Lore in question give rise to misconceptions regarding the history of the Comintern. It decided, therefore, to call upon Comrade Lore to submit for the approval of the C. E. C. a draft of a statement correcting the impression that might have been created by his article, and that this statement, upon approval by the C. E. C., should be published as an editorial in the Volkszeitung. Comrade Lore agreed to this decision.

5) In the course of the membership meetings in New York and Philadelphia comrade Ruthenberg related all these facts.

It appears from the above facts, that the C. E. C. took prompt and proper action in the case of comrade Lore, and, also, that the C. E. C. needed no reminder in the matter of combating opportunist deviations in those sections of the party where they arise.

And yet some of our comrades in New York and in Philadelphia found it necessary to introduce resolutions of a sort which could have no other purpose than to sow doubt and suspicion in the party ranks against the C. E. C. and thus, by indirection, to undermine its authority, crystallize opposition to its leadership, and generally demoralize the party organization.

Aside from this, the introduction of these resolutions was bound to divert the attention of the membership from the main purpose of these meetings, thereby seriously interfering with our campaign for the June 17th convention.

We Need a United Party.

The success of our work, particularly on the eve of the June 17 convention, demands a united party. The C. E. C. appeals to the party membership for unity and action.

We also appeal to the comrades involved in the opposition to lay aside for the present their factional differences, and to give the C. E. C. and the party the necessary support and cooperation to make the labor party campaign a success.

The C. E. C. is fully in favor of freedom of discussion within the party organization and in the party press of all new problems and difficulties arising out of our activities. But at the same time the C. E. C. feels in duty bound to insist that once a matter has been settled by the proper party authorities, and a call for action issued, the party ranks must close, and every party member must render the C. E. C. the utmost support and cooperation.

Close the ranks, Comrades!

Strengthen the party organization!

Forward to the June 17 Convention!

To a Class Farmer-Labor Party!

To a Workers and Farmers government in the U. S. and thence to the Dictatorship of the Proletariat.

REVOLUTION OR WAR?

By CHARLES RAPPOPORT

The biggest argument in favor of the fundamental Communist demand—the political and economic expropriation of the capitalist class lies in the fact which dominates the present situation and which consists in the expropriation of the nation by the capitalist class (confiscation of communal property, exploitation of labor-power, the depreciation of currency, taxation.) All those who have no class interest to blind their eyes and to stop their ears should be struck by this fact, which turns the entire social economy topsy-turvy. This fact is not of a theoretical order. It touches the most sensitive spot: the purse of every one. By the high cost of living, it invades each household, however modest it may be. It colors the setting of every-day life.

Capitalism Crumbling.

Every man who thinks, above all every worker, every peasant, every employe, is obliged, in fact of this fundamental fact, to reflect as follows: Either capitalism, in continuing its thievery will force me to the wall, expropriating me every day more and more of the product of my labor, or of my small savings, or I will forestall it by depriving it of the power to injure men, expropriating it for the benefit of all. Either capitalism will "get" me, or I will seize capitalism by the throat. There is no other outcome possible.

This being granted, the question of method inevitably comes up. Yes, we are told, you are right. Capitalist society has become bankrupt. It steals, it murders. It steals to murder and it murders to steal. From a producer it has become a destroyer. Yesterday an economic and social shelter, today it threatens to tumble about our ears and to bury us beneath its ruins. But how are we to overturn it? By revolution? By another blood-letting?

Is Blood-Letting Revolution?

Now, this reasoning is artificial—contrary to the facts. Revolution is not necessarily a blood-letting. The greatest revolution of all times—that of November 7, 1917—did not cost more than a few dozens of victims. This is not too much for a social revolution which has overturned one-sixth of the globe. I am speaking of the triumphant assault upon the Winter Palace by my friend Antonoff Ovseeke, who, during the war, conducted at Paris with Trotzky, Lozowsky, Vladimiroff and your humble servant the newspaper called "Nashe Slavo" (Our Word.)

It was after the seizure of the seat of the Kerensky government that the power of the Soviets was proclaimed, to the applause of the immense majority of the population of the vast Russian empire.

How are we to explain this thundering victory, which, without the armed intervention of the governmental and capitalistic canaille of the entire world, would have been the least bloody in all history? The army, the expression of the people, was on the side of the revolution. The armed hand of the masses was put to the service of the revolution. It was thus that all the revolutions of history triumphed. It was the united front, the bloc of workers and peasants, which overturned everything at once, Czarism and capitalism. Therefore, the problem is to win over the masses of the people—the rest comes as a natural consequence if one knows how to maneuver—and the revolution is accomplished without, or almost without, the spilling of blood.

But, even admitting that the aroused resistance of the fortunate masters brings about a bloody conflict, it is, under the present circumstances, a saving of blood, of violence and of sufferings. For it is beyond doubt that capitalist society, if it maintains itself, is heading toward a new world war. Moreover, it is already known what will be the nature of the war which will come. Some days ago, M. Herbette took notice in his "Bulletin du Temps"—"capitalism made into a newspaper"—of the construction, in Wilson's America, of giant aeroplanes which, in one week's time, could wipe out cities like Paris with its four million inhabitants. Mr. Lloyd George, the ally of the pacifist Ramsay MacDonald, builder of cruisers and airplanes, truly said that the next war will be a war of extermination and of obliteration of all the civilian population: men, women, children, old and young, well and sick.

When he finds himself facing a fact as formidable as this, every man of good sense ought to say to himself: before capitalist society causes the whole of humanity to vanish, I will do all in my power to cause capitalist society, the murderer of the world, to disappear.

What Is the Co-operative Movement?

By ANDREW SHELLEY.

The fourth congress of the Comintern gave our movement its policy in regard to the consumer's coperatives, but in a country where these organizations are so comparatively little developed as in North America, and where the party is so preoccupied with other pressing problems, it seems that we are in some danger of neglecting this important part of our work.

The resolution on co-operation adopted at the 1922 Congress of the C. I. speaks of the aid rendered by the consumers' co-operatives during the capitalist offensive, and also of the way in which the old social compromisers have entrenched themselves within them. In certain countries, it states, the social-democratic parties, thru having the leadership of the co-operative movement in their hands, derive funds from it for the support of their parties. The same resolution points out especially: (1) the imperative necessity for all Communist Parties carrying out the instruction that all the members of the Party shall be members of the Consumer's Co-operatives and take an active part in their work. A plan for the organization of nuclei in the co-operatives is outlined, and it is emphasized there must be no separation of the revolutionary elements into separate organizations. On the contrary, on lines analogous to the trade union tactics, we must demand admission to, and do our work thru organizations which include all of the working class which is or may be co-operatively organized, and permeate them with our principles and policy.

Program of Action.

(2) We have also to lead the co-operative movement into the political path, and carry on an energetic campaign against political neutrality, and against the illusion that economic salvation can be achieved by voluntary co-operation alone; and an extensive political and economic program is outlined for the co-operatives.

(3) Communist co-operators should also carry on purely co-operative work advocating the amalgamation of the smaller societies, repudiation of the old principle of dividends, and in their place the employment of the funds for strengthening the working class movement, establishing strike funds, subsidizing the workers' press, etc., etc.

In moving around in the Workers Party one meets from time to time workers who are actively hostile to the very idea of co-operation and many more who are, to say the least, indifferent to it. Yet the very fact of its weakness and newness in this country, due to the extreme development of bourgeois psychology among the working class, places upon those of us who lived our early years in a more or less co-operative atmosphere the duty of educating our comrades and fellow workers.

Here let me take my readers in imagination to a typical manufacturing center in Great Britain, where Rochdale co-operation, the typical working class system, is so strongly developed. Let us watch the workers doing their week-end shopping. We shall probably find not a single "department store" on the American plan in the community. That great American institution is to be found in the larger cities, but its patrons are mostly of the better-to-do classes except in London, which is scarcely typical of the rest of the country.

The village and small town department store are unknown, and even in the large towns they play a far less part than in these United States. Their place is largely taken by the co-operative store.

Rochdale System.

The store does not probably occupy the principal street. It does not pay fancy prices for ground rent. Its "display windows" are smaller than those of the private traders, and it does practically no advertising. Yet we find the store crowded to capacity, and the help is working for all it is worth. There is a noticeable lack of servility in their attitude to their customers, tho the latter stand to them also in the relation of employers. The reason is that they are not so afraid of the customer-members running around to a rival establishment.

You may see the housewife, getting the week's supplies, or she may send friend husband or one of the children with a list of what she wants, and the distinctive feature of the transaction as you see it in the store, is that the purchaser gets a brass check along with the goods. The check represents the amount of money spent, and it is saved up carefully until "divi" day, usually a half-yearly event causing no little local excitement. These are the occasions when the society declares its dividend on purchases, and the members receive back a proportion of what they have spent in exchange for their checks.

It is precisely this last named feature which radicals admire least, and it is condemned by the Comintern, yet as practical people with an appreciation for realities we must recognize the part it plays in keeping the masses loyal to their store.

The payment of "divi" on purchases, however, is but one comparatively small part of the system. The most important thing from our point of view, is that the workers own the stores, and back of the stores, thru the Co-operative Wholesale Societies, they own quite considerable industries. The English Co-operative Wholesale Society alone, in normal times, sells about half a million dollars' worth of goods a year, mostly manufactured in establishments owned and controlled by the working class, co-operatively organized. It has its own extensive factories for the manufacture of soap, at Irlam, and it also makes its own tobacco, clothing, automobiles, etc. It has considerable farming property in Canada, and tea plantations in Ceylon, and it brings fruit from Spain in its own fleet of steamers. In more recent years it has also developed banking and insurance.

Political Action.

I am more desirous, however, of directing attention to the essential features of the local societies, for they are the unit cells out of which the movement is built. Each such society has a certain share capital, subscribed almost wholly in small amounts by the proletarian class, and on this share capital a flat rate of 5 per cent interest is usually paid, and in all the well established societies the investment is regarded as a particularly safe one, practically "gilt-edged," in fact. Whatever profits are made above this 5 per cent, after providing for the needs of the business, is divided into two portions, one of which is paid out as dividend on purchases, the other is spent for educational and other purposes. The things which have been accomplished with this latter portion would fill an interesting and instructive book. The most recent important development is the financing of co-operative political candidates, some of whom have won seats in the recent elections and are sitting with the Labor Party. And they are not the least advanced of the Labor crowd.

There is naturally a continual struggle going on between those workers who are reactionary in ideas, and those who have ideas above mere "divi." As to the amount of "divi," there is a pretty general understanding that it stands at 50 per cent of the available profits. We would like to reduce or abolish "divi," but it has to be recognized that it has in the past had a useful disciplinary effect.

Another Big Feature of The Daily Worker

What is behind the present strained relations between the Japanese and American governments? What is all this talk of "grave consequences" being hurled at Washington by Tokio?

The DAILY WORKER will answer these and many other questions in a series of articles beginning Monday by Jay Lovestone on the growth and significance of American imperialism.

These articles are the result of a thoro investigation of the policy of aggrandizement pursued by the American imperialists and their capitalist governments in the Far East, in Europe, in Africa, and against the Latin-American Republics. The series will be up to the minute in information gathered from the most authoritative sources available.

If you want to know whom, why, where, when and how the bosses and their government have been and are oppressing and exploiting in the colonies and various spheres of influence now in the grip of our ruling class, follow up the whole series of startling revelations completely disclosed for the first time by the DAILY WORKER.

The menace of American militarism, the dangers of new imperialist wars, and what the American working class and poor farmers can and must do to save themselves from another world conflagration will be brought home in these articles.

The series is a distinct beat for the DAILY WORKER. The question of imperialism is a most vital one affecting the fundamental interests of every workingman and exploited farmer in this country. This series will be a real arsenal of ammunition blowing up the arguments of the jingoes and militarists now getting on the job to fan the flames of hatred between the American workers and the working men of Japan and other countries.

Make sure to read every one of the eight articles. Get your friends, your co-workers in the shops and on the farms to read them. Get in your order to the DAILY WORKER containing this series early so that you will receive the paper without any delay. Rush your special orders today, NOW.

What Is the Co-operative Movement?

If you make a purchase at a private trader's store you lose your "divi." It operates like a fine.

Educational Work.

In my experience the fight put up by the advanced elements has not been so much as to the amount of the "divi" to be declared as to the fate of the remaining 50 per cent of the profits available. I grew up in a town where we had a big "co-op," which spent a great deal of money on its education committee. The local branch of the Social-Democratic Federation, of which I was a member, fought and obtained seats in this committee and largely controlled it. There had previously been a scholarship system whereby a few children of co-operative parents, who were clever enough to win the prizes, were sent to the Secondary (High) School and the Universities. This system they opposed and they succeeded in having the co-operative lectures, great events in a community of about 50,000 people and held in the town hall, delivered by Socialist orators.

In earlier years, before there was any public library, this same committee conducted the only library in which one could get books on economics or political questions, these subjects being rigorously ruled out of the Sunday school libraries, practically the only other libraries available. I owe not a little to that library myself, and to the "co-op" news rooms, where I read papers and magazines I never could have afforded to buy.

Strikes—Wage Disputes.

Much emphasis was laid, in the discussion and resolution at the Comintern, on the part played by such organizations in the class struggle in recent years, as well as upon the valuable part they play in the transition to a Communist state of society. In ordinary times the "co-ops" will not give credit to members, but at the time of a strike they have often done so when supplies of food and other necessaries could not elsewhere be obtained. Just previous to the war, when I was in England, there were two notable instances of this. During the great national coal strike, one of the biggest things of its kind in Labor's history, there was a move to alienate the sympathy of the vast body of the public, including the workers, from the striking miners by a combination of coal dealers to put up prices and blame the miners for the increase. In this country, needless to say, they would have got away with a little thing like that and the whole country would have been at their mercy. But in Britain they had to reckon with the co-operative movement. The "co-ops" were invited to join the price raising movement, but they refused, thereby not only giving very material help to the strikers, and to the working class as a whole, by breaking the price ring, but they most effectually exposed the methods of the coal barons. Facts like these have greatly helped to create a demand for socialism of some kind in the working class, which has resulted in the rise of the Labor Party; and altho Communists may—nay, certainly will—have to criticize Ramsay MacDonald's government in many ways, there is no denying that its existence is the clearest proof of a demand on the part of the working class which will have to be satisfied somehow, and if not in MacDonald's way, then eventually in a way less palatable to the governing classes.

Another spectacular instance of beneficent aid given to the militant working class movement by the co-operative movement was the sending of the food ships to Dublin, where the transport workers, under the leadership of Connolly and Larkin, were engaged in one of the bitterest struggles in Irish industrial history. But for this move the strikers would inevitably have been starved into submission. It was done at the request of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trade Union Congress, who pledged their word that the trade union movement would pay for the goods. Needless to say, no capitalist concern would take action of that kind merely because a committee of labor union officials passed a resolution asking them to do so. Fancy a parallel situation in the little old U. S. A.! Some thousands of the poorest paid workers belonging to a radical union are on strike. The union funds are exhausted, the leaders in prison, the strike seems practically broken. Mr. Samuel Gompers and his brethren of the A. F. of L. pass a resolution asking some big grocery distributing concern (which in this country would have to be a capitalist one) kindly to send them all the food they need, and the A. F. of L. is sure labor unions, when they get around to it, will see that the goods are paid for. And the goods are sent! And the workers win the strike. Yet this is exactly what happened in the Dublin Transport strike.

Of course there are many criticisms to be passed against the "co-ops." Criticisms coming from us, however, should be constructive. They should also be made from inside the societies, and for their benefit.

The Poor Fish says he don't blame young men for being against war but that the bankers and bosses are always too old and some one has to do the fighting.

HITS FOES OF SOVIET RECOGNITION

500 on Strike at Pullman Works

BIG DRIVE ON TO ORGANIZE LARGE PLANT

15,000 Men Restless In Huge Shops.

This week will see a tremendous drive to organize the 15,000 workers employed in the Pullman Steel Car Works, at Pullman, on the far South Side.

That the thousands of workers employed in this plant are restless, under the conditions they are now facing, was shown by the spontaneous walkout of 500 unorganized riveters, reamers, fitters, buckers and heaters.

Impose Heavy Wage Cut.

An effort had been made to force a heavy cut in wages upon these men. They refused to accept it and quit.

The men have no union. They hold daily meetings at 158 E. 107th St., and are represented by a "Committee of Five," one from each department. The strikers include Italians, Swedes, Poles, Lithuanians and Ukrainians. A plan is being proposed to increase the strike committee to ten, to include one representative of each nationality. This is being considered.

It is declared that the powerful steel car company, fearful of the spread of organization among the workers, has proposed peace thru a "Company Committee". It is proposed that the strikers return to work under the same conditions they had when they quit. The strikers, however, claim they will not return unless they have a written agreement embodying their demands.

WILLIAMSON JURY ACQUITS 4 KLAN TRIED TO FRAME

Shots at Glenn Young Led To Trial.

MARION, Ill., April 20.—Ralph Hill, Irwin McCown, and Hosea Cagle were acquitted by a jury in Williamson county court here today, of firing into the automobile containing Glenn Young, local liquor czar, and driven by Leonard Stearns, son of the Marion cyclops of the Ku Klux Klan. Stearns was slightly wounded.

The klansmen were on their way to Herrin the night of February, where the klan had taken control following the killing of Caesar Cagle, klan constable, that evening when their machine was fired into from the sidewalk.

Hill, saloon man, McCown, son of the coroner, and Cagle, owner of an amusement park and several time defendant in the klan's liquor prosecutions, proved to the satisfaction of a jury they were in the county jail at the time serving as guards under deputization of Sheriff Galligan.

Killing Seamen's Bill

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Fear that the lack of proper step from influential quarters, against the joker in the immigration bill aimed at the seamen's act, will result in killing the seamen's emancipation law, is voiced by Andrew Furuseth, president International Seamen's union. Telegrams in support of the seamen's act should be addressed to Representative Shneider of Wisconsin and Senator King of Utah.

HUSBAND SACRIFICED TO MARS, FURNITURE TO GREEDY LANDLORD

By SYDNEY WARREN.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 20.—If Canada isn't "a land fit for heroes" read this. Mrs. Mary Leach, whose husband enlisted in the world war and was killed at Vimy ridge, owed a local landlord $3 rent which she was unable to pay. The landlord, a more practical and businesslike patriot than the widow's husband had been, straightway sent in the bailiff. The bailiff raised the necessary $3 by taking possession of $450 worth of furniture and in addition presented her with a bill for fees as follows: Warrant $1.50, appraisal $2, man in possession $3 a day plus 10 per cent, and advertising, etc.

The bailiff seized the furniture during the absence of Mrs. Leach but magnanimously left her the kitchen range because there was no furnace or heater in the house and he feared that her young children would not be able to stand the cold.

JAPANESE PAPER TELLS OF CHICAGO POLICE SLUGGER

Writes Up Assailant Of Sophie Altschuler

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 20.—The brutal actions of a certain Officer No. 3181 of the Chicago police force, who beat up a girl garment striker named Sophie Altschuler, are related in the Daily People, a Japanese labor newspaper published here.

Under the headline, "Capitalistic America Not Safe for Ladies," the Japanese daily tells how Miss Altschuler was beaten unconscious by brute in uniform No. 3181 on the picket line in the Chicago "Loop" district. Columns are being given to the garment strike.

Organ of Jap Union.

The Daily People is the organ of the Japanese Workers' Union of Canada and made its initial appearance April 1 with the militant declaration: "Coming out as a daily paper, we are holding a strategic fort in the class war."

The paper is edited by Takai, Suzaki, Mitearai and six associate editors, including several Communists. Its circulation is rapidly increasing. Japanese total one-seventh of the entire population of British Columbia, and the paper is devoted to the land as well as the industrial worker.

Asiatic Labor Big Factor.

Japanese and Hindoo labor is an important factor in the British Columbia industries. Barred from the conservative A. F. of L. unions, the Japs have formed their own "Japanese Workers' Union," which has often displayed a solidarity that the whites could well emulate.

MacLachlan "Strike On Job" Talk Drives Politician Nutty

(By The Federated Press)

OTTAWA, Can., April 20.—On two occasions lately Senator David, French supporter of the Liberal party, has tried to get the Canadian government to recall the parole issued to J. B. McLachlan, former secretary of District 26, United Mine Workers of America. David urged as reason for "sedition" the speech Jim made in Cape Breton, recommending the miners to revert to "the strike on the job." No other senator has discussed the question.

CANNERY BOSS DRIVES MOTHER OF SEVEN CHILDREN TO SUICIDE

(By Federated Press.)

SAN JOSE, April 20.—Life was pretty hard for Mrs. Beatrice Mignoli, deserted by her husband, and with seven small children to support. Uncomplainingly she toiled in a cannery to keep them and herself alive. Then the foreman told her she was to be fired. Out of a job, and utterly despairing, Mrs. Mignoli killed herself by taking poison. She left a note for the foreman, accusing him of having taken away the livelihood of her children. Now her work-worn body lies in the local morgue.

COOLIDGE HIS OWN EXCUSE, SAYS HUGHES

N. Y. Convention Hears Imperialist Tool

By H. M. WICKS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, April 20. "President Coolidge is his own platform," declared Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes before the delegates of the Republican State Convention at Town Hall here. "No other platform is needed."

The "convention" roared approval of this unique proposal for a political platform as Mr. Hughes launched into the peroration of a laborious speech he had carefully prepared and read with stilted diction.

The procedure of the "convention" was as cut and dried as the speech. It was called to order at 8 o'clock in the evening with the reading of the official call. A personal representative of Jehovah intoned the invocation. State Chairman George K. Morris announced that the state committee recommended Mr. Hughes as temporary chairman and advised the delegates to hasten the proceedings, as the radio "is to start at 8:30, so we must have a ragged roll call." Some one read the names off with such rapidity that they were inaudible. There were a few lazy grunts from various parts of the house in response to the roll call and then Mr. Hughes arose, and, after joining in the laughter that accompanied the roll call, which revealed the crude operation of the steam roller, proceeded to read his speech.

Hughes' speech lasted one hour and four minutes, and the convention adjourned for the "day" just twelve minutes later. Spectators and delegates were so intermingled that it was impossible to separate them, but it made no difference, for everything had been arranged by the state committee, and the delegates were just so many vot-

WHISTLES BLOW IN VAIN IN BIG KENTUCKY STRIKE

10,000 Miners Stand Pat Against Reduction.

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

CENTRAL CITY, Ky., April 20.—Altho every whistle in Western Kentucky coal mines sounded for work on April 16, not one union coal digger showed up. This was the answer of the rank and file members of District 23, United Mine Workers of America, to the operators who refused to make an agreement with the union. There are 10,000 men affected by the strike which was ordered by the district officials after wage negotiations that had been going on for a month were broken up by the operators. Union maintenance men remain on duty for the present. The mines had been operating since April 1 pending a settlement. The operators demanded a reduction as against the union's insistence upon the Jacksonville (Fla.) settlement.

All the union miners in Kentucky are now on strike both in District 23 and District 19 which takes in also Tennessee, except those mines belonging to another operators' association which has an overwhelming contract with the union that expires next year.

The difficulty here is the large number of non-union mines that maintain a scale of wages far below that demanded by the organized men. This state, like West Virginia, is overrun with operators' guards and militiamen.

The western Kentucky district is one of the oldest unts in the United Mine Workers of America. William Webb, one of the members of the first international executive board of the miners' union, 34 years ago, was from this district.

LOW PAY, HIGH DEATH RATE---GO HAND IN HAND, N. Y. INVESTIGATION SHOWS

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK.—High death and sickness rates due to low wages, employment of minors and women, are revealed by the six-year survey of the Mulberry district in New York made by the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor. The investigation covered a typical working class population of 35,000 in the foreign-born quarter. "At every age the death rate is far above the average prevailing for the city at large," says the report.

"Of housewives 28.8 per cent. were gainfully employed; 4.8 per cent. were engaged in 'home work' (piece work done at home), and 16 per cent. were employed in factories, stores and outside domestic service." The infant mortality rate age under 1 year was 138.1 per thousand. One half of boys and girls between 14 and 20 are wage earners.

IF WORKERS DON'T USE FLIVVERS OR BOOZE THEY MAKE TROUBLE

NEW YORK, April 20.—If you want to get along with the working man you've got to keep him busy or amused," said Pres. Samuel M. Vauclain, Baldwin Locomotive works in a moment of upper class philosophing. He was addressing a dinner of the Purchasing Agents' association in New York. He continued "When the pleasure the workers derived from alcohol was taken from him something had to be substituted for it. This has been supplied in the cheap automobile which is enough to keep him and his whole family busy. The flivver has saved this country real trouble."

In Rome it was "bread and the circus."

MASS ARRESTS AND TORTURES IN BALTIC STATES

Drive On Communists In Esthonia and Latvia

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, April 20.—The Baltic states—the buffers between proletarian Russia and the capitalist world—answered Britain's recognition of Russia by renewed persecutions of radical laborites and renewed anti-Russian propaganda.

In Esthonia mass arrests have recently taken place. The majority of the prisoners were representatives of labor in municipal councils, trade union workers, deputies to parliament, and leaders of Communist organizations. All workers' organizations—legal and illegal—were suppressed, their offices raided by the police, and all literature and records confiscated. Labor papers were suppressed. Over 200 persons were arrested in one night, and the arrests continued for several days. There are 500 political prisoners in Esthonia at present. The workers have found it difficult to provide for their imprisoned comrades because unemployment in Esthonia has caused great poverty.

In Latvia numerous arrests have also taken place recently. American third degree methods are nothing compared to the horrible tortures used by the Lettish authorities to wring confessions from the political prisoners.

Both Reval (Esthonia) and Riga (Latvia) have been extremely active recently in sending out false dispatches about Russia. Helsingfors, Finland, has given hearty co-operation. The American newspaper public, particularly readers of the Chicago Tribune and the New York Herald-Tribune, have been the principal consumers of these lies.

Child Slavery Issue On Congressional Floor This Week

WASHINGTON, April 20.— The House will take up the proposed child labor constitutional amendment this week, Representative Longworth announced yesterday.

A vote probably will be reached before Friday, it was believed. The amendment would empower Congress to regulate or forbid the employment of all persons of less than 18 years of age.

ALL CHICAGO UNIONS BACK BIG STRUGGLE

Plan Canvass Of All Organized Labor.

The appeal to all labor unions in the city of Chicago to give financial aid to the striking International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, sent out by "The Committee of 15," was unanimously approved at the meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday.

"The Committee of 15" was empowered to select 20 federation members to visit the different unions in the city and make a personal appeal for funds to help the strikers fight the injunction against picketing.

The officials of the Federation of Labor were instructed to issue the necessary credentials to the men visiting the union.

"The Dress Manufacturers Association has the backing of all the anti-labor forces in the city, including the courts," said Anton Johannsen, in reporting for the "Committee of 15." "It is therefore necessary for all the labor forces of the city to unite in aiding the striking garment workers."

"For several days during the coming week we shall run a float thru the loop, which will describe what the union is fighting for. The float divided into two parts, will show the sweat shop system and the union shop.

"It will point out that the present strike of the garment workers is just a continuation of the fight on sweat shop conditions."

"Garment strikers will sit at sewing machines on the float, and there will be music to attract the attention of the busy people in 'the loop.' The float, according to present plans, will be 30 feet long and ten feet wide. It will demonstrate that the union demands are extremely reasonable, and that non-union conditions are unbearable."

Lauds the Amalgamated

In making a plea for the Federation to get behind the garment strike in a more concrete way than formerly, President John Fitzpatrick declared that altho the Amalgamated Clothing Workers had not yet come into the Federation of Labor, its spirit in givin the strikers $10,000 was laudable, and the Federation should take the good example set by this union.

Sam Gordon of the Leather Workers, commenting on the report of the "Committee of 15," declared that a second float should be run along with the first, depicting the atrocities of "Denny" Sullivan's high handed treatment of the girls in the court room. Gordon was given 30 days in a labor dispute which came before Sullivan.

Stole In Churches To Bury Children Killed By Poverty

MILWAUKEE, April 20.—Edward Wallis confessed in court that he had stolen $120 from overcoat pockets in the cloakrooms of various churches in order to pay the funeral expenses of his two children. The children died when he was unable to get proper medical attention for them. Judge Backus gave him his freedom, under probation.

RUSS REPRESENTATIVES IN CANADA EXPOSE "RED PLOT" PROPAGANDA OF KEPT PRESS

MONTREAL, Canada, April 20.—Denying that he and his staff have brought any literature which might be construed "Red propaganda" into Canada, and declaring that the consignment of literature sent to him here was made up of reference books and volumes on Russia which he might need in connection with his work, Alexander Yazikoff, official agent for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics in Canada, today issued a statement in reply to information contained in press dispatches from Ottawa that the Canadian government treats the Soviet Trade delegates with suspicion pending the thoro investigation of the alleged importation of Communist propaganda.

M. Yazikoff admitted that his explanations to the prime minister and his cabinet recently regarding the books consigned to him had not seemed to satisfy the government and he is of the belief that further investigation is to be made.

He further declares that, under the agreement between Great Britain and the Union of Soviet Republics, he is granted the immunity from seizure of personal effects, etc., usually afforded political emissaries.

The Soviet Trade Commissioner has established headquarters at the Wilhelmina Hotel, Mountain street, Montreal. It was under the shadow of a wall picture of Trotsky that he spoke of the suspicions directed against him in official circles and described the nature of the imported literature.

The disputed literature is still held by the customs officials, Mr. Yazikoff said.

Books in Russian Language.

The following official statement was issued this morning:

"I think that the authorities were under a false impression, since the books are in the Russian language and no one but a Russian could look them thru and know what they are. I believe that persons who looked them over misinterpreted the nature of the literature. It is quite impossible to even imagine that some one who is coming to establish trade relations would bring literature for Red propaganda.

"As I have explained to the government officials, it is necessary to have every kind of information coming to another country.

"In vain would one try to find some data about the new economical and political condition of new Russia in the Congressional Library of Washington, D. C., where there is a special Russian section consisting of many thousands of books. I visited the government library here, and there is nothing even about former Russia. There is, therefore, nothing amazing in the fact that there is such ground for spreading false information about Russia.

Hits Soviet Enemies.

"For a Canadian, it is difficult to understand the conditions nowadays in the Soviet Union because they are very different from Canada's. I am not going to try to change them—it is not my task. But it is my duty, and it is quite necessary for business relations, to acquaint Canadian business men with present day Russian conditions. All this noise raised about the books is, in my opinion, the result of a propaganda by the enemies of the Soviet Union, who are availing themselves of the appropriate moment—the beginning of negotiations.

"In the notices that I have read in the press I have found a whole series of incorrect statements, each of which changes the meaning of the facts. Regarding the question of my status here, it has been founded on the agreement between Great Britain and the Union of the Soviet Republics, and therefore leaves no room for misinterpretation."

LEAGUE FAILS; AUSTRIA IS IN GRIP OF PANIC

Hocking Nation Adds To Misery

(Special to the Daily Worker.)

VIENNA, Apr. 20.—The much advertised league of nations reconstruction plan for Austria has collapsed and with it the financial system of the nation.

Blame for the crisis that has gripped the whole country is placed upon the big financiers by the Austrian press; they have speculated in French francs and the government has been forced to spend 300,000,000,000 paper crowns in protecting market prices of stocks.

A syndicate of Vienna banks has spent 220,000,000,000 crowns in an attempt to stop the drop in stock quotations but stocks continue to fall, until they are now worth 50 per cent less than a month ago.

The government has about reached the limit of its resources, but stocks are still dropping rapidly with the few solvent financiers trying frantically to halt the downward movement.

The money which has been used by the government in a vain attempt to stabilize the market, has unbalanced still more the already one-sided budget while the financial depression makes the collection of taxes almost impossible.

It is openly stated here in financial and political circles that the expected recovery of Austria has been retarded for years at least and probably been made entirely impossible.

Vienna banks have served notice upon the directors of the stock exchange that their customers are short over $10,000,000 and expert estimates from other sources believe that that this shortage should be multiplied by 15.

The league of nations scheme for the rehabilitation of Austria is today a failure and Austria is heading straight for a breakdown while condition of utter financial and industrial chaos prevails.

ROBOT COPS STOP ROBOT PLAY FROM BEING SHOWN TO PULLMAN STRIKERS

Pullman police would not permit the famous Capek play, "Rossum's Universal Robots," as produced by the Labor Defense council, to be given before the strikers of the Pullman works and to other inhabitants of that portion of Chicago on Saturday night.

The law stepped into Strumel's Hall, Roseland, Illinois, in the persons of five burly police robots who claimed that the hall owner had no license to operate his place.

The audience and players were given five minutes to clear the hall and no amount of dickering would change the captain's mind. Manuel Gomez announced that any of those who wanted their money back could collect, but only one fourth of the audience responded. The others generously allowed the Labor Defense Council the disposal of their ticket money.

Saturday night's hold up did not prevent the "R.U.R." players from bringing their message to their Chicago friends on Sunday afternoon at North Side Turner Hall. The player presented Karel Capek's splendi

"Hoof-Mouth" State's Fruit Not Wanted

SACRAMENTO, April 20.—"By God, I'm governor—I'm going to run this state," is Friend Richardson's answer to the pleas that he call a special session of the legislature to help fight the hoof and mouth epidemic. "I don't intend to call a legislature that is hostile to me." Arizona and Oregon forbid any one to cross the state line from or to California without safeguards. Nature and the adjoining states are aiding powerfully in making the I. W. W. boycott of California products 100 per cent effective.

Washington Bars Fruit.

OLYMPIA, Wash., April 20.—California fruit and vegetables are excluded from the state of Washington unless accompanied by certificates that they have been fumigated. This is a precaution against the spread of hoof and mouth disease which is epidemic in California and which can be spread by dust clinging to food or clothing. Washington authorities are taking this precaution as a health measure and not out of sympathy with the I. W. W. boycott on California products. Washington has almost a dozen class war prisoners in her jails. The I. W. W. boycott is intended to call attention to the persecution by California of workers who are imprisoned from one to 14 years, under the syndicalism act, because of membership in that labor organization.

Deaf Ears to Coolidge.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 20.—Washington state, thru its lieutenant-governor, temporarily in charge during the absence of Governor Louis F. Hart, informally refused today to accede to President Coolidge's plea to modify its embargo on California products and vehicular traffic in the fight to prevent hoof and mouth disease infection.

Cal Begs for Poison Products.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—President Coolidge's telegram to western state governors urging them to call a conference to discuss modification of quarantine restrictions they have imposed against the hoof and mouth disease in California, was made public at the White House today.

The message said that many of the restrictions are more severe than necessary, and if enforced will result in unnecessary hardship and loss of millions of dollars to fruit and produce growers in California.

The message was sent to the governors of Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Arizona, Wyoming, Montana, Colorado, New Mexico, California and Hawaii.

Appropriate $1,500,000.

By unanimous vote the House yesterday appropriated $1,500,000 to combat the outbreak of hoof and mouth disease in California. This is addition to one of $1,000,000 made for the same purpose in the recent deficiency bill.

All Chicago Labor Rallies to Support Of Garment Strike

declared that a float showing how unfair Sullivan and Foell were to organized labor would be more good than anything else.

Tells of N. Y. Strike

Betty Hawley, vice-president of the New York Federation of Labor, and prominent member of the Buffalo central labor council, described to the Federation the bitter strike of the New York garment workers. She told how they were brutally beaten and herded off to jail, where it was made difficult to get them out on bail.

No mention was made at the last meeting of the "Committee of 15" of the much talked of mass meeting which was planned to give Sam Gompers a chance to show he was behind the striking garment workers. Nothing further can be learned about getting the scabs who are related to union men out of the shops. In the meantime, according to union officials, a large percentage of the scabs in this strike are wives, sisters, mothers or daughters of union men connected with the Chicago Federation of Labor and nothing is being done to expose them.

Wheeler Gives Bonds For Appearance On Montana Oil Count

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Senator Wheeler, Montana, appeared before U. S. Commissioner MacDonald and gave his personal bond of $1,000 for his appearance when his trial on a charge of illegally accepting a retainer as a U. S. senator is called in Great Falls, Montana.

Wheeler was not formally arrested. He was notified that a warrant issued by the federal authorities in Montana had arrived in Washington and he promptly presented himself to the commissioner.

Is Foell a Fool?

The DAILY WORKER has become the big issue in the courtroom of Judge Charles M. Foell, Room 807, County Building.

It is to this courtroom that much of the judicial strike-breaking hitherto carried on in the courtroom of "Dennie" Sullivan, notorious injunction judge, has been transferred.

* * *

The DAILY WORKER is an issue because the lawyer of the struck garment bosses, Mr. Charles Hyde, does not like to have the strikers read it.

"Are you a reader of the DAILY WORKER?" was the pet question of Mr. Hyde.

It was never, "Do you read the Tribune, or the Herald-Examiner, or the News?" or any of the other kept gutter sheets of the big employers.

It would, of course, be impossible for Mr. Hyde to visualize working class readers of the bosses' press going out on strike for the right to organize, for higher wages, a shorter workday, or improved working conditions. He could not, in all the scope of his imagination, dream of a worker defying a judicial ukase not to picket, unless he had committed the terrible crime of reading the DAILY WORKER.

The garment workers are not on strike, they are not on the picket line, they are not waging their present heroic struggle because the DAILY WORKER is being published in Chicago. Their brilliant battles under the standards of their organization are the direct result of the oppression they have suffered under the brutal lash of the profit-hungry garment bosses.

Greed drove the workers to strike. Greed forced the strikers to take their places on the picket lines in the struggle for their rights. Greed dragged the pickets off to the police stations. Greed summoned the pickets to court. And greed, thru its petty tool, Lawyer Charles Hyde, wants to know of the pickets, "Do you read the DAILY WORKER?"

* * *

Greed not only wants to buy and control the physical strength of labor to run its machines. Greed also wants to control the brain of labor, to dictate what it reads, to impose a censorship thru fear and intimidation.

Hence the question in the court room of Judge Foell, "Do you read the DAILY WORKER?"

The mere asking of that question is a tribute to the service that the DAILY WORKER is rendering the cause of the strikers. The DAILY WORKER did not inaugurate the strike. Greed did that. But the DAILY WORKER is effectively aiding the workers carry on their struggle, and that is its task, and that is why Greed hates it and fights it.

* * *

When Judge Foell allowed the lawyer of greed, Mr. Hyde, to press his questions, so-called justice became a farce, as all capitalist justice is in its treatment of the interests of labor. Judge Foell allowed his courtroom to become the stalking place for the inquisition of the bosses.

The master class in all ages has tried to put a straight jacket upon the minds of the oppressed class. Every dominant class has resorted to all forms of censorship in order to maintain itself in power.

But one ruling class after another has gone its way down thru the centuries. The courts constituted one of the last bulwarks of chattel slavery in the United States. But court decisions did not prevent the sweeping away of the system of chattel slavery.

Today the courts are the staunchest defenders of wage slavery. Censorship in its vilest form stalks into the court room of Judge Foell and is permitted to remain and carry out the work of the blackest reaction.

No excuse need be offered for the paid hireling, Mr. Hyde, of the garment bosses. He gets his pieces of silver.

But Judge Foell must be a fool if he thinks that a censorship-buttressed court edict against the right to picket can settle this strike so that it will stay settled. Or were the officials of labor fools when they endorsed Judge Foell for election last fall? These are things worth considering along with the question addressed to the strikers, "Do you read the DAILY WORKER?"

PLATOON SYSTEM IS CONDEMNED BY CHICAGO LABOR

Wears Out Children, Says Resolution

A resolution condemning the platoon school system on advice of the best educational authorities, which has been sent by the Illinois Federation of Labor to all City Federations thruout the state, was favorably received yesterday by the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Letters attached to the communication sent out by Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, declared the platoon school system, which the big industrial interest are trying to saddle on the people, to be "deficiency run wild."

"There were many defects in our school system before the platoon system, but the system does not do away with these defects, it emphasises them," declares Dr. John Hall of Detroit. "The platoon system increases the strain on the children and on the teachers. No periods of play or relaxation are provided for."

School Machine System

"The platoon system is an effort to install the machine system in our schools. Where it is in use many complaints of its evil effects on the children are heard," states the resolution adopted by the Federation. "To observe the children being herded from room to room under this system, is like watching the train of unfinished autos in one of Henry Fords Factories. Everything is mechanical. The spiritual and moral welfare of the child are disregarded. Children who have studied under the platoon system are made hard and less responsive. They are dulled and worn out nervously, and have no intellectual curiosity."

LIVELY WORKERS PARTY BRANCHES AT WORCESTER

Finns, Swedes, English, Lithuanians, Active.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 20.—The Finnish Branch of the Workers Party held a well attented opening mass meeting of two months drive for membership and subscriptions for Party papers Sunday, the new hall being crowded.

H. Puro spoke about one hour, explaning the program and aims of the Workers Party and emphasizing that the Communist movement is only one that leads workers to emancipation. All those present, that are not yet members of the Workers Party, were urged to join. The speaker also asked Party members to get busy and bring in new members and take subscriptions to Party papers.

A good musical and athletic program was given. The meeting was very successful. Thirty new members joined the Workers Party and many subscriptions were taken to Eteenpain and DAILY WORKER.

The membership of the Finnish branch here is now over 200 and many more are coming.

The first open air meeting at the City Hall was held by the English Branch Sunday, April 13. Comrade Sidney Broomfield spoke. Much literature was sold and some leaflets distributed. The meeting was very successful.

Every line of Party activities show improvement. Representatives of the Lithuanian Branch at the City Central Committee say that about 16 youngsters are ready to join the Young Workers League.

The Swedish Branch is getting new members continually.

COMING GERMAN REVOLUTION TOLD BY TRACHTENBERG

Communists Preparing For Speedy Event.

Chock full of enthusiasm for the revolution he sees coming soon, Alexander Trachtenberg made the North Side Turner hall audience glow with some of his own feeling Friday night.

"They are getting ready for the final conflict in Germany," he declared. "When Communists meet, they aren't talking about social activities, but the question is 'How Many Guns Have you got?'"

German Revolution The Starter.

A united international movement will back the German revolution, said Trachtenberg. Today in French prisons, you find the comrades who were doing work in the Ruhr occupation army. In France, Belgium, Poland, Jugo-Slovakia and Czecho-Slovakia the Communist Parties with their numerous adherents are ready to rise with their German comrades. They look on the German revolution as the starter for the world revolution.

Communist Military Preparation.

Trachtenberg told of a great red funeral procession led by a Young Communist vanguard, every man with his gun. In the rear were the stretcher bearers.

Organized preparations are being made for the armed conflict and the educational work with the masses is carried forward with papers and huge meetings. And the masses are coming to the Communists for leadership and inspiration. The speaker told of an open party meeting attended by 10,000, tho there were only 2,000 members in that community.

Socialist Traitors Losing.

German social democracy, which betrayed the workers during the war and after is waning. The proletarian elements are coming over to the Communist Party.

With biting sarcasm, he scored the coalition policy of the yellows. "The socialist government got lonely and invited the bourgeois politicians into the cabinet", he said. "Pretty soon there were no socialists left."

Stinnes And The Socialists.

"In Russia," he declared, "the workers and peasants under the leadership of the Bolsheviki confiscated the factories and the land. The power of the bourgeois was destroyed. In Germany, under the leadership of the socialists, Stinnes made more money than he had made in his whole life before. With the rise of his wealth, his power rose too."

The first part of the lecture was occupied with what Trachtenberg saw in Russia, the land he was forced to leave when the Czar reigned.

Every Red Soldier Can Read.

What a change now. "Every soldier in the Red Army can read. When I was in the old Russian army, I had to spend most of my spare time writing letters for other soldiers."

Trachtenberg told of the Russian industrial unions,—23 in all, a union to an industry. He told of the 8-hour day, with overtime absolutely discouraged and often entirely prohibited. Of the 6-hour day for office workers and the 4-hour day for youths between 16 and 18 who attend school the rest of the time. Two weeks' vacation with pay for all workers.

Mothers get rest with full pay eight months before and eight months after pregnancy. A large percentage of the earnings for each industry are put aside for social insurance of various kinds and this money is controlled thru the unions.

Unions' Power In Russia.

Lies of Sam Gompers and his renegade socialist propagandists, Chester Wright, Walling and Co., about the German labor movement, were smashed by the speaker. He told of the tremendous power of the unions in the government of Russia. The unions are officially a part of all social institutions; they have the veto of all labor legislation and the representatives are chosen for the most important posts, as is shown in the trade delegation sent to England, which includes the president of the Russian Council of Trade Unions.

JAPANESE-RUSSIAN ALLIANCE AGAINST U. S. AND ENGLAND MAY FOLLOW EXCLUSION ACT

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Because an earthquake has reduced Japan to the status of a second-rate imperial military power and because Ambassador Hanihara misunderstood the fundamental facts in the Coolidge presidential campaign, the break with Japan on the issue of positive exclusion of Japanese immigration has come.

The Hanihara note, suggesting "grave consequences" to the relations between the United States and Japan if this Asiatic exclusion brand should be placed upon his countrymen, has given the anti-Japanese elements and the anti-Hughes elements their chance. No man can foresee the results, in America and in Asia and in Europe, of this conjunction of interests. Russia may gain a new ally in Japan.

Cal In Bad Either Way.

If Coolidge vetoes the congressional exclusion of Japanese immigrants from this country, he will lose what little political following he may have among the people of California, Oregon and Washington. If he does not veto the measure, he will have repudiated the eager support given by Secretary of State Hughes to Tokio, and will have given the democrats a basis for immediate demand that Hughes resign. Even tho Hughes stays and Coolidge signs the bill, California will go for La Follette or for the democratic nominee next November. Hanihara did not realize this when he sent his strong note—almost as strong as Coolidge's own note in defense of Mellon a few days earlier. Nor did he realize that party strategy in a campaign requires of the professional politician that he become a jingo.

Forces Treaty With Russia.

When the dust shall have cleared away, some result of the explosion will possibly be found to be:

1. That Japan's repressive military government will be pulled down by the liberal parties, and a new foreign policy adopted.

2. That this policy will call for Japanese recognition and close ties with Russia, as an obvious defense against the British-American combination in the far east, while Japan slowly builds up again.

3. That agitation for freedom on the part of the Koreans will be resumed, and that Russia will insist that the conditions to an understanding with Japan shall include better treatment of the 15,000,000 Koreans.

4. That senate politicians who have championed the early independence of the Philippines will lose interest while the army and navy and big business lobbies in Washington will unite to "keep the flag flying in the east."

5. That, far from removing the Japanese immigration problem from discussion, this move will simply project the issue into the field of world intrigue, and thereby increase the probability of another world war in this generation.

Anti-Asiatic For Politics.

Fundamentally, the politicians in senate do not care whether an additional 146 Japanese come into the United States each year. But the democrats saw in the Hanihara-Hughes correspondence an opportunity and they became, all of a sudden, violently anti-Asiatic. In this they had the encouragement of the three California rivals — Senators Hiram Johnson and Sam Shortbridge, republicans and ex-Senator James Phelan, democrat. Shortbridge helped to railroad Tom Mooney to prison; Johnson kept him there, and Phelan stood proudly on his early record of having sent out the police, when he was mayor of San Francisco, to club the striking teamsters, from the ferry terminal to the city hall. Now they chorus their loyalty to the California workingman.

3,500,000 German School Children In Want of Food

More than 3,500,000 of Germany's 14,000,000 school children are in desperate need of food, according to information in the hands of the F. S. R. Diseases which were rare in Germany before 1914, are now common among the school children, due to the lack of milk and green vegetables.

Children are suffering from many skin troubles, due to the lack of nourishment and a great many are afflicted with vermin, the latter condition being caused by inability to bathe and a lack of proper changes of underclothing. Most of the public baths in Berlin have been closed, as the public baths are used by the workers and the wealthy. Germans don't care if the workers and their children go unwashed. Tuberculosis is increasing in Germany, particularly among the younger children.

ONLY THE WORKERS OF OTHER COUNTRIES CAN HELP THE CHILDREN OF GERMANY'S WORKERS. The Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany, 32 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, is the American Branch of the International Workers Aid, which is furnishing the relief.

FEDERATION HITS MUSCLE SHOALS BOUNTY TO FORD

Says Grafting Reigns In Government.

Two resolutions against the letting of government contracts to private corporations which thereby reap huge profits were passed by the Chicago Federation of Labor at its meeting yesterday. The federation unanimously passed a resolution demanding that Muscle Shoals be retained and exploited by the government. The resolution condemned the turning over of this vast power resource to Henry Ford or any other private individual, or corporation.

The meeting went on record in favor of the Norris-McKellar bill now before Congress, which describes Muscle Shoals as being capable of unlimited development of hydro-electric power.

Oppose Private Munition Plant.

The other resolution which was unanimously passed, was presented by the International Association of Machinists. The machinists' resolution showed that the Rock Island arsenal and in fact every arsenal and navy yard in the country, is now lying practically idle, while the motors, munitions, aeroplanes and engines needed by the government are being constructed by private corporations. The union machinists all over the country have been thrown out of work. Those living near the arsenals and navy yards have been thrown out of work.

In addition, the government is throwing away millions of dollars of the peoples' money, for, the resolution points out, the government in its own plants can make the supplies much cheaper than can be contracted for.

Raps Government of Grafters.

Graft in the present administration has not stopped in spite of the Teapot Dome investigation, the Federation's resolution added. Ships, it declares, are now being contracted for in private yards, which could be more cheaply constructed in the government's own shipyards. At the present time parts of aeroplane engines are being bought from private firms all over the United States and assembled on the field, while the aeroplane manufacturing machinery of the government is literally rusting away.

Pullman Strikers Not Allowed To See Famous Robot Play

play with feeling and skill to a full house.

Harry Pires as Harry Domin, General Manager of R.U.R. factory, admirably interpreted the part of the hopeful capitalist who expected that in time the world would be peopled with a happy aristocracy supported by the robots, the laboring machines. Geraldine Udell made the character of Helena Glory the truly feminine role it should be under capitalism—the girl who comes to the factory full of idealistic liberalism to inspire the robots and give them "Souls". The other members of the cast showed sympathetic understanding of their characters.

The unusually fine musical program which accompanied the play was furnished by the Young Workers' League orchestra.

Sixty-five dollars for the Labor Defense Council was collected during one intermission while William F. Kruse spoke.

Capek's drama is a mirror, imperfect of course, of the European situation since the war. The robots are everywhere learning their power and uniting to destroy, not man, but those inhuman forces working thru certain men against the workers of the world. In the Epilogue of Capek's play the only man left alive vainly strives to recall the secret of robot manufacture to save the world, but the concluding scene shows Primus and Helena, the robots, discovering their own romance, and we are left to believe that thru them the world will be continued.

In spite of the weak ending of the play, Capek succeeds in picturing the mechanizing of the workers under modern industrial conditions and makes the robots all that the capitalists would like their workers to be: totally without feeling or more than average thought. Slowly the workers, like the robots, become more conscious of their power and in the climax they, too, will raise themselves to the seats of the mighty and make for themselves the new world.

FINNS ELECT 18 COMMUNISTS IN SPITE OF RAIDS

Hundreds of Arrests Can't Cow Party.

(Stockholm Cable to Tyomies)

STOCKHOLM, April 15.—In the Finnish parliamentary elections held April 1 and 2 the Communists polled a total of nearly 100,000 votes, according to final returns from election districts.

* * * *

In the 1922 elections the Socialist Labor Party (Communist) received 127,527 votes, or 15 per cent of the total cast and elected 27 members to the parliament. In that year the Communists were able to take part in the elections with their party organization intact and in possession of their press, having thus at least some opportunity for making an organized campaign, altho even then their activities were largely restricted.

In the recent election, however, the Communist Party had been subjected to systematic attacks and raids. Party organization was crushed by the government and bourgeoisie parties, hundreds of influential leaders have been arrested and the press suppressed, with the exception of a tri-weekly newspaper. Under such conditions no organized campaign of any magnitude was possible before the present elections, so that the fact that the Communists nevertheless received over 98,000 votes and elected 18 representatives is evidence of the fact that Communism cannot be checked or stamped out for any length of time.

The various parties elected the following number of representatives to the parliament, the figures in parenthesis indicating the representation in the last parliament:

Communists	18	(27)
Agrarian League	44	(45)
Coalition Party	37	(35)
Progressives	17	(15)
Socialists	60	(53)

The Finnish Communists will have more power in parliament than their numbers imply.

JAP EXCLUSION AND REGISTRATION UP TO COOLIDGE

Cautious Cal Won't Say What He Will Do.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 20.—Senate and House have both passed the immigration bill and now it is up to Coolidge to pass or veto it. The coming conference between the Senate and House will iron out a few details, but the broad phases of the bill are expected to remain unchanged.

Coolidge has not said what he will do. Cautious Cal has been playing a "watchful waiting" game. He has no definite and stubborn policies of his own, but waits to see how the cat will jump.

Jap Exclusion And Registration.

The outstanding issues of the Immigration Bill can be summed up as:

1. Japanese exclusion.

2. Registration of immigrants and a rule putting the burden of proof on the immigrant, not the government, as to whether he had complied with regulations and was a "desirable" resident or not.

3. The restriction of immigration from each country to two per cent annually of the number of national residents in America at the time of the 1890 census.

Farm Serf Clause.

4. Modification of the two per cent rule in the cases of agricultural countries by which quotas could be raised up to 25 per cent. Such agricultural immigrants would be required to come to certain specified and restricted farming areas in this country and could be deported if they left their jobs. (This clause, known as the "Farm Serf" clause, is a senate amendment and has not yet been ratified by the House.)

Regarding the Japanese exclusion issue, Ambassador Masane Hanihara says his recent warning letter to Secretary of State Hughes, was misinterpreted. He stands, however, by his statement that enactment of the Japanese exclusion act would "create, or at least tend to create, an unhappy atmosphere of ill feeling and misgivings over the relations between our two countries."

Kansas Mines at Low Ebb.

TOPEKA, Kans., April 20.—Kansas mines averaged only 118 days' work during 1923, according to the state mine inspector. This represents less than 40 per cent of a normal working year. It marks a decrease from 1922. The number of mines increased by 383, reaching a total of 10,459. The production of the state amounted to 4,650,479 tons, an increase of 1,132,236 over 1922.

LIFE OF MINERS' UNION DEPENDS ON ORGANIZING W. VA.

Scab Coal Is Swamping Union Markets.

By J. A. HAMILTON.

Reports from Charleston, W. Va., dated April 15, are to the effect that the failure of the Kanawha Coal Operators' Association to renew the contract means open shop operation by practically all mines in this section, the last stand of unionism in southern West Virginia. The union officials are reported to claim that many operators, however, will sign as individuals. But even so, the best that can be hoped is to save only a fraction of the union in the Kanawha valley, unless the organization campaign which is talked of materializes and succeeds better than organization campaigns have been doing under Caesar John L. Lewis.

One-fourth of the mines in eastern Ohio have suspended entirely, and most of the rest are running very short time. The Grand Trunk Railway, operating three large mines, is reported to claim they can purchase coal in West Virginia cheaper than they can produce it. A reduction in freight rates from eastern Ohio points is being advocated, but that is based more on desire than upon probability of securing it.

The Coal Age spot price index of average coal prices on fourteen coals, representative of 90 per cent of the bituminous output, shows for 1924, week of March 24, $2.13 per ton, March 31, $2.04; April 7, $2.07; as compared with the week of April 9, 1923, $2.82 per ton. This means that only the low-cost operators are going to be able to operate.

Coal Age is one of the leading coal operators' magazines. It states in the April 10, 1924, issue: "It is generally conceded that the next three years will show more real progress in the art of mining than the last fifteen. New mechanical devices, new systems of management, new mining methods are under examination." This "progress" will affect the coal miners by (1) reducing the amount of labor in mining and hence the opportunities for employment; (2) by further reducing the severity of the labor and the craft skill demanded of the miners, thru the increased use of machinery and subdivision of the mining work; (3) by giving the operators opportunity to reduce wages because of surplus miners, and of new classifications of labor not covered by union scale or non-union custom; and [illegible] greater ability to utilize labor not experienced in the mines. The progress of electrification, of the oil industry and of better methods of burning coal are going to have an increasingly depressing effect on the coal industry and hence the miner.

Now as never before must the miners inquire as to what is before them.

Speed-Up System At Breaking Point On Vancouver Docks

(By The Federated Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 20.—Speeding up of longshoremen has moved at such a pace that the Shipping Federation has found it necessary to appoint a safety first engineer.

Since the breaking of the Int. Longshoremen's Association by the allied shipping interests of the coast and the introduction of what practically amounts to the open shop on the Vancouver waterfront, all prominent unionists and radicals have been blacklisted and prevented from earning their livelihood on the wharves. To replace the efficient workers the federation brought inexperienced men from the prairies and recent arrivals from England. Accidents and fatalities became almost daily occurrences. The "safety engineer" will look over the ship's gear when ready to load or discharge cargo and attempt to minimize hazards taken by the less experienced workers.

MACHINE GUNS IN KENTUCKY FIELD GLADDEN THE HEART OF BLACK DIAMOND CORRESPONDENT

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

"Hell's a popping on Straight Creek, four miles from Pineville, Ky.", writes the special war correspondent of Black Diamond, the coal operators' national organ, describing the war against the Miners' Union begun by the Liberty Coal and Coke Company. Elimination of the union is shown by the correspondent to be the underlying purpose of the mine owners, who are backed by the governor with troops.

There is a very fair chance, according to the Black Diamond correspondent, "that the operators will be successful in the skirmish as Governor Fields showed no hesitancy in sending troops and then more troops when the sheriff in the Pineville territory stated that he thought they were necessary and when the Liberty Coal and Coke Company asked for protection."

Clean Out the Camp.

"Operators are generally anxious," he continues, "to see the Liberty Company win its fight and company officials report that the time has come when they will have to beat the union or give up free American rights. The outcome of this fight is likely to have a considerable bearing all over the state. It is acknowledged that Straight Creek has long been a hotbed of unionism and that there is very little to be done other than clean out the camp and rid it of the element."

So these representatives of the employing class went to it, backed by a small army and the following quotations from the correspondent's story show the high spots of their method:

Eviction or Wage Cuts.

"Eviction notices were posted in the camp just before the shooting started and seemed to bring the trouble to a head. The company is posting eviction notices which gave all residents of the camp until April 30 to either resume work on a reduced wage scale and open shop basis or clear out.

"Eviction proceedings generally cause trouble. However, it is interesting to note that one of the West Virginia court rulings clarifies the operators' rights somewhat concerning eviction. There is no reason why the operator should be forced to house men that refuse to remain on its pay roll, and the laws should be amended so that workers would be forced to give up tenancy of property on short notice after striking, which is no different from quitting.

Machine Gun Nests.

"The camp is in a valley surrounded by high hills and giving marksmen good cover. Machine gun nests have been placed on the hills by the soldiers who now command the valley."

The above is a little picture of American rights as coal operators conceive them. Own the very land on which people must live in order to work. Issue an ultimatum to accept a pay cut and abandon their union or clear out. Get state troops to back the order and fill the hills with machine gun nests until the region resembles the Argonne before the armistice. Even if the workers don't accept the theory of class war the coal operators are determined to declare it.

Long Beach Sun Whipped In 5-Week Fight By Printers

(By The Federated Press)

LONG BEACH, Cal., April 20.—After five weeks lockout of its machine operators and printers in an attempt to reduce wages and go open shop, the Long Beach Morning Sun admits complete victory for its locked out union employes.

The lockout affected 45 members of the local Typographical union and was fought by the entire local organized labor movement. All the men have returned to their former positions, with a guarantee of back pay. The union won on all points, according to Eugene Donovan, International Typographical union representative.

Vice President Barnage, Mailers' union No. 9, who left his work in support of the locked out printers, was also reinstated at the conclusion of hostilities.

Publishers Go Broke In Fighting Printers' Union in New York

NEW YORK, April 20.—A new method of crippling unions in their bargaining power is being attempted by the New York Printers' league which turns out magazines for the National Publishers' Association.

The league's agreement with Typographical Union No. 6 runs to Sept. 30. The league under pressure of the publishers has served an ultimatum demanding an arbitration agreement now before negotiations for the new contract begins. As a threat to the union the N. P. A., which has no direct dealings with the union, has published the league letter to Local 6.

Acceptance of the ultimatum would rob the union of its potential strike weapon and permit the employers to dictate terms when wage negotiations begin, presumably Aug. 1. Between 5,000 and 6,000 men are affected. Local 6 recently signed a new agreement raising wages for newspaper compositors.

Suspicion that the employers' move is the prelude to a drive against wages has been aroused. The present scale on magazine work is $53 weekly, 44 hours for day work, $56 for night, and $59 for third shift, compared with the Chicago scale of $51 for day shift and $55 for night.

Employers claim that magazine publication is rapidly being withdrawn from New York because of uncertain labor conditions here. Union officials cite the case of the Carey Printing Co., which went bankrupt after moving to Boston, and say that its 24 magazines are again printed here. The Christ plant moved to Coopertown, N. Y., went bankrupt, and its 12 magazines have returned. Most of the magazines carried to Albany by the Williams Printing Co., have returned. Government statistics show that New York has one-quarter of the printing in the United States, and one-twelfth in the entire world, says the union in discounting the reasons assigned by the employers for their threat.

TROOPS SAVING GUNMEN FROM MINERS' WRATH

Government Supports Operators' Thugs.

By TOM TIPPETT.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

PINEVILLE, Ky., April 20.—Two companies of Kentucky militia have been withdrawn from the Straight creek mining camp, near Pineville. There are still 180 soldiers, including the Latonia tank company, left to protect the operators' gunmen who have been shooting up the countryside since April 1 when a strike was called at the Liberty Coal & Coke Co.'s mines on Straight creek.

General indignation among the county inhabitants prevails because the troops were called.

Overrun With Gunmen.

The so-called mine war here is the same old story. The operators refused to make an agreement with the miners' union. This forced a strike. Professional strikebreakers were immediately shipped in and the community was overrun with gunmen. Hundreds of families fled from the camps and are being cared for on the upper floor of the Pineville courthouse. A guard is alleged to have been killed in the indiscriminate shooting up of the camp. It was blamed on the miners. The troops were rushed in by the governor.

Citizens Protest.

Gov. William J. Fields' office was flooded with protests from the citizens here against the presence of the troops. D. M. Binham, a Pineville lawyer, in a letter to the governor charged the troops were called for two reasons:

1—To enable certain mine operators to further their war to crush out union labor. 2—To discredit the governor with the labor organizations which supported him in his election.

"The presence at the Liberty mine," Binham said, "of civilian armed guards, hired gunmen and professional strikebreakers, is the source of all the trouble there. If county officials had done their duty by disarming these imported thugs there would have been no further trouble."

The Liberty mines are in District 19, U. M. W. A. (Kentucky-Tennessee). This district is on strike because the operators refused to accept the Jacksonville settlement.

COOLIDGE HIS OWN PLATFORM

ing cattle present to do as they were told. All in all it was a splendid exhibition of our exalted democracy as practiced by one of the major political parties in the largest state in population in the Union.

Corruption Everywhere.

Direct from the seething cauldron of venality and filth at Washington, Hughes appeared much worn. He is a vastly changed individual from the sartorically immaculate person who dilated upon the Monroe Doctrine before the convention of the American Bar Association at Minneapolis last fall (the last time the present writer saw him). It has been a hard winter and evidently a weary one for the chief apologist of the now defunct Harding-Coolidge administration. Instead of the eloquent abandon that characterized his Minneapolis speech, the New York audience listened to the droning of an old man, who tried to excuse the flagrant corruption in the cabinet of which he is a member by asserting that there are crooks in all parties and that no party has a monopoly of rascality.

"There are crooks in every community," said Hughes, and he ought to know, considering the fact that his associates have been proved to be among the most vile of criminals. The bigger crooks in Washington certainly ought to be familiar with the lesser crooks in all communities who carry out their policies of fraud.

Shouldn't Mistrust Government.

"It would be foolish, false and unpatriotic to breed distrust either of the integrity of the government or of the soundness of American life."

Hughes would have us believe that it is not the government itself that is at fault, but the individuals as individuals.

He neglected to enlighten his audience concerning the intricacies of politics in the United States and particularly the manner in which the political parties of capitalism obtain their campaign funds. A knowledge of the fact that Mr. Harry F. Sinclair was one of the principal contributors to the acknowledged $3,000,000 campaign fund of Mr. Hughes when he was an unsuccessful candidate for the presidency against Woodrow Wilson in 1916 would go a long way toward explaining why Hughes sat silent in cabinet meetings when the naval oil reserves were being juggled from the Navy Department to the Department of the Interior and then into the private possession of Mr. Sinclair and Mr. Doheny.

A knowledge of these facts, in connection with the recent oil scandals, would enlighten many as to the real character of the capitalist government of the United States. From his emphasis upon this point it was evident that Hughes feels deeply the humiliation of being part of a government that is held in general execration and contempt by all intelligent people in the country. There was a time when individuals who ridiculed the government were in such a small minority that they had to be cautious in their speech. Now things have come to such a pass that those who defend the government are looked upon with suspicion.

The Path of Justice.

Hughes frequently mentioned the name of Coolidge and occasionally quoted the inept utterances of the President. He always emphasized the President's name and then paused for the gang to applaud. A few rum-soaked individuals tried to entice the audience into the old campaign spirit of enthusism, but miserably failed. In relation to the scandals Coolidge was quoted as having said: "We propose to follow the clear, open path of justice. There will be immediate, unshrinking prosecution, criminal and civil, to punish the guilty and to protect every national interest."

These words were also emphasized, altho Hughes and the pee-wee politician, Coolidge, for whom he apologizes, know perfectly well they would both be in jail were those guilty of pillaging the natural resources of the nation punished.

Coolidge's type of "justice" reminds one of James Branch Cabell's "Jurgen," who was a just man, but who had sense enough to know that justice is no eternal entity, but a thing of time and place. When Mr. Hughes talks about justice, that bedraggled hag that has been prostitute to every political adventurer on earth, he invariably reminds us of Socialist Party conventions. The Socialists should be gratified at this, as it is proof that their ideas are at last being accepted by the government.

The Path of Imperialism.

Imperialism is the end and aim of the Coolidge-Hughes brand of justice, and the speaker took occasion to emphasize the great achievement of the Coolidge administration, which "has enjoyed the privilege of having advanced toward settlement a question which for forty years has disturbed our sister republics, Chile and Peru."

The controversy between the two nations is to be arbitrated by the President of the United States. This is another way of stating the fact that American dollars and terrorism in Chile and Peru have finally forced the governments of the two countries to recognize the hegemony of the government of the United States.

Harding, Coolidge and the Republican Party came to power in order to use the government to fight for the economic interests of the steel trust, the oil trust, the harvester trust, the meat packing trust and other industrial groups. U. S. Steel is interested in the iron of Chile, the nitrate beds also attract American capital; the wheat fields and cattle ranches of Peru absorb investment capital of the McCormicks, the Armours and other industrialists.

Coolidge will "arbitrate" the differences between the two countries so that they will both alike become political satrapies of the United States and their future will be determined exclusively by the interests of that group of American imeprialists that considers South America the logical field for investment of the surplus produced by the workers of the United States.

Hughes also informed his audience that he was "glad to be able to add that the efforts to secure an independent and stable government in Santo Domingo, so as to permit the ending of our occupation, have met with gratifying success." He voiced the hope that the plan for a permanent government in Santo Domingo will soon be carried into effect. This is a polite way of announcing that the invasion of that country by American troops, the dispersal of the constituted government of the country and the subduing of the populace is now an accomplished fact and that the natives are now impotent under the iron heel of American imperialism. Hughes was silent on the question of Haiti, so he evidently intends a continuation of the rule of the bayonet until a "stable" government has been established there.

Exposes His Motive.

Eulogizing the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, which was a triumph for industrial capital, Hughes, in dealing with its effects, asserted:

"It is interesting to note the increased imports from Canada, Latin America and Asia, indicating the extent to which we are going directly to the source of production for our raw materials, instead of getting them partly manufactured from Europe." (Emphasis mine.—H. M. W.)

Here we see revealed the underlying motive for the revision of the Monroe Doctrine and its interpretation to include hegemony of the United States over the two American continents. The tariff bill keeps out foreign manufactured products and the South American diplomacy of Hughes guarantees inexhaustible supplies of raw materials. Beneath all the benevolent concern for the welfare of the South American countries is the sordid aim of American imperialism to make them feeders for American industries by forcing them to yield up their natural resources.

Peace in the Pacific.

The Washington Conference and the dissolution of the Anglo-Japanese alliance was hailed by the secretary of state as a guarantee of peace in the Pacific at least so far as this generation can see ahead.

The American policy of the "open door" was waken out of diplomatic notes and made the subject of a formal treaty."

Thus China, at the mercy of the imperialist robber bands of the world is still to yield to the "open door" policy, so assiduously adhered to since Woodrow Wilson's repudiation of the famous Six-Power Loan in the early days of his first presidential term—a repudiation that had the sanction of the House of Morgan and the open praise of the Wall Street Journal.

The "open door" simply means that no nation will enjoy favors not accorded other nations in China, until such time as the question is fought out on the Pacific between the navies and air fleets of the United States, England and Japan. For the United States it means that this government will hold what it has until it achieves sufficient concentration of power to take more.

Since all these achievements were brought about under the leadership of Harding, they can hardly be credited to Coolidge, so the sole recommendation of Coolidge is, by a curious method of reasoning, Coolidge himself. Hughes concluded by assuring the audience that no other platform is needed, because he embodies "the spirit of justice, and that the best assurance of the future is the character of Calvin Coolidge."

Hughes neglected to mention his other virtue—silence.

Coolidge is silent because he is ignorant. He, like Harding, is too stupid to be trusted as the political spokesman of the imperialist group he represents. He is totally devoid of that aggressiveness and mentality that characterized Roosevelt and Wilson. They were truly efficient spokesmen of the interests they served.

After all, Hughes is more nearly right than he suspects. For Coolidge, the puritanical Down East ignoramus, the midget politician, is truly the symbol of the mental, moral and political decrepitude of the Republican Party.

Appeal to Chicago Labor to Aid Brave Garment Workers

The Chicago Federation of Labor, thru its "Committee of 15" appointed to co-operate with the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union in its Chicago strike, has sent out the following appeal to all Chicago Unions to aid the strikers:

To the Affiliated Unions.

Greeting:—By an unanimous vote the Chicago Federation of Labor endorsed the strike of the Ladies' Garment Workers and appointed a special committee of fifteen members of various unions for the purpose of rendering assistance possible in this strike situation.

The task of sustaining the strikers against the tremendous opposition arrayed against them is now a duty, responsibility and obligation of Organized Labor. Therefore the committee is making the following appeal:

On February 27, 1924, a general strike was ordered by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against dress manufacturers in Chicago. Twenty-five hundred workers were affected.

The demands of the Union:

1. Ten per cent wage increase.
2. Forty hour week.
3. Collective bargaining in the industry.

The strike is now in its tenth week.

Eighty shops employing twelve hundred workers have made settlements on union basis. Thirteen hundred are still on strike.

Eighty per cent of the strikers are women.

Sixteen of the larger employers have formed a dress manufacturers' association in the Loop. They are fighting against unionism in the dress industry in Chicago.

These employers have the actual co-operation of all anti-labor forces in Cook County.

The yellow dog contract system has been resorted to; employes are compelled to sign same or suffer the employer's black-list in this industry.

Judge Denis E. Sullivan issued a sweeping injunction against any form of picketing.

Dudley Taylor, attorney for the Citizen's Committee and Employers' Association is the leading spirit against the union, both in State's Attorney Crowe's office and in Judge Sullivan's court.

State's Attorney Crowe has given these scab employers unlawful and unprecedented special police assistance.

Private gunmen are employed by the bosses to browbeat these women pickets.

A number of girls were brutally assaulted by police and gunmen.

Over five hundred arrests have been made during this strike.

Judge Sullivan found twenty-six girls guilty of contempt of court in twenty minutes.

Ninety strikers have been fined in Sullivan's court to the tune of forty thousand dollars.

Jail sentences for contempt of court have been handed out to these girls by Sullivan, from fifteen to fifty days.

The machinery of justice seems well oiled against labor.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has decided to keep up the fight until collective bargaining shall have been established in the dress industry of Chicago, the same as now prevails in other competitive markets.

These women strikers are making a great heroic fight.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of Chicago recently voted $10,000 to aid this fight. The struggle has now reached the stage where organized labor should speak in terms of bread.

What can you do?

The undersigned committee of fifteen from the Chicago Federation of Labor by unanimous vote decided to send out this appeal urging every union man and woman to come to the rescue and assist these girls in their heroic struggle financially.

He who fights with all his might will overthrow wrong and establish right!

Do something now.

Mail all checks to Chicago Federation of Labor, 166 W. Washington Street, and the same will be promptly receipted for.

BOOM DAWES AS RUNNING MATE TO CAUTIOUS CALVIN

"Hell and Maria" Suits The Bankers.

WASHINGTON, April 20. — The Vice-Presidential boom which some of his admiring friends have started for "Hell and Maria" Dawes has naturally been followed by other booms, launched by those who do not want their candidates shut out by failure to speak up in time.

One of the most interesting moves in the direction of the vice-presidency comes fro ma group of progressives who see an opportunity to get second place on the republican ticket as a concession to the strong progressive sentiment of the West and Northwest. This group suggests that the G. O. P. must select a progressive to balance Mr. Coolidge's conservatism in the hope of counter-acting the farse of Farmer-Labor Third Party sentiment that is sweeping the west.

Suggest Kenyon and Borah

Former senator William S. Keyon of Iowa has been suggested in this connection, but the progressives sponsoring the idea want somebody even more aggressively liberal than Kenyon. Borah would suit them better, there is little liklihood that he could consider the proposal under the circumstances.

Such a position would remove him entirely from the senate battle ground and would there cripple to a great extent the power he would as one of the cleverest strategists and readiest field generals in the upper chamber.

Coolidge Likes Dawes

Respecting the Dawes boom, which is of course, basen on his success in putting over the German settlement, administration circles are silent, tho Dawes is admirably held in high esteem by Coolidge. And some Old Guard leaders have been pointing out that not only is Dawes a dyed-in-the-wool party man but that the bankers of the country are certain to support him.

GERMAN WORKERS SHARING SCRAPS WITH EACH OTHER

Workers Council Feeds Thousands Daily

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

BERLIN, April 20.— In Germany, as in every nation, there are hard-hearted people concerned about themselves alone who are spending the winter on the Riviera or in southern Italy while their fellow human beings at home are starving. It is true that the big employers discharge thousands of employes in an effort to break the eight-hour day, and then, with a grandiloquent gesture, make a donation to "charity" for soup kitchens.

But it is also true that there is a heroism and self-sacrifice and brotherliness shown by certain classes of the German people, especially by the workers and the impoverished intellectuals and middle-classes, of which little news reaches the outside world.

Take the workers. There are the postal employes, who are especially concerned about their old people and about those who were dismissed when economy hit all departments of the government. In Berlin, Dresden, and Halle all postal employes contribute a share of their wages toward helping the less fortunate.

Hamburg Workers' Council.

Again, in Dresden, the employes of a number of large firms have taxed themselves a percentage of their wages. The money is used for soup kitchens feeding 200 unemployed each. They have insisted that their employers furnish the room for the kitchens. In Lubeck and Bergen the municipal employes voluntarily part with a share of their wages for the unemployed. In Hamburg a workers' council has been organized, which daily distributes 10,000 meals, the money for which comes from the employed workers.

International Workers.

In Berlin there is much activity. One channel is the International Workers' Aid, concerning whose soup kitchens supported by the workers from all over the world, The Federated Press has reported repeatedly. The German workers themselves are contributing loyally to this organization. The Committee for Workers' Welfare lays special emphasis upon child feeding. This committee has branches in other cities.

One form of quiet, unassuming help of which little is known is that of inviting a needy person to take meals in one's own family. It is hard to obtain statistics on this, but there can be no doubt that the practice is widespread. The welfare organizations have tried to encourage people to report to them when they arrange for a steady guest, but many prefer not to report. The figures obtained speak of 125,000 men, women and children receiving free berths at the tables of others.

School Children Share Meals.

In many families children take a double portion of lunch to school. The children deliver the second lunch to the teacher, who distributes the offering. Another practice is that of having classes at school "adopt" an aged couple by supplying food.

When considering the appeals of German relief organizations in America, it should be remembered that the German workers are digging deep into their threadbare pockets to relieve distress.

New Jersey Wages Drop.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—Wages are falling in New Jersey, according to a report issued here by the Philadelphia federal reserve bank showing that average weekly wages declined 1 per cent in March. Despite the customary spring increase in jobs, there was no more employment in New Jersey in March than in February. Textile and leather manufacture showed a sharp decline in employment.

Organizational Problems of the Workers Party

By A. BIMBA.

I hope that the declaration of the Central Executive Committee on the "Activities of the Workers Party" will be carefully read and studied by all of our comrades. The C. E. C. correctly points out that "our supreme objective, our fundamenal conception in the period inmmediately before us, must be the building of a mass Communist Party" and that "that means that the activities of our Party must be developed upon a balanced program of education, organization, and strategy." If we carefully analyze the development of the Workers Party and its present status, we will find that we haven't had such a balanced program. And I think that the organizational part of our program has been and still remains very far behind all other activities of our Party. Our Party organization is not closely following our influence in the masses, which we have attained during the last two years.

No Slacking of Education

Let us be understood that we cannot even for a moment entertain the idea that we should slacken our educational and political activities. We must carry them on with still greater enthusiasm and intensity. And when I say that we must pay more attention to our organizational work in the Party, I do not entertain the notion that we should neglect our educational and political activities. What we need is not minimizing one or the other phase of our movement, but proper co-ordination of them.

"All educational and political activities must be closely followed by organization," says the declaration of the C. E. C. "The party must absorb and make use of all the workers brought into sympathetic contact with the party thru education or common participation in the struggle. Organization is a question of life and death to a Communist movement; our activities of every sort must receive special organizational attention, they cannot be allowed to drift along in a vague and uncrystalized form."

Thru our political activities we have created large spheres of influence in various organizations of the workers. Thousands of workers are our sympathizers. They are with us and are working for our program. Ideologically they are ready for membership in the Workers Party. Now the question arises: why are they not in the Party? I see only one answer to this question and that is that we have not convinced them of the importance and the necessity of joining the Communist Party. They do not understand the role of the Communist Party in the class struggle.

As soon as we convince the worker that the working class cannot overthrow the yoke of capitalism without organized communist leadership, he will join your ranks. Now the thing for us to do is to bring the message of the Workers Party to these thousands of sympathizers, and gradually they will be absorbed into the Party. They know that there is somewhere in existence such a thing as the Workers Party, but they do not know that the moving and guiding force behind all the revolutionary movements in this country is the Workers Party. Our sympathizers see only individual members of the W. P., but they do not see the Party as such.

Two Methods

There are two ways of bringing the message of the Workers Party to these sympathizers. One is thru the individual members of the Party, and another thru the mass meetings of the Party. I do not want to take too much space of the paper, therefore, I will say a few words only about the second question.

I think that so far we have either been unable or did not see the necessity of utilizing our mass meetings for approaching the workers with the message of the Workers Party to the extent that we should have done. Our speakers very cleverly discuss the general problems of capitalism and the working class movement. They are real masters in condemning the capitalist system and in exposing its decay and crimes. And the workers like their speeches very much. They applaud, they contribute money to further our work, they are ready to fight with us against the enemies of the working class. That is, thru our meetings we increase the number of our sympathizers. But we do not take time and pains to tell these workers what our party is doing, what is its program, and why it is absolutely necessary for them to come and join our ranks. We do not tell them that it is not enough for them to help the Communists and their movement, but that they themselves must become Communists by joining the Communist Party.

Three Examples

As examples of the neglect of our organizational work along these lines I want to take the last three mass meetings that were held in the City of New York.

First, the great mass meeting in Madison Square Garden. As far as the attendance is concerned the meeting was a success beyond our expectations. But did it bring great organizational results? No! Why? Let us us look upon the arrangement of the program. We had the best speakers. Comrade Foster was to make an appeal for the Workers Party. He delivered a masterful speech.

But he was left last on the program, when many of the people were already leaving the hall and about half of the audience was standing between the chairs. The speech lost its entire effect and the good appeal did not bring the desired results. The main object of the meeting should have been to convince the workers that the Workers Party is a Party of Leninism and if they want to effectively continue the work of Lenin they must join the Workers Party.

Instead of that the meeting turned out to be a Communist school room in which the teachers very effectively expounded Leninism to their pupils, that is, they have done good educational work and increased the number of our sympathizers, but the organizational results of the meeting were almost negligible.

Lack of Co-ordination.

What was the matter? We absolutely failed in the co-ordination of our educational work with the organizational. Comrade Foster should have been placed either first or second on the program. He would have pointed the way of the entire meeting, the way that leads direct into the Workers Party. Leninism in this country would have been made a synonym to the Workers Party.

Second, our mass meeting on the celebration of the Paris Commune and the Fifth Anniversary of the Communist International. We had several good speakers. All of them spoke about the Paris Commune and the heroic struggle of the communards. The main lesson from the failure of the Paris Commune is that the communards were too lenient with their enemies. Therefore, when we get power we must show no mercy toward the counter-revolution, and hence the necessity of the dictatorship of the proletariat.

None of the speakers pointed out that another reason for the failure of the Paris Commune was because they did not have a well organized Communist Party.

None of them said anything about the Communist International and its American section, the Workers Party. Only at the end of the program the chairman of the meeting talked a few minutes about the Communist International and the Workers Party. He spoke well, but there wasn't sufficient time to expound that very important question, the audience was already tired and their minds were more on the question of how to get home as soon as possible and not on the question of Communism. Again the great occasion for a party membership drive was entirely lost, and of course, we didn't get any organizational results from this meeting.

More Organization Detail Needed.

Third, the meeting on the Teapot Dome scandal. We had four speakers. They condemned the capitalist system and the capitalist government to its very roots. I listened very attentively and only once heard the name of the Workers Party mentioned, and in such a way that hardly anybody understood what it was all about. Again we gained some more sympathizers, we have done good educational work, but nothing in the line of organization.

We had three mass meetings under the auspices of the Workers Party, which were absolute failures from the standpoint of organization.

If we want to get the workers into our Party we must change the character of the programs of our mass meetings. We must call upon them to join our ranks.

THAW MILLIONS ARE THE STAKE IN SANITY TRIAL

Evelyn Wants Russell to Inherit Estate.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—The entire aspect of Harry K Thaw's sanity trial has been changed by collapse of the orignal plan to have the millionaire paranoic testify in his own behalf and tell his story to the jury. The plan collapsed when opposition counsel refused to cross-examine Thaw.

Now, however, the part that Evelyn Nesbit, Thaw's former wife, can play becomes of increasing importance. She was to have been used to prompt Attorney Gray in cross-examination of Thaw. On behalf of her son Russell, for whom she claims heritage of the Thaw millions, she is opposing Harry's release.

Gray had been in doubt as to whether he would call Evelyn to the stand. He would not have done so had he cross-examined Thaw to his satisfaction. Now he may play Evelyn as his big card.

Similarly, the opposition's interest in Evelyn increases and they were considering the possible damage she might do their cause. Mrs. Mary Thaw, Harry's mother, still is adamantly oposed to a settlement with Evelyn, however.

As the case now stands, preponderance of evidence is on Thaw's side, but so is the burder of proof. His counsel has called alienists, physicians and friends of the alleged lunatic to prove him sane. The other side has alenists to declare him otherwise.

Hearings resume Monday.

Dinner Pail Epics
by Bill Lloyd

Detroit M. D.s are turning down Ford's bid to eat hash in that town at Henry's hospital because—the doctors there who use the saws cut up the patients a la Ford and punch the clock for Henry's board.

They sed to them it seemed to be that all Hank Ford's efficiency, as shown in running hospitals for fixing livers, lungs and galls, made surgeons into human tinkers, instead of scientific thinkers. They overhaul the human frame as a garage man does same with one of Henry's cars of tin when any parts get worn too thin. They jack the poor cuss up in bed, shoot anesthetic in his head, roll up their sleeves, adjust their bench and fix him with a monkey wrench.

In these days workers seem to be the victims of efficiency. From human beings they've become high-speed machines, fast-geared but dumb. Somehow a man ain't just the same when he's a number, not a name, when his whole life they Taylorize, until efficiently he dies, and Manager of Personnel comes round to see the folks and tell that Number nineteen twenty-four has breathed his last and is no more, and that the company's own priest will function with the very least loose motion, friction, and lost power in this the very trying hour when Number nineteen twenty-four has punched the clock on yonder shore.

I hadn't otta be profane, but we may see an endless chain pick up the workers, crushed and gory, and run 'em straight to purgatory.

ANNA GOULD'S HUBBY READY TO HOCK HIS GERMAN PRINCIPALITY

PARIS, April 20.— "This prince is too much trouble." That, in a sentence, sums up the reasons the duke of Talleyrand de Perigord, husband of Anna Gould, has put his principality of Sagan on the auction block.

"My rights as Prince of Sagan are very limited," the duke explained in an interview with newspapermen, "and there are too many duties."

"I have nothing to do with the laws of the principality and have little authority. In fact, I've nothing except my titles, my lands and my chateau.

"My subjects are dependents of Germany."

The principality, which the duke announced as "for sale" recently, is situated between Silesia and Bradenburg and has existed since 1649, when the King of Bohemia made a gift of it to the great military leader Wallenstein. It has been in the Talleyrand family since 1845. It includes 500 square miles with 65,000 inhabitants, a capital city and a river full of fish.

Senators Vow They Will Pinch Brother Of Harry Daugherty

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Senator Wheeler and Senator Brookhart, following an executive session of their committee April 16, announced that Mal Daugherty, brother of the former attorney general, will be arrested and brought before the senate for contempt. They decided that Howard Mannington, who has defied the committee's summons to testify and has raised the same objection that was used against the oil investigating committee by Harry Sinclair—that it has no legal authority—shall be reserved for direct criminal prosecution on charges of bribe-taking and conspiracy to violate federal laws. Mannington was one of Harry Daugherty's close associates. He is alleged to have shared the graft in the issuance of whisky removal permits and in the illegal transportation of the Dempsey prizefight films.

Down With War, Say Women

NEW YORK, April 20.—Make War Illegal—Abolish the Army and Navy, said the signs carried by Women's Peace union representatives who marched to the New York state Republican convention here. The women, led by Tracy Mygatt, saw the Republican resolutions committee chairman but could not convince him that their plank should go in the G. O. P. platform.

YOUTH VIEWS

By HARRY GANNES

VON SEECKT DICTATORSHIP DELAYS Y. C. I. BUREAU SESSION DECISIONS.

Suppression and the Von Seekt dictatorship in Germany delayed the arrival of the Resolutions and Theses of the Fourth Bureau Session of the Young Communist International, held in Moscow last year.

Tho the decisions and resolutions were written some months back they are particularly applicable to present conditions in the league and in the United States today.

What will interest our members and the workers generally in the United States most is the anti-military decisions.

One of the points in the bureau session pamphlet that is particularly meeting the attention of the American communist youth organization, the Young Workers League of America, is that which calls for "the organization of a widespread anti-militarist education among the children and youth.

With war preparations speeding up, the anti-military resolution of the Fourth Bureau session is of immediate importance to the young workers of this country and makes very interesting reading. The members of the Y. W. L. will find it the best guide for their work in this field.

What is of permanent importance to the young workers, as well as the adult members of the revolutionary movement is the experiences of building shop nuclei and the conclusions drawn therefrom.

All over the world the young communist leagues have been trying to reconstruct and build their organizations on the shop nuclei basis, at the place of work rather than in residential territories; and success has been recorded by more than one country. Foremost is the young communist league of Germany.

In the United States, the Young Workers League has established some shop nuclei, and continually stresses the importance of changing to this form of organization. The Workers Party has also paid some attention to this necessary organizational work.

The Thesis and Resolutions of the Fourth Bureau session contains some very interesting and helpful material for those comrades who work in shops, the proper places for the organization of shop nuclei. Every member of league and party would find it enlightening to study and understand the shop nuclei resolutions of the young communist international especially since these resolutions are based on nearly one year of experience all over the world.

The statements on the agrarian youth will interest our farming comrades, and the trade union and economic resolutions are of prime importance to our members in the trade unions and in industry.

The number of pamphlets available is limited; and copies can be had from the Y. W. L., 1009 N. State St., retail 20 cents; for bundle orders (10 or more) 17 cents a copy.

Show "Polikushka" At Symphony Hall in Boston on April 22

BOSTON, April 20.—The activities of the Boston local of the Friends of Soviet Russia will receive an additional spurt with the showing of the film "Polikushka" and "Russia and Germany" in that city. These films, so well received in all cities thruout the country, will be shown on April 22 at Symphony Hall.

Not content with the usual promotion for the showing of these pictures groups are being organized under the direction of Comrade George Kraska, secretary of the local, to visit and speak at labor and fraternal organizations.

The showing of the pictures in this city are only an addition to the activities of this local. A house to house canvass for funds to aid the starving German workers and their children tho small in total, averaged $10 per couple.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.— A squad of six policemen in charge of a sergeant were present to investigate a mass meeting held by the San Francisco local of the F. S. R. The police were sent by Lyman Wilbur, professor at the University of California, and at present in charge of the General Allen Drive, a German relief campaign organized by the labor-hating "Hell 'n Maria" Dawes now in Germany, and father of the Minute Men of the Constitution of such ill odor in Illinois.

An explanation of the purposes of the F. S. R. and a show of the literature on hand seemingly convinced the police who returned to report to their chief, Lyman Wilbur.

The San Francisco local, one of the most active of all the locals in this country, on March 19th made a 547 pound shipment of clothing on the steamer "Drechdyke" and have double that amount ready for the next steamer.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—Union barbers have tied up all the shops in this New York suburb by walking out following refusal of their wage demands. They get $25 a week and 50 per cent of receipts over $35. They want $30 and 50 per cent over $45 receipts.

OPERATORS USE UNEMPLOYMENT IN WAR ON MINERS

But Strikers Refuse to Take Wage Cuts

By LELAND OLDS.

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

Slack business makes this the ideal time for the coal operators to settle issues with the miners, according to the editor of Black Diamond, the leading operators' journal of the trade. Both editorially and in its news columns this periodical shows that under cover of the Jacksonville agreement the operators intend war on the United Mine Workers.

"With business at a standstill," says the editor, "and with contracts hard to secure it cannot be material to many operators whether they run their mines now or not, so settlements of the points at issue might be brought about even tho it might involve suspension of operations.

200,000 Miners Unemployed.

Approximately 200,000 miners in the union fields are now out of employment, according to Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers. The remaining 350,000 are not working more than two or three days a week.

Strikers by States.

Those completely idle include 50,000 on strike against a cut in wages. These are distributed as follows: 40,000 out in Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Texas and Oklahoma; 5,000 in southeastern Kentucky and Tennessee; 10,000 in southern West Virginia; 10,000 in Canadian provinces and 15,000 in western Kentucky.

Rate at Which Fields Work.

The extent of the depression in mining during the latter half of March is shown in the weekly production figures of the U. S. geological survey. These show many important fields operating at less than 50 per cent of capacity with "no market" the chief cause. The percent of capacity idle is shown in the following table:

Illinois	62
Indiana	61
Southern Ohio	85
Pittsburgh rail	68
Westmorland	45
Central Pennsylvania	47
West Virginia—Fairmont	46
Winding Gulf	44
New River	58
Pocahontas	50
Tug River	46
Kanawha	58
Logan	58
Kentucky—Northeast	51
Western	70
Hazard	51
Harlan	44

The process of surrounding the central competitive field with open shop fields operating at a lower wage scale is slowly proceeding. The agreement on the part of the Northern West Virginia Operators' Association to accept the Jacksonville scale appears to have been made by a rump organization of that body. According to Black Diamond only 21 of the mines in that group voted for ratification and many of the remainder will attempt to operate independently of the union. It continues:

Drive On Wages Continues.

"Where there has been no agreement with the union, mine owners are seeking business and at such times as contracts are secured expect to resume operations on an adjusted wage scale. On the Monongah division of the B. & O. and on the Monongahela railway it is claimed that there are 25 non-union mines in operation in addition to many mines on the Cumberland division and the Charleston division of the B. & O. not to speak of the non-union mines on the Morgantown and Kingwood railroad. On the Monongahela railway in Pennsylvania near the West Virginia line and therefore in competition with mines in Monogalia county 50 of the 75 mines are being operated on a non-union basis. In the Upshur county field virtually all of the mines except those of the Red Rock Fuel Co. at Red Rock are operating now and have been operating since the first of April on the 1917 wage scale."

Canadian Government Makes Effort at Tax Cutting to Save Self

OTTAWA, Canada.—The Canadian government has taken a step toward the reduction of taxation. It has not reduced the income tax, but it has made some small cuts in the tariff and in the sales tax. The tariff reductions are limited to implements used in agriculture, lumbering, mining, fishing and the coke industry. There are some reductions in the taxes on a few varieties of food; but these are by a lowering of the sales tax and not by the tariff. The sales tax is subjected to a general cut from 6 to 5 per cent. The sales tax on boots and shoes is cut in two.

Most of these changes are in the nature of a reduction in protection, but there are exceptions. The reductions are due to the political situation, which makes it necessary for the government to get support from the Progressive party. Western Liberal feeling, too, has been vigorously demanding changes in that direction.

BIG TAG DAY IN NEW YORK FOR GERMAN NEEDY

Local Has Already Raised $18,000.

The workers of New York will rally for the tag days on Saturday and Sunday, April 26 and 27, to collect for German relief. On that day collections will be made in the streets to aid the suffering working class of Germany, and to show international solidarity and the spirit of self-help of the workers. Volunteers are needed for the collections. There must be no slackers in this great work to save the whole working class of Germany. Let the children also come and take part in the work so as to help the little boys and girls of Germany who are in such terrible need.

The New York section of the Committee for International Workers' Aid has collected $18,000 up to date; but our New York comrades are not contented with this amount and they want to go still further in aid of our German brothers and sisters.

The Committee for International Workers' Aid is the American branch of the Internationale Arbeiter Hilfs Komitee which organized and directed an immense relief work in Soviet Russia during the famine. This organization helped the Japanese workers after the earthquake, this is the international workers' organization, that expression of world solidarity of the workers, ready to extend material help wherever it is needed.

Many Public Kitchens.

Now all the work is concentrated on relief of the German working class. So far 120 public kitchens have been opened in Germany, and thousands of working men, women and children are fed, children's homes are being maintained, more than a thousand children have been sent to foreign countries for cure. Help is extended to unemployed workers, to workers on strike, clothes are distributed, gift packages are disbursed. But all this is not enough to meet the terrible need existing in Germany. The hot summer days are coming and with them suffering and danger of epidemics. Disease is rampant in Germany. The children are the greatest sufferers. Thousands of school children come to school without having eaten any breakfast; most workers' children eat no warm meal a day; many children are kept from school because they are too weak for study. The children of the poor have no underwear and no change of clothing. The providers of millions of children are unemployed and many more are on part time work. There are not enough beds in the hospitals for the tubercular children.

Workers Must Help.

The workers must help, for no one else will help. If the American congress votes relief for Germany it only serves as a means for a Herbert Hoover to organize the counter-revolution in that country as was done in Hungary and in Russia.

The workers of Germany are fighting against starvation, unemployment, against the twelve-hour day, against their own capitalists and the capitalists of the world, against the counter-revolution, monarchist plots, against Socialist betrayal in connivance with Fascism, against military dictatorship. On the backs of the German workers are the financiers, the industrial barons, the speculators, the big landowners, the generals, the monarchists, armies of invasion, the whole band of enemies thirsty for the blood of the workers.

The working class of Germany retreated before the enemy. Shall it retreat still further? Shall it be forced to go down in defeat? Or will the workers of all countries rush to their aid?

Let the tag days of Saturday and Sunday, April 26 and 27, in New York be a blow against the internal and external enemies of the German workers, a blow against the enemies of the proletarian revolution of Germany, against world reaction. Let the tag days be a demonstration of international working class solidarity.

WASHINGTON.—By a margin of four votes, the progressives in the House have been able to strike from the immigration bill the words "or remain," which placed upon the alien in this country the burden of proof that he had not been of immoral character or otherwise unfit to enter when he came to this country.

GREAT DEMONSTRATION AGAINST CAPITALISM IN N. Y. ON MAY DAY

NEW YORK, April 20.—"The celebration of May Day—the holiday of the International Working Class—in the United States this year, must be a great demonstration against the Capitalist System and the Government which upholds and supports it," declares the May Day United Front Conference of New York City.

"Probably never before in history has there been such an exposure of rottenness and corruption as in the Teapot Dome investigation. The men in high office whom the members of the working class are asked to look up to are shown to be the paid agents of capitalism. Representatives, senators, members of the cabinet, yes, even the president past and present are splattered by the oily filth.

"No worker who has read the story of corruption coming from Washington can any longer have illusions about the Capitalist System and the Government which supports it. Capitalism stands before the workers and farmers as the looters of the nation, using the Government as its instrument, thru which to steal the nation's natural resources and exploit the producers of wealth.

Under the Iron Heel.

"The methods used by the ruling class in gaining control of the natural resources are also used to exploit the workers in the industries and upon the land.

"When the workers go on strike the capitalists use their government against them just as they use their government to secure the oil of Teapot Dome. Injunctions are issued to break the strikes of the workers. Government boards, courts and soldiers are always placed at the command of the employers. The government plays the same part in the fight against workers who want higher wages and better working conditions as it does in giving the capitalists the natural resources of the country. It is the agency of the employers, of the capitalists.

"Everywhere the foreign born workers have been found in the front ranks in all strikes for better living conditions. The ruling class answers with the Johnson Immigration Bill, as well as with bills to register, fingerprint and deport workers of foreign birth who dare to raise their voices against oppression.

Driving Farmers Off Land.

"The farmers who are being bankrupted and driven off the land by the millions know that they are being robbed thru Teapot Dome methods. They know that the bankers holding their mortgages, the marketing institutions handling their products, the elevators which store them, the railroads transporting them, are all supported by cleverly drawn laws which aid the capitalists to rob them.

"All capitalism is a Teapot Dome. There can be but one answer: DOWN WITH THE CAPITALIST SYSTEM.

"This goal can only be achieved thru the workers and farmers organizing their political power and using their united strength to take control of the government from the capitalists and their agents. The Farmer-Labor parties of this country have called a great convention of workers and farmers in St. Paul, on June 17th, for the formation of an organization to carry on the fight against the two old parties.

"On this May Day, the call must go out to the oppressed workers everywhere: Unite for a Party of the Toiling Masses. Unite for a Farmer-Labor Government, and then Forward to a Workers' and Farmers' Government.

Great May Day Demonstration.

"The United May Day Conference of New York City calls upon all workers to join in a tremendous demonstration on May Day. The New York United May Day Conference has made every effort to achieve the united help of all workers on this day, regardless of their political affiliations and sympathies. We proposed a joint demonstration to the May Day Conference of the United Hebrew Trades. Our appeal for unity was rejected. Instead of helping to rally the workers in a common demonstration they have again as in the past divided the proletarian ranks. We call upon all militant workers to turn out in all their strength in mighty protest against reaction everywhere.

"Workers of New York! Show your proletarian solidarity. Demonstrate your power and readiness to fight against the Teapot Government. Build the United Front against the exploiters.

"DOWN WITH THE CAPITALIST TEAPOT DOME!

"FORWARD TO THE MASS FARMER-LABOR PARTY!

"FORWARD TO THE WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT!"

State Insurance Is Popular Among Queensland Workers

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

BRISBANE, Queensland.—The Labor government of Queensland has proved that state insurance is more advantageous t othe people than the private company.

The Government insurance office pays up to $10 a week to a single man and up to $17.50 a week to a married man who is temporarily disabled, in place of the $5 a week paid under the old system of workers' compensation. The compensation for totally disabled has been increased from $2000 to $3750, and the amount payable in case of death has been raised from $2000 to $3000.

Altho the benefits have been substantially increased, the employer pays no more by way of premiums. In addition to the increase in benefits, the premium rates have been reduced 20 to 30 per cent. The insurance office declares no dividends and any surplus after providing for sinking funds, is handed back in increased benefits and reduced premiums.

So popular is the government system that of 58,827 claims, involving over $5,000,000, paid during the six years the state insurance office has been in operation, only four cases have been disputed by dissatisfied clients.

Under the old private-company insurance system, out of every $100 received in premiums, only $34 was paid back in claims, and $66 were for expenses and dividends. Each $1000 received in premiums by the state insurance office is paid away in claims with the exception of $17 expenses; $83 of evry $100 is available for policy holders under state insurance as against $34 under the private-company system.

Escapes His Troubles.

Duluth Labor Backs Up Amalgamated In Big Local Strike

(By The Federated Press)

DULUTH, Minn., April 20.—With unanimous indorsement by the Federal Trades Assembly of Duluth, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Local 186, is making a strong fight against the attempt of F. A. Patrick & Co. firm to break up the union. Eight workers were discharged by the company of whom seven were officers of the local. The strike went into effect March 17. A strong picket line with banners is maintained.

Conditions in the clothing factory had become very bad. Experienced workers were getting less than $10 a week in many cases. The corresponding average wage in well organized cities is around $40.

The strike is also being waged in the newspapers and by correspondence. Knowing that it had a bad case the company declared in a letter to the A. F. of L. central body that some of the discharged employes were "acting under instructions from the Russian Soviet." Labor in Duluth laughed and so did many other people. All the discharged workers are American citizens and they were told by the company superintendent that he had to dismiss them because of their membership and activity. The strike has almost stopped production.

The central body resolution in behalf of the Amalgamated states in part: "In the opinion of the Federated Trades Assembly of Duluth the F. A. Patrick Co. will serve the interest of the community by entering into a speedy settlement with its employes and to this end we pledge our support."

WORKERS' MOVIES SPREADS LIGHT IN RUSSIAN VILLAGES

Opens Up Dark Spots In Remote Places.

By GERTRUDE HAESSLER,
Staff Correspondent Federated Press.

MOSCOW, April 20.—"Darkest Russia" was discovered within 40 miles of Moscow when a traveling movie showing the Lenin funeral came to a little village under the auspices of Proletkino, the workers' film producing organization. The inhabitants, the majority of whom had never traveled the 40 miles to Moscow because the village lies off the railroad, had never seen electric light or a movie.

An audience was attracted by placing an electric light outside the hall where the picture were to be shown. The curious villagers thronged the hall, marvelling at the illumination. When the lights were put out for the performance and the funeral procession started marching toward the audience, there was a hysterical panic in the front rows of seats, until the pictures were stopped, the lights turned on, and an explanatory lecture given on the working of the moving picture and its harmless character, could the showing be resumed.

This has sometimes happened in remote districts of Russia, but never so close to a large city.

Masses Get Movie Education

Proletkino is attemping to enlighten the masses with regard to the moving picture and its possibilities. It has begun to issue a popular monthly magazine, much on the order of the movie monthlies in America, but but not so lavish a scale. It contains resumes of films, news about actors, advance stories on new pictures, and lots of propaganda for the proletarian movie and against the foreign bourgeois films.

In its propaganda, Proletkino is being assisted by connections in foreign countries. In nearly every important country in the world, there are Proletkino committees studying the problems of the proletarian movie. These committees gather useful films and raw material for the Russian organization and get the Russian productions displayed in their own country.

For America Wm. F. Kruse and the Friends of Soviet Russia are about to undertake exhibitions of the popular Russian film Combrig. Proletkino has no connection with the Labor Film Service in America.

Norway and Sweden use the name Proletkino. In Czechoslovakia and Switzerland there are proletarian organizations with close connections with Russia.

Brutalized By Open Shop Conditions He Slays Wife And Child

(By The Federated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, April 20.—M. E. Carracute, a nonunion carpenter of Bunkie, La., is in jail charged with the murder of his wife and baby. According to testimony in the hands of the sheriff, Mrs. Carracute was amusing the baby by drawing its hands over a sheet of paper, which noise disturbed the sleeping husband. He rose from the bed, seized the infant, threw on the floor, and stamped it to death with his feet. The mother interfered and was knocked down by a blow on the head. Sitting astride the prostrate woman Carracute cut her throat with a pocketknife, then stabbed her twice in the heart.

Carracute is not insane. Open shop conditions, where men are treated worse than brutes by foremen are supposed to have transferred the atmosphere of the factory to the home.

Poincare Talks Reparations And Ruhr With Belgian

PARIS, April 20.—Premier Poincare plans to confer with Premier Theunis of Belgium next week on the experts' report on reparations, it was reported today, following final approval of the report by the reparations commission.

Poincare will discuss particularly with his Belgian colleague the questions of relinquishment of Franco-Belgian economic control of the Ruhr and the Franco-Belgian control of railways.

The reparations commission decided to demand that the German government submit texts of bills for rapid execution into laws, in accordance with the recommendations of the experts and designate German members for the committees on railroads and mortgages.

SILLINSKY, FIGHTING TAILORS' PROGRESSIVE, PLEDGES SELF TO AMALGAMATION, LABOR PARTY

(Special to the Daily Worker)

Cleveland, April 20.—Amalgamation, a Labor Party, Recognition of Soviet Russia and Protection of the Foreign Born against the anti-alien drives of Secretary of Labor Davis and other agents of the employers, Max J. Sillinsky, progressive candidate for General Secretary-Treasurer of the Journeymen Tailors' Union, pledges himself to these fundamental policies in the following statement to the membership of the organization:

Sillinsky opposed Gompers' red baiting tactics at the Portland convention, voting against the ousting of William F. Dunne, and supporting all the progressive resolutions. The statement follows:

One Union In Needle Trades

In accepting the nomination as candidate for General Secretary Treasurer of our organization, the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, I do so with a thoro knowledge of the responsibilities of said officer and the confidence that I am capable of performing these duties to your complete satisfaction, and hereby submit my program and policies which I will follow if elected.

AMALGAMATION: Journeymen Tailors, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, International Ladies Garment Workers, Cap Makers, Neckwear Makers and United Garment Workers, etc., all engaged in one branch or another of the Needle Trades are going their separate ways and often working at cross purposes. Each of these unions is confronted with similar problems and conditions, chief among which is the problem of organization of the unorganized. The crying need, is to unify the industry by amalgamation. One union of all needle trades workers will strengthen us incalculably and is essential if we are to wage a winning struggle against the encroachment of the employers.

United Labor Political Action

A LABOR PARTY: Solidifying the ranks of the working class politically as well as industrially must be our next step. We in our country, America, are blushing with shame because of the Tea Pot Dome scandal exposure, injunction against the workers in their struggles for better conditions and the "Punch and Judy" show of the Democratic and the Republican parties in America, which is the joke of the whole world. Compare this political mess in America with the concentrated activities of organized labor along political lines in Russia, in England, in Sweden and in our neighboring Mexico. It is very clear that the working man must have a labor party organized along working class political action.

Must Defeat Immigration Laws

PROTECTION OF THE FOREIGN BORN: The employers of this country are even on the alert to devise new ways to increase the exploitation of the workers. One way is to divide the workers of racial and religious lines and to establish categories of native and foreign born. There are pending in Congress Bills which propose selective immigration and registration of the foreign born. Secretary of Labor Davis whose department has jurisdiction over immigration and the alien within our borders, is advocating an "alien code", which includes registration, photographing and finger printing. This cannot help but develop a vicious system of espionage that will be disastrous in its effect against the foreign born. The National association of Manufacturers is authority for the statement that 69 per cent of all workers engaged in the clothing industry are foreign born. Registration of the foreign born is a blow at our Union, and I am unalterably opposed to it.

Recognition of Soviet Russia

RUSSIA'S RECOGNITION: The Mussolini Government, as well as many military dictatorships that now rule Europe, such as Hungary, Spain, etc., are recognized by our government. Why not Soviet Russia? We have men such as LaFollette, Shipstead, France, Brookhart and others demanding that Russia be recognized and that trade relations be established. Trade relations with Russia means increased demand for American-made products, which in turn means the reducing of the number of unemployed. Furthermore, it shows our sympathy for the Russian workers as against the world's Imperialists.

ORGANIZATION. In every city where business agents are employed, results are achieved and the locals are functioning livelier than those where general organizers are in charge of the affairs. Too many National organizers and too few business agents. I shall encourage the maintainance of business agents in more locals—they to have charge of the smaller locals in the nearby cities within a given territory. It would afford all locals an opportunity of having the services of an officer of our union oftener, and we would save thousands of dollars what are spent in railroad fare by traveling organizers. Organization work within our union must be renewed with more vigor and a greater variety of educational activities. Those of general organizers that will be employed must be competent in addressing mass meetings and delivering lectures, dealing clearly with the trade movement, its aspirations, struggles and achievements.

"THE TAILOR": Our official organ shall be turned into an educational paper. Its columns shall be free to every member in good standing for an expression of the member's view. The articles written by members or locals shall be printed verbatim and no misinterpretations given thereon by its editor. If issues are to be taken up, they shall be discussed with an even break for all parties concerned.

OLD-AGE HOME: The printers maintain a home for old-age members, the Pressmen maintain a home for their old-age members, the Ladies Garment Workers support a home for their old-age and tubercular members, also a summer home; so does the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Why not the Journeymen Tailors? This must be put before the membership for serious consideration. I strongly advocate it. It was made possible by other organizations and is possible by ours.

I attended public and preparatory schools, am 40 years old, fully capable of conducting the office and can give the required bonds. I have worked at the trade, was on the road as an organizer and am now business agent; also I have attended several conventions of the American Federation of Labor, which gives me a keen conception of the needs and aspirations of the members of our organization as well as the Labor movement at Large.

Pledges Himself to Cause.

Amalgamation, a Labor Party, Protection of the Foreign Born, Recognition of Soviet Russia, Organization, A Free Press, the Maintainance of a Home for Old-Age, Efficiency, Economy and Service—these are the things for which I stand and pledge my support.

Thanking all of the locals that nominated me for this, the highest office of our organization, and assuring you that mine is an honorable ambition, and hoping to receive the vote of the membership that shall result in my election as General Secretary-Treasurer, I am

Fraternally yours,

New Zealand Gets Stench Of American Petroleum Scandal

(By The Federated Press)

WELLINGTON, N. Z., April 20.—The capitalist press of New Zealand is denouncing the oil corruption and scandal discovered by the senate committees at Washington. The New Zealand Worker, which called attention to the looting before the business press paid any notice to it, comments:

"It is well that we should pay some attention to the oil stealers in high places in the United States of America. When the purest of patriots rob the community of 20,000,000 barrels of its possessions in petroleum some denunciation in justifiable, and we are glad to see that even some of our New Zealand capitalist papers think so."

THIRD PARTY WILL WEAKEN OUR FOE, SAYS CANNON

Support Party But Not Reactionary Leaders.

The tactics of the Workers Party in supporting a third or LaFollette party and at the same time severely criticizing its leaders may be a difficult policy but it is the correct one, James Cannon told members of the South Slavic Branch of the Workers Party at their last meeting.

"There are several things to be accomplished and several reasons why we have to support a third party, even if it is controlled by middle class interests," Cannon said. "We will be making connections in the third party with liberally millions of workers who are half awakened. It is more important that LaFollette should mislead the workers than that the old parties should do it. The workers have never yet had the experience of being mislead by the middle class 'liberals' who represent the small business men, and they must be cured with the experience of being disillusioned.

Weaken The Enemy

"The formation a third party signifies a split in the Republican and Democratic Parties. The reactionaries have been weakened by big business and the oil scandal, and now is the best time for the Communists to make their party grow. LaFollette is offering concessions to the workers and farmers and we must get into the party where the workers are.

"The split in the Republican and Democratic Parties resulting from the formation of the third party will not only break the united front of the old parties, but will break up the bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor. The officials of the A. F. of L. are tied in many ways to the two old parties. Men like Gompers and Berry and Lewis do not think or act or live like the workers. The split in the old parties will split the petty bourgeois and reactionary labor officials and thus weaken their hold on the labor movement.

Ruthenberg to Speak

"By entering the third party and still criticizing it will be employing the tactics the Bolsheviki used when they fought with guns in their hands in Kerensky's army against world imperialism. All the time the Bolsheviks were fighting for Kerensky, they were organizing to overthrow him. But by splitting the capitalist class, we weaken the enemy."

Cannon said that the Party program toward a third party will be more fully explained by Comrade Ruthenberg at the general membership Tuesday night in North Side Turner Hall.

Hammer Wallace, Tool of Beef Trust, In Coolidge Cabinet

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—April 20.—Secretary Wallace is a tool of the Big Five Chicago meat packers, and he has filled his department with men who sympathize with the packers rather with the farmers or the consumers, according to Benjamin C. Marsh, of the Farmers' National Council, testifying before a house committee. Marsh said that Wallace's conduct might be ascribed to ignorance, "or otherwise," since Wallace has been publisher of a farm magazine and ought to know the facts disclosed by the federal commission.

Representative Faust, Missouri, warmly defended the meat packers.

Gary's Indorsement

Judge Elbert A. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, has just returned from a three-months' pleasure trip to various South American countries.

Judging from the steel magnate's observations, we find that Gary is one of those rare individuals who is in a position to combine pleasure with business. But it is just such combinations by our ruling class that serve as the introduction to deep-seated political, economic and military conflicts at a future date.

Upon his return Mr. Gary said: "I think South America offers a good field for the investment of American capital. I saw important business men and presidents of all the provinces in South America, and they impressed me favorably." These remarks are of considerable significance. Gary's word in the world of capitalist finance goes a mighty long distance. His advice and indorsement most often border on law in the realm of industry. Already, American capitalists have invested close to four billion dollars in the Latin-American countries. The findings of the United States Steel Corporation head will go a long way towards increasing American capitalist participation in the industrial development of South America.

For the few monopolistic capitalist owners the problem of investments translates itself into a question of diplomacy, dollars, and dividends. For the great mass of workingmen and poor farmers this glowing report is only a precursor of the development of a state of affairs in which their homes, their security, their very lives are endangered. American capitalists are taking advantage of the present weakness of their European competitors to consolidate their hold on Latin-America. Our imperialists, flushed with an arrogant pride because of their newly established recognized world business leadership, are driving the less developed industrial countries into most harsh bargains.

Yet, worms will turn sometime. Once the European capitalist groups get back on their feet and challenge our imperialists' plunge, the war clouds will hover and hell may let loose in another capitalist conflagation. We will be told then to fight and die for one of America's "bedrock" principles: America for the Americans. Likewise, when the masses of these countries protest against and resist their exploitation by our capitalists, our employing class government will rush us to the distant climes and lands to defend "law and order," "civilization," "national honor" and a multitude of other abstractions behind which there lurk the endangered heavy dollar investments and fabulous dividends.

So long as the ownership and control of capital remains in the hands of a special class levying tribute in the form of giant profits on the vast number of workingmen and poor farmers for the right to use the capital which they themselves have produced, wars, class and national, civil and international, are the inevitable outcome. No league of imperialist looters, no sweet lullabies sung by the loudest of liberals, no fake peace formulae, can essentially alter this terrible condition. A thoro-going reorganization of industry on Communist lines, with capital which is socially used being socially, collectively owned and controlled, alone can turn these tidal waves of destruction engulfing the strong and weak countries alike.

Ping Lung Is Dead

Not even the hysteria incidental to the opening of the baseball season could shade the heart thrills that the kept press drew out of the dying breaths of Ping Lung, pet poodle of a man who really wears trousers and bears the name Ignace Jan Paderewski.

Ping Lung is dead of over-eating. To the last the best chefs of the Pullman service on the Illinois Central Railroad were trying to stuff the dog's stomach with appetizing food.

We have only sympathy for the poor dog who fell afoul the way of "civilization" as we know it in the year 1924, where parasite men and women of a decadent class must not only have their poodles, but also the privilege of doing them to death with barbaric attentions that no respectable dog would tolerate if he could help it.

We wouldn't be surprised if the dog world had already put the name of Paderewski on its growing black list.

The Chicago Tribune sent its correspondent to Colombia to report that there was no graft in the $25,000,000 Colombia pact. The Tribune never was able to discover any faults in the social system that it so ably supports.

Czecho-Slovakia's Social-Democracy.

Freedom of the press has been abolished in Czecho-Slovakia by the Social-Democrat government of that young republic. Corruption rivaling that in the government used as a pattern by the Czech bourgeoisie—the American system—has been revealed and the answer of social-democratic lovers of democracy has been to compel editors to give the names of their informants on all public questions.

The capitalist press of the world has been sounding the praises of the Czecho-Slovakian government and the president, Professor Masaryk. It and he have been held up as models for all young nations to follow.

The ruling class of Czecho-Slovakia has great ambitions. It wishes to become the dominant force in southeastern Europe; it hates Soviet Russia and has entered into an alliance with France for purposes of offense and defense against the wishes of the mass of the people; Czecho-Slovakia is today simply an outpost of French imperialism, mortgaged both to France and the House of Morgan.

Its working class is well organized and a large section of it is revolutionary, the Communist Party of Czecho-Slovakia being one of the largest in the Third International.

The social-democrats of the second international in Czecho-Slovakia as elsewhere are playing the game of the imperialists and have been entrusted by the bourgeoisie with the task of smashing the working class movement.

There is no doubt that the gag law just passed is another step taken by the social-democrat government to assist the capitalists of their own country and of France and America in enslaving the workers and peasants.

The social-democracy abhors centralization of power for more efficient waging of the struggle against international capitalism but its adherents in all countries show a remarkable unanimity in the aid, comfort and support they give to the capitalists. In this their policy is uniform.

Burns Wants More Money

William J. Burns, in the absence of his former boss, Harry M. Daugherty, is carrying on a lone but seemingly successful fight for an increased appropriation for "red-baiting" activities during the coming year.

The appropriation bill has already passed the house and is now before the senate.

It has been shown during the oil hearings and the investigation of the department of justice, under Daugherty, that the Burns government sleuths have been used to a very great extent in shadowing congressmen, stealing their papers, tapping their telephones and trying to "get the goods" on them. With these facts known what a cowardly bunch of old party politicians must be in the house of representatives to consent to increase funds for this purpose, as well as to carry on a general attack against all forms of progressivism.

No doubt Mr. Burns will have equal success with the craven spirits, making up the majority of the membership of the United States senate. Capitalist provocateurs of the type of Mr. Burns will never meet with real opposition until the fearless spokesmen of a class Farmer-Labor Party begin to invade congress in large numbers.

Another family is wiped out by a grade crossing accident. It is charged it was a "wild Baltimore and Ohio Railroad engine" that did the killing. But if there had been no grade crossing the accident would not have happened. But it costs money to abolish grade crossings, and the stockholders of the "B. and O." would rather have their dividends, even tho they drip with the blood of the railroad's victims. That's business.

It is declared that Bavaria is planning to announce an amnesty for Communists as a blind for the freeing of Count Arco Valley, the assassin of Kurt Eisner, head of the Bavarian Soviet Republic. We shall scan the lists of those released, however, before we admit that there has been the least change of heart of the bloody fascisti dictatorship over this section of Germany.

"Firemen again show selfish heroism," chants a daily paper over the corpses of nine firemen, done to death in another firetrap holocaust. But that ought to spur the workers on to rid the cities, that have sprouted up under capitalism, of all the dangerous firetrap buildings that are a menace to the health and the life of all workers.

There is no choice for a rank and file worker as between June 17th and July 4th. There may be a choice for some of the so-called leaders of labor. But workers had better watch out for the leaders who are trying to pin their hopes on July 4th.

A headline declares that "Chicago Faces Shortage in Common Brick." But since there are plenty of gold bricks being handed out on every side, the town still manages to get along.

"Where do you stand on June 17th?" is a question that demands an answer from every worker in the nation

THE JAPANESE CONTROVERSY

By JAY LOVESTONE

The violation of "a gentleman's agreement" between two thieves is by itself not an event of startling importance. But when this violation is so decisive, as shown by the vote of 323 to 71 in the House and 76 to 2 in the Senate for barring the Japanese from America, then there must be special reasons for the pursuit of such a policy. The provisions of the Johnson bill aiming at the Japanese are by themselves not new measures. Similar proposals were put forward in sundry Congresses of the past.

It is of no small import to note that not a single one of the fire-eating "progressives" in the Senate or House was immune from this anti-Japanese fever. In the House the terrible Wisconsin radical triumvirates—Cooper, Frear and Nelson—were as meek as sheep. In the Senate not a finger was lifted nor a voice was raised by any of the stalwart insurgents to stem the tidal anti-Japanese waves.

American Capital Supreme.

Before the World War, before the United States became the leading banking, manufacturing and trading nation of the world, the House and Senate would not have dared to act so harshly against the honor and pride of so aggressive a competing capitalist group as the one dominating Japan today. Before the terrible disaster that overwhelmed Japan in the earthquake of 1923, our President would have intervened to prevent such rash legislation. Before this great calamity put the Japanese capitalists temporarily, at least, at the mercy of the only financial and industrialist group, the American bankers and manufacturers, for the necessary capital to insure swift and effective reconstruction of the devasted regions and industries of the island empire, the executive department of the American government would have put the brakes on the "hasty" legislative body.

This is what used to happen before American capitalists secured their dominant position in the world of International finance and industry. It is apparent that the conduct of the House and Senate is the best index of the political arrogance that economic supremacy develops in the ranks of a national capitalist imperialist group

Fooling Laboring Masses.

The editors of the leading capitalist papers and the leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties have for years attempted to give the impression to the workers and farmers that the interests of the laboring classes of America demand a policy of hostility towards the Japanese people. This propaganda serves as a cloak behind which there is hidden the conflict of Japanese and American capitalist imperialist interests in the Far East. In reality there is no labor problem of this sort involved in the Japanese controversy. To the extent that Japanese labor could possibly ever be a source of competition with American labor in California or in any of our possessions, we can count on our capitalists to employ the cheapest labor power possible, to hire the workers accepting the lowest wage offered and to smuggle the cheapest labor power—Japanese, Chinese, Scandivanian or what not—whether there be a law prohibiting such trafficking or not.

Consequently, the labor issue must be dismissed from a consideration of the controversy at this juncture. Law or no law, the capitalist economic driving force, the quest for appropriating the greatest amount of surplus value possible, will very easily scale such apparent barriers as the walls of national differences and laws they themselves have thrown up and which at times, get out of joint with the needs and demands of their own class.

The American capitalists cannot rightly be accused of being afflicted with solicitousness for the welfare and high wages of their workers whom they are wont to exploit ruthlessly. No one will, therefore, take seriously the plea of our legislators who are serving their corporate Pharoas fanatically that their anti-Japanese policy is based on their love for the American workingmen of California or elsewhere.

At this very moment the American military governor General Leonard Wood is tacitly and overtly sanctioning a policy of smuggling in Chinese coolies to the Philippine Islands in order to enable the American capitalists to secure cheaper labor power than even that afforded them by the native Filipino working masses. It has been said and not refuted, that the young son of General Wood, Lieutenant Osborn Wood has himself gotten a goodly portion of the $800,000 he cleaned up in a few months, by aiding and abetting this policy of smuggling cheaper Chinese labor power into the islands. In the light of such practices by our governing class all talk of the interests of American labor being responsible for the present anti-Japanese legislation is entirely out of place and will not hold water.

The issue of race differences and conflicts has been artificially cultivated and stimulated for a long time by the ruling class of this and all other capitalist countries. Such poisonous doctrines have been peddled by the capitalist agents among the working masses of every country in order to prevent the international solidarity of the working class, in order to break up the unity of the proletarian masses, in order to divide the working class along the lines having no sound organic basis in the welfare and progress of the laboring masses. This vicious practice has been pursued by our capitalists deliberately in order to enable them to lead the country into a probable war more easily and to crush the workers with more despatch.

Japan Up Against It.

The extent to which this policy is practiced by our employing class depends upon the extent to which their class interests dictate it. The only barrier or hindrance to the dissemination of race or national hatred amongst the working masses by our exploiting class is the fear of economic or political loss being incurred at a certain historical moment by the spreading of such propaganda. Just now there are no such dangers in sight. The economic conditions permit it. The political conditions cry out for it.

The American capitalists do not entertain any substantial fear of losing Japanese trade. In 1912, or even in 1916, the threat of "grave consequences" hurled at Washington by Tokio, the threat made today by the Japanese government, would have been taken very seriously. Such threats were taken with alarm in those days. Today, however, American financial, industrial and commercial hegemony in the Far East appears unchallenged and unchallengeable. Japanese capitalists cannot take effective retaliatory economic measures to heal this severe, deep wound dealt to their national honor, which they themselves have so repeatedly glorified amongst their own workers and poor farmers in the interest of their class supremacy at home.

Neither can the Japanese ruling class take any telling military, naval or political steps against the United States to give flesh and blood to their present empty threats of "grave consequences." Their leaders, their imperial elders, can straighten their spines and make sounds in their throats but they can go no further. They must stop here.

The Japanese alliance with Great Britain is today dead insofar as immediate effective military economic or naval help against the United States is concerned. Great Britain's labor government would not dare to join Japan in any conflict over an issue which finds New Zealand, Australia, Canada and a considerable section of the working masses at home on the side of the skilled layer of our own working class. Besides, Great Britain needs the financial and political support of the American capitalist class too much in Europe to dare take a chance on losing such valuable good will. Thus, Japan must today kneel on the carpet at Washington and listen to the reading of the book of rules set down by the American government.

The Home Front.

An additional extremely important phase of the attitude just adopted towards Japan by the United States is to be found in the prevailing political conditions of the country. There is nothing that would serve our ruling class more effectively in diverting the attention and hatred of the working and farming masses towards the government because of the Teapot Dome and Daugherty disclosures than such an issue as the Japanese threat of "grave consequences."

It is the practice of all ruling classes to throw out slogans in times of crisis or stress, which will unite not only the ranks of their own class, but will also win over to their side supporters from the subject, exploited class and confuse the latter groups in such a fashion as to mislead them regarding the fundamental issues at stake in the class conflict. For years our capitalists have generated and played on the hatred of the Japanese by the American masses. There is no better way for the employers to drown out the effect of the shocking revelations of capitalist corruption and ownership of government than by stirring up this Japanese bug-a-boo and fanning the flames of national hatred from the fires they themselves have been building so long.

Such a policy is of more than immediate advantage to the ruling class. It has tremendous possibilities for the future. The present situation affords our capitalists a splendid chance to intensify the national and race hatred of Japan to such an extent and degree as to enable them, at some future date, when the Nipponese may challenge their oriental encroachments, to explode the powder magazine of American nationalism and throw the country into a war to the bitter end for supremacy in the Pacific. All the Senate and House talk about our "sovereignty" being endangered and challenged by the Japanese threat is just that much capitalist political piffle and is handed out merely to capitalize the prejudices and unfounded notions of bourgeois nationalists amongst our own masses.

The Workers' Side.

The chemistries of the working masses and the big capitalists are distinctly antagonistic in politics and industry. All the fuss and whobub are only a smoke screen of poison gas to lead the workers astray. The working and farming masses of our country have no interest in limiting the freedom of movement of the workers of Japan, England, Russia, France or any other country. We have especially no interest in giving our employing class the additional power of its government controlling the movement of the workers of our country or of other countries. In so far as the immediate economic needs of the workers, because of the present capitalist ownership of our industries, may demand certain regulations of the movements of the workers and farmers from one state to another, from one country to another, this task of regulation should fall solely within the province of the workers' and farmers' organizations themselves.

For the working and farming classes of America to permit their capitalist government to control such movements of the workers of any race, color or creed, is to play into the hands of our exploiting class, to help divide our ranks exactly in the way in which our bosses want to see us divided, and to leave our front wide open for the employers to break thru. Consequently, every worker, every exploited farmer, in the interest of his own class, must oppose vigorously this anti-Japanese propaganda of the monopolistic bossing class, this camouflaged, dangerous move aimed, primarily against the welfare of the American workers and farmers and generally against the working masses of the world.

Skyscrapers
Writing business letters
Against the sky.
The rows of windows are mouths
Breathing a mechanical breath.
From the ferry-boat
The skyline of the big city
Is a magnificent sight.
The skyscrapers are honeycombs.
They are toy houses.
I can take the Woolworth Tower
And swing it about my head.
I can put my arms about the Singer Building
And lift it from the ground.
I can lean against the Whitehall Building
And throw it down.
From the ferryboat
The skyline is a magnificent sight.

I seek the soul of the big city.
I seek its heart and its mind.
And not simply its local color.
I seek the depths of the city,
And not its surfaces.
And I do not seek its stimulant pleasures.
I hate its bought love.
I hate the poverty and the misery
Which it inflicts.
I seek it in the lovers of beauty,
And the creators of beauty.
I hate its so-called popular plays.
I hate its commercialized arts.
I seek those who have not been conquered
By the traffic of the big city.
I seek in it for the worker
Who does not fawn on his masters,
Who knows he is a slave,
And revolts against his slavery.

I hate the noise of the big city.
It is a noise of traffic.
It hammers on my head,
And gives me no rest.
It is a hammering
Which shatters hopes and golden dreams,
And breaks human hearts.

This city with its high towers
And its suspended bridges
Is magnificent;
But I also see its tragedy;
And I refuse to see the marvel
In big electric signboards.

The skyscrapers are prisons;
Their offices are prison cells,
In which there are pretty stenographers
Who fawn on their prison keepers
And do not know they are in prison cells.
They beat on the typewriter keys
The livelong day.
Writing monotonous business letters.
They beat on their own brains,
They hammer on their own souls,
They stun their own intellects
Whey they beat on the typewriter keys.

In the evening they are permitted to go home.
They crowd into the subway trains.
Tired bodies are pressed against each other.
Breaths and burning desires mingle.
The stenographers are young and pretty,
And they have burning desires.
They go to dance in the evening.
They stay out late.
And in the morning they drag tired bodies
And haggard eyes
Back to the typewriter keys
To take up again
The beating on their own minds,
The stunning of their own intellects.
Better to be a shop worker
Who knows she is a slave
And revolts against her slavery,
Than to be a pretty stenographer
Who takes an interest in her work,
And does not know she is a prison cell.

The contractors who put up the skyscrapers
Chose immigrants for the work—
Immigrants who had the brawn
And who would work for a cheap wage.
Human blood
Went into the building of these skyscrapers.
Hearts poised on perilous heights.
Hearts among steel girders.
Blood in the steel and mortar.

The immigrants who built these skyscrapers
Came across the ocean,
And together with their bundles,
They carried golden dreams;
But they found only mortar and steel.
On perilous heights they sweated,
The beating of their hearts
Was louder than the sound of the riveting.
The summer's heat scorched them,
And the winter's cold froze them.
Skeletons of buildings rising to perilous heights;
Skeletons of men form the foundations.
Shattered dreams, blood and sweat,
And man's brawn
In the mortar and steel.

This city is a mill,
Grinding human beings between the millstones.

Whither do the crowds hurry?
What do they seek?
Some find millions,
And some find a few pennies.
And tho the ones are no better than the others,
Yet those with the millions are the masters,
And the others are the slaves.
There are those who roll in limousines,
And those who stand on bread-lines.

The immigrants were made into citizens
And as a privilege of citizenship
They were sent to the Great War—
To be killed in the service of the millionaire

The Negroes were brought from Africa,
To admire this civilization;
They were taken from one kind of a jungle,
And put into another.

There is a stench in the tenement district.
How do children grow up there?
How can people live there?
What is the air they breathe?
What is their crime,
That they should be herded there,
Breathing the odor of garbage,
Doomed to a living death?
Their crime is that they are poor.

The Jewish immigrants
Came to the land in the West—
They came with their hopes,
Which they dragged from land to land,
And from century to century,
And these hopes and dreams
Were shattered on the dark stairs of the tenements.

Surely this misery will come to an end.
Out of the depths of the big city
The oppressed masses will rise—
Out of the houses of torture,
Up from under the ground,
Down from perilous heights,
Into the light they will come running.
The shout of revolt will be heard.
The storm-cloud will burst,
The millions will realize their strength;
They will conquer the big city,
They will banish its tragedy,
And make it wholly magnificent.
On that day there will be no masters—
And no slaves!

STRIKE OF CAR WORKERS SPREADS

TROTSKY IN SPEECH SAYS U. S. WARLIKE

Wants To Pull Europe's Revolutionary Tooth

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, April 21.—Speaking to a physical culture and sport congress today, Leon Trotsky showed slight if any effects of the illness from which he has been recuperating. All of the old fire and eloquence was noticeable in his speech.

His recent speeches, of which he has made a number lately, have dealt with the world situation and particularly the attitude of France and America towards Soviet Russia.

He said that France was pursuing a system of wilful blackmail toward Russia by encouraging Poland, Roumania, and Turkey to act against the Soviet.

France, he said, possessed the largest army in the world and wielded the iron fist of the capitalist, while the United States commanded the greater part of the wealth of the whole world because of Europe's imperialistic war.

"The United States is the most democratic country which plunged into this imperialistic war without idealistic stimulation," said M. Trotzky. "It has become a colossal Tower of Babel and is trying to digest into its stomach all the huge gains it realized from the war.

Says U. S. Expects War.

"It is now keeping aloof from European affairs, but at the same time is carefully preparing for future war. It is placing aviation and asphyxiating gas foremost in its equipment. It is developing these destructive agents not only for a struggle against enfeebled Japan, but also against Europe."

The war minister remarked ironically that Americans considered the old methods of warfare too barbaric and believed that a more humane means, such as chemical warfare, should be applied.

"We all know the use to which the dentist puts asphyxiating gas," he continued, "but when we see the United States preparing to use gas to extract a revolutionary tooth from Europe we must be on the alert. In the meantime Americans are trying these new gases upon their criminals, discarding the use of electricity as a means of killing wrongdoers.

Capitalism Must Go.

"Picture to yourself rich and satisfied America sending to famine stricken, revolutionary Europe whole squadrons of airplanes which threaten to rain these noxious gases upon our heads! This is no fantastic romance.

"Soviet Russia, however, will not resort to such inhuman methods to gain its ends. War must be eradicated entirely, but it cannot be done by these extreme measures. It can only be done by the annihilation of capitalistic society. In spite of the recognition already accorded us by Great Britain, Italy and others we must be ready for all eventualities."

Canuck Party Communist

Workers Party, Canada, Is Now Communistic

Annual Convention Plans Big Campaigns.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TORONTO, Canada, April 21.—Forty delegates, representing various sections of the Workers Party of Canada, met in annual convention here on April 18, 19 and 20 to discuss the policies and lay down the strategy for the coming year.

One of the first questions which came before the convention was the name of the organization. A motion to change the name of the Workers Party of Canada to the Communist Party of Canada was carried by practically a unanimous vote. It was argued, in the discussion of the question, that the Workers Party was known in Canada as a Communist Party and there was nothing to be gained by longer retaining the name of Workers Party, and that it would help the organization in its appeal to the workers by openly avowing itself as a Communist Party.

Industry at a Low Ebb.

Industry in Canada during the last two years has been at a low ebb. There has been no revival in industrial conditions since 1921 and 1922. The result has been that many active workers in the revolutionary movement have left Canada for the United States in search for jobs. As a result the membership figures showed a slight decline over the previous year.

Issues Before Convention.

The main issues which came before the convention were raised in a letter from the Communist International. The formation of a labor party is under way in Canada. This labor party has the support of practically the entire labor movement. The Commun-

FARMERS CUTTING DOWN WHEAT AND BEEF PRODUCTION

Price Slumps Resulting In Serious Changes.

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 21.—"Farmers in the Middlewest and Northwestern States have made definite changes in crop and livestock programs in an effort to meet the situation caused by the price slump during the last three years in some of the leading farm products," asserts the U. S. Department of Agriculture in its Outlook for 1924.

The report goes on to show that the farmers, wearying of waiting for government or other outside aid, have adjusted conditions as well as they could with the meagre means at hand. There has been an increase in dairying, hog-raising, poultry raising, and in feed crop production such as corn, alfalfa, soya beans, etc. But no word of how many farmers have gone to the wall to make this change in production.

The report makes no suggestions for co-ordinating the changing production of the farmers nor does it offer assistance in preventing another crisis in the farmer-produce market. It merely comments that "generally speaking, the changes indicated are said to be those which the farmers should have made in view of the economic situation."

Student Picks Girls' Dormitory At Oil "U" To Commit Suicide

Walter Frashin, 35, student of teaching at the University of Chicago, committed suicide in the girls' dormitory by slashing his throat with a razor, according to the verdict today of Dr. Joseph Springer, coroner's physician. Frashin was discovered in a linen closet.

Two Kinds of Courts

The Courts of the Bosses Today
The Courts of Labor Tomorrow

Nearly two score strike pickets are scheduled to come before Judge Charles M. Foell for sentence today. Their alleged crime is that they picketed the shops of the struck garment bosses in violation of a court injunction.

* * * *

The garment strikers are putting up a fight for human rights. They demand the right to live and enjoy life. They seek better homes in which to live, decent clothes to wear, sufficient food to nourish them—all mere human necessities.

The garment bosses are putting up a fight for property rights, the right to rob the workers of all these things thru low wages, a long workday and poor conditions.

* * * *

Court injunctions against picketing are cudgels in the hands of the bosses in their fight for their property rights.

The courts, therefore, that grant these injunctions, are a bulwark in defense of property rights, the sacred rights of the bosses, the employers, everywhere.

* * * *

The two-score pickets before Judge Foell will not have their human rights considered. When Judge Foell was elected and placed on the bench of the court room he now occupies, he was sworn to uphold, not human rights, but property rights, the keystone of the whole capitalist system—the present social order.

* * * *

Whatever edict Judge Foell issues it will be clothed in the velvet language of "democracy."

William Howard (Bill the Fat) Taft, the clownish head of the United States Supreme Court, at Washington, had all his thoughts on property rights when he, with other supreme court justices, joined in declaring anti-child labor legislation "unconstitutional."

The majority of the United States Supreme Court, in defense of property rights, also declared "unconstitutional" legislation limiting the working hours of women.

It is always the rights of property that swing the scales of justice on the side of the employers. Justice is blind to the cry of the men, women and children of labor for a better life.

* * * *

It is, therefore, easily understood why the DAILY WORKER is not a welcome guest in the court rooms of capitalism, and why it is hated by the legal lights of the employers.

The DAILY WORKER is against the rights of property.
The DAILY WORKER is for the rights of humanity.
The DAILY WORKER is against the bosses.
The DAILY WORKER is for the strikers.

* * * *

But the cause of the workers is not hopeless, in spite of the fact that the courts, and the whole bosses' social system is against them.

Neither will the strike pickets, as Judge Foell urged them to do, "go back to the country from whence they came."

Whatever the verdict of Judge Foell today the strikers in the garment industry, and the workers in all other industries, will go right ahead, organizing and preparing for the day when they will rule in the land, and the courts of labor will turn the scales of justice on the side of the rights of all mankind.

CATHOLICS AND KU KLUXERS ARE STILL FIGHTING IN OREGON

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PORTLAND, Ore., April 21.—The Ku Klux "invisible" government and the Catholic Church are still fighting about the law requiring compulsory attendance at public schools in this state. The federal Court has just declared the law unconstitutional in considering the injunction brought by the Hill Military Academy against state officers to prevent them from enforcing the law. The Klan now plans to appeal the case to the United States Supreme Court. The Ku Kluxers still hope to make their Klan-controlled public schools the only educational institutions in the state.

Professors Study Problems.

CENTER, Pa., April 21.—Thirty men and one woman of the faculty of the Pennsylvania tSate College, Center, Pa., are investigating problems of industrial and agricultural conditions in Pennsylvania. One out of every 10 members of the faculty is devoting full time to this research work.

WET AND DRY FIGHT ON IN PENNSYLVANIA

Fate of Pinchot Is in the Balance

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, April 21.—What happens to Gifford Pinchot in Pennsylvania tomorrow may depend whether the wet and dry issue will figure largely in the republican convention at Cleveland in June.

Pinchot, candidate for delegate at large, to that convention, has been marked for defeat by organization republican leaders, who want to punish him for his recent attacks on Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. For months they have been lying in wait for Pinchot because they do not like his attitude towards President Coolidge's administration.

The Pennsylvania Governor says it is the voice of the wets speaking. He claims the issue is one of law enforcement and that there is not and never has been any doubt about his loyalty to Mr. Coolidge. So, if he is beaten, Pinchot is likely to take this issue to Cleveland and it might make some trouble.

DICTATOR MUSSOLINI EXPELS THE DAILY WORKER'S CORRESPONDENT FROM HIS FASCISTI-RULED ITALY

Giovanni Giglio, correspondent of the DAILY WORKER and London Daily Herald in Italy, has been expelled from that land by order of the Fascist Dictator, Benito Mussolini.

In a letter just received by the DAILY WORKER, from London, dated April 4th, Giglio writes that, "I was about to send you

RAIL BROTHERHOODS SUPPORT LAFOLLETTE FOR WHITE HOUSE JOB

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 21.—The four big railroad brotherhoods will support Senator Robert La Follette, Wisconsin, Republican Progressive for the presidency, it became known here Saturday.

Warren S. Stone, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, indicated that while William G. McAdoo, California, is undoubtedly popular with a certain element among the railroad union officials, the leaders of the brotherhood organizations will back La Follette for the presidency.

SEE STRIKE VICTORY IN SHORT TIME

Strikers Scour City For Financial Aid.

While five squads of garment strikers were yesterday preparing to visit all local trade unions to secure the financial aid pledged by the Chicago Federation of Labor, the garment bosses increased their frantic efforts to stave off a settlement with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

Letters have been sent to many of the strikers pleading with them to return to work on their own terms.

The strikers will be divided into five squads of two each, and each squad will be accompanied by a member of "The Committee of 15" who will secure the financial aid to the strikers.

A press dispatch reports that Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is in Washington. Nothing has yet been heard from Gompers as to when he will address the strikers at the mass meeting proposed some weeks ago.
